The Ramakrishna Mission Institute of Culture Library

Presented by

Dr. Baridbaran Mukerji

war I

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

$A \nearrow D$ PEVILOF SOCIETY POLITICS LIFERATURE

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, JANUARY 5, 1895

WHOLE NO 656.

WELKLYANA.

WE commence our fom thank voume with the Hannurs of New Year's Day with which indeed 1895 wa ushered into this c'tv. They will Advocate General in India. gladden many homes though in tour train they will cause deappointsuant in some quarters. It was a considerate decision to Gazette the Ronours on the osteinstead of as last year, the Lat finnery. It tendent of Excise, Bengal, would have been pru lent as well ') supply the Gizette Extraordinary simultaneously to both the daily at I the weekly pre . The Press Commissionership had one redeeming eature.": There was no distinction between the European and the Natve Press or between the daily and , t the weekly. Now the different dougtments are free to select newspapers often to the disadvantage of he weeklies.

NEW YEAR'S DY HONOURS. STAR OF MINA

Knight Grand ommander.

His Highness Shahu Chh urapati I tharaj, Rig cof Kell apuc.

Knights Commenders.

The Hopeurable Mr. James Westlind, C.S.L., Member of the Council f the Governor-General.
Frederick William Richarde Fry, E.G., C.S.I., Indian Conf.

mmissener, and Officially Second Financial Commispercent muissoner, and Official's Second Finance, and official's Second Finance, and the His His His His Habites Maharao Kesri Single Ithadur, of Sirohi.

Assistant Parliamentary Counsel to the reasury.

Companien. The Monourable Mr. Charles Cecil Bevens, Indian Civil Sergice, Rember of the Board of Revenue, Bangl, and Additional Member the Deccan of the Council of the Governor-Geneal for making Laws and Sher Mah Kegulations.

Major General Alexander Robert Badco t, Ca, Indian Staff Corpe, Commissary-General-in-Chief, India.

Donald Mackenne Smeaton, Egg, India Civil Service Financial Commissioner, Bermai

Stephen Jacon, Esq., Indian Civil Service, Comptroller and Auditor-Creseral, and Officiating Secretary to the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department,

Colonel William Francis Pridenux, Indian Staff Corps, Resident & the class and Resident at Japur

Indian Knight Commanders,

Sudbal Det CLE, of Bamra, al di ur Ramahaw Thuilier, C.L.e., Riyal Engineers, Sur- Laucei and India. Sard

d Khan Sidi Imahun Khan of Jack Ranga Rao, Zam pday Bospili.

distant Manber

Colonel Henry Sullivan Jurett, Indian Staff Corps, lite Secretary to the Board of Examiners, Calcutta.

Colonel Henry Bristow Sanderson I idian Staff Corps, late Judge

Rao Bahadur Diwan Jujhar Singh Ju Den, of Charkhau.

Ru Durg igati Binerp Bib dur, Collector of Calcutta and Superin-

Arthur Crommelin Hunkin, E q., Assistant in Central India to the General Superintendent of Operations for the Suppression of Thagi and Dakaiti.

Ad im Gillies Tytler, Esq., Sub-Deputy Opium Agent in Behar

Vetermary Captain Joshua Arthur Nunn, DSO, FRCVS, Army Vetermary Department, Principal, Vetermary College, Lahore.

Khan Bahadur Hakk Nawaz Khan, Assistant to the River land Commissioner, Balach-Afghan Boundary " *

1 - 1 1

Snelvic As Contlan - Sinch Vice-Chairman of the M

Pundit Madhu Sudan Sorting Pr 5 Makrit College, Calcatta

Constensy Peregrine libert, E.q., 18.1., CIE, Barrister at Law, Monly: Muhammad Habadad, late 2nd Mouly: of the Cue . . Mediessa

Khân Bahadur. The Honourable Meherban Docabh Padamp, 🏰rst Class Suda o

Sher Mahammad, Supervisor, Public Works Department, Tragatio Branch, Punjab

Khim, Allidiyar Khim of Hingu, in the Robat district in ? Parado

Sheikn Khuda Baksh, Extra Judicial Assistant Commissioner if Pantab

Managam of Hu, on, Somor Hospital Assistant, Schordin ite d Department, Bengal

M. movi. Soyid Nestruddin Anned, Charman of the Belia Board in the Ben (id Presidency

Kasım Hussin, Khan, Tahsı car, Bareidy, in the North Provinces

Inda' At, Deater of Donos in the Central Liovince, Fachiah Kato, Commundant of the Rumpur Imper

Sardu Sobnat Khan, Gola, Zumindar in Kidit Rag Bathadur

Venka'a R ig by u, retired Sub Judge in the Midra, Vembik un Rignava Charlo, Fu st. Assist out in the Le cipal Department, in the Madras Presidency

Vir ibh idra Subbaraya Mudalivar, First Class Inspey the Rulway Police of the South Indian Rulway Works, Presidency

Appathurai Krishnaswami Aiyar, Miniger of the Inspector-General of Police in the Madras Presider

n ters, it possible, as the safest and m a the Department. No other receipt ito cause confusion.

Trichinopoly Venkataswami Nilamagam Pillai, Semor Rospital Assistant, Madras Sappers and Miners

Camalapuram Lutchman Nayadu, Semor Hoppital Assistant, 2nd

Rio Salieb Mohanlal Ranchordas Ziveri, lately Deputy Educational Inspector of Surat in the Bombay Presidency

R to Sahib Bapu Rao Patwardhau, Senior Judge, Small Cause Court Nagpur, in the Central Provinces

Ras Bahadur.

Wathada Venkatareddi Navada, Sab-Bagmeer 1st Grade, Public Works Department in the Midras Presidence

Panchi Kishen Lal, Private Secretary to His Highness the Raja of Sirmeir (Nichan)

Lala Ganga Ram, Executive Engineer in the Punjah.

Lala Padha Kisheo, Assistant Surgeon in the Punjab. Pandit Sham Nath, Executive Engineer, Public Works Department,

Babu Sattya Kinkur Sen, Government Pleader, Burdwan, in the Bengal Presidency

Babu Hayi Krishna Muzumdar, Zamindar of Islampur, in the district of Murshidabad in the Bengal Presidency

Babu Jogendra Chandra Mitter, Inspector of the Calcutta Police. Kullas Chunder Bose, Lite President of the Calcutta Medical Society. Lala Nihal Chand, landowner of Sih tranput in the North-Western Province

Kilyin Singh, City Inspector of Police, Allahibad, in the North-Western Province

Thakur, Sitta Baksh Singh, Tahsildar, Allahabad, in the North-Western Provinces

Bakehi Parman and, Hakum-i-Ala, Kashmir

Babu Woma Churn Mukeiji, Registrat of the Department of Finance and Commerce of the Government of India

Khan Sahib

Wali Sullib Dadamiya Kazi, Kazi of the town of Satara in the Bombry Presiden ... Acad Bicks Knan, Syndezai, Hopmary Magistrate in the Desa Ghazi Khan district in the Punjab

Rao Sahib

Ruman Vyastio Desai, Vice Pesident of the Minicipanty of Distribution the Bomb ty Presidency

Ishwuld O havaran Honorary Magistrate and President of the Munico dity of Ahmedahad in the Bombay Presidence

Lakshman Blikaji Wakhatkar, la'ely clerk to the Tastrict Court of Khandesh in the Bombay Presidency

Chandulal Mathuradas, late Superintendent of Post Offices, Cutch Division Rat Sahib

Bullium, Kotwal of Burm the Kangta district in the Punjah. Pandit Ranchanger Dube, Tutor to His Highness the Mahacaja of Edemir in Ripputan i

Life Bligh Mull, Commissional Contractor

P esidency

Raba Doorga Cuarn Chuckerbutty, Supervisor, Public Works partment, Beng d

Babu M thura Mobin Mokety Accountant and Treasurer, Office of the Private Secretary to His Honour the Lieutenam Governor of the North-Western Provinces

Kyet those Zoung shive Silvel yo Min

Manny Sliwe I, Myook, of the Magwe district, to barm a Manng Kile, Extra Assistant Conservator of Forests in the Tharwaddy district, in Burma

Ahmudan gaung Tazerk ya Min

Laung Ba, Mynok, in the Minbu district, in Burms. I tung Cheik, Inspector of Police, in Burma.

he Distinctions of the Day have, besides, fallen on there in the be of honorary military appointments. The Chief Jurtice of the n dad High Court, Sir John Edga, 15 Commandani, Third Ad

EAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering EAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED. Any person suffering a Dedness, Noises in the Head, &c, in yleans of a new, simple timen, which is proxing very successful in completely certing cases it knows. Full patternitis, including many desorated, tritimonals to experience, sometimes, will be sent post free calapplication, system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before public. Address, Am d. Specialist, Albany Buildings, 30, Vigigian Leet, Westminster, London, S. W. ministrative Battalion, North-West Province three other Commandants, namely, of the Bengal-Magbue Railwaw Volunteer Rifa Corps, the Cossifor Settllery Volunteers, the Assan Volumeer is the Corps, the Volumeer Rifle Gurps, have been mad Honorary Aides-de Camp to the School Governd-General. The Volumeer Officers' Decuration has all the darributed amonforty-six officers of the Indian Volumeer Fores.

THE New Year was welcomed into Calcutte with the customary Passeds on the Madau, in which the Volunteers had a share. There was a on the against, in which the visualizers has a spars. Incre was a brilliant display and heavy fitting. Lord Right was present. The bands played the whole of the National Authors, Three cheers, were given for the Queen-Empress. In the Morel Past, the voluntaers. generally figured weil. At the conclusion of the Parade, the Bengal Cavalry and the Calculta Light Horse went by the Viceroy at a games when a Light Horseman, his animal becoming excited, vanished with a bolt. During the day, many repaided to the Zou-to the Fancy Fair held there. The Fair suice last par has been shorn of its two chief attractions. The omission was made up, in part, by the visi of the Viceroy. In the evening tiere was the State Dinner a Government-House, & Covers were aid for about ninety persons Those privileged to meet the Vicernan the occasion but who could not from religious scruples just him a the feative board were received by Lord Eigen later on.

As a part of the military show of the morning of the 1st, there was a manceuvic on the 2nd, when a mock night attack on Fort William was arranged, in which also the volunters were allowed to take a part The Calcutta Light Horse, the 5th Bengal Cavalry, the 10th and 16th Bengal Infantry and the Sussex Regiment, under the command o Colonel During of the Sussex legiment, having occupied Howral advanced in three columns along the Strand, the Clive Street and round Government House, along he Council House Street, and attack ed the Duke of York's bastion. The 6th Bengal Infantry, the 1st Bat ta'ion of the Calcutta Volunteers the E. L. Railway and the E. B. Rail y Volunteers and the Presidney Voluntees Sattalion, under command of Colonel Hailes of the 6th Bengal Infantry, defended the position. After an hour's fighing, the order sounded "cease fire," General Lance holding that theenemy had been completely routed.

THE State Ball at Governmen House came off on the 3rd. The attendance was large.

THE Christmas Sale of the fueen's fat stock, bred and fed upon the ray il demesne, fetched goo prices A fine Hereford bullock was sold for 52L, Hereford, heifes from 18L to 26L, Shorthorf cattle 23L to 46L, Devon bullocks 25L to 34L. West Highland bullocks 26L to 301., Hampshire Down waher steep 41. 455to $1. 55., Hampshire, Down lambs 3/, to 3/, 15. cach, Clune sheep al. 13s. to 3l. 5s. Highland wether sheep 21. 6s to 21. 12s., Berkshire pigs and hoge 31. 10s. to y. and fat Bogs, small white breed, 6/ to yA tor. The sale was Bibu Shoshi Bhousan Bose, late luspe tor of Police in the Bengal 179 7. and 181 and 19 rince. Consort's Earn. Window Park, realized, for the 45 Deven Hereford, Highland and Shorthorn bell 400 prime Hampshire Down, Highland, Coune and half-bred theep and too bacon hog, and lorkers, 20201 or 6d.

> Ar a lecture, in the Exmination Hall, Victoria Embinkmeng the auspices of the British Institute of Public Health, Dan Co. Wandhead, director of the september laboratores of the Royal of Physicians and Sageons, pointed out that the autitox treatment of diphthing had nothing in common with either cination of small-po of the tuberculine treatment of tubercu The results have bee striking in Berlin and Buda Pesth and recommended the tratment in English with postible improvement the method. Lord layfair, in unsuper vote of thanks to the letter, regreited that were American was actively disseminating the ne remedy; England as left far behind.

THE late Mr. Good to Livermore has rare and choice Bibles. The souls day, fifth that collections, authorities the british Maseum, British Museum, at of the first Bibi

JAMES ANTHON, From the on October 20, 1894, having previously made a will cated the day of legible preceding. The problete of Following upon this news by the mind, comes the telegraphic intelligence that the Governor-General of Indo Chan, M. d. I messin, his Finance Act, 1897, at 1997, amounting to £3,375, 15.9. The been recorded. He is no need of his new communicated of it it accrets personal estate acceptance at £2233.3. The executors are his son to M. Canvet, earlier of the Paris, and sent copies of conditinal state. Ashley From each range the Congine Mugiciet. From the They, however, i.e. give the will, all the estate and efforce which the decreased has the will, all the estate and effects which the dand other Deputies, daughter M. Cartis, dispersed. The will directs "my executors shall destroy all private letters, literacy papers, and unpublished deput ition, among of minuscrip's being high me, and I desire them also to destroy all such letters, paper as un ne normals of, or relating to, the late Mrs. J me Weisn Culyle, as cane o ma for my absolute property under the will of Mr. Tu out Carle, an whith I may not have poblished a my lifetime, together any any supporting manuscripts relating to life time, to be that any support sheet in aniscripts relating to Thomas Carlyle of the land Welsh Carlyle "

ON Thursday, the 27th Discember, 1894, at Kokee, the sportino Adjutant of the 4th Bom' 1998 ties, wilked a mile, then r in the same distance and again roce wer be same space on the Royal A tillery Parade Ground, all in 17 minutes and 45 seconds. The wilk occupied him nine milities the run six minutes and fifteen seconds and the ride two murities and twenty seconds. The ground was heavy and there was a large second prices, the feat.

LAST week Connects Clise and, 'age, of the 11th Western Division, Royal Artifary, were rescand for, drowning in the Bombry harboni by the pluce tindale Adom Hoji of Shepherd's steam launch Pindi

THE Matin Court of Enguiry dAuckland on the loss of the steamer Wanarappaton Great Barrier Island in October List, when 131 lives were lost, aronaunced its finds in the Discender 131 fives were lost, aronaunced its finds in the Discender 11 five a whole sale conderination of captain and rew Captain and responsible for the case. At the same time, it is of opinion that the Chie. Office showed neglect after the week and the ship's company did not do an tax expected of British seamen -----

NOTES & LEADERETTES, ZOUR OWN NEWS.

THE WEEK'S TELEGRIN IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS

THE Crar Nichelas II, has not yet beed granuted, although he had the good wisnes of all our subjects at his wedding. Nevertheless, he to the Emper of All the Russias, and the costly ceremony of coron t tion will come by and bye. He seems too as adopted dithe Nortier fears which pursued his father At you \ III to his grave. He is for religious tole ation at least as regards comprons in the army and Some Service the meditates at extensive in through he it min one The peaceful an one cone is have the box been made from various process to start in a particle. The Russ an Government of desires as odd, non-months exchanged the managey question egarding the Pumirs conceding to Great Britain the two practicable ways across them, the Charal and the Junott roads The Never Premja says that Ra-sia is woling to give Great Brition satisfactory guarantees for the integrity \(\) (India provided Great | \(\) when Breathers, ineral cof (dysone if the Breath, on her part, helps Russia to acquire \(\) allipse for a formed (conducing the monty become of the distribution of the Care of the Ca string of the current e of the Sea of Mustora with a point for a process the almost error will be carried. mains advance post of the opposite side of the Asiatic shore and Lemma, of Mitylene if the Greef in Archipela A. Russian expedition headed by Captain Leontieff has stared for Abyssima with presents to the Negurand the petry chiefs General Gourko has been repeaced by Coun Shouvaloff as Governo of Warsew Inc. repeaced by Count Shouvaloff as Governal of Warsow Lin-Imperial rescript in king the appointment affilms the Czu's love of Peace.

No the French Chamber, M. Habert complained what there were too many journalists in Paris who used their power or y to blackmail. He

AT his eighty-fifth hirth lay on Dec. 29, Mr Glade were cived a deputation, among others, from the Armerica constants on Employawho wanted to mark the occasion by the his otan . . . the Hawarden Church. In repyring, be at all to be porter out-tages by Tirkish soldors in Armenia, and the repetition then unless vermes and a konstlay to the first true, he so to the time had come to case a general support electrologicams), aims so disgriceful to Milhoned in configuration. Physican already Jeniand of the Porte reforms in Armenia (It is proposed to all series or a Vic-Biths and Mosh into one Viciyet, with a Common was all be a office for the years only. The Sult in will none to him, but he me " he except in the first selection, a Curistian,

LORD Monkwell succeeds Lord Sandhurs, the Governor elected Bombay, as Pathamentary Under Secretary contact for Vic-

LORD Randolph Churchill continues in a procurous condit; a

Fift Emperor William is to be decorated with the Lapanese Chryson thomain. The Mikido dished with the victory of his troop , which forgetful that it is due to Girn in asstruction of the Japanese in military science. China must cause become for her long lethrigic

No bloody news from the sent of wir in the Fat East. I it is rather perceful. Mr. Fister has storted for Jolan on his mission of peace between China and Japan. The Chinase envoys will be seed a another week to Japan to meet han at Kobe. The Japan e was tions in the south of Midden appear to have come to a sign The Chinese troops in 'A inchurity moder General Song are in 100 kg in fedural to the contract of the chinese troops in 'A inchurity moder Centeral Song are in 100 kg in fedural to the contract of the contr in fighting tactics and regioning confidence in them of es. Nichan seems still to be in the hards of the Chine . The time command of the Chine e forces, has been confirmed on lines. Linkings, the Viceroy of Nankin. A cording to panese arrange in the butle of the toth October, when the favanese cupinies Hutching, the fighting was revere, the Changes loss was 300 while that of the Japanese was 422 killed and killed, .

WISHING to please both Loncishire and India, the Secretary of Score for Indicanas the good wishes of neither. The excise duty of gotton has been denounced from all quarters in India. The cotton splaners of England have the ely expressed, themselves against the correspondity and have obtained to a recome it is be held at Mab hester a in week to basider the quistion and we are sure, to force M. Fower it regonther has once a many contests the imposition of a feet only or wild oh a retire a committee cuttin goods. On the reassending of grade a accused to the country expect a lively debate.

In the company the best countries at the co-Water Banado, the effect sound too lite to the Chantajenora V. oher Borrison, a thera rof Stysme the contraction that . . . Pending that i li li na∰a ƙ She said in Lyca, and a terminate and guitter of the Compress.

Mr. W. Brennand, the late Propagal of the Doctor College. respect nonether a year and a smill affect of, organic sed by his named who have themselves attrined to a sations in life of 's. Bremaind was known as a mathematician. He is now about 75 years of age and is still energed or his favourite parants. "He," frus already pullbahed a paper entitle i Herdu Astron my not derived fe er Greece," as an appendix to a paper on Hindu An orolly read her the the Royal Society in 1597. He has got ready or in sufficiently advance? also accused the Government of tolerating & clas & of articles and ac- in a paper to show that the Gerks borrowed from the findus. At any ate, he enters the sement at the Oriental Conference that the Londo Trachnometry will taken wholly from the Greek (from Ptolemy) at the "Entry's Sidhara" was not an ancient work, that some of the things in the "Suffya Sidhara" in Echpses, proved that they peen borrowed to pay the expenses of publication, it was sied to raise the auguired amount by subscriptions. The pupils of the Principal tugh the idea, But Rija Rijandia Narayan Roy of the Principal tops of the new. But Kija Kijanda Kadayah koj of Ehap al has constant with his accustomed liberality to beat all the agencies estimated at Relation. In making the offer the Rod's Chief Canages, Table Kuliprasans (hosh, a Bengali author of repute, whose Thoughts in Shitude we naticed in our last, writes to Babu Dhanate. Off. Inspector of Schools, Eastern Circle, Dacca, and Scoring of the Committee there is the sum, says:—

This contribution of the Estimates to raise the sum, says :—

This contribution of the Baja will be in pursuance of the plan that be has been failured by foliable has no years, of assuming the public aston of metasterolous books at the recommendation of the Sahtya Somalion and Institution of Type of the Sahtya Somalionand Institution of Type of the Sahtya Somalionand Institution of the Sahtya Somalionand Institution of the Sahtya Somalion of the Sahtya S yery large san of saney up to date"

The Ruja is indied fortunate in his able and accomplished Chief

1 Manager . 30

MR. B. H. Hodgeon of Repal celebraty, died in May last. By a will Recured 18 years light; he had left £200 to his literary executor whom the name of the had left £200 to his literary executor whom the name of the nam

MR. Laborhere's faith in ministers of the Christian religion is shaken. After a long and costly experience, he writes -

"Often have I vowed that never again would I mike a statement in Trails upon the gathority of a dergyman. Once upon a time I published dispain allegations about a village pump. They were communicated in degryman. The village pump cost me from in damages and I degryman. The village pump cost me from in damages and I degryman the village pump cost. I was or three years back I made some remarks about the retinous of a Yorkshine squire to the church. My information the retinous of a Yorkshine squire to the church. My information the time came exclusively from costs. On four abasisms in my editorial experience have I come off seconds. On four abasisms in my editorial experience have I come off seconds. Acts in flori-action, and for two of those the clergy have been the spee of my downfall. Now comes the shore measure (regarding a level of the accusate of the shore the church of Bench of "Often have I wawed that never again, would I make a statement in t evidence."

A evidence."

Truth ought to have known better. We do not mean "sagethat the clergy are given to untruth . There are people, whether or the clergy or the laity, who rush to untruth believing it to be truth. They jump to conclusions without careful examination. There are again persons who cannot face cross-examination, and make their escape by decrying their own statements. They are more dangerous Alien the simply careless.

We take from the .!thenæum the following brief notice of a very new publication on general linguistics . .

got new publication on general linguistics.

It was a bippy and judicion cloure on the part of Messrs Keg in Part C., the publishers of the International Scientific Series, who first extract the ample of Kre and I meases to Prof A. La fee of the Authophologicals hook, Part, who has produced a meant reclarable asks for the international of exposition which bright the control of the large of the special of the which is a home to the Collined Faster. In 424 pages of which this book consists control a mass well-varinged and well digested in formation who are reader may set easily and within such a small compact in any after work. The fation is not, it is pleasant to note, a believe in the decadence of anguage, he tailed sees 'in the housand phonetic substitutions and modifications adaptations of peech in the temperament of the virous propies and to the growing outprexity, of intellectual needs,' after an introductory essay on the evolution of language, the bulk of the virous propies and to the growing on the property of languages and it is a fler the author keeps has also a substitution of languages and it is a fler the author keeps has also an account of the property of the property representatives of the Latter will be read a night deep interest on both sides of the Channel. As the book is wrighen in English and is intended in the first place for English readers, French spellings of ethnic words should have been avoided Www write Channanis, Tchoulviche, Chanfara, Tchoulviche Alcoutes, Yakomee? We have also noted a few mispirits, such as 'Videnish and Maximis' (p. 1741), and 'Enhader' for Schnater (p. 202). But these blemished onot detract from the general excellence of the work.

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine. Care for Deaf be sent post fee. —Arthurd Endiums and small rapidlances entire by superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS. 19, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

that gentraler in Secretary 2018, who have been been do not detract from the general excellence of the work. It is not in the sense in which last century all languages were traced to Hebrew that the Rev. D. Micdoughd, in his elymological dictionary of the Efate of the New Hebrides, endeavours to prove Asiatic Origin of the Oceanic Longuager (Lucic & Co.). For by Asiatic heim on Senitic, and he distinctly says that 'Arabie, which horders on Oceania, has always been, and iscte this day, the principal home of this, the most important family of Asiatic languages.' In his 'Oceania': Lunguistic and Authropological,' he mode a similar attempt five years ago, and now returns to the 'charge, with no more success, we fear, than the great Bopp, who broke a lance to prove the kinshop of the Malayo-Polynessan languages with those of the Indisciplington Philosophical Society, who, in a series of articles, compared a number of words in these languages with corresponding ones in non-Aryan Lunguages of Hindustan and horder commitse. There is, indieed, a certain similarity in the mental organization of the Semitic Aryan languages of Hindustan and horder countries. There is, indeed, a certain similarity in the mental organization of the Semini and Madyan races which is also traceble in certain peculiarities of their respective homoges. To these countdences attention was first drawn, upwinds of seventy years ago, by W. Robinson, in the introduction to insex cellent work on the principles of Madyan orthography; and they also foun the subject of one of the best chapters in G. von der Gabelentz's littest work 'Die Splathwissenschaft'. But when we come to examine the details of lexical pomparisons in Mr. Macdonald's book we fill to detect my reliable kolstin, even of a diversity of the second of book we ful to detect any palpable keship, even of a distant degree. We must give him credit for the assimity with which he has fried to solve his problem. As for the result, we can but arrive at the Scotch verdict 'not proven.'"

Here is a bit on the great. Max Miller for still harping, as he has done these forty years, on his theory about the Turanian languages in which class he comprises all those that are neither Semitic nor Indo-European He thus lumps together all the tongues of the American, African and Australian aborigines, those of the greater part of Asia and part of Europe.

At Toyobee Hill, Professor Victor Horsley gave an address when he illustrated by experiments the effects of a bullet from a modern rifle. While the projectile merely madea round clean hole in an iron plate in clay it made a hole altogethe disproportionate to the size of the buller and of very irregular shap, was driven in front of the bulle. The old theory was that the air. The present explanation is that the difference is due to the difference between a wet and a dry substance. He sent a bullet successively through an empty tin canister and a canister filled with flind In 1/2 first canister a clean hole was made but in the second experiment we lid of the canister was blown off and the canister its elf upset. The, the professor explained, was owing to the fact that the velocity of e bullet, when passing through a wersubstance, was distributed in equal pressure. Regarding the effect of the bullet on human brain, by explained that death was caused not, as erroneously supposed, by foliure of the heart's action but by failure of the respiration. The heart went on beating but the respiration stopped. The heart was stimula ed and not depressed when a bullet entered the brain. A bullet plassify through the bone of the skull simply made a round hole, and of passing out at the other side it made a perceptibly larger hole, producing at the same time an explosive effect and damaging the base of the brain. The brain was not necessary to life, but we could not live bethout respiration and circulation.

THE list novelty in maps says a contemporary, is one of Africa by Dr. beikin, in which the times of countries and provinces are superseded by those of the diseases peculiar to them. Many new diseases, to which Negroes are particularly hable, have thus been brought to the notice of the word. Amongst these, a contempority has been very much exercised highly sleeping-sickness, about which, it seems, he had not he ard before The following extract, therefore, from a very interesting tecture on Bleep by Lieutenant-Colonel Brigade-Surgeon Brugim o Evers, M.D. jublished in the National Magazine for October 1893, may not be will but interest.

"Laymen may not, perhaps, be aware that there is a condition hat of Insomma. It is termed Lethargy. Such that it may last for weeks together and then ad death. It is essentially a disease of the nerve has been naticed more frequently on the West elsewhere, it is called 'African Lethargy' or the quite the reverse of profound sleep occur end in convolsions a centres and as it Critics and as it has been registed more frequently on the West Casst of Africa thing-lesswhere, it is called 'African Lethargy' or the 'sleeping-suckness' It is contined exclusively to the Negro population and occurs more frequently in in idea than females. The tendency to sleep increases gray hally. At first the person falls asleep, perhaps, over his meals or his work, but as days pass, the sleeping fits become prolonged and emaciation follows. It is an extremely fatal disease."

Growing humourous over this novel idea of map-making, our contemporary, suggests that the market value of such maps is capable of being increased by placing in the mountains and rivers the medirines requisite to travellers in those parts. In this way, the Jalap river, the Black Draught mountain, the Rhubarb plains, may introduce a new era in popular education. Why not? The Medical Congress, which, it is believed, will revolutionise the healing art, and convert every village in Bengal at least into a sanitarium under powers which Sir Charles Elliott is ready to grant, may very well take in charge the preparation of such a map of India to begin with. But we forget. The practitioners of the Indo-Sanskrit system of medicine have been classed in official publications under herbalists, and the Congress has only followed in the footsteps of the Government by refusing to have anything to do with these men, or with those practising other system of medicine, It is these herbalists who could be expected to give the necesstry information regarding the localities where medicinal herbs and toots are obtained Our medical men cannot, if they respect their science, avail themselves of any information supplied by Indian Kivirajes. Such a map of India, therefore, must for the present have to be prepared by them without any extraneous aid. And as that may be a difficult task, a more practical plan would be a map of India showing the quantities of English chemicals sold within particular steas. All cities and towns in which quinine less than t maund is sold in a year may be ignored as being still steeped in barbailty. Or, better, still, the country may be divided into patches for showing the variations of average income from the practice of the only correct method of cure which the Congress represents. Such a map, besides being an index of local civilisation, will be of immense benefit to those young men who may wish to come out to India, after having graduated in the British universities, for independent practice. In it all such localities should be omitted, or marked with jet blacks within which an orthodox practitioner does not succeed in making at least ten thousand rupees a year. To all provincial Governments, intolerant of insanitation, it will afford much help in determining the Amount of Desinage tax that should be levied within particular areas

THE joint-stock Mohun Mela at the Nine Tanks or the Mullick Lodge, on the 30th and 31st December, had a fair start. The opening was p dronized by all sections of the community. About eight thousand persons were present the first day and two thousand the second. The directors had provided, for only the gate money, ample amusements There were the Female String Band, Voss's Band, Female Bank Julia, Theatre, Magic, wrestling, and, to crown all, Illumination and Fireworks, which last two sent away the visitors perfectly satisfied There were enough seats and to spare for all of them. Those who winted priviley had, however, to pay separately feet the accommodanon. The Mela was more a Barawuri entertainiff in than a Fan There were no stalls in sufficient number to speak of. If there were no sales to benefit any charity, there were games of chance to try one's luck. Thus, gambling had its free scope, which was suppressed the second day. No other improprieties were permitted or openly indulged in, unless it be any that bhang was sold as a cooling draught.

AFTER a harassing trial and a costly defence, Ruja Jogender Nath Roy, of Nator, finds himself in jail. Mr. Lokendia Nath Palit, the Officiating Sessions Judge of Rajshahi, has sentenced the Rija to six months' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 25,000, and his amla Mathura Nath Pal to only six months' hard labour. The sessions enquiry lasted for about a month and the Judge took more than that time to consider his judgment. The two assessors cone the District Engineer, and the other a merchant, both Europeans, had pronounced the charge false. Mr. Palit took time till Dec. 11 to make up his mind. Then he fixed Dec 20 to deliver his judgment. It was not, however, ready till January 3, when he, disagreeing with the assessors, convicted the prisoners. There was an immediate appeal to the High Court the next day, when the Justices Beverley and Banerjee, on the application of Mr. W. C. Bonnerjea, admitted and ordered release of the prisoners on bail. Out of the fine, Rs 6,000 has been directed, by the sentencing Judge, to be paid to the prosecutor Baboo Gunga Gobind Sircar, the Assistant Surgeon no less renowned than war.

of Nator. The Finance Minister cannot but be thankful to Mr. Palit for thus adding to the impoverished exchequer Rs. 19,000.

THE Honours List is a comprehensive one. It includes all classes and grades. Next to the Miharaja of Kohlapur, who heads it, the Finance Minister and his department figure prominently. The late Law Member who will be always remembered for the ill-fated Bill that bears his name and his strongest literary opponent on that occasion are both honoured. The Bombay Additional Member of the Vicetoy's Council who has just completed his first term is admitted to the Most Emment Order, while the Bengal Member, more useful and who did signal services, is left out and was not allowed another term which he would have preferred to any gaudy distinction. The services of the Baboo Collector of Colentra and Superintendent of Excise, an ornament of his service, who has always maintained his place with ability and dignity, are fittingly though taidily recognized towards the close of his official career. We have a Mahamahopadhya and a Shains-ul-Ulema The Khim Bahadurs, Rio Bihadurs and Rai Bahadurs and their diminutive Schebs are plentiful. The Police have a large share in the distribution. Though thankful for what he has got, the detective Inspector of the Calcutta Police has deserved a more substantial reward. He has earned his lamels in the Calcutta Police, and may now very well be redrafted to the Bengal, say as an Assistant Superintendent with a wider scope of activity.

A man of culture and accomplishments, a thorough gentleman and of means to maintain the dignity, Mr. W. H. Rattigan, the leader of the Pumpab bar and Vice-Chancellor of the Pumpab University, has well deserved the English kinghthood conferred on him on the inspicious occasion

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, January 5, 1805

THE YEAR.

THE old year, taking it as one with another, while of the usual order in local details, has added another link to the chain of the world's progress. To the annalist looking closely at minor incidents, there might be grounds for a pessimistic view. Indeed, the panorama of events is but of the usual kind. There has been the same crop of accidents by flood and field, of Anarchist Demonstrations and Labour Strikes, earthquakes and similar catastrophes in the natural world as of wars and rumours of war, insurrections and revolutions in the political world But we take these as temporary aberrations--local divergences which do not affect the general Law of Human Progress. The old year might have had its full share of evils iaseparable from life, but notwithstanding this, the course of things, on the whole, has made for progress. In spite of all disquieting incidents here and there, the old year appears to possess a character of Peace stamped upon its forchead.

There was a combined effort for peace among the European Powers, and the utterances and acts of mighty monarchs have emulated in a common desire to bury the hatchet and smoke the calumet of peace. Towards this consummation so devoutly to be wished, things have, indeed, been tending for some time past, but the past year seems to have culminated in the result in a way never seen before.

Not the least overt sign of this is to be seen in the great Northern Bear's embrace with the British Lion. So far as any reliance is to be placed upon the late demonstrations of cordulity between these two States, the fact is one of no small significance. They are tiring of the cruel, exhausting game of war, and Militarism would seem to have its days numbered. At any rate, having attained colossal proportions, it is to be brought back within its proper limits. If appearances are to be trusted, the nations are realizing the truth that Peace hath her victories

Siam as over the Egyptian question was at times carried to the bursting point. But in all cases peaceful counsels have prevailed in the end, and by assassination by an Italian Anarchist of the head mutual tact and forbearance an open rupture has been of the Republic. The incident called forth a uniaverted.

The same pacific disposition has been declared on more than one occasion by Germany, and altogether the chances of peace seem to be better now than at any previous period. To all lovers of progress this state of things must be full of promise as portending the dawn of a happier era-

The year's chronicle is not without some notable events. In English politics the most important is the resignation by Mr. Gladstone of the Premiership and the appointment of Lord Rosebery as his successor. Opinions must differ among politicians of different schools as to the young states and who has come at the helm of affairs. The attitude of the House of Lords towards the measures sent up by the Lower Chamber like the Home Rule Bill, the Employers' Liability Bill and others, interposes no small difficulty in the way of a Minister getting through his programme of work. His popularity in consequence suffers with his supporters who complain when the promised reforms are continually put off. Lord Rosebery has suffered from this cause, but as yet this has neither made him lose heart nor has it soured his temper. His work so far has been slow, but he has kept his spirits and resisted the temptation of giving way to the cry of "Down with the II-ase of Lords". His position on this question is a oderate one, which has gone some way to enhance reputation as a leader of no mean promise. His

The Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science.

210. Bow Bozu, Speed, Calcutta (Session 1894-95.)

Lecture by Babu Ram Chandra Data, Fos, on Monday, the 7th January, at 4.15 P.M. Surget. Chromium and Iron

Lecture by Mr. B. Cornsbern, B. A., B. Sc., on Monday, the 7th Tost, it 5 30 P. M. Subject. Biology. General survey of the Animal Kin sdom

Lecture by Bron Rom Changra Datta, 1 (8, on Tuesday, the 8th In the d 4 15 PM Sey of Nickel, Colodt and Manganes

Lecture by Dr. Ni ratio Suku, M. A., M. D., on Wednesday, the 9th List, at 5 30 P. M. Sugar. Chemical Physiology--Globuline, Peptone and Gelatine

Lecture by Brow Rip ndra Nith Chatterpee, M.A., on Wednesday, the 9 h Jost, at 630 P M Sugar Pennmates, Loone by Book Symmetrs Mukherjee, M. A. on Thorsday, the roth Ins. , as 4 T M $\rightarrow u^{0} p_{0} T$. Metric properties of Stringfit lines

Lecture by Mr. B. Chandham, B. A., B. Sc., on Thursday, the 10th Inst, at $ c M Subj I, History - Brood

Lecture by Dr. Michendra Lid Sucar, on Friday, the 11th Inst., at 63) P. M. Sugar Hygiometry

Lecture by Mr. B. Chardburg, B. V. B. Sc., on Saturday, the 12th In t, at 5 P. M. Subject. Practical BackgrawFrog (continued).

Lecture by Mr. B. Camalana, B. A., B. Sc., on Saturday, 12th Inst., at 5 P. M. Suegect. General Biology-General survey of Vegetable Kingdom

Vomeston Fee, Rs. 4 for Physics, and Rs. 4 for Chemistry; Rs. 6 for both Physics and Chemistry; Rs. 4 for General Biology; Rs. 6 for complete course of Physiology and Biology. The charge for a single lecture is 2 Annas.

> MAHENDRA LAL SIRCAR, MD, Honorary Secretary.

Nor less significant have been the negotiations public utterances have conduced to the same effect. which more than once have averted threatened hosti- and although there might be keen dissatisfaction in lities between France and England. They were some quarters with regard to some of his acts, as notwithin an ace of coming to blows in the Congo coun- ably in his proposed interference in the war between try. The tension of feeling in Madagascar and China and Japan, the general tendency of opinion is not against the new Premier.

In France there was a dire catastrophe in the versal burst of indignation the intensity of which was in a great measure due to the personal and public virtues of the august victim. The occurrence, however, has turned the attention of all the Powers to the necessity of organized measures for the suppression of those secret agencies of destruction, and President Carnot shall not have fallen in vain if his death is the means of stamping out a standing menace to humanity.

Another disappearance of a crowned head, of not less moment, if not so tragical, is the death of the Czar of Russia which event has evoked widespread sorrow. Czar Alexander III. had been a genuine friend of international peace and his absence at this juncture is a loss to the political world.

Coming nearer home, the event of events in our own continent is the war between China and Japan. The issue of the struggle has been one continual surprise to the world, the proud Empire of the Celestials having been worsted again and again in a manner no body had expected. China now lies humbled to the dust, and sues for the friendly intervention of the Christian Powers in protecting her from utter demolition.

In India, 1894 was the first year of a new Viceroy's noviciate, we mean new in his own person, for Lord Elgin his an old tie that binds him to this country by hereditary interest. He has received an ovation wherever he has gone, in which nothing was more gratifying to his feelings than the ample proofs he received of the hold his father has upon the affections of the Indian population. Viceroy has borne himself meekly in his new office, and his public utterances have been uniformly marked by a cultured sobriety, a tolerance of opinion and a real interest in the people's wellbeing which have been highly prepossessing. At the very outset of his career Lord Elgin had to pass through no ordinary trial. In the question of the imposition of tariff duties on English cotton goods, his Government found itself in opposition to the views of the Secretary of State. On this eternal question Manchester has always been supreme, and Secretary of State after Secretary of State has been a pliant tool in the hands of the English cotton-lords. An invidious distinction was decreed by the Secretary of State with respect to these cotton goods, the iniquity of which was the most glaring. The Viceroy's position was trying in the extreme, while that of his Council was a reductio ad absurdum. The demeanour of the Viceroy, however, all through was submissive. His own view of the situation is that he had done his duty by opposing his Chief, but that when that Chief was obdurate, he had nothing left but to yield. Lord Elgiu, however, has at last got justice. The duties have been retunposed, not because of the people of India having spoken with one voice or of the Secretary of State having been convinced, but because of Manchester having at last given in of her own accord. This act of plain justice has, however, through the same all powerful influence of Manchester, been shorn of its grace by being coupled with an injustice to the rising cotton industry in India which has been subjected to a countervailing excise duty.

The Currency difficulty was during the year fully to the fore as before. Keen pressure has continued to be felt in business circles by the downward tendency of silver which Lord Lansdowne's legislation has not been able to arrest. Nevertheless there was no disposition to lay the fault at his closing of the Mints to the free coinage of silver, the policy of which measure is generally upheld. The agitation that came to a head in Calcutta and other commercial centres on the currency question demanded, on the contrary, that that measure should be followed by an appeal for international bimetallism. There was an influential meeting in Calcutta which adopted a memorial to Parliament embodying these views. Apart from this, there was a consensus of opinion in all quarters against the financial proposals of the Home Government of giving relief to the Indian exchequer by imposing additional taxation on India for the benefit of the English moneylender. The European mercantile community of our city have also freely fraternised with the native community and protested with one voice against the selfish policy of the tariff which has at last been grudgingly redeemed.

The publiction of the decision of the Secretary of State on the question of the Simultaneous Civil Service Examination, the rejection of the prayer of the Bengal and Behar landholders about the Cadastral Survey, without fairly meeting their last memorial, the passing of the Bengal Municipal Act which is a considerable improvement on the old one, the threatened imposition of a Drainage Cess, the growing interest of the Government as well as the people in questions of Sanitation, the Tree-daubing Scare, and Government measures for the prevention of riots between religious sects, including proposed increased powers to a corrupt police, the serious illness of the Afghan Amir from which he has now happily recovered, the Waziristan Expedition, these are about the main heads of topics which have engaged the attention of the public. Indian questions have, as in the year previous, received an increasing share of attention in Parliament as well as from the English public at large. The year will be memorable for two important debates on the subject of British administration in India, one on the occasion of the presentation of the India Budget in the House of Commons, and the other on a motion for a Commission of Enquiry into the growing poverty of this country under British rule. Of not less importance have been the exposures by retired proconsuls like Lord Northbrook and Lord Lansdowne and officials of the position of Sir Auckland Colvin, now no longer under the trammels of office, of the way in which the India Office was too prone to subordinate the interests of this country to those of the British people. All honour to them for their advocacy of this helpless land, and to the British Parliament and public at large for the growing interest they are manifesting in the affairs of our country. Our only hope is from them, as recent experiences have more than ever shown the feebleness of our own Government before the arbitrary mandates from Whitehall and Downing Street.

It has been a peculiarly wonderful year in its abnormally heavy mortality. The losses have been unusually numerous in almost all walks of life leaving gaps in our community some of which it will be difficult to fill.

We cannot think of the year that is gone without recollections of a terrible personal loss. in February of Dr. Sambhu Chunder Mookerjee is an irreparable loss to Reis and Rayret, and, we think we may add, to Indian journalism in general. It is no small solace, however, in our sorrow that the worth and virtues of the brilliant publicist and no less brilliant man have been cordially acknowledged in almost all quarters. The Chief taken away, his work has fallen upon lientenants to carry it on according to their lights and, of course, upon the lines that he set for their guidance. This we have done so far and, God willing, we mean to do as a sacred obligation, to the best of our power, inadequate as that power may be to the work before us. Of our imperfections no one could be more sensible than ourselves. We have, however, a duty to perform to the dead, and how could we do it in a way that would be congenial to his spirit but by keeping alive the journal to which he devoted so much of himself. This we regard as the only possible repayment in our power for all that we owe to the dear departed. It is in a spirit of pious regard for the good doctor's memory that we have taken up his work, and we trust we can be peak the consideration and indulgence of our readers in discharging the task.

THE SAGACITY OF CRITICS,

OR
THE RAGE FOR THE ESOTERIC.

CRITICS have generally been credited with finding meanings never dreamt of by authors. The host of ingenious scholars who have laboured on Shakespear, have discovered many beauties in the poet and many evidences of his insight into nature and his skill in weaving images. These, it is said, would have surprised the poet him to self if he had been told of them while abve. The question of the comparative sagacity of critics and authors has generally been regarded as a speculative one, although, after all, it admits of a solution by direct evidence. Everybody knows what Sociates' experience was with the Grecian poets, tragic, dithyrambic, and the rest. The great philosopher asserted, while addressing his disciples, that there was scarcely any one amongst them who could not speak better than the poets he had questioned on the very subjects of their poetry. " It was not any wisdom by which they made their poems, but a certain in tural gift and enthusiasm, like prophets and divines, who also utter many five things, but know nothing of the things they speak." Something of the same kind seemed to be the experience of the wisest of men with the poets of his time. Oliver Goldsmith could not explan the word "slow" in the first line of his Traveller Tennyson ha been said to have fuled in explaining some lines of his In Memorron, which, he said, had been written under the influence of inspiration. If by inspiration be meant an effort of the mind, of which the man homelf is not conscious in the manner in which he is conscious of his usual and ordinary mental operations, its influence on composition can hardly be denied. The most noted instance, perhaps, of such unconscious effort was furnished by Coleridge, who composed his exquisite fragment, entitled Kubla Khan, in a sleep, "if that," as he himself says, ' can be called composition in which all the images rose up before him as things, with a parallel production of the corresponding expressions, without any sensation or consciousness of effort" Sinskit therore ians have taken it for proved that commentators, as a rule, are more learned, than authors, and are, accordingly, appreciative of beauties to which authors are in most instances blind An oft-quoted verse, of unknown parentage, illustrates the situation with singular felicity.

Kawitá-rasa-mádhuryyam Kawirvetti na tatkavih, Bh wám-bhrukuti-bhangi Bhavo vetti na Bhudharah.

The sweetness of the taste which attaches to poetry is relished by one that is a poet, but never by him from whom it flows. The graces of motion of Biavani's eye-brows are understood by (her ford) Bhava but not by (her progenitor) the Mountain. When a poet once comes to be recognised as great, there is no end of speculations in which critics indulge for explaining the excellencies of his genius. Some times, again, the utmost extravagance characterises those speculations. We need not speak of the hundreds of men who would interpret the whole of the "Mahábhátata' as a grand allegorical representation of the war of the human passion, supporting their theories by the most fanciful etymologies of such names as Kunti and Pándu and Dhirtaráshtra and Bhishma and Yudhishthira, and the host of other characters occurring in that cyclopædia of ancient Indian chivalry. The first chapter of the Gita, in particular, yields in this way an esoteric sense in the hands of men whose sanity in other respects no one can question. Speaking of Bengal poets, there are critics who actually see esoteric meanings in Bhárat Chandra's "Vidyá-Sundara" even in those passages where the poet prostituted his genius by pandering to the vicious taste of the times in which he lived. India, perhaps, is the only country in the world where pursuit after the esoteric, in the department of literature, has begun to be carried to the verge of insanity. That undefined movement which goes by the name of Theosophy here has, it seems, imparted a fresh impetus to the inclination for the esoteric interpretation of the Hindu scriptures and even profane Indian literature. This feature of Theosophy is so well marked that, undefined as the movement is, it may very well be defined as a system of faith which accepts the ancient literature of India as embodying grand allegories which it is its special province to explain to a dull and forgetful world. Mr. J. F. Hewitt, the late Commissioner of Chota-Nagpore, though no Theosophist, has caught the contagion. His new book, entitled "The Ruling Races of prehistoric times in India, South-Western Asia and Southern Europe," is, from beginning to end, an endeavour to explain the ancient literature of almost every country as an allegorical representation of famous migrations and changes of religious convictions. In the majority of instances, his etymologies of Sanskrit names and words are incorrect. Indeed, it could not be otherwise, considering that Mr. Hewitt's acquaintance with Sanskrit has been made through translations. Our own Chandra Nath Bose, who is certainly a sensible critic in other respects, in his famous dissertation on Kalidasa's "Sakuntala," actually asserts that Kalidasa wrote his world-renowned drama for enforcing the doctrines of the · Sánkhya system of philosophy. Dushmanta, the hero, is Purusha, sand Sikuntala, the herome, is Prakriti. It would be interesting to ascertain, in der the guidance of this critic of solid learning, who those characters are of this drama that represent Mahattattwa, Ahankara, the five l'anmatia's, the five gross elements, the ten organs of knowledge and action, Mind, and Understanding. Unfortunately, Babu Chandra Nath affords no light on these cardinal topics of the Sankhya philosophy. We have tried, in our dull way, to identify the characters with those four and twenty well-known topics. Unfortunately for us, we have succeeded in the case of only three and twenty. Unless, therefore, we add the critic himself, the full tale cannot be arrived at. As an instance of another omission, Babu Bose has not explained how the noet, in Sakuntala, has taught us the means of achieving the final deliverance from the three kinds of pun to which we are, by our very nature, subject. Whatever the critic's knowledge, however, of the Sankhya system of speculation, and whatever his ingenuity in detecting the hidden purposes of the poet, we have been surprised to see how egregiously he has erred in apprehending the me ming,-that is, the plain and not the esoteric sense, -of the beautiful verse in which Dushmanta gives expression to his sense of the mappropriateness of causing Sakuntala to undergo the austerities of an ascetic life. In that well-known verse Dushmanta likens Kiniwa's endeavour to make Sikuntala undergo such austerities to the efforts of a person to cut down a hard and prickly Simi tree (the Mimora Suma of Roxburgh) with the petal of a lotus for his instrument. The patra in the compound Nilotpala-patra dharaya does not mean the leaf of the plant but the petal of the flower. The petal is more delicate than the leaf. Besides, in such compounds as Padma patra nibhekshana, the meaning is not one whose eyes resemble the traves of the plant, but one whose eyes are like the petals of the flower. Verily, every schoolboy knows that Amara Singha gives "Satapatra" as one of the synonymes of the lotus, "Patra" in this connection does not mean leaves. The fact is evident that Bion Bose, when he wrote his dissertation, had not handled a lotus-leaf. His observations on the leaf are exactly those of a cockney. Gray, in the opening stanza of his Elegy, wrote like a cockney, for he described a classical evening and not the evening of England. English ploughmen return from their labours in the field the lotus leaf has not the merit of even a cockney writing from books. Here is how Babu Bose unrolls a page of nature before the eves of his readers :-

"All of us have seen the leaves of the lotus,-have seen large lotus "All of us have seen the leaves of the lotus,—have seen large lotus leaves flutting on the blue water. Water is the life of those leaves; they seem to have sprung up from some virtue residing in water,—as if the water itself, thickened by some means, his been changed into those leaves. Sakuntala, who was the very embodiment of all that is delicate, scratched some letters with her nails on one of those leaves. Those leaves are such that they are unable to be a scrawbes of the nails. They seem to melt away at the touch of the nails. Then, again, gently raise any of those large leaves, teating it from the stalk. It will immediately droop down. What can be the strength of that It will immediately droop down, leaf's edge, dear friend?"

The above, we think, is a fair translation of the passage. We have, however, never seen such an elaborate description as this of the lotus leaf anywhere else. If Babu Chandra Nath had actually done what he asks his readers to do,-that is, tear a lotus leaf from the stalk and raise it from the water, -- he would have found that instead of drooping away it would have continued to present the same aspect as before. Bibu Bose evidently does not know that in many parts of Bengal the lotus leaf does duty for the leaves of the plantain, and that it lasts, without dicoping or drying, for days together. Formerly, people in Bengal used to wrap with lotus leaves those parts of beams and rafters, made of Sal wood, which required to be inserted within solid masoniy. Lotus leaves offer a good protection against damp and white ants. The wrapping leaves, protected from sun and wind, have been known to last for decades together. So much for the soundness of Babu Bose's exquisite reflections on the lotus leaf. Another instance of such downright waste of ingenuity and writing power can hardly be given,

THE INDIAN MEDICAL CONGRESS.

PROGRESS OF SCIENTIFIC MEDICINE IN INDIA. (From a Summary of the Address delivered by Mr. Hart, editor of the British Medical Journal.)

THE PARASITE OF MALARIOUS FEVER.

These fevers-agues and intermittent fever, malarious, remittent and typno-remittent may now be set down as due to a parasite germ conveyed through the drinking water. I have no intention of entering on a detailed description of this parasite or of discussing the many important question connected with it. All this you can find in the latest publications of the new Sydenham Socieyou can find in the latest publications of the new Sydeniam Socie-ty in their translation of Laveran's last work in their translation of Marchiafava and Bignami's conjoint work on the Summer Autumn Fevers of Rome, and in their translation of Mannaberg's elaborate and most excellent monograph on the Malaria Parault. These books you must study exhaustively. They were this week repeated and confirmed to you by Dr. Crombic in his excellent address. My object in bringing this matter before you is to impress upon you its enormous importance; to impress on you the fact that the malaria parasite is no myth but a reality; to point out more plainly than is done in the books referred to and in other works on the subject the way to set about finding it; to make clear to you that it is easily found, and dy very simple means, if the search is gone about in the simple right way; to remind you that you, of the profession in India, have a duty in this matter; and to appeal to you to do something for the scientific reputation of our country. I do not ask you enter on a div uninteresting task. I feel sure that whoever has once seen the malaria parasite, will teturn spontane-ously, and whenever he can to its study. The thing is so marvellous, so important, so fascinating in itself, that anyone who has tasted the pleasures of the investigation will be sure to take every oppor-tunity of renewing them. Do not be deterred by assumed incompetence or imaginary difficulties. Many suppose that microscopical petence or imaginary dimentices. Wany suppose that interestinguished exminations and scientific work in general cannot be efficiently conducted by men, circumstanced, as I presume the majority of Indian medical officers are, having only limited apparatus, without command of a large library, without abundant leisure. Those who suppose this, debar themselves from much pleasure, much usefullness. It is a great mistake. The best work is nearly invariably down with the smallest amount of apparatus, often apparatus of the crudest description, away from libraries, and in the scanty leisure of active practice. The best apparatus is in a man's head and in his In scientific research, next to a clear perception of what you would seek, and persistency of effort, simplicity and directness of method are the surest guarntees of success. Great truths genearlly lie under our eyes, could we but look clearly, think clearly, truth fully, simply, and not smother ourselves in all sorts of preconceived ideas, in cant, in untruthfulness, in paraphernalia, and in the prevailing fashion. Until lately, malaria has been studied only in its at noon and not at sunset. Babu Chandta Nath's description of effects : henceforth the study will embrace--- and that in the first instance---its cause. When the next text-book on tropical medicines comes to be written, the chapters on malarial disease will be written from the standpoint of the malaria parasite. The first chapter will be a piece of natural history--the life history of the When this has been fully set forth, then, and not till then, the writer will pass to the consideration of the action of the parasite on its human host, that is, to malarial disease. scientific medicine. Hitheto, as regards malaria, it has been, as with astronomy, before the laws of gravity were discovered. Laveran, by his discovery, has proved himself a medical Newton. The old touchstones of malaria—quinine and periodicity—were extreme-ly unsatisfactory, and fallible as a basis for scientific study; the thing malaria itself---the germ---is infallible. Thanks to Laveran, we can now see the thing itself, and the subject has thus passed, at one bound from the region of empiricism to the region of science.

When the Indian observer has satisfied himself of the existence of the malaria organism, when he has learnt to recognise its various phases and their relation to each other; when he has become so familiar with them that he can apply his knowledge with confidence to diagnosis; then he should endeavour, so for as lies in his power, to apply his knowledge to the re-investigation of the entire range of Indian fevers. Recently the British Medical Journal published a malarial chart, which in its present form, or in a form modified by further experience, it is hoped, will prove of service in such investigations. It enables observations on the plasmodium in the blood to be rapidly recorded and read, and this in comparison and in conjuc-tion with the progress of the fever as indicated by thermometer. Whether there is only one malaria parasite whose disease producing properties are modified by changes of temperature, moisture, soil, or whether there are several parasites closely resembling each other but still specifically distinct, we cannot as yet say. The settlement of this and of many another knotty points about malatia is bound to come soon. It is your duty to tackle these knotty points. European science, knowing your opportunities, expects this of you. I hope that when the successes of the future do come, many of them will be scored to British names. I hope those names will not, as hitherto in this matter, be conspicuous by there absence. England has done much for tropical medicine in the past; do not let her lose the place she has gained. Certainly an active investigation of Indian fevers from the standpoint of the new departure is imperatively demanded of the profession in India.

THE QUISTION AS IT AFFECTS THE LOWER ANIMALS. Besides forwarding our knowledge of malaria, good will come of such an investigation in many other and unexpected ways. I have not the slightest doubt that, apart from the malaria question, the systematic examination of the blood in India will result in important discoveries in other departments of tropical pathology. Certainly many fevers now regarded as malarial will be relegated to another class or other classes. There will be many strange and probably useful additions to our knowledge of the tauna flora of the blood. Diagnosis will become more precise, and consequently treatment more successful, and in a hundred other ways the thoofy and practice of medicine in the tropics will be advanced. There is one direction, in which in India you could make important contributions to malarial pathology. The discovery by Danielewsky, Grassi, Feletti, and others of organisms closely resembling that of malaria in the blood of the lower animals, is not only interesting in itself, but is likely to prove of extreme value in elucidating the life-history of the malaria organism of man. Comparitive pathology should, in this instance, if vigorously followed up, prove a powerful aid to human pathology. A systematic examination of the blood of the Indian fauna should, therefore, go hand in hand with the systematic examination of the human blood. It is probable that it will be in this way, by the study of the malaria-like parasites in the blood of the lower animals, that the life history of the malatia parasite of man will be worked out. The investigation into Suria disease and the Surra micro-organism, at present so ably conducted by Lingard, cannot fail to re-act favourably on human pathology, by Longard, cannot ran to resuct tavouranty on numan pathology, particularly on this malatia question. As a general fulle I in not an advocate for Government and, but the mention of this Surra investigation leads me to think that if properly approached, a Government which so thoughtful about the diseases of its beasts of tovernment which so thoughtful about the diseases of its nearts of burden, might be found to be equally thoughtful about its human subjects and their diseases, and might be induced to aid, in some way, in their investigation. This question of malaria is a fascinating subject, and I would fain pursue it further did time permit. Before leaving it I would congratulate the profession in India on having and attractive description. I sincerely trust that for the honour of British medicine it will not be slow to avail itself of its opportunities.

The lecturer then proceeded to speak of the connection of the disease with water supply, and pointing out its intimate association with drinking water, referred to observations which had been made by excellent observers, such as Dr. Kensey of Ceylon, Dr. Oller of Baltimore, and to communications made to the recent Congress at Rome, each of which afforded evidence that the malaria parasite ing water was the best remedy for local prevalence of malarious diseases. This was well known to the natives of India, who would frequently move to a district where the water-supply was good, and sometimes thus secure much needed immunity from severe prevalences of malaricus fever among a whole community. It was impossible to say off-hand how much, and what forms of ague were due to the drinking water, but basing upon the now-known fact, Mr. Hart predicted that before long, water would be proved to be a main The lecturer then proceeded to discuss dysentery, liver abscess and annuba colic, Beri-Beri, ankylestomiasis. He did so very briefly, indicating in each case their important relations to microscopic investigations and to parasites of miscroscopic character, the study of which opened a large field for useful and original work in India. These studies, and the elements of new knowledge in respect to them are to be found fully described in the full text of Mr. Hart's address, which is separately published by Messrs. Thacker, Spink, address, which is separately puroisined by backers, anacker, opins, and Co, as the whole address would occupy fully three or four times the time allotted for the delivery of it at this meeting. He proceeded to discuss chronic intestinal flux and intestinal fever, and continued as follows:—This matter of the prevalence of animal parasites in the intestinal canal as well as in the blood and tissues of the natives of India and other tropical countries, is imminently suggestive of the absence, as well as of the importance of sound hygienic conditions, particularly as regards water-supply, and directed to the exclusion from this, not only of animal parasites, but of parasites in general. This fact suggests the reflection that, if under the present hygienic conditions animal parasites are so extensively prevalent in India, these conditions are still more favourable for the spread of such.

WANT OF RESPARCH IN INDIA.

In reply to the question why India has contributed so little to the study and knowledge of its own prevalent diseases, Mr. Hart said that research was not encouraged. There was a feeling that a man with a leaning to science, with a new scientific fact to his head, was regarded by officialdom as a nuisance, as a sort of pesti-lent fellow with a new bug. The departments of the medical service were undermanned and overloaded with secretorial work. As a consequence, tropical medicine languished where it should When circumstances and public opinion forced Government to institute some scientific investigation, they did not find suitably trained men in the ranks of their own services; they had cither to send home for them or to employ a foreigner. As a remedy for this state of affairs Mr. Hart added---

1- - I would make promotion in the medical services in greater measure than at present a reward for medical merit.

2 -- I would give, at the public expense, to deserving and suitable medical men, an opportunity to return occasionally to Europe for a year or two to brush themselves up in medical acters, and to familiarise themselves with new methods.

3---I would have less clerical, and more medical work in the services.

4 -- I would have the examining and graduating bodies in Britain to give at least one question in their examination papers in medicine on a tropical disease.

5--- I would have the large hospitals in Liverpool and in London, in which tropical diseases most abound, affiliated with the local hospital schools in some way, and thus utilise their valuable clinical material at present running to waste, for technical purposes, and for research.

CHOLERA.

It may seem strange, Mr. Harr continued, that I should have left to the lest the consideration of that most important of the indigenous nathogenic products of India- namely cholera. But you will observe that I should fix firmly to your min is the fact that min is surrounded by a host of minute enemies, which not only can live in his tissues and so produce in him disease, but can, more especially in hot climites, maintain an independent existence outsile, in soil or water, as may be the case. This being once demonstrated, as in the case of the coarser intestinal parisites such as the ankylostomata, the blood parasites, such as the filaria, the malarial parasites, the guines worm, and other disease producing organisms, and it being once recognised, on the one hand, that the maladies produced by them occur with enormous frequency in India, and on the other hand, that they in all cases gain access to the body by being swallowed along with what is drunk or eaten, our minds are prepared to admit that whatever may be the case in other countries, in India at least the habit of drinking water sufficiently impure to carry organisms into the intestines is common enough to cause coarsely parasitic maladies to rank among the most frequent diseases of the country. Who then shall separate cholera from these other water-borne diseases and deny that it also carried into the mouth, by water? In Europe we have the proof that by being so introduced it can produce great outbreaks of the disease. In India we have, in the vest extent of its parasitic maladi s, proof that the habits of the people was an organism breeding in water, an observation indeed confirmatory to the frequently observed fact that the supply, of pure drink- are such that if the cholera germ were present in the water, it certainly would not lack opportunities of being swallowed. And when, along with such conditions and opportunities we find cholera almost constantly present, we see no possible excuse for hesitation for accepting the dogma which I have so long taught, that in India, as in Eurone, cholora is a filth disease, carried by dirty people to dirty places, that its common mode of access to the interiors of properly be described as a water-borne disease. I have been much misunderstood in regard to this phrase "water-borne cholera." has been taken as meaning that rivers and streams are the means by which cholera is distributed, and the fact has even been brought forward against the "water theory," "that cholers in India, certainly in the Bengal Presidency, always advances up stream." What, then, do I mean when I say that cholera is a water-borne disease! I mean that it is caused by a poison which is swallowed and which, in ninety nine cases out of a hundred, is carried to the mouth in water. Within the body this poison grows, multiplies, and in its growth causes the disease in the course of which it is discharged; then it is ready to take up the other phase of its life, to grow in damp earth, to breed in dirty water, to be washed by rain into water courses, to soak through porous soil into wells; in some very tare, unproved cases, perhaps, where cholera is very rife, and filthy habits are over-abundant, to be blown by gusts of wind, or carried by the hand into food, and thus by one m ans or another but in an infinitely larger proportion of cases by means of water, to get round to another person's mouth, to be swallowed, and again set up the whole cycle of events. It is not a mere matter again set up the whole cycle of events. It is not a more of rivers and watersheds but of cooking utensils, drinking cups, and reservoirs. The water bottles, and especially of cisterns and reservoirs. The disease is water-horne, because it is carried by water to the mouth; but that is only the last stage of a journey, circuitous and long, though often not difficult to trace, by which it has travelled from its past to its present host. Inside the body, the poison passes, often killing the patient in its passage; ourside, its course is halting, erratic, various in manner and intensity, depending largely on the physical surroundings in which it finds itself (the soil, the water, the temperature), by which often times it is destroyed, or amid which it dies out. If it lives through its adventures and lands again in the body of a man susceptible to its influence, then again it has its chance, and sets up affesh the old disease. If we fully grasp this conception of the malady, facts fall into their places. he seasonal curve becomes a curve depending on the proper heat nd moisture requisite for the development of the most active outide life of the contagion, on thirst crusing large drink, on scanty and therefore foul water, on rains washing accumulated filth into the tanks and water-courses, on a mass of physical causes, and not on the spread of an "epidemic influence." The varied susceptibi-Ilty of individuals points to varied powers of digesting and thus destroying the contagion, and the greater liability of some nations to be attacked, depends on their greater willingness to drink contaminated water. Truly cholera is a filth disease. In the region of the lower Ganges, "the home of cholera," the air, the water, and the soil are never cold, and the ground is often damp, and when it is dry the tanks are fonl, so that always there is a fit and the soil are never core, and the ground a super-when it is dry the tanks are fool, so that always there is a fit breeding place for the contagion, and the habits of the people in overs way facilitate its entry into their systems. There is there is a climate condition, such that the germ can keep alive tot considerable periods outside the body, and there is an end mic labit of drinking it freely; but if this habit is broken, peo ple can and do live in the very milit of this area free from cholera, and whole districts and communities have thus been endowed with an immunity, depending merely on the breaking of one link in the chain of events by which cholera is produced, namely, the habit of drinking contaminated water. Among the manifold influences which conspile togather to cause an epidemic previlence of chol ra is this important fact, that to pass from man to man it must be swillowed, and because this is an essential link in the chain. I advise the provision of pure water as the one practicable measure by which this transmis ion can be prevented. India's real want is pure water. The difficulty of meeting it is largely one of expense, but that it is The difficult of meeting is largely one of expense, but that it is no small of stack may be judged by the facts part forward in a paper real recently before the Indian Section of the Society of Arts by Sir Artschard Color, on Municipal and Village Wares Supply in the North West Provinces and Oudh. In that portion of India alone ther are 41,605,200 persons scattered over 106,000 villages and 242,194 inhabited sites. The hamlets lie for the most part on the flu land, or a little rais of above it, seorched, alternately by sun and drenched by continuous rain, in entire disregarded of all sanitars the; there occupants drinking from the pond in which they bathe, and to which their cattlewallow, surrounded by the refuse of their daily lives, far from the eye of the English officer, and it coerced only by the ever-nching palm of the underling--little less opposed than themselves to the regime of sanitary regulations. It is these rural tracts, this innumerable firmament of but and hamlet (the village houses numbering over 7,00,000) scattered over a total area of 112,612 square miles, where no eye can hope at all times to see, no hand to penetrate---whose millions call for sanitary aid, but whose poverty makes it imparacticable, that are the despair of the sanitary reformer. The difficulty in the cities is not so great; poverty is not so abject, and there is among the people more willingness to accept new ideas; and it is satisfactory to note that since 1888--the year of the publication of Lord Dufferin's celebrated Sanitary Re-solution---the cities of Agra, Allahabad, Benares, and Cawnpore, and Lucknow have successively undertaken, completed, and ed extensive schemes of water-works, the distribution of filtered water having for the first time been commenced in each of these towns since December 1890. The real trouble in the large towns towns since December 1890. The real trouble in the large towns to the disposal of the sewage which this water produces. In the country the problem is different; the poverty is extreme, being eqalled only by the ingorance and indifference, prejudice and passive resistance of the people, and it is probable that for a long time to come they will have to depend largely on wells and tanks and carried water. Sanitary efforts, then will have to be mainly occupied in endeavouring to keep clean the supply which already exists—in uself no mean task. The mere protection of the country wells, surrounding them with cemented platforms, providing them with clean apparatus for drawing, so that they shall not be befouled by those who use them and guarding them against misuse, would be a great work for any administration, and it is slowly going on. Im-provement is no doubt gradually taking place, but the immensity of the population and the poverty in which they dwell, are great hindrances to progress. People, however, who talk of doing good to India should remember, that India's great want is water fit to drink. I wish, however, particularly to guard myself against the charge of looking at water carriage as covering the whole pathology of the disease, or explaining the etiology of its occasional epidemic prevalence. The drinking of the cholera poison is essential to the production of the disease, and the provision of pure water will prevent the necessity of drinking this poison, and so prevent the possibility of the disease developing, and as a sanitarian, that is for me sufficient. It must not be imagined, however, that because I insist so strongly on this life-saving side of the question, that I am blind to other of the facts of pathology and epidemiology. I am aware, as much as anyone can be that we have a great deal yet learn regarding the causes of the epidemic spread of cholera, and it is to a continued investigation of these causes that I would urge my medical confirm in India. But this investigation must be always undertaken on the basis of established truth, and especially that great truth that cholera goes in at the mouth.

SNAKE-POISON: THE TRUE LINE OF RESEARCH

Since the publication of the epoch-making work of Sir Joseph Fayrer on "The Thanatophidia of India," great advances have been made in our knowledge of the nature of snake-poison. It has been found that this substance is closely allied in its composition to the poison of tetanus and diphtheria. Just as antitoxins have recently been discovered by Roux and Kanthack. It is very probable that the process which has been used with such success in the preparation of the diphtheria antitoxin would, mutati mutandia, similarly yield large quantities of an antitoxin, by means of which some of the 20,000 lives that perish annually in India from snakehite might be saved. Government have offered a reward of 20,10,000 tupees to the discoverer of an antidose to snake-poison. Surely it would be more likely to lead to practical consequences if an expert were engaged to study the nature and mode of preparation of this already known antitoxin, and of other pynological antitioxins of snake-poison.

PHARMACOLOGY.

Gentlemen, I must end here. Although sensible of the merely sketchy character of the outlines to which the limits of time have confined my address, I trust that you may find in it some elements of useful suggestion, some helps towards scientific progress along safe lines of work, some aids to the redress of guevances, some links towards the formation of a chain which shall bind all the members of the profession in fraternal union, and by union give them the greater strength. I have endeavoured at the obvious risk of dulness most attractive kind of food, but it is sustaining and enduring. May my words, spoken to-day, prove to have the like qualities. deeply grateful for the distinguished honour you have done me on this and on former occasions. It has been the ambition of my life to deserve and to require such honour and such kindness unremitting labour for the public good, and for the highest interests and duties of our common profession. To have achieved some success in that aim to-day will amply repay my labours and anxieties in coming to you from so far, and leaving behind me so much unfinished and suspended public work. It will be in your power to foster the growth of the seeds which I have endeavoured to It will be the crown of a life spent wholly in the service of my professsion and of my country, as a fellow subject with you of the Kaiser-i-Hind, if I am allowed to see now and hereafter some Naiser-i-filind, ii am allowed to see now and nereatter some evidence of having usefully helped the development of life-saving science, the enlargement of civic liberries, and the efficiency of the great public services in this vast Empire of ancient wonders and modern experimental marvels—this awe striking and beautiful India.

THE HISTORY OF A SCAR.

the back of my right hand—just about the dide of it—there is a small scar, half as big herebenny piece, perhaps. You would idle of it—inere is a sinus son, and a tareepenny piece, perhaps. You would be notice it unless I showed it to you, and in then you would have to look sharp to see on then you would have to look sharp to see But it's there, all the same, and will be fill the hand is returned to dust. It dates he forty years, that scar does. Going home m school one day another boy and I quarled and fought. Strange to say, it wasn't not a girl either. Anyway, he drew his jackie and stabbed me in the back of the right nd. The wound I remember, was slow to al. It was sone and inflamed for months, d hardly a day but something hit it, or I locked it against something, and so made it bise. My whole available body appeared to concentrated in that sore. You know how the things are. They are like boils, and if ere is any comfortable spot to have a boal ere are loads of money waiting for the fellow he discovers it.

LATELY we have received two letters, both mitating an indentical expression, namely, is: "Everything seemed a trouble to me." Now, me of us are so tough as to be proof against onble, but when everything is a trouble to a an the very heart inside of him must be nder and touchy. Aud, Mercy knows, it is often enough. Grief will do it, worry will do ere are loads of money waiting for the fellow and illness too.

ONE of these letters, or at least the writer of goes on to say:—"It was in March, 1880, at I felt tired and languid, and without my sail energy. Before that I had always been trong and active. Now I was low-spirited and trong and active. Aron I was investigated and ielancholy; everything seemed a trouble to ie. At first I had a bad taste in the mouth, poor appetite, and all I ate gave me great ain in the chest and sides. Even fish and iltry gave me as much distress as more solid ond. I was constantly spitting up a sour, acid and which caused a miserable feeling in my for sometime in this with gout in my hands me to the house now r two at a time. The and swollen, and gave

I could not bear anyFor four years I was icks. The doctor who ad feet, which fúcire ung to to to ease me temporarily, s ever.

f April, 1888, I read that

4 April, 1888, I read that asses like mine had een cuted by Mother eigel's Curative Syrup, and I thought I would yit. I hadn't taken more than half a bottle hen I felt relieved. This encouraged me to eep on with the Syrup, and in a comparatively short time all symptoms of the disease left to. Since then I have enjoyed excellent realth, and whenever I feel a twinge of my old nemy a dose or two of 'Mother Seigel' soon ets me right. Yours truly, (Signed) M. LEAHY, 9, G osvenor Terrace, Grosvenor Park, Cameiwell, Lendon, September 22nd 1892."

So much for the facts as Mr. Leahy felt them What was science to offer in explanation of nem? This Gout, rhemmatism, and biliousess are three complaints aussing indirectly nem? This Gout, theumatism, and bilious-ess are three complaints arising indirectly om an overworked liver or, more properly, om indigestion and dyspepsia. The poisons a engendered may the hidden and unfeit for a ng time, and then be suddenly rendered ctive by mental worry, exposure, over eating, grong eating, or any of a dozen other causes he kidneys fail (following the stomach and ver), the acid poison remains in the blood and sets in indignation in the lounts, and the rever), the acid poison remains in the blood and sets up inflammation in the Joints, and the retained fluids produce dropsy. All sorts of disturbances are apt to go with this condition of things, every one less a disease in itself than a symptom of the one cause—indigestion and dyspepsia. The heart and lungs are often attacked in sympathy. Cure the torpid digestion, and an all-round improvement at once succeeds. To do this is in the power of Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup—as perhaps, in the power of nothing else.

It was most unfortunate that this gentleman suffered for eight years; and no wonder, mean-power of nothing esse.

It was most unfortunate that this gentleman suffered for eight years; and no wonder, meanwhile, that his mind was sensitive as his body to every approach. Knowing what he now knows he feels safe. There is no darkness but ignorance, and the German Nurse shows "The Way Out."

I. M. P. London, October, 1802.

Municipal Elections to be held on 16th March 1895.

March 1895.

Notice is given that applications for correction of the published list of votes under Section 21 of the Calcutta municipal Consolidation Act, 1888, will be received in the Municipal Office up to 5 P. M. on the 17th January 1895, after which date no applications or objections will be received up to the same date from all persons qualified under clauses (a) or (c) of Section 8 of the above Act, who are destrous of having their names added to the list of voters.

Applicants for registration as voters under clauses (a), (b), (c) and (d) of Section 8 clauses (a), (b), (c) and (d) of Section 8 should submit with their applications their receipted rate-bills for the 3rd quarter 1894-95 and licenses for professions, trades, or callings for the west 1994 of and licenses for processions, for the year 1894-95.

Applicants under clause (e) of Section 8 should submit duly paid rate-bills and licens-should submit duty paid the state of the year 1893-94.

Applicants who are entitled to vote in more than one ward, should make separate applications in respect of each ward.

W. R. MACDONALD,

Secretary to the Corporation. 2nd January 1895.

TEXT BOOKS IN ENGLISH.

BY SARADA PRASAD BANERJEE. SPECIMEN PAPERS AND ANSWERS

THE ENGLISH ENTRANCE COURSE

For 1895. Having the largest sale of all similar works,

ENGLISH PREPARATORY COURSE

FOR 2nd & 31d CLASSES.
This book has been approved by the Central Text Book Committee.

INDIA READERS NO. 2 FOR 4th & 5th CLASSES. INDIA READERS NO. 1

FOR 6th & 7th CLASSES. These books are of remarkably simple style and quite suited to Indian students.

and quite suited to Indian students.

The attention of School authorities in the N.-W P and Oudh, the Punjab, Madras, Bombay, the Central Provinces, Assam, and Busina, invited to the above publications of unique merits.

To be had of
S. K. LAHIRI & Co.,
College Square, Calcutta.

"SOUVENIRS OF INDIA."

Celebrated Models of our Indian Domestic Servants)

1. Khansama, (Butler,) 2. Dhoby, (Washerman) 3. Bhisty, (Waterman) 4. Mider, (Gardener,) 5. Chaptaise (Penn) 6. Syce. (Gnoom) 7. Ayth, (Nuise,) 8. Beauer 9. Sweeper 10. Tailor, 11. Grassent 12. Barber, N. B.—These are perfect Models of our Servant beautifully consult and in the column.

vants be mufully painted in usual colour Price, Rs. 4 complete set & Box and Packing Annas Eight per deze Terms :- Cash in full with order, or at least 25% of value must accompany, balance being drawn for by V. P. Post.

Note—Orders received without a Remittance or deposit will be charged for at Rs. 6,

Address all Letters, Remittances, &c, to The Agent,

ALEXANDER MACGREGOR & Co., DELHI, (Punjab).

In Pamphlet, Price 4 annas or 6 copies for a Rupee.

A Cheap Reserve for the Army. By Capt. ANDREW HEARSEY.

Late Her Majesty's Service.

Apply to Reis & Rayyet Office, Calcutta.

A Wonderful Medicine.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

ARE universally ad-A mitted to be worth a Guinea a box, for Bilious and Nervous Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as wind and Pain in the Stomach, Sick, Headache, Giddiness, Fulness, Swelling after Meals, Dizziness and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of America. Switzers, Swit Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy, and Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams and all Nervous and Trembling Sensation, &c. The first dose will give relief in twenty minutes.

Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one box of these Pills, and they will be acknowledged to be

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

WURTH A GUINEA A BUX. For a male of all ages these Pills are invaluable, as a few does of them carry off all humours, and bring about all that is required. Na female should be without them. There is no medicine to be found equal to Breecham's Pills for removing any obstruction or irregulatly of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box, they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and reduce the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box, they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and reduce the system of the system, and found the benefits which are ensued by them use. For a Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, and all Disorders of the Liver, they act like magic, a few doses will be found to work wonders on the most important organs in the human machine.

human machine.

The Natives of India will find Beecham's The Natives of India win man becomes. Pills the finest medicine ever introduced to their notice, the European residents also will find them of great value for cooling the blood. For throwing off fevers and prevening influmnations in bot climates, they stand without a rival.

These are Facts testified continually by members of all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debishated 1s, BERCHAM'S PILLS have the Largest Sale of any Patent Medicine in the

Beecham's Magic Cough Pills.

As a remedy for Coughs in general, Asthma, Bronchal Affections, Houseness, Shortness of Breath, Tighness and Oppression of the Chest, Waeczag, & , these Pills stand univailed. Let any person give Beecham's Cough Pills at tial, and the most violent Cough will in a short time be removed.

' Beecham's Tooth Paste

Will recommend itself being efficacious and economicals it is packed in near an right and economical: it is packed in neat analogic collapsible Tubes.

NOTICE—G Atherton & Co will forward on receipt of letter, samples at the following rates: size 9 ½d at 8 anas per box; 1:12,4 size 12 annas per box, 2.5 yd size 2 tipees per box; Tooth Paste 12 annas per Tube, these rates do not include the cost of postage which will be added to the amount.

Sole Wholesale Agents for India, BURMAH & CEYLON.

G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3, NEW CHINA BAZAR STREET. CALCUTTA.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF

	MEMORIAL FUND.
	1	Rs,
1.	His Highness The Maharaja of Dur-
2.	His Highness The Maharata of Vizi-	,000
		,000
- 3.	Moorshedabad, Amnul Omra, G.C.I.E.	0
4.	His Highness the Nawab of Junagadh,	800
_	G C S.I	500
5.	His Highness the Maharaja Bahadur of Cooch Behar, G.C.LE	500
6	Nawab Bahadui Sir K. Abdul Ghani,	,
	K.C.S.L. and Nawab Bahadur K
7.	Ashan Ulia, C.I.E Kuan Bahadar Bhai Bahaddin, C.I.E.,	500
	Vizier to the Nawah of Junagadh	300
8.	Maharaja Bahadur Sir Joundra Mo-
9.	han Tagore, K.C.S.L Babu Jodu Lai Mullick	250 200
10.		200
11	Prince Wala Kadr Syed Hosein Ali
	Muza Bahadur	150
12.	Shujaul Muik Asafad Dowlat Nawab Syed Zamul Abdın Khan Bahadur
	reraz jung	140
13.	Rua Peary Mohan Mookeriee CSI	100
14.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chandra Madhab Ghose
15.	Prince Mirza Sır Jahan Kadar Baha-	100
-	dur, K.C.I.R.	100
16.	The Hon'ble P. Playfair	100
17.	Haji Kasim Auff	100
18.	Lieutenant-General if Ton'ble Sin
	H. Bracker wy, K	100
	Babu Jai Go The Hon's	1
	Bane	١.
	No.	50
	The state of the s	51
		50.
	d Obidulle Chan	1
,	Authorite trees Danages (7a)	TO.
	he Hon'ble M Justice E J. Freve-	0
	ly is	L '
5.	The Hundle Montai Abiles fables	M
	Khan Rabal.	L .
70.0	Klan Bahal, The Prid in hop of	SP.
		٠o٠
207	Maharaja Danga Charan Lan Can	şo
) .	A (War) I (B) (() Teerva	46.
•	14: or Wes
	w w .	,41
	,Α	•
	1 1 1

	•
30.	P. J. Bure, sorg.
37		T
		Da-
38.	Kumai Radha Pspsad Roy	•••	25
39.	Kumar Dinendra Narain Roy	•••	25
40	B thu Pashupatty Nath Bose	• • • •	25
41.	Kumar Doulat Chandra Roy	•••	25
42.	Babu Guru Prosonno Ghose	• • • •	25
43	Rija Sir Somindra Mohan Tag	•••	25
.,	Cl.E	o≀e,
44.	Raya Joundra Nath Chowdhury	•••	25
45.	B ibn R ima Nath Ghose	•••	25
46.	Ponta Steenath D	•••	25
47.	Rai Sew Box Bogla Bahadar	•••	25
48.		•••	25
49	Raja Surja Kanta Acharjee Chowd	. •••	25
50	Ru Budreedas Mukim Bahadur	hary	1 25
51.		•••	25
52.	Monlyi Syad Abdus Salam	•••	25
53.	A. T. Agear, Esq.	•••	25
54.	A. I. Apcar, Esq., H. Luttman Johnson, Esq. C.S.	•••	25
55.	Lord William Beresford, K C.I E.,		25
50.	Munshi Guolan Rascol	·· ·	25
57	F H Skine, Esq. Cs.,		25
58,	The Harble H. C.	•••	25
59.	The Harble H J.S. Cotton C.S., C.	S.1.	30
60.	Prince M thomed Bukhtyar Shah	• • •	20
61.	B com Smendra Nath Pal Chowdr	y	20
62	" Aukhov Kumar Ghose Moulvi Imadd Ah	•••	20
63	Ru Sun County N	•••	20
64.	Ro Sum Chunder Nundy Bahadar D. Pomoty, Esq.	۲.,	20
65.	Chawdry Mahamad A	•••	2.)
66.	Chewdry Mithomed Arjan and Kl	an	20
67.		iaw	20
٠,,	Monter Sved Ashruffuddin Ahm Kuru Bahadur	eđ,
68.	T lughe Fee Co	•••	17-8
69.	T Inglis, Esq. C.S A. H. Giles, Esq	• • • •	16
70.	F. F. Mandian P.		16
71.	F. F. Handiey, E.q., c.s.	•••	16
,	The Hon'ble Mouly: Strajul Isla	am
	Koan	• • • •	16

72. Moulvi Serajuddeen

Abul Hasan, Esq.,	:	, 5
H. A. D. Philips, Esq., C.S.	•••	10
Baboo Kiran Chunder Roy	•••	10
E. M. Baker, Esq	•••	10
Bauco Doyal Chand Bose	•••	10
" Madan Mohun Bose	•••	10
y Kanai Lal Khan vee	•••	10
Moulvi Syud Akram Hossain	•••	10
Monivi Aziz Ahmud	•••	10
		10
	•••	10
	•••	10
	•••	5
"Strodaprasad Ghose	•••	5
bscriptions will be thankfully	received	by
	H. A. D. Phillips, Esq., C.S. Baboo Kiran Chunder Roy E. M. Baker, Esq Baboo Doyal Chand Bose n. Madan Mohun Bose n. Madan Mohun Bose n. Kanat Lal Khan Moulvi Syud Akram Hossain Moulvi Syud Akram Hossain Moulvi Aziz Ahmud Rai Kanyelal Dey Bahadoor H. Holinwood, Esq. Babu Hiniy Mohun Chunder Baboo Chakkanlal Roy S. Stodaprasad Ghose	H. A. D. Phillips, Esq., C.S. Baboo Kiran Chunder Roy E. N. Baker, Esq Batoo Doyal Chand Bose " Madan Mohun Bose " Kanai Lai Khan " Moulvi Syud Akram Hossain Moulvi Aziz Ahmud Rai Kanyelal Dey Bahadoor H. Holmwood, Esq Babu Huriy Mohun Chunder Baboo Chakkanlal Roy

He Honorary Joint Secretaines,
Rai Raj Kumar Syrvadhicari Bahadur, 4, Boush Indian Serei, Calcutta,
* and A. F. M. Abdur Rahman, Esq., Barnster-atLaw, 16, Taltolla, Calcutta.

Rs. 6 "JUNDAUNTED" WATCH.

Rs. 6 "UNDAUNTED" WATCH.

Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, small, open-faced, mickel suvera, keyless, short winding, patent, "UNDAONTED" watch, with hand setting mechanism, secondhand for Doctors, ornamental bold dial, for Rs. 6 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' guarantee. Warranted to stand the roughest use. Runs more train 28 hours with one winding. Will list a life time. Easily repairable. Others seel at double our rates. One witch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Juo. Dickson of Haputal Rulway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps splendid time and ver stopped although it sinstained hard ks and jerks. X Dr. H. Moore of Royal arey from Poonsamallee says:—I sold it 16. X Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Reg. 1. Junidum says:—I have sold it for R. XMr. T. B. Scott of Patna Opium Decant. Casays:—The watch you sent me some server. It is ago is still keeping very good time.

c says :-The watch you sent me some

Towelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real Saiver Watch Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pichi / C nadian gold chain Re. 1-8-0. Fashionabl C. idian Gold Ring set with scientific diam of Aubies, Emeralds, at Re. 1-8-0. Mr. G. 5 at 1, 5 at 1 inspector from Sanikutia, says: "A German valued the diamond ring at Rs. 50 and 'uby at Rs. 30." Key winding, Government wasped, board silver hunting case, Royal watch he class and full three years' guarantee, 1, 13. te. G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light trety in Purandhar says: "For the first 1, 25 at 25; the second one I sold to a Sergenition Rs. 28 × Pte. H. C. Bishop of L. F. L. Regt. from Kamptee says: "A Copporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch, Gentlemen's open faced, keyless real sold gold watch Rs. 30; ladies' Rs. 24; both with extras and

Res. 30; ladies' Re. 24; both with extras and guaranteed for 3 years. Mind they are guranteed to be of real solid gold. No agents kept, all goods sent only by us from Bombay per V. P. P.

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO., BOMBAY.

CATARRH,

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness. A NEW HOME TREATMENT. Sufficies are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of hving parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these districts and these says are ranging and a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these districts and diseases are rapidly and permanently cured by a few simple applications mate at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphle explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUFFON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORON FO, Canada. Scientific American.

GENUINE HOMCEOPATHY. A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S.

Homwopathic Practitioner,

15

May be consulted by letter or personally daily at his residence, 30-1, Colootolah Street,

"IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer find sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

* It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Go after years of semi-helplessness and suffing: while in ASTHMA, BRONCHIT LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACH SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest reine or these complaints in their severest and m chronic form.

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous

reitef in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Lim

Is almost too remarkable for CREDENC Are you subject to HEADACHES and t tortures of TOO I HACHE? A Single, applic tion will relieve you

In Soie-throat its power has been so raj and complete that it is universally recomme

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let a

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Phsicians in the world in their practice. It is been pronounced a blessing in thousands nomes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achiev a wide-spread popularity which no similar proparation has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable cher throughout the world.

Agents in Caicutta: Smith Stanistreet & C. Scott Thompson & Co. and Bathgate R. Scott The

REIS & RAYYET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT) WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPE

AND

Review of Politics, Literature, and Socie

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION. If paid in auvance,

Yearly. Half-yearty ••• 29 Quarterly ...
Months ...
Single or sample Copy Ke. 1 Aus.

If not paid in advance, ... Rs. 18 ••• Half-yearly... •••

OPT Quarterly Monthly Single or sample Copy ••• No additional charge for postage or peon

Vearly

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

Advertisements (three columns to the pa and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) a and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column); changed by the space taken up, at the rate 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each instion. The lowest charge for any advertisemt is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, t lowest charge for which is Rs. 5. Business Communications (post paid) be directed to "The Manager," and Litera., Communications and books and pamphleu (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Ren & Rayyet."

OFFICE: 1, Uckoor Dut's Lane, Wellington Street Calcutta

DROIT ET AVANT

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

AND

REVIEW OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, JANUARY 12, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 657.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

TO A BABY KINSWOMAN.

LOVE, whose light thrills heaven and earth, Smiles and weeps upon thy buth, Child, whose mother's love-lit eyes Watch thee but from Paradise. Sweetest sight that earth can give, Sweetest light of eyes that live, Ours must needs, for hope withdrawn, Hail with tears thy soft spring dawn. Light of hope whose star hath set, Light of love whose sun lives yet, Holier, happier, heavenher love Breathes about thee, burns above, Surely, sweet, than ours can be, Shed from eyes we may not see, Though thine own may see them shine Night and day, perchance, on thine. Sun and moon that lighten earth Seem not fit to bless thy birth : Scarce the very stars we know Here seem bright enough to show Whence in unimagined skies Glows the vigil of such eyes. Theirs whose heart is as a sea Swoln with sorrowing love of thee Fain would share with thine the sight Seen alone of babes aright, Watched of eyes more sweet than flowers Sleeping or awake; but ours Can but deem or dream or guess Thee not wholly motherless. Might they see or might they know What nor faith nor hope may show, We whose hearts yearn toward thee now Then were blest and wise as thou, Had we half thy knowledge, -had Love such wisdom,-grief were glad, Surely, lit by grace of thee; Life were sweet as death may be.

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafuess, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all kinds. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Street, Westminster, London, S. W.

Now the law that hes on men Bids us mourn our dead : but then Heaven and life and earth and death. Outckened as by God's own breath. All were turned from sorrow and strife : Earth and death were heaven and life. All too far are then and now Sundered : none may be as thou, Yet this grace is ours-a sign Of that goodlier grace of thine, Sweet, and thine alone-to see Heaven, and heaven's own love, in thee. Bless them, then, whose eyes caress Thee, as only thou canst bless. Comfort, faith, assurance, love, Shine around us, brood above, Fear grows hope, and hope grows wise. Thuilled and lit by children's eyes. Yet in ours the tears unshed, Child, for hope that death leaves dead, Needs must burn and tremble ; thou Knowest not, seest not, why nor how, More than we know whence or why Comes on babes that laugh and he Half asleep, in sweet-hpped scorn, Light of smiles outlightening morn, Whence enkindled as is earth By the dawn's less radiant birth All the body soft and sweet Smiles on us from face to feet When the rose-red hands would fain Reach the rose-red feet in vain Eves and kands that worship thee Watch and tend, adore and see All these heavenly sights, and give Thanks to see and love and live. Yet, of all that hold thee dear, Sweet, the dearest smiles not here. Thine alone is now the grace, Haply, still to see her face ; Thine, thine only now the sight Whence we dream thine own takes light. · Yet, though faith and hope live blind. Yet they live in heart and mind Strong and keen as truth may be: Yet, though blind as giref were we Inly for a weeping-while, Sorrow's self before thy smile Smiles and softens, knowing that yet, Far from us though heaven be set, Love, bowed down for thee to bless, Dares not call thee motherless.

ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.

- The Nineteenth Century.

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, it possible, as the safest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

WEEKLYANA.

KING-EMPEROR William, "as a descendant of the great King whose life Carlyle so vividly and nobly described," has "begged Mr. Poulteney Bigelow, as one of the Committee for the preservation of Thomas Carlyle's house in Chelsea by buying it as a museum, to note him for a contribution of one hundred pounds in aid of the fund."

THERE died, on Dec. 12, at Soutspark, within three miles of Ballintubber, Mrs. Mary Brien, at the age of 110 years. She remembered the landing of the French at Killala. A widow named Ann Gale, bed-ridden for twenty years, died suddenly, at Powerstock, near Bridport, aged 102 years. She had good appetite and not a hair of her head had turned grey.

THE late Edmund Yate's library is announced for sale. Along with the books will be sold the writing-slope or desk which once belonged to Charles Dickens and was used by him on the day of his death and, after his death, under his directions regarding certain familiar objects of his study to be distributed among those who loved him, was presented by his executive to Edinund Yates.

LAST month, at Christie's, a sheet of pen drawings by Michael Angelo fetched 380 guineas. On one side of the sheet are two different compositions for Holy Families, or perhaps Charities; on the other, an allegorical subject of a woman and child seated upon the ground, with allegorical subject of a satirical nature.

...

In the United States Court at Chicago, in the Railway Strike case, Judge Woods, on Dec. 14, found Eugene V. Debs, the leader of the strike, guilty of contempt of court, and sentenced him to six months' imprisonment.

WE quote the remarks of Herr Jacob Bolin on physical exercise as a counterpoise to sedentary study :-

"When yor are sitting at your desk for any appreciable length of time, sunk in profound thoughts, these thoughts, however pure and lofty, are actually poisoning your brain, decreasing its apitude for the work in hand, and you will find as time passes that you are not able to keep your attention fixed, your will-power has lost its grip, your memory is deteriorated, you cannot grasp an idea as before, and there creeps over you a certain feeling of lassitude and dulness; your temples throb, your face is flushed, there is a sensation of fulness, your head aches. And all this because your thoughts—your mental work—has pumped into your head a quantity of blood giving the necessary fiel for these thoughts, but there has been no agent at work strong enough to remove the ashes and refuse. But itse from your table, take a few deep inthoughts, but there has been no agent at work strong enough to remove the ashes and refuse. But itse from your table, take a few deep inductions, move your arms in rhythm with the respiration, walk for a quarter of an hour, and you will probably find the unpleasant symptoms gone, and yourself teady to begin anew; your attention, which was wandering, has become fixed, your will-power is stonger, your memory its own self, your ideas from vague have become clear and your conclusions more logical."

SIR Charles Crosthwaite not being well has gone home on three months' medical leave. Mr. Alan Cadell, Senior Member of the Board of Revenue, officiates as Lieutenant-Governor of the N.-W. Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh.

MR. Justice Tyriell, owing to ill health, has retired from the bench of the Allahabad High Court.

RAJA Siva Piasad who retired to obscurity with the death of the Maharaja Iswaripiasad of Benares, is to the fore again. Inflammatory letters supposed to have been written by him have been received in the Dead Letter Office of the Postal Deputment from Poona, Satura, Ghazipin, Mirzubur and other places, and the Benares Police is enquiring into the matter. The letter runs thus :-

"Be it known that within two years at the advent of the Russians the English will fly away, plundering the country and leaving its people wetched, miserable and poor. They are growing under the heavy yoke of the British rule. Therefore, it behoves all true wellof our country to bestir themselvas now, wishers of our country to bestir themselvas now, so that in time of need they may be able to defend their hearths and home."

THE Hon'ble Mt. Lal Mohun Ghose, as Honorary Magistrate, Sealda, tried a washerman on a charge of having misappropriated clothing valued at Rs. 150 and belonging to a European, found hun guilty and sentenced num to three months' rigorous imprisonment.

JOGESWAR ROY CHOWDHRY, described as a Zemindar of Baraset, has been sentenced, by Mr. Knox Wight, the Additional Sessions Judge of Alipore, to two years' hard labour. He was charged with committing forgery by altering the date of the copy of a decree barred by hmitation. The man pleaded ignorance, but the jury unanimously found him guilty.

Rai Gunga Prasad Singh Bahadar of Durbhanga has obtained the thanks of the Bengal Government by an offer of Rs. 12,000 for the construction of a hospital at Laheria Serai, in memory of his late father, Rai Bunwari Lil Sahu Bahadar. Are Singh and Sahu of the Calcutta Gazette the same?

WITH the release from jail of Mr. Donald Gasper, the Sunday Times revived and is in trouble once more. At the instance of Mi. F. A. Perroux, the managing proprietor of the newly started Competitionwallah, the Northern Division Magistrate has ordered a summons against Gasper for defamation. The statements of the Times complained of are that the Competitionwallah has a circulation of only 300 copies, that that newspaper is an abortion and that the Race tips sold by it are worthless. Mr. Cranenburgh, in applying for the process, informed the court that the Competitionwallah was largely circulated and all the advertisements in it were genuine.

WE read :-

WE read:—

"The other day in the Lord Mayor's Court, the case of 'Honour & Simpson' came on for hearing, before Mr. Roxbuigh, the Assistant Judge. It was a judgment summons taken out by a money-lender trading in the City under the style of Honour, Sakespeare, and other names against Mr. Simpson, a Post Office clerk, to enforce payment of a judgment debt amounting to £17.9s. 8d. Mr. Forrest, solicitor, appeared for the plaintiff. The defendant, who conducted his case in person, said he borrowed £3 from the plaintiff, and gave a promissory note in return for £15. The plaintiff verbally promised him that he could take up the note on payment of £3.15s in a month, but he was subsequently advised that he could not do so, as the term was not incorporated in the written agreement. Seven months afterwards the plaintiff signed judgment against him for £17.9s. 8d. The learned Judge remarked that it was an extraordinary case. He asked the plaintiff's solicitor whether he desired to have an opportunity of meeting the defendant. Mr. Forrest: No, my lord; I have judgment, and I ask you to make an order upon it. The learned Judge: Yes, you have got your judgment and are entitled to an order. But there is evidently something wrong with the law, when it is possible for one man to lend another £3 in April of this year, and in November to sign judgment against the borrower for £17.9s. 8d. I think some legislator ought to make an ende-avour to after the law of the land when such a thing as that is possible. I cannot send this man to prison for not paying the instalment. If you insist upon your right to an order, I shall direct the defendant to pay 6d, a month. All I have to add is that you, a professional man, must know that the plaintiff's verbal promise to allow the mote to be taken up on payment of £3 15s. was worth nothing. If he meant that that should be so, he should have incorporated it in the bill. His promise was worth nothing. I am told the interest chaiged is at the tate of 1,200 per cent; it is scandalous. Mr. Forrest s

Most rightful Judge !

In the last B. L. examination of the Calcutta University, the Ripon College stands prominent. The first passed candidate in order of ment is from that College, and thirty more have passed in the second division. There are three more students in the first division, namely, one from the T. N. Jubilee College, Bhagalpur, one from the Patna College and one from the Metropolitan Institution. The total number in the second division is 71. Of these, besides the thirty from the Ripon College, the Metropolitan claims 15, the City College 12, the Patna College 4, the Morris College 4, the Dacca College 2, and the Rajshahi College, the Hooghly College, the Midnapore College and the Berhampore College, each, one.

In the M. A. Examination, in English, the Dacca College beats the Presidency College. In Class I two students have passed, the first from the Dacca College and the second from the Presidency College. In the second and third Classes, the Presidency College and private students figure prominently. In Sanskrit, the Sanskrit College passes two students, one each in the second and third classes. In Arabic, class II, there are two private students and in Persian class I. only one-again a private student. The Presidency College and the F. C. Institution and Duff College equally divide the honour among themselves in Mental and Moral Philosophy in classes I and II. In III again a private student. In Natural and Physical Science.—A., Chemistry—the Presidency College returns two in class I and 3 in class III, the Rajshahi College coming in for 1 in class II. In C the Presidency College has the sole distinction, 2 in class II and 5 in class III. So also in F., Geology and Mineralogy where only one student is successful in class III.

We missed Hajee Noor Mahomed Zakariya for some time. He has just been appointed a member of the Mahomedan Burial Board for Calcutta, vice the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Ameer Ali, who in February goes "home" on six months and twenty days' leave.

A FIRE in Pepal Mandi, Peshawar, has destroyed twenty-two buildings, mostly shops.

PART of the Great Weir at Khanki, the head quarters of the Chenab Canal system, has sunk, causing the closing of the canals.

THE Prime Mouster of Tonk, Sahebzada Mahomed Obaidullah Knan writes to the Proneer:—

writes to the Proneer:—

"I was sorry to read in your paper of the 22nd instant a paragraph in the third puge, quoted from the Librie paper, asserting that the Mahomedans of Took have organised a crusade against the Gojars of the State, on the ground that the latter eat pork, and therefore the former should not purchase misk from them. I would, therefore, ask you to be good enough to do justice to the Mahomedans of the Took State by publishing that the above statement has no truth whaterer. It is not the Gojar sect only that eat pork, but Minas, Rappins and some other sects also who use it as part of their food, and there is no reason why gridge should be shown towards only one of the several parties, all of which form part of the Hindu population of the State. The Gigars form in Took the best sepoys of the State Police and army, and their services in these departments are much appreciated in this State. I trust you will see that the publication of such an unfounded news in such a widely circulated paper as the Proneer will prove very injurious, especially at the time when the feeling of the two religious bodies are so highly excited in some parts of India now adays; and therefore the Contradiction of the false runnour is very essential. In Took it is the Gojars only from whom we get a large portion of milk for our food, and there are few milk shop-keepers that do not get milk from Gojars been stopped for a day only the people of Took, including Hindus and Michomedans without exception, would have suffered as much as if starved as milk constitutes part of the food of almost every one, in its original or some other compounded or changed form. When His Highness the Nawab or any noble of fook shoots any pork anywhere in the territory of Took, the Gojars and others are with pleasure called and given the game."

It is satisfactory to find the Prime Minister contradicting an un-

It is satisfactory to find the Prime Minister contradicting an unfounded report, showing at once his anxiety about his administration and the regard due to the press of the country. That press is under a ban in the Native States. Yet it is the press that can keep them straight or show up injustice done them by the Residents and the Foreign Office.

NOTES & LEADERETTES.

OUR OWN NEWS,

&

THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

-2021/414-

THE degradation of Captain Alfred Dievfus, of the French Aitillery, condemned for communicating confidential documents to foreign Powers, was a dramatic scene. He was led into the courtyard of the Ecole Militaire, and in the presence of five thousand troops of the Pruis garrison paraded for the occasion, his enaulettes were stripped off and his sword broken. Captain Dreyfus cried out, "I am innocent, Vive la France," and begged journalists who were present to report the words he uttered. Several French officers shouled, "Silence Judas, your offence justifies the punishment." Long before the appointed time people began to assemble outside the Ecole Militaire, and at the appointed hour a dense multitude had collected who, while the penalty was being carried out, hissed and yellel "Death to the traitor."

DEAFNESS An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free.—Artificial Ear-drums and similar appliances entire-y superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 119, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

LORD Randolph Churchill is slighly improved. He sleeps well and is able to take a fair amount of nourishment, but there is no permanent improvement.

PRINCE Bismarck has been visited by the new Grim in Chancellor Prince Hohenlohe. This visit is the prelude to that of the Emperor himself.

A JOINT conference of cotton employers and cotton operatives held at Manchester in December last, passed the following resolution :---

"That this representative conference of Lincashite cotton employers and cotton operatives protest most strongly against the policy of reimposing the import duties on cotton goods and yarns, even though a countervailing exise duty should be placed upon similar goods produced in India, and is of opinion that such excise duty cannot be made to effectually remove the protective incidence of the proposed legislation."

Another meeting was held on the 8th January, Seven M. P.'s were present, and a resolution was passed asking the supporters of the movement in the House of Commons to submit a motion to the House condemning the imposition of import duties as a reactionary and unjust policy, objecting to the taxation of England's greatest industry in order to relieve Indian finance, and expressing the opinion that it is better to subsidise India than cripple the Manchester trade.

The Times commenting on the meeting dwells upon the fallacy of the proposal to subsidize India from the Imperial Exchequer, and observes that, if India were a self-governing Colony, the imposition of duties on British goods would be far more extensive than those now introduced into India.

JAPAN refuses to grant any armistice. Mr. Denby, the United States Minister, believes that all attempts at negotiations for peace will prove fundes until Pekin has been occupied. Linding parties from Japanese war vessels are exploring the bays along the coast of Shanting. The Japanese have just captured K uphing after four hours' severe fighting The Chinese field towards. Haishaksa and were closely pursued.

The Times publishes a letter from its correspondent in Japan describing four days' horrible butchery of unaimed Chinese attended with nameless attenties that followed upon the capture of Port Arthur, Among the inhumanities perpetrated, groups of prisoners were tied together, and riddled with bullets or hicked to pieces. The Times admits that the Japanese received great provocation on account of barbarities and mutilations inflicted upon a few Japanese prisoners captured by the Chinese, but the disgrace of the cold-blooded butcheries rests with the Japanese Army and upon the General whose failure to arrest such merchess slaughter has cast an indigenous bie biot upon the Japanese atms.

MONS C. RESSMANN, the Italian Ambassador at Paris, has been suddenly recalled, on account of his friendly relations with the Italian ex-Premier the Marquis Rudini.

THE military authorities at Kissala are miking great preputations for the autorpated attack of the Dervishes. The town has been put in a thorough state of defence, fresh cannon have been mounted and large suppries of munitions and provisions have been collected.

THE Cru has sent to General Goniko a letter conched in extremely flattering terms accepting the resignation of his Governorship of Warsiw, hoping that his he dth may recover to enable him to hold a future office. The letter is regarded as showing no change in the intended policy of Russianizing Poland.

ARRANGEMENTS have been made for a delegation of the Scots Greys to proceed to St. Petersburg about the end of January for the purpose of personally congranulating the Czar on his appointment to the Coloneley of their regiment. The members of the mission will stay a short time in Berlin en route to St. Petersburg, and will be received and entertained by the German Emperor.

THE German Redectors Society has voted five hundred pounds sterling to be sent to the seat of war in aid of the work which is now being carried on by the Japanese Redectors Society.

MR. Gladstone has started for Cannes. In reply to the address presented by a deputation of Irish Americans, Mr. Gladstone declared that the interest he felt in Ireland would only end with his life, and took the opportunity of insisting upon the necessity for unity amongst the Nationalists.

THE Russian Budget for 1895 shows an excess of expenditure over revenue of seventy million roubles. It is proposed to cover this deficit by the withdrawal of cash from the reserve treasury.

SEVERE snowstorms and intense cold are reported from Scotland and various places on the Continent. The village of Orlu in the French Pyrenees has been engulfed by an avalanche. Fifteen persons perished, and eight were injured.

SIR Henry F. Ponsonby, for many years Private Secretary to the Queen-Empress, has had a paralytic stroke, and lies in a very critical condition.

A LETTER from Mr. Curzon published in the Times, describes the visit of the writer to Kabul. Mr. Curzon is much impressed with the kingly bearing and strikingly statesmanlike conversation of the Amir, who is absolutely resolved to visit England if his health permits the journey being undertaken. The Times, commenting upon the letter, promises a splendid welcome to one who has been such a steady friend of Great Britain.

MR. Fowler has favourably received an offer from India to construct the proposed Ahmedabad-Prantij Rulway on a rupee basis. The India Office cordially approves of railway extension on capital raised in rupees instead of in gold. Mr. Fowler attaches the greatest importance to the development of Indian Railways, and hopes that joint action on the part of the State and private companies will supply the Indian people with the needful facilities for rapid and cheap transport.

 PRESIDENT Cleveland has sent a message to Congress recommending that the permission of America should be given to Hawaii to lease a small island to Great Britain to serve as a station for the cable between Canada and Australia.

THE Calcutta Municipal elections have been fixed for the 16th March. Forminary arrangements are being made at the Municipal Office. An advertisement in another column requires the ratepayers to apply for mutation of names by the 17th January. This is a necessary and important step towards a correct register of voters. Owners and occupiers of premises assessed at between Rs. 150 and Rs. 300, holders of licenses for carriages and hoises or, for trades and professions, have special need to reply to the advertisement. For, unless they exert themselves, they will be omitted from the final list. The Chairman is not bound by law to enter them in his first list. They have, however, the right to vote at elections and to stand as candidates. If they neglect the opportunity offered them now, they must not grumble afterwards.

As an offshoot of the Indian Medical Congress, branches of the National Health Society of England are to be established in India For that purpose there was a Drawing Room meeting at Belvedere, Sir Charles Elliott on behalf of Ludy Elliott opened the proceedings by introducing Mr. Eurnest Hart to the assembly. Mr. Hart then gave a buef statement of the work done by the parent society and how it was done. After some speaking, the meeting approved of the work done by the Society in England and its proposed extension to India for the spread of health knowledge among all classes of the Indian population. They next resolved that European and Indian ladies could render good service to the community by taking part in the work and that it was desirable that mixed representative committees be formed for the purpose in Calcutta. Subscriptions were then raised, and after partaking of tea hospitably provided by Lady Elliott, the several ladies and gentlemen dispersed rejoicing that they had done a good deed.

SINCE the blundering of Sir George Campbell, Civilián Judges were not thought of for the Original Side of the High Court. The barrier has been broken for some time, but the disability of native Judges to dispense Original justice continued. That record too has come to an end, for Mr. Justice Ameer Ali is holding since this week an Original Court. We may now expect Messrs. Justices Banerjee and Ghose to preside at the criminal sessions.

MR. Justice Trevelyan has left India on eight months' furlough. The vacancy on the High Court Bench thus caused has been' filled by Mr. H. W. Gordon, who has established a claim by acting as a Judge on several previous occasions.

THF Indian Daily News says :-

"We notice that it is stated that Nawab Syed Amir Hossein will probably be appointed to the Viceregal Council. If so, we can only say that it is a matter for the utmost possible regret."

The utmost possible regret? There is more in this short paragraph than the News has chosen to say. Are not such oracular expressions of opinion like stabs in the dark?

KUMAR Gopendra Krishna has been confirmed as Inspector-General of Registration in place of Mr. H. Holmwood. How Nawab Ameer Hossein must curse the hour when he was led to refuse the last officiating appointment unless he was paid a larger salary than his present pay! Those who advised him would not move another step when the Secretary of State, while sanctioning the increase on the first occasion when the Nawab Presidency Magistrate officiated as Inspector-General, would, on subsequent occasions, restrict his pay to the pay that he was drawing as Magistrate.

ONE of the resolutions of the Indian Medical Congress, unanimously adopted by the unofficial members, condemns the last section of the Cantonment Act Amendment Bill recommended by the Secretary of State to the Government of India. The Bill consists of three sections in all. The first section is merely preliminary. The second restrains the Government of India from making any rule for controlling a certain class of women. The third prohibits their examination by any medical man under the penalty of a fine of Rs. 100. The objection of the unofficial members particularly touches this penal provision, in which they see a want of confidence in the medical servants of Government. Cannot the latter be trusted to carry out loyally and humbly the orders of the Government they serve? That is the question asked. Whatever the measure of the medical love of these resolutionists, they are, it seems sadly deficient in that legal knowledge which, even as medical men, they should never be without. There can be no legislation for the prevention of any act without a sanction to enforce the prevention. Let not women of a certain class be examined against their consent, says the Bill. It is impossible to pass it without providing a sanction to enforce what the Bill intends. To oppose the sanction on the ground that it would imply a want of confidence on the part of Government in its own servants, is as sane as to oppose all existing sanctions provided in laws restraining other classes of Government servants from practices declared illegal by those laws. It is a juridical question against which the congressists are knocking their heads. It is impossible to enact a law that will only interdict a practice without a penal provision for enforcing the interdiction. Our medical men were not always so unreasonable. That so many educated gentlemen should have discovered such ignorance of one of the fundamental principles of penal legislation, is certainly lamentable. Although they object to the entire Bill, yet their language shows that they would accept it, at least unwillingly, if only the sanction be withdrawn. With their notions of what is due to Government servants, it would be interesting to set some of them to amend all our penal laws, including the civil, military and medical service regulations which contain semi-penal provisions for enforcing a proper attention to duty.

To these unofficial medical congressists we would particularly recommend the following extract from Bentham's Book of Fallacies compiled from his papers after his death, and in noticing which Sydney Smith produced his immortal Noodle's Oration. Under the head "Self-Trumpeter's Fallacy," Bentham observes: "There are certain men in office who, in the discharge of their functions, arrogate to themselves a degree of probity, which is to exclude all imputations and all enquiry. Their assertions are to be deemed equivalent to proof; their virtues are guarantees for the faithful discharge of their duties; and the most implicit confidence is to be reposed in them on all occasions. If you expose any abuse, propose any reform, call for securities, inquiry, or measures to promote publicity, they set up a cry of surprise, amounting almost to indignation, as if their integrity were questioned, or their honour wounded. With all this, they dexterously mix up intimations that the most exalted patriotism, honour and, perhaps, religion, are the only sources of their actions."

PROTAP CHUNDER ROY is dead. He had been ailing for months and succumbed to the complication of diseases early yesterday morning, at the age of 53 years. Of humble origin, he lived to make his name known throughout the civilized world. He has done a service to his country and to the world by his publication of the Mahabharat-that storehouse of ancient Hindu legends of chivalry and philosophical speculations of every shade-in English. Orientalists of all countries have acknowledged his devotion to the ancient Indian literature. Their letters to him of congratulation and satisfaction make a goodly volume. Roy has not, however, lived to see the completion of the great work. We hope those in immediate charge will be enabled to bring the publication to its proper close. Already 92 fasciculi have appeared. There remain 8 more to be done and published. The Marquis of Hartington, the present Duke of Devoushire, while Secretary of State for India, had encouraged the publisher in his grand project. The India Office Librarian, speaking on behalf of the Secretary of State, said that the Mahabharata, if translated into English, "would supply a want long felt, and be a real boon to the ever-increasing band of students of Indian history and archæology." The translation has been acceptable "Trubner's American, European and Oriental Literary Record" speaks of it thus: "His English is idiomatic and clear. His terminology is flowery, and many of his passages are decidedly Oriental in then character. There is, in fact, a peculiar charm about his pages which cannot fail to fascinate the promiscuous reader, and yet, although the work is at all times pleasant reading, the accuracy of rendering is nowhere sacrificed by the translator to his desire to be entertaining." Sir Edwin Arnold also writes :- "I may remark that, comparing several passages of your translation with the Sanskiit, I have found it generally excellent, terse, faithful and most useful." If Roy passes away before completion of the work, he had had enough encouragement during its progress and was himself decorated with the Companionship of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire.

The Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science.

210, Bow-Bazar Street, Calcutta.

(Session 1894-95.)

Lecture by Babu Ram Chandra Datta, F.C.S., on Monday, the 14th January, at 4-15 P. M. Subject: Zinc.

Lecture by Mr. B. Chandhuri, B. A., B. Sc., on Monday, the 14th Inst, at 5-30 P. M. Subject: Biology—The Reproduction and Life History of Animals.

Lecture by Babu Ram Chandra Dutta, FCS, on Tuesday, the 15th Inst., at 4-15 P.M. Subject: Barium, Strontium and Calcium.

Lecture by Dr. Nihatan Sarkar, M. A., M. D., on Wednesday, the 16th Inst., at 5-30 P. M. Subject: Chemical Physiology—Casein.

Lecture by Babu Rajendra Nith Chatterjee, M. A., on Wednesday, the 16th Inst., at 6-30 P. M. Subject: Penumatics. (continued). Lecture by Babu Syamadas Mukherjee, M. A., on Thursday, the 17th Inst., at 4 P. M. Subject. Special forms of the equation of the second degree

PRACTICAL CLASS in Chemistry under Babu Rim Chandra Datta, F.C.S., on Thursday, the 17th Inst., at 4-15 P. M. Subject: Lead salts.

Lecture by Mr. B. Chaudhuri, B. A., B Sc., on Thursday, the 17th Inst., at 5-30 P. M. Subject: Histology—Blood. (continued)

Lecture by Dr. Mahendra Lal Sircar, on Friday, the 18th Inst., a 6-30 P. M. Subject: Propagation of Heat—Conduction.

Lecture by Mr. B Chaudhui, B. A., B. Sc., on Saturday, the 19th Inst., at 4 P. M. Subject: Practical Biology—Frog (continued).

Lecture by Mr. B. Chaudhuri, B. A. B. Sc., on Saturday, the 19th Inst., at 5 P. M. Subject: General Biology—Past History of Animals and their Geographical Distribution.

Admission Fee, Rs. 4 for Physics, and Rs. 4 for Chemistry; Rs. 6 for both Physics and Chemistry; Rs. 4 for Physiology; Rs. 4 for General Biology; Rs. 6 for complete course of Physiology and Biology. The charge for a single-lecture is 2 Annas.

MAHENDRA LAL SIRCAR, M.D.,

Honorary Secretary.

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, January 12, 1805.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL CONGRESS.

MEDICINE THROWN OVERBOARD.

THE proper or legitimate sphere of the science of medicine, so called, is to study those changes brought about in the human organism which are known by the name of disease, and to investigate the action of drugs on that organism, both in its normal and abnormal states, with a view to discover the methods and, if possible, the laws, under which cures may be effected. So far as the action of drugs on the human organism in health is concerned, a considerable progress has been effected. Since the days of Hippocrates and Galen, or Punarvasu and Charaka, so great, indeed, has been the advance in this direction, viz., the physiological action of drugs, that a new name, pharmacology, has been bestowed on this branch of learning. Unfortunately, however, patho-logy, or the study of the human organism in disease, has made very little progress. Rational or scientific therapeutics, again, can hardly be regarded to have made any advancement. Medical men are all empiries notwithstanding their mutual admiration societies and the self-laudation in which they indulge. The following observations by Dr. Lauder Brunton, in course of the first Goulstonian lecture delivered by him before the Royal College of Physicians in London, establish this so happily that we do not scruple to place them before the reader.

"Although few persons possessing any knowledge of the history of medicine will deny that therapeutics has made some progress during the last thousand years, yet it is impossible to read the writings of the ancients without feeling that if some of the old Egyptian physicians, not to mention such men as Hippocrates and Galen, were to arise from their graves and commence practice, we should have little cause to sneer at their treatment, although we have the advantage of possessing the medical knowledge accumulated during the two or three thousand years which have elapsed since they flourished.

For those old Egyptians seem to have been acquainted with the use of emetics, enemata, and purgatives, those potent agents which are, perhaps, more used and more useful than any others in our own armamentarium. They paid attention to the diet of their patients. For the cure of dropsies, they used squills and iron.

An ancient Greek, in addition to employing drastics, squill, broom, and balsams, would have tapped the abdomen when the distension became great, and would have taken every precaution to prevent syncope from the operation.

These are the very methods of the modern physician; and, although he might give digitalis and blue pill along with the squills, and suggest nitrous ether and juniper, yet his reasons for this would be the same as those of the Egyptian or Greek-viz., that he had seen the remedies prescribed do good before, and expected them to prove beneficial again. As to the modus operands of these remedies, or the reason why they should succeed in one case and fail in another, the ancient and the modern would be almost equally in the dark; for medicine with both would be an art, not a science. * *

We do not know medicine as we do chemistry and physics. We have medical sciences; for physiology, pathology, and pharmacology, are justly beginning to lay claim to the title; but medicine itself-the recog- may be to that which should form the principal one

January 12, 1895.

None but the most blinded zealot can assert that medicine, in the state in which it now exists, can claim the title of science. To make this still more clear, we will follow Dr. Lauder Brunton in his observations on ague, the disease of all others which is best known and in which the power of medicine is most marked. A man, in passing through a particular district and more especially if he sleep anywhere in it, becomes attacked with a shivering fit. After some time the fit will be followed by a burning fever and then by profuse sweat after which he will feel comparatively well till the next day when he will have another shivering fit at the same hour followed by the same programme. The disease may be prevented if the man cannot avoid the place, by his taking cinchona alkaloids, or when he has got it, the physician may, by administering a large dose of quinine, before a paroxysm, prevent its approach and, by continuing the remedy, may ultimately prevent its recurrence. But what is the cause that produces these paroxysms? Medical science calls it malaria and hides its ignorance from the layman, for what is malaria? How does it act on the human mechanism? How does quinine succeed in counteracting the effects of what is called malaria? Why should quinine sometimes fail while arsenic succeeds? We predict the occurrence of an ague fit and its prevention by the administration of quinine only empirically,-that is, by having seen its occurrence and prevention in the same manner in the cases of other persons. This, however, is not science. It is pure empiricism. The most eminent physician of our day is as much a quack while called upon to treat ague-fits as Punarvasu or Charaka was in the infancy of medicine in India.

We are surprised, therefore, at the tone of selfsatisfaction in which the Medical Congress assembled at Calcutta indulged. None of those six to seven hundred men had anything to say on the legitimate sphere of medicine. The world's knowledge has not been advanced, or even sought to be advanced, by a single step regarding any of the diseases to which humanity in general or in India is subject. Instead of paying any attention to what properly belongs to them, they frutered away their time in reading papers on a variety of subjects that are of subsidiary moment to them as practitioners of the healing art. A man falls sick. It is necessary that he should betake himself to a good room in a good house, which house, again, should be situate in a particular quarter; that his bed should be of a certain description; that the garments he wears should be of a particular kind: that his diet should consist of certain articles that should, again, be cooked in a particular way; that he should have certain medicines, which, of course, the physician would prescribe depending upon such empiric knowledge as he has. Those medicines, again, may be vegetable or mineral preparations or products obtained from some animal. To be a competent physician, therefore, it would require some knowledge of engineering, as also of the science of laying out streets and lanes, along with meteorology; some acquaintance with the properties of cotton and wool; some idea of tailoring; some familiarity with cooking; some conversance with botany, mineralogy, zoology, with chemistry and physics, both which would be in requisition at nition and cure of disease—is still an art, and not a of the physician's study, they are only cognate and subsidiary. What should be said of that man who sets himself up for a physician and takes up the study of those subsidiary branches of knowledge to the utter neglect of that for which alone he expects to be called to the bedside of suffering humanity? The Medical Congress of Calcutta has fairly laid itself open to the charge of attending to that which it could easily have laid aside, and utterly neglecting that to which it should have devoted its whole attention. To live in good, roomy, well-ventilated houses, situated in the midst of well-laid towns laving excellent streets and drains, to always eat good nourishing diet easy of digestion, to wear clean vestments, to drink pure, filtered water drawn from fresh and moving currents, and to avoid stimulants and narcotics and nocturnal debauches, is what every man instinctively wishes. By leading such a course of life one would certainly be able to avoid disease and keep excellent health. But does it require a Congress of six to seven hundred medical men to assemble with so much eclat at the metropolis of British India for teaching the Indian people of all nations in the world to do all this? The people of India understand the rules of hygiene far better than most nations of the Earth. To the vast majority of the inhabitants of this country, their religion, which still exercises a living force, is a grand routine of hygiene. If they are not able to reduce their knowledge to practice, it is because of those inevitable conditions under which they have to live. The rice-swamps that surround every village in Bengal have existed from the dawn of history. Who would not like to drain them at once of the water that rests on them for more than half the year? Who would not like to convert Bengal, if he could, into a table-land with not a bog of even a mile's circuit anywhere in it? The people, however, are so poor that one meal a day is almost the rule with them throughout the year. Potherbs are their only curry, rags are their covering, and low huts with or without mud walls, are their habitations. Is there any man who would not like to see the Indian rayyet well-fed and well-clothed and well-housed? But what has the science of medicine to do with all this? It cannot be charged, that the Government is not aware of the state of things prevailing in the country. The financial resources, however, of that Government are utterly inadequate to carry out any wide or comprehensive scheme of drainage or water-supply. Filth and squalor and poverty will continue in India despite the utmost efforts of state or private philanthropy. Our medical men should take the country as it is, and seek to combat disease by means other than any wide and comprehensive scheme of prevention. The very necessity of studying the pathology and therapeutics of hydrophobia would certainly cease if all dogs in the world were killed. The stout Bagdis, therefore, that wage a war of extermination with the canine population of our towns are unquestionably greater benefactors to their fellow brethren than those medical men who rest content by pointing out to us how hydrophobia may be prevented by slaughtering all dogs. If all venomous snakes be killed, the morbid conditions produced by snake-bites and the remedies that require to be administered for removing them, will not then demand investigation and study. Supposing cholera to be really due to the comma almost every step. However cognate these subjects bacilli, although millions of those organisms have been devoured, by Pettenkofer of Munich and his assistant without any harm to themselves even at a time when cholera was raging in Germany, the very necessity of studying cholera and the action of drugs administered in the hope of curing it would cease by carefully removing or killing those bacilli before we drink our glass of This then is the grand object which medical men in India, assembled together in Congress, have proposed to achieve for us: to exterminate all causes of disease in this land, with the help of legislation! The medical deputation that waited on the Indian Home Secretary could scarcely mean anything less. Let us then congratulate each other. A brighter era has dawned on us. India, under the auspices of its new Medical Congress, is going to be changed into a paradise. The work may take many long, long years to accomplish. Millions upon millions of rupees may have to be spent upon it. But that is not the question. The direction in which reform is to proceed has at last been found out. A beginning has been made. The rest is work of time. The science of medicine may safely be discarded. The Congress is wise. The wisest heads had sketched its plan. Not a paper has been read bearing upon the only branch of knowledge for which the profession is believed to exist.

In sober seriousness, who are they that are responsible for having planned it? We have a suspicion that Sir Charles Elliott is one of the movers. If the idea did not originate in his fertile brain, he must have taken it up with zeal after its conception. He is known to be a faddist where drainage and sanitation are concerned. The wisdom of his administration had been shattered on this very question—the question, viz., of health by legislation and taxation The Indian Medical Congress has very opportunely come to the rescue. All honour, therefore, to Lord Elgin for the grave and statesmanlike views he enunciated while addressing the united medical wisdom of India. The farce has been played out. It has served its object by investing one of the fads of the present ruler of Bengal with dignity. We hope it will lead to no legislative sport and financial experiment on the suffering people of India.

• A PURELY PERSIAN HISTORY OF INDIA.*

(Communicated.)

This is a history of the Mahomedan conquest of India in four volumes with a fifth as a vocabulary in which have been collected some purely Persian words used in the book, but which are not gener ally known. Commencing with the invasion of Mahomed Kasum in 44 Hijri or 664 A. D, the account ends with the death of Bahadur Shah, the last puppet King of Delhi, in 1279 Hijri or 1862 A. D. The author has confined himself to facts, and where authorities differ he has given the different statements, recording his own opinion with reasons as to which is likely to be the correct version. But that is not the only merit of the work. The volumes are free from religious bigotry. Any Hindu reading the account of Aurangzebe in the Daitam may mistake the writer for a Hindu. The author has fairly succeeded in condensing many facts worth knowing and rejecting those drawn from imagination.

It is known to Persian scholars how difficult it is to write even an ordinary letter in Persian without Arabic words. The Persian language, as it now is, contains about fifty per cent. of Arabic words, and it is generally believed that without the aid of Arabic words no intelligible decent Persian can be written. The author has, however, shown that not only Persian does not lose its beauty without Arabic words, but is sweeter without them. There is not a single Arabic word in these 2,600 pages. This is a remarkable feat. There is another book in Persian which contains no Arabic word, namely, the Namah-a-Khurawan by Prince Jalal-ud-din Mirza, a cousin of the presun Shah of Persia. This work was published at Teheran about a quarter of a century back. The Shah Namib of Firdaus has, it is said, no Arabic word. It does contain some which! could easily have been avoided. For instance, in the Shah Namah, we find:—

Pai maslihat majlis arastand,

Nishastand v guftand o b ar khastand.

Now, there are two Arabic words, madebut and majle which could have been replaced by the Persian words kangab and bazm. Thus we would have Bakangash bazm-ı biyarastand.

Nishastand o guftand o barkbastand.

without the rhyme or the metre being affected.

In Nawab Daulatyar Jung's work, words may be found which are generally recognized as Arabic, but a student of philology will at once see that they were originally Persian which the Arabs "misappropriated."

In the choice of Persian words the Nawab may be said to have achieved a greater success than the Persian prince, because the Dattan is much bigger than the Nawab-t khoranam. It should also be remembered that the Nawab, though a Persian by birth, wrote his work in Hyderabad after an absence of a quarter of a century from the classic land of Hafiz and Sadi and had not the advantages that the Persian prince could command.

From what has been said it is clear that Nawab Daulatyar lung's work is the best book in modern Persian. An English gentleman who has himself successfully gone through the Persian drill and now holds a high political appointment, speaks of the book, thus :--- "It treats of a most interesting period in the history of India and a work written in modern Persian would be far more useful to English students than those now prescribed for the High Proficiency and other examinations. It is the height of absurdity to prescribe a work like the Imba of Abul Fazl for English officers whose aim should be to obtain a good knowledge of Persian, colloquial and written, of the present day instead of that of a few centuries ago. Whether it will be possible to impress this view upon the Board of Examiners in Calcutta, I don't know It seems to be an article of faith that books written a few centuries ago in the most involved and flatulent style and the contents of which are utter rubbish, are the best text books for the Persian examinations. The real fact is that we have never had any one at Calcutta with a knowledge of modern Persian literature and very probably it is not known that any books have been written in that language since the date of Abul Fazl or the dreary and childish Anwar i Subath The Dastan is very well written and got up altogether "

NOTICE OF BOOKS.

This is a remarkable book. The author has, within the compass of about 120 pages, endeavoured to give an account of Astronomical Science as it flourished in ancient India. The best service that we can do him would be by noting the principal subjects he has discussed, with indications of the authorities he has cited.

In ancient India, as in other countries, two opinions prevailed regarding the motion that is observable of the heavenly bodies. One [•] Dastan-1-Turktazan-1-Hind by Nawab Daulatyar Jung Bahadur of Hyderabad. Published by Agha Muhammad Jafar Tajir Ispahani, Fort, Bombay.

^{*}Mrunnayi or Sanskrit Astronomical Geography; by Govinda Mohan Roy Vidyavinodavaridhi. Second edition; Calcutta. Printed by Gopal Chandra Ghosal, Jyotis Piokas Press, No. 5, Simla Street, and published by the author at Kakina.

of these was that the heavenly bodies revolve round the Earth as their centre. The other was that the Earth itself, with other planets, principal and subsidiary, move round the Sun as their centre. The well-known treatise, Suryyanddbanta, which is very old and generally regarded to have been composed by a Danava of the name of Maya, advocates the fixity of the Earth and the motion of the sun and the other planets. We may, by way of parenthesis, remark that the name Maya is extremely suggestive. The architect employed by the Pándava princes, for raising their beautiful hall at Indraprastha, was named Maya. He too was a Danava, a circumstance that has led some to suppose that in all probability he was a Grecian foreigner. After all, unless the age of Suryyasiddhanta be definitely fixed, the question cannot be satisfactorily solved of Hindu Astronomy being entirely of indigenous growth and development. To return. It should be remembered that calculations based upon the Earth's fixity would not much differ from those based upon the Earth's revolution round the Sun. Though founded, therefore, upon this initial error, as an Astronomical treatise, the Suryyanddhanta is not to be despised. Considering its antiquity, it has been highly praised by many celebrated Astronomers of Europe. Brahmagupta and others, accepting the fixity of the Earth composed their own celebrated treatises. The second theory, viz., the revolution of the Earth and the other planets round the Sun, was first propounded by Aryabhatta, whose well-known work was translated into Arabic and Persian. Mountstuart Elphinstone, in his History of India, has praised Aryabhatta very highly. His work is known under the name of Aryasiddbanta. There is abundant evidence to show that this great Astronomer, when he propounded the new theory of the revolution of the Earth, became an object of censure and persecution, like Coperincus and Galileo in Europe-Every schoolboy is now familiar with the proofs which modern European Astronomy adduces for establishing the revolution of the Earth. Almost all these proofs were adduced by Aryabhatta. The author of Mrinmayi quotes the original verses of Aryabhatta. The reader ought to be content with their translations. Here is one:---

"Even as a person in a (moving) boat sees all fixed objects moving in a direction opposite to the motion of his own boat, the fixed stars are, after the same manner, seen at Lanka (on the equator) to be uniformly moving westwards."

The heavenly bodies, apparently moving from East to West, establish the motion of the Earth from West to East.

Here is another :---

"The Zodiac is fixed. Only the Earth, ceaselessly turning round, causes the daily rising and setting of the planes, and the stars."

Although the revolution of the Earth was established by such considerations by Aryabhatta, yet Brahmagupta and others, either finded by prejudice or impelled by the desire of victory, converted Aryabhatta's speculations. Here is how those blinded Astronomers sought to prove Aryabhatta's error:---

"If the Earth really turned round, why do not all elevated objects (such as towers and house-tops, &c.,) fall down?" This was Brahmagupta's objection. Another Astronomer, Sreepati Misra, urged, "If the Earth turned round, then, through the force of the wind generated by the velocity of the Earth's motion, flags, &c., would always have been seen to be floating in an opposite direction. House-tops and mountain summits would also have fallen down. Hence (as these are not seen), it is the heavenly bodies that move, and the Earth, called the fixed, is truly fixed."

Lallacharyya, another famous Astronomer, had this objection to urge against Aryabhatta:---

"If the Earth really revolved, then birds could never have returned to their respective nests (after leaving them); then arrows also, shot upwards, would have been seen to fall transversely towards the direction (west) of the lord of waters."

That the Earth, with the planetary and the stellar worlds, rests in space and not on the tortoise supported by the snake Ananta (supposed by some to represent Infinity), was well known to the Hindu Astronomers. Here is how this was put by that authoritative work entitled Siddbanta-Sbiromani.

"The Earth's sphere, made up of earth, air, water, ether, and light, surrounded on all sides by the Moon, Mercury, Venus, Sun, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, and the stellar worlds, having no support, and depending on its own power, is resting always on empty space. On its exterior surface rests the eternal universe of matter with the subsequent creations of human beings and deities and demons on every side."

The following is plainer:---

"The Earth, adorned everywhere with mountains and gardens and villages and towns and large trees, is like a flower of the Nauclea Cadamba with the filaments on its body."

The proofs adduced for the rotundity of the Earth were very similar to those with which every schoolboy is now familiar. That the eclipses were caused by the shadows of the moon and the Earth was well known. The circular character of the shadow was taken as indicative of the roundness of both the moon and the Earth. That the moon shines with light borrowed from the sun and not its own was also known. The following is a poetical description of this fact:---

"As a jar, placed in the Sun, has a portion of itself lighted (viz., that which is exposed to the luminary) and has the portion opposite to it darkened even like the beautiful tresses of a maiden, after the same manner this nectarine sphere, viz., the moon, has that portion lighted which is exposed to the Sun but has the opposite portion darkened."

The following from the great Bháshkara will be of interest:-"If the Earth were as flat as the surface of a mirror, why would not human beings, like the celestials, always behold the sun moving in his course however remote he might be (from the Earth)?"

Lallácharyya adds:---

"If the Earth had the property of flatness, why then, oh, would not trees as tall as the palmyra and situate at a great distance, be always visible?"

The fact, therefore, of the rotundity of the Earth gradually hiding the tallest trees as we recede from them, was well understood. That day and night are due to the Earth's rotundity was also known to the ancient Hindu Astronomers. The Pauranik theory of day and night being caused by the Sun's motion round the Sumeru mountain was scouted by them. The following versions Suryyan libunta explains why the Earth, instead of appearing round, seems flat.

"Human beings, in consequence of their smallness (compared to the magnitude of the Earth) always behold, from their standpoints, the Earth to be a circular plain although the Earth is a sphere."

That nothing but the geography of a sphere can satisfy this condition, was, of course, understood. The Earth, again, being spherical, all human beings on its surface would have it beneath their feet. Our antipodes would not thus feel themselves to be hanging with their heads downwards, nor we, as their antipodes. would hang with our heads down. This is noticed in Suryyasiddhánta. Bháshkarácháryya also has pointed it out with his usual clearness. With his usual felicity, the great Bháshkara combats the theory of the Earth's being supported by something else. His argument is that if the Earth were supported by anything else, that something would require a third support and so on, till in infinite space one must have to come to some support that has no other support. If so heavy a mass made up of infinite supports could rest in space, why suppose the impossibility of the Earth itself being supported in space? The theory of the Bauddhas that the Earth is ceaselessly falling down, has been scouted by all the Hindu astronomers. Bháshkara's argument against the Bauddhas is derived from the fact of an heavy object thrown upwards always returning to the Earth. If the Earth were ceaselessly falling down, an object once thrown upwards would never more come into contact with | It is proposed that a drawback be paid on exported yarns or goods, it, for both being masses that are falling down, such contact would be impossible. So far from meeting, the Earth's mass being much greater, its velocity in falling will be greater, and, therefore, the distance between the Earth and the falling body will continually increase. A finer argument than this is adduced by Bháshkara in the following verse:---

"The Earth has the power of attraction. Hence, attracted towards the Earth by its own power, any heavy body thrown upwards, seems to fall down. Where would the Earth, however, which is itself in infinite space all round, fall?" The sense is that falling cannot be predicated of the Earth. On which side would it fall ? Our aftipodes would think that the Earth would fall in a direction that we regard as upwards. We would regard it, if it is falling, as falling in a direction that our antipodes call upwards. Bháshkara's argument for contradicting the theory of the Bauddhas about there being two Suns, two Moons, &c., is exceedingly subtle but very convincing.

The Hindu Astronomers conceived the Equator and divided it into 360 degrees. Lanka (the island of Ceylon) is on the Equator; 90 degrees to the East is Yamakoti; 90 degrees to the West is Romakapattan, and below is Sidhapura equidistant from Yamakoti and Romakapattan. It seems that the island of Ccylon has receded northwards since the time of Bháshkara, the southern parts having been completely washed away. As to Yamakoti and Romakapattan and Sidhapura, their positions on the map can be ascertained. But whether these were cities or islands or countries that had these names cannot be ascertained at this distance of time. The difference in time caused by difference of longitude was well-known to our ancestors. Deçántara-danda that is now added or subtracted by our astrologers in ascertaining the correct time of nativity, has reference to the Oujjain time (Oujjain was the place through whose observatory passed the first meridian).

Without following the author further into details yet more interesting and which show that the science of Astronomy had reached a high state of development, we would recommend a study of the book itself which Babu Gobinda Mohan has compiled. The reader will find every page of the work interesting and instructive. Much valuable matter is added in the foot-notes. These are replete with information. The author has studied Hindu Astronomy for many years. The object of his book is to show what the student of Hindu Astronomy may expect if he takes up that subject. It is more an introduction to that subject than anything else. We' think, after the successful compilation of this book, the author may undertake to give us a regular treatise on Hindu Astronomy. Suryya-siddbanta, we hear, has been taken up by a European scholar. The great treatise of Aryyabhatta or Bháshkara may be successfully edited by Babu Gobinda Mohan.

DESPATCH ON THE COTTON DUTIES.

The Secretary of State writes as follows to the Viceroy, under date the 13th ultimo:---

My Lord, --- I have considered in Council your Excellency's Con fidential letter, No. 210, dated the 7th August 1894, with your colleague, Mr. Westland's Minute, regarding the imposition of import duties on cotton goods.

2. So far as a judgment can be formed at the present time, the Indian treasury requires an addition of a crore or a crore and-a-half to the present revenues. I observe that you still are of opinion that this addition can best be secured by the imposition of import duties on cotton goods. But Her Majesty's Government consider that, in accordance with the resolution of the House of Commons, these duties must not be protective in their nature.

3. Mr. Westland's Minute, embodying the results of a careful inquiry made by him into the circumstances of the Bombay cotton industry, concludes by recommending that import duties be imposed at the rate of,---

(a) 5 per cent. ad valorem on all cotton piece-goods;
(b) 3½ per cent. ad valorem on all cotton yarns of counts above
24; and that an excise duty of,---

(c) 3% per cent. ad valorem be levied on all machine-made cotton yarna, produced at mills in British India of counts above 24. Indian-made piece-goods would, thus pay excise duty on the yarn of which they are woven, whenever such yarns are finer than 24s.

and that negotiations be undertaken with Native States in v their levving a similar excise duty upon varns made at mills within

Your Government consider Mr. Westland's proposals to be the best way of meeting the requirements of her Majesty's Government that Indian cotton duties must not be protective.

4. I think that these proposals would comply with the requirements laid down, subject to two modifications of detail. consider that the duty (import and excise) upon yarns should be at the same rate, 5 per cent. ad viderem, as on woven goods. I share the view expressed by the late Mr. James Wilson, in his Financial Statement of the 18th February, 1860, that for reasons which he there states, "the same duty may be placed on yarns as is charged on goods, without any perceptible injury to the trade." Moreover, I am not certain that a 3.4 per cent. duty on yarns used in Indian fabrics might not, to some extent, protect Indian manufactures against imported goods of the same description, paying a 5 per cent. duty. Secondly, I am not satisfied that counts above 24 are, with-out doubt, the right line at which duty on yarns should begin. out doubt, the right line at which duty on yaris should begin.

Mr. Westland shows good grounds for believing that imported yarns below 30s., and imported goods containing yarns below 30s., constitute a small proportion of the total importations of cotton-goods. But it seems that such goods are imported to some extent. Complete information on the subject does not appear to be available. On the whole, in order to prevent any possibility of the duties being protective, I consider the duty on yarns should begin with counts above 20 instead of 24 as proposed by your Government. I have no objection to your reserving to yourself in the Act power to raise the line by executive action, with the consent of her Majesty's Government, in case experience should hereafter show that it has been drawn unnecessarily low.

5. You are aware that in July, 1877, the House of Commons passed a Resolution to the effect that "the duties now levied upon cotton manufactures imported into India, being protective in their nature, are contrary to sound commercial policy"; and that in reply to a question in the House of Commons on the 27th July last, I said that the above-mentioned Resolution dealt "with duties which are protective in their nature"; and I proceeded "I have already stated to the House that, in my opinion, the Excutive Government ought not to sanction steps which would reverse that decision without giving an opportunity for discussion in this House." Again, in the Indian Budget debate on the 16th of August, 1894, I said that the House had resolved, "that it will not sanction a protective duty on cotton goods; therefore the position I have taken up is that the imposition of such a duty is a step which must not be taken, until the House has had some opportunity of discussing the question. . I have said all along, and I say now, that, if the manufacturers of India are prepared to submit to a countervailing duty which will destroy the element of protection, I do not see why the import duty should not be imposed. . . . If there be any necessity for increasing the taxation of India, I see no reason why this tax could not be fairly and justly imposed, and at the same time deprived of any protective character, so that it shall go into the Treation sury of India, and not into the pockets of the manufacturers. no injustice would be done to the English manufacturer on the one hand or to the Indian consumer on the other." It will, therefore, be understood that Her Majesty's Government are precluded by the pledges above quoted from sanctioning the imposition of import duties on cotton goods, unless under such conditions as will ensure beyond question that the duties thus imposed will have no protective effect.

6. Subject to the two modifications stated in paragraph 4, 1 agree to your moving the Legislature to impose import and excise duties upon cotton manufactures in the way you propose.

THE TENTH NATIONAL CONGRESS.

THE PRINCIPAL RESOLUTIONS.

Resolution I. That this Congress while thanking Her Majesty's Government for the promise they have made to appoint a Select Committee of the Members of Parliament to enquire into the financial expenditure of India, regards the enquiry with so limited a scope as inadequate, and is of opinion that if the enquiry is to bear any practical fruit, it must include an enquiry into the ability of the Indian people to hear their existing financial burthens and the financial relations between India and the United Kingdom.

Resolution II. (a) That this Congress respectfully enters its empathatic protest against the injustice and impolicy of imposing excise duty on cottons, manufactured in British India as such excise is calculated to cripple seriously the infant mill industry of this country,

(b) That this Congress puts on record its firm conviction that in proposing this excise the interests of India have been sacrificed to those of Lancashire, and it strongly deprecates any such surrender of Indian interest by the Secretary of State.

(c) That in case the Excise Bill becomes law, this Congress earnestly prays that the Government of India will, without delay, seek the sanction of the Secretary of State to exercise the powers which the Bill confers on Government to exempt all cottons from 20s to 24s from the operation of the Act.

(d) That the President be authorised to telegraph the above Resolution to the Government of India, and to the Secretary of State.

Resolution III. That this Congress desires to express the profound alarm which has been created by the action of the Government in interfering with the ensiting Permanent Settl ment in Bengal and Behar (in the matter of survey and other cesses) and with the terms of sunnids of permanently settled estates in Madras; and deeming such interference with solemn pledges a national calamity, hereby pledges itself to oppose in all possible legitimate ways and all such reactionary attacks on Permanent Settlements and their holders, and resolves to petition Parliament in that behalf.

That this Congress regrets extremely that the Government of India have not only failed to carry out the pledges (given by the Secretary of State in his Despatches of 1862 and 1865) for Permanent Settlement in the provinces in which it does not exist, but have also failed to give effect to the policy of granting mo lified fixity of tenure and immunity from enhancement laid down in 1882 and 1884 by the Government of India and approved by the Secretary of State 3 and this Congress hereby entitests the Government of India to grant a modified fixity of tenure and immunity from enhancement of Iand tax for a sufficient long period of not less than sixty years so as to secure to landholders the full benefits of our own improvements.

Resolution VI. That this Congress expresses its deep sense of disappointment at the despatch of the Secretary of State supporting the views of the Government of India on the question of Simultaneous Examinations, and this Congress hereby places on record its respectful but firm protest against the despatch as, among other things, introducing a new principle inconsistent with the Charter Act of 1833 and the Proclamation of the Queen of 1st November of 1858 (the solemn pledges contained in which the Secretary of State and the Government of India now seek to repudiate) by creating a disability, founded upon race, for the despatch lays down that a minimum of European officials in the Covernanted Service is indispensable.

That in the opinion of this Congress the creation of the Provincial Service is no satisfactory or permanent solution of the problem, as this service, constituted as it is at present, falls short of the legitimate aspirations of the people, and that the interests of the subordinate service will not suffer by the concession of Simultaneous Examinations.

That no attempt has been made to make out a case against the holding of Simultaneous Examinations for the recruitment of the Engineering, Forest, Telegraph, and the higher Police Service Examinations, and the Congress regrets to notice that the despatches of the Secretary of State, the Government of India and the various Local Governments are absolutely silent with regard to this aspect of the Resolution of the House of Commons.

That this Congress respectfully urges on Her Majesty's Government that the resolution of the House of Commons of 2nd Jun-1803 on the question of Simultaneous Examinations should be specific carried out as an act of justice to the Indian people. Resolution VII. That the Congress views with great dispatisfac-

Resolution VII. That the Congress views with great distantiation the system of recruiting the higher Judicial Service of the country, and is of opinion that provision should be made for proper judicial training being given to persons who are appointed to the place of District and Sessions Judges, and that the higher Judicial Service in Beingal, the N-W P. and Oudh, Boinbay and Madra, and the Judicial Service generally in other parts of the country should be more largely recruited from the legal profession than is now the case.

now the case.

Remains I'll (a) That this Congress is of opinion that the present constitution of the Higher Civil Medical Service is anomal our indefensible in principle and injurious in its working and unnecessarily costly, that the time has atrived when, in the interests of public medical education and the advancement of medical service and of securitie work in the country, as also in the cause of economic administration, the Civil Medical Service of India should be reconstructed on the basis of such service in other civilised countries wholly detached from, and independent of Mibrary Service.

- (b) That the very satisfactory position and prospects of members of the Subordinate Civil Medical Strate (Asstant Surgeons and Civil Hospital Assistants) compared with members of similar standing in other departments of the Public Service require thorough investigation and redress, and pray that Government will grant for the purpose an open enquiry by a mixed commission of official and non-official members.
- (c) That whilst this Congress views with satisfaction the desire of the Imperial Government to reorganise the Chemical Analyser's Department with a view to its administration as an independent sermithe department, it earnestly hopes that Government will not fail to recognise the responsible and meritorious work of Assistant carnestly prays that the Government of India will, without delay, or, as they in reality are, Government Chemical Analysers, and Resolution X. (a) That, in the opinion of the Congress, the time has now arrived when the system of trial by jury may be safely extended, in cases triable by Sessions Courts, to many parts of the country where it is not at present in force.

(b) That, in the opinion of the Congress the innovation made in 1872 in the system of trial by jury, depriving the verdicts of juries of all finality has proved injurious to the country, and that the powers then, for the first time, vested in Sessions Judges and High courts, of setting aside verdicts of acquittal, should be at once withdrawn.

(c) That, in the opinion of this Congress, it is extremely desirable that the power at present vested in Government to appeal against acquittals by Sessions Courts be taken away.

Resolution XI. That this Congress having till now appealed, though in vain, for many successive years to the Government of India, and also to the Secretary of State to remove one of the gravest defects in the system of administration, one fraught with incalculable oppression to all classes of people throughout the country, and having noted with satisfaction the admission of the evil by two former Secretaries of State (Lord Kimberley and Lord Cross), and being of opinion that reform is thoroughly practicable as was shown by Messrs, R. C. Dutt, M. M. Ghose, and P. Mehta, entreats the Government of India to direct the immediate appointment in each province of a Committee (one-half at least of whose members shall be non-official natives of India qualified, by education and experience, in the workings of various Courts, to deal with the question) to prepare each a scheme for the complete separation of all judicial and executive functions in their own province with as tittle additional cost to the State as may be practicable, and the submission of such schemes with the opinions of the several Governments to itself at an early date.

Resolution XV. That this Congress is emphatically of opinion that it is inexpedient in the present state of education in the country that Government grants for higher education should in any way be withdrawn, and concurring with the previous Congresses affirms in the most emphatic manner the importance of increasing public expenditure on all branches of education and the expediency of catalythms. Technical School and Callegors of establishing Technical Schools and Colleges.

Risolution XVII. That this Congress is of opinion that the amendments and additions proposed to be introduced in section 15 of the police Act V of 1861 are highly objectionable as the powers proposed to be conferred on District Magistrates with respect to the levy of the costs of punitive police and of granting compensation of a most arbitrary, dangerous, and unprecedented character, and hereby empowers the President to convey this expression of opinion to the Government of India.

Resolution XVIII. That this Congress records its deep felt gratitude to the Government of India for its circular Resolution No 221, published in the Supplement to the Gazzette of India, dated 20th October 1894, and its high appreciation of the generous principle which it enunciates of subordinating fiscal interests to the needs and agricultural interests of the ryot population in the management of forests.

And would further represent that in forests falling under classes 3 and 4 of the said Resolutions, fuel, grazing concessions, fodder, small timber for building houses and making agricultural implement, edible forest products, etc., may be granted free of enarge in all cases, under such restrictions as to quantity, etc., as the Government may deem proper, and that wherever hardship may be felt under present conditions the policy of the said Resolution may be carried out with reference to existing Forest areas and the existing Reserve Boundaries so adjusted as to leave a sufficiently large margin to facilitate the enjoyment by the agricultural population of their communal rights without molestation and annoyance by the minor obscibilities of the Department.

subordinates of the Department.

Risolation XIV. That this Congress being of opinion that the Government of India Notification of 25th June 1891, in the Foreign Department, gagging the Press in territories under British administration in Native States is retrograde, arbitrary, and mischievous in its nature, and opposed to sound statesmanship and to the liberty of the people most respectfully enters its emphatic protest against the same and entreats its cancellation without delay.

Resolution. XX. That this Congress views with apprehension the arbitrary policy of the Government with regard to the imposition of water-cess, introducing as it does a disturbing element in taxation, and suggests that the imposition of the said cess be regulated by certain defined principles affording security to the rights of landowners and of persons investing money on land.

owners and of persons investing money on land.

Resolution XXVI. That this Congress is of opinion that the time has come when the constitution of the Congress should be settled, and rules and regulations laid down as to the number of delegates, their qualifications, the localities for assemblage, and the like, and in this view the Congress requests the Standing Congress Committee to draw up draft rules and circulate them among the different Standing Congress Committees for their report; these reports, together with the draft rules and the report thereon, be laid before the next Congress for its consideration.

THE HISTORY OF A SCAR.

THE HISTORY OF A SOAR.

On the back of my right hand—just about the middle of it—there is a small scar, half as big as a threepenny piece, perhaps. You would never notice it unless I showed it to you, and even then you would have to look sharp to see it. But it's there, all the same, and will be untill the hand is returned to dust. It dates back forty years, that scar does. Going home from school one day another boy and I quarrelled and fought. Strange to say, it wasn't about a girl either. Anyway, he drew his jack kinfe and stabbed me in the back of the right hand. The wound I remember, was slow to heal. It was sore and inflamed for months, and hardly a day but something hit it, or I knocked it against something, and so made it worse. My whole awailable body appeared to be concentrated in that sore. You know how such things are. They are like boils, and if there is any comfortable spot to have a boil there are loads of money waiting for the fellow who discovers it.

LATELY we have received two letters, both contaming an indentical expression, namely.

LATELY we have received two letters, both containing an indentical expression, namely, this: "Everything seemed a trouble to me." Now, none of us are so tough as to be proof against trouble, but when everything is a trouble to a man the very heart inside of him must be tender and touchy. And, Mercy knows, it is so often enough. Grief will do it, worry will do so often enough. Grief will do it, worry will do it, and illness too.

ONE of these letters, or at least the writer of it, goes on to say:—"It was in March, 1880, that I felt tired and languid, and without my usual energy. Before that I had always been strong and active. Now I was low-spirited and melancholy; everything seemed a trouble to me. At first I had a bad taste in the mouth a poor appetite, and all I ate gave me great pain in the chest and sides. Even fish and poultry gave me as much distress as more solid food. I was constantly spitting up a sour, acid fluid which caused a miserable feeling in my throat and mouth.

throat and mouth.
"After I had been for some time in this "After I had been for some time in this condition I was attacked with gout in my hands and feet, which confined me to the house now and again for a week or two at a time. The parts became inflamed and swollen, and gave me excruciating agony. I could not bear anything to touch them. For four years I was subject to these attacks. The doctor who attended me was able to ease me temporarily, attended the was able to ease the chapsarily, but I was soon as bad as ever.

"In the middle of April, 1888, I read that cases like mine had been cured by Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup, and I thought I would try it. I hadn't taken more than half a bottle when I felt relieved. This encouraged me to try it. I hadne taken more than half a bottle when I felt releved. This encouraged me to keep on with the Sying, and in a comparatively short time all symptoms of the disease left me. Since then I have enjoyed excellent health, and whenever I feel a twinge of my old enemy a dose or two of 'Mother Seigel' some sets me right. Yours truly, (Signed) M. Leanty, 49, Governor Terrace, Grosvenor Park, Cimberwell, London, September 220d 1892."

So much for the facts as Mr. Leahy felt them What was science to offer in explanation of them? This Gout, rheumatism, and biliousness are three complaints arising inductly from an overworked liver or, more properly, from indigestion and dyspepsia. The prisons so engendered may he hidden and unfelt for a long time, and then be suddenly rendered active by mental worry, exposure, over eating, wrong eating, or any of a dozen other causes. The kindneys fail (following the stomach and liver), the acid poison remains in the blood and sets up influential in the joints, and the retained flinds produce dropsy. All sorts of disturbances are apt to go with this condition of things, every one less a disease in itself than a symptom of the one cause—midigestion and dyspepsia. The heart and lungs are often attacked in sympathy. Cine the toipid digestion, and an all-round improvement at once succeeds. To do this is in the power of Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup—as perhaps, in the Dwer of nothing else.

Seigel's Curative Syrup—as perhaps, in the power of nothing else.

It was most unfortunate that this gentleman suffered for eight years; and no wonder, meanwhile, that his mind was sensitive as his body to every approach. Knowing what he now knows he feels safe. There is no darkness but ignorance, and the German Nurse shows "The Way Out."

J. M. P.

London, October, 1892.

Municipal Elections to be held on 16th March 1895.

Notice is given that applications for correction of the published list of votes under Section 21 of the Calcutta municipal Consolidation Act, 1888, will be received in the Municipal Office up to 5 P. M. on the 17th January 1895, after which date no applications or observe and the second Jimary 1895, after which date no applications or objections will be received.

Applications will be received up to the same date from all persons qualified under clauses (a) or (e) of Section 8 of the above Act, who are desirous of having their names added to the list of voters.

Applicants for registration as voters under clauses (a), (b), (c) and (d) of Section 8 should submit with their applications their receipted rate-bills for the 3rd quarter 1894-95 and licenses for professions, trades, or callings for the year 1894-95.

Applicants under clause (e) of Section 8 should submit duly paid rate-bills and licenses for the year 1893-94.

Applicants who are entitled to vote in more than one ward, should make separate applications in respect of each ward.

tions in respect of each ward.

W. R. MACDONALD,

Secretary to the Corporation. 2nd January 1895.

THE WORKS OF DR JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE.

Commentaries on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, Marriage, Adoption, Wills &c.* Price "No student or practitioner should 16 o be without a copy of this GREAT

Work.
(Sd.) Nana Bhai Haridas." Work.

(Sd.) Nana Bhai Haridas."

2. Bengali translation of the Dyabhaga and the Mitakshara.† Price ... 2 8

3. Bengali Translation of the Dutakachandrika.† Price ... 0 8

4. The Evidence Act with notes in Bengali.† Price ... 1 0

5. The Civil Procedure Code with notes in Bengali.† Price ... 4 0

6. Principles of Zemindari Management in di Book-keeping in Bengali 0 10

7. First Lessons in English for Bengali bov. Price 8. 0 0 4

8. Bharat Sasan Pranali. ... 0 8

1. THE PRISS.

The Philosophy of Religion from the point of view of Common Sense. Price Rs. 5

CONTENTS

1. Historical Analysis of the evolution of

I. Historical Analysis of the evolution of religious systems
2. Definition of the term "religion,"
3. The problems of the philosophy of religion and their solutions, old and new,
(a) Way do Haidus believe in ten Avatus or meanations including in the series three that are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a tortoes, and a born.

appeared in the shape of a fish, a torture, and a born.

(b) Why is it that all ancient systems recommend the surifice of animals, and the binning of ghee or inceise &c &c &c.

The weapons offensive and defensive of religious teachers.

The power of fine words.

The art of becoming a prophet

The cumulative effect of hardswearing for ages.

for ages.

Specimens of Puranised history Brahminical and Christian priesteraft compared. The artificial miseries of men caused by religion.

14

religion.
Tyranny and taxation of religion.
The grout man's adversity is the sharp man's opportunity.
Swindling as a fine art.
New Superstitions that may be suggested for the benefit of the priests.

The great prophets of the world and their doings.

Probable origin of the Savia religion. 15

Tautric mysticism and abominations,

* To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink &

Co., only.

† To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink &
Co., and also at the Suradhan Agency,
No. 11, Raja Nabakiishna's Street, Calcutta.

THE PIONEER DIAMOND RING

Whe guarantee these Rings for appearance, &c., to a genuine Diamond. Ring, costing. 50 times the money charged for these. The Crystal is of medium size, and of such hordness that it will stand the ordinary test of a Diamond. It may be worn by either a Lidy or Gentleman, however fistenous in such matters, without fear of detection. The mount is beautifully furshed and a perfect substitute for bright. 18 Canat Gold. Carat Gold

Canal Gold

PRICE RS. 6-8. (Port free.)

Terms. Cash or V. P. Post.

Extracts:—A Lady from Bell by writer:—
"My friends here saw the Rong which you sent me and like it." A Merchant from futroom says:—"It is pretty and of good workmanship."

ADDERSS—THE AGENT

ADDRESS-THE AGENT,

ALEXANDER Mac GREGOR & CO. DELHI, (Punjan)

NOTF:--For any further information, &c, send a Reply Post Card or a Stamped Cover

CAUTION!

Ir having been notified to the Proprietor of Beecham's Pills that certain unscrupulous dealers have recently been perpetrating a fraud in connection with the 4 anna, box lately introduced, the public are requested to see that the retail prices, (viz., 4 annas, 8 annas or 91/2d, 12 annas or 15 11/2d. and Rs, 2 or 25 od) are clearly printed on the lid of each box. The fraud to which attention is drawn is that in the case of the two smaller sizes, the prices have been obliterited and the boxes represented to be of higher value than they really

Sole Wholesale Agents for India, Burma and Ceylon.

G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3, NEW CHINA BAZAAR STREET. CALCUTEA.

NOTICE-Should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining supplies, the Agents will be happy to forward sample boxes at above Rupee rates plus V. P. P. Charges and Postages.

> In Pamphlet, Price 4 annas or 6 copies for a Rupee.

A Cheap Reserve for the Army.

By Capt. ANDREW HEARSEY,

Late Her Majesty's Service. Apply to Reis & Rayyet Office, Calcutta.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF

14 7	MEMORIAL FUND.
		Rs.
1.	His Highness The Maharaja of Dur bhanga KCIE, His Highness The Maharaja of Vizi	- 2,000
2	His flighness The Maharaja of Vizi	1,000
3	His Highness the Newab Behadur o	f Soc
4.	Moorshedabad, Amirul Omra, GCIF His Highness the Nawab of Junagadh	,
5.	His Highness the Maharaja Bahadu	. 500
	of Cooch Behar, G.C.I.E. Nawab Bahadin Su K Abdul Gham	. 500
6.	KCS.I., and Newth Bahadur K Ashan Ulla, CIE.
7	Khan Bahadar BharBahauddin, C.F.,
8.	Vizier to the Nawab of Junagadh Maharaga Bahadur Sir Joinndra Mo-	_300
	han Tagore, K C.S I
9. 10	Babu Jodu Lai Mülick Messrs Mackinnon Muckenzie & Co.	200
11.	Proce Wida Kidr Syed Hosem Ali Muza Bahadur	150
12	Shuj ud Muik Asafad Dowlat Nawab Syed Zamui Abdm Khan B diadut	•
	Feraz Jung	140
13. 14.	Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee, CSI The Honble Mr. Justice Chandra	100
	Madhab Ghose Prince Muza Sir Jahan Kadar Baha-	100
15.	dur, K.C I.E.,	100
16. 17.	The Hon'ble P. Playfair Hap Kasun Auff	100
18.	Lieutenant General the Hon'ble Sir
19.	Babu Jai Gobind Law	100
20.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Guru Das Bunerjee	50
21. 23.	The Honble Dr Rash Rehary Chose	51 50
23.	Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt Shahibzada Mahomed Obidulla Khan
24.	Bahadur, CS L Mahar gkumar Benoya Krishna	50 50
25	The Houble Mr Justice E. J. Treve-	50
26.	The Houble Moulvi Abdul Jabbar
27.	The Right Rev the Lord Bishop of
88.	Calcutta	; o 50
29. 39.	Mahar ga Durga Charan Law, C.I.F., Nawab Jahandar Meerza Nawab Huzoor Muza	50
31.	The Hou'ble W. C. Bonnerjee	50
32. 33.	Sved Nurul Huda, Esq., CS, Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan	50 50
34. 35	I. G. Ritchie, Esq. C.S.,	50 50
36. 37.	I. G. Ritchie, Esq. C.S., F. J. Rowe, Esq Monter Mahmudeen Nabi Khan Ba-	32
	hadur,	25
38. 39.	Kumar Dinendia Natan Roy Babu Pashupatty Nath Bose	25 25
40.	Kumar Doubit Chandra Roy	25 25
42.	Babu Guru Prosonno Ghose Rija Sir Sontindia Mohan Tagore,	25
43	CLE	25
44. 45.	Raya Joundea Nath Chowdhury Babu Rama Nath Ghose	25 25 25
46. 47.	R qa Sieenath Roy Rai Sew Bux Bogla Bahadar	25 25
4 ⁸ .	R. Belchambers, E.q Rija Surja Kanta Acharjee Chowdhui	25
4 9 5 0	Rai Budreedas Mukim Bahadur	25
51 52.	Babu Gopal Lal Sed Moulvi Sya l Abdus Salam	25 25 25
53. 54.	A T. Apcar, Esq	25
55.	Lord William Beresford, KCIE.,	25
56. 57 58.	Munshi Gholam Risool F. H. Skime, Esq. C.S., The Honblie H. J.S Cotton C.S., C.S.I.	25 25
58. 59.	Prince Althomed Bakhton Shab	20 20
60. 61.	Baboo Surendia Nath Pal Chowdry	20
62	Mouly: In old Ah Ra Shib Chinder Nundy Bahadat	20 20
63 64.	D Panioty, Esq	20
65. 60	D. Panioty, Esq	20
67.	Mount Syed Ashruffaddin Ahmed,
68.	T. Inglis, Esq. C.S	17 1
69 70	A. H. Giles, Esq F. F. H. indiey, Esq., C.S The Hon'ble Moulvi Sirajul Islam Khan	16 16
71.	The Hon'ble Moulvi Sirajul Islam	16
72	Moulvi Serajuddeen	15

73.	Abul Hasan, Esq.,	•••	15
74.	H. A. D. Phimps, Esq., CS.		10
75.	Baboo Kiran Chunder Roy	•••	10
7)	E. N. Boker, Esq		10
77.	Baboo Doyal Chand Bose	•••	10
78.	" Madan Mohan Bose	•••	10
79.	"Kanar Lal Khan		10
80.	Moulvi Synd Akram Hossain	•••	10
81.	Moulvi Aziz Ahmud		10
82	Ra Kanyelal Dey Bahadoor	•••	10
83.	H. Holmwood, Esq	•••	10
84	Baba Hurry Mohan Chunder	•••	10
85	Baboo Chakkantal Roy		5
86.	" Sarodapiasad Ghose	•••	5
Si	ibscriptions will be thankfully	received	Ьÿ
the !	Honorary Joint Secretaries,
Kai	RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI	BAHADU	JR,
	4 Brutish Indian Street	Calcutta

4, Brutsh Indian Street, Calcutta, and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMAN, ESQ., Battister-atLaw, 16, Taltolla, Calcutta.

Rs. 6 "UNDAUNTED" WATCH.

Rs. 6 "UNDAUNTED" WATCH.
Guaranteed three Years.
Strong, accurate, pretty, smill, open-faced, nicker silverin, keyress, short winding, patent, "UNDAUNTED" watch, with band setting mechanism, secondhand for Doctors, onamental bold dial, for Rs. 6 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' guarantee. Warranted to stand the roughest use. Runs more than 28 hours with one winding. Will List a life time. Easily repairable. Others seel at double our lates. One one winding. Will last a life time. Easily repairable. Others seil at double our rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Juo. Dickson of Haputal Railway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps splendid time and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jetks, x Dr. H. Moore of Royal Artillery from Poonamallee says:—I sold it for Rs. 16. x Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Regi. from Dumdum says:—I have sold it for from Dundum says: -1 have sold it for Rs. 20. x Mr. T. B. Scott of Patna Opium De-partment says: --The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time.

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty Canadian gold chain Re. 1-8-0, Fashionable Canadian Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, at Re 1-8-o. Mr. diamonds, Rubies, Emeradds, at Re 1.8-o. Mr. G. Smith, Silt Inspector from Saukutta, says: "A German valued the diamond ring at Rs. 50 and ruby at Rs. 30." Key winding, Government stamped, solid silver hunting case, Royal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee, for Rs. 13. Pte. G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light Infantry from Purandhar says:—For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Sergeant for Rs. 28 x. Pte. II. C. Bishop of I. F. L. Regt. from K unptee says: A Couporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch, Gentlemen's open faced, keyless real solid gold worth Rs. 30; ladies' Rs. 24; both with extras and guaranteed for 3 years. Mind they are guaranteed to be of real soil gold. No agents kept, all goods sent only by us from Bombay per V. P.

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO.

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO. BOMBAY

CATARRH,

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness.
A NIW HOMI IRLAIMENT
Subsects are not generally aware that these

Sufferes are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a firet, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these dicties sing diseases are tapidly and permanently cured by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A primpile explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½1 stamp by A HOTRON FO, Can data Scientific American

GENUINE HOMGEOPATHY. A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S.

Homwopathu. Practitioner,
May be consulted by letter or personally daily at his residence, 30-1, Coloutolah Street,

OFFICE: 1, Uckoor Dutts Lane, Wellington

"IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF."

All who suffer find sure reisef from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering; while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most chronic form

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the

Are you subject to HEADACHES and the tottures of TOOTHACHE? A single application will relieve you.

In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommendated.

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the result speak for itself,

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Physcians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of nomes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar preparation has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throughout the world.

Agents in Calcutta: Smith Stanistreet & Co. R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Batngate & Co. Limited.

REIS & RAYYET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT)

WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

Review of Politics, Literature and Society

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION. If paid in advance, ...

... ks 12

\ early

Hau-yearry

Quarterry				4
Monthiy	•••		k-	1.8
ongle or sar	nole Copy	•••	Ans.	0.8
	If not paid in ad	vance.
Yearly		•••	Rs.	18
Half-yeuly		•••	,,	10-8
Quarterly		•••		Ú-0
Monthly		•••	1)	2-4
Single or said			A s.
No addun	That charge for t	20151240	ar n

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines of 12 inches to the column) are changed by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insertion. The lowest change for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5.

Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphlets (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayet." Advertisements (three columns to the page

Street, Calcutta.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

AND

REVIEW SOCIETY OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 658.

OLD BALLAD POETRY.

A SONG OF THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM. z.

The noble peer, while he lived here, The Duke of Buckingham, Who flourished in King Edward's reign, The fourth king of that name.

Which did in service keep a man Of mean and low degree, Which of a child he had brought up From base to dignity.

He gave him lands and living good, Of which he was no heir, And married him to a gallant dame, As rich as she was fair.

But, out alas ! it came to pass, And so the strife began, The master he constrained was To seek succour at the man.

5.

King Richard the third he got the sword, Foreswore himself t' be King, Murdered two princes in their beds, The which much strife did bring.

6.

This noble Duke when he saw that. That vile and wicked deed, Against this tyrant raised an host Of arméd men with speed.

7.

But when the king that he heard tell, A mighty host he sent, Against the Duke of Buckingham, His purpose to prevent.

When the Duke's soldiers they heard tell, Fear pierced their hearts each one, That all his soldiers fled by night, And left the Duke alone.

Then in extreme need he took his steed, And posted night and day, And to his own man Banister These words to him did say;

10.

"O Banister, sweet Banister, Pity my cause," quoth he, "And hide me from my cruel foes, Which thus pursueth me."

"O you are welcome, my master dear, You are heartily welcome here, And, like a friend, I will you keep, Although it cost me dear.'

His velvet suit then he put off, His chain of gold likewise, An old leathern coat he put upon. To blind the people's eyes;

13.

Saying, " Banister; O Banister, O Banister, be true." "Charst's curse then light on me and mine If I ever be false to you."

14.

An old felt hat he put on his head Old leathern slops also, A hedging bill upon his neck, And so to the wood did go.

This worthy Duke went to the wo As did not him beseem. And so in sorrow spent his day As he some drudge had been.

16.

A proclamation there was made, Whosoever then could bring News of the Duke of Buckingham Unto Richard the King, 17.

A thousand pounds should be his fee, Of gold and money bright, And be preferred by his Grace, And made a worthy knight.

18.

When Banister that he heard tell. He to the court did hie, And he betray'd his master dear For lucre of that fee.

19.

King Richard then he, sent in haste A host with arrows good, All for to take this worthy Duke A-wandering in the wood.

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, it possible, as the safest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

20.

And when the Duke that he saw that, He wrung his hands with woe; "O false Banister," quoth he, "Why hast thou served me so?"

21

"O Banister, false Banister,
Woe worth thy feignéd heart!
Thou hast betray'd thy master dear,
And play'd a traitor's part."

22.

This noble Duke was to London brought, In his great fear and dread, And straight in prison he was cast, And judged to lose his head.

23.

Then Banister went to the court,
Hoping those gifts to have,
And straight in prison he was cast,
And bard his life to save.

24.

No friend he found in his distress, Nor yet no friend at need, But every man reviléd him For his most hateful deed.

25.

His eldest son stark mad did run, His daughter drownéd was Within a shallow running stream, Which did all danger pass.

26.

According to his own desire
God's curse did on him fall
That all his wealth consuméd quite,
And so was wasted all.

27.

Young Banister liv'd long in shame, But at the length did die; And so our Lord he show'd his wrath For his father's villainy.

28.

Good Lord preserve our noble King, And send him long proceed, And God send every distress'd man A better friend at need.

WEEKLYANA.

THE Sinking Mountain—Dshebel Naibo—an isolated Algerian peak, has sunk to 800 feet and is sinking still. At the time of the Cæsars, it measured 1,400 feet. Close to the mountain is a large clear lake called Fezzara where once stood a large city.

BUT for the white foxes that make special game of the rodents, the mountains of Sweden, Norway and Lapland would be denuded of their vegetation by the Norway rats.

A GERMAN statistician has found that, in Europe, Greece stands in the first rank in the number of centenarians. This long age he attributes to the climate of that country.

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all kinds. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Street, Westminster, London, S. W.

A RUSSIAN physician is engaged in ascertaining the calculating power of animals. He has found that the crow can count up to ten, and is superior in that line to certain Polymesian tribes who cannot go beyond five or six. Here is a good field for Mr. Frusher Howard. He would do better there than preach his "Art of Reckoning" in the maidan opposite the corner of Government Place, Calcutta.

THERE was, on the IIth, a heavy landslip in Kulu, due to the snow on the hills behind the Guma Salt Mines. A house was crushed, three persons killed, five hurt and two thousand sheep overwhelmed in a fold.

THE Punjab Trades Association having petitioned Government against the levy of octroi by the Simla Municipality on articles weighted with the new customs duties, has been informed in reply that the whole question of octroi in its relation to customs import duties is under consideration.

WE have in the port an Italian man-of-war Cristoforo Colombo, commander Captain F. Gavotto. She arrived in the Hooghly on Sunday. Among the officers is the D uke of Savoy, or Duc d'Abruzzi, a nephew of the King of Italy.

THE two men who were tried at Pegu for the murder of Mr. Tucker, the District Superintendent of Police, have been convicted. One is ordered to be hanged and the other imprisoned for life. An appeal has been preferred.

THE District Judge of Alipore, Mr. Beighton, has set aside the conviction of Atul Behary Shome by the Sealda Deputy Magistrate, Baboo Shyamadhub Roy. Shome, an ex-student of the Campbell Medical School, was tried for having obtained an admission into the school on a false certificate and sentenced to two months' rigorous imprisonment. The High Courts holding different views, and the Bengal High Court being of opinion that such acts did not constitute any offence under the Indian Penal Code, the Alipore District Judge felt himself bound to quash the conviction and set aside the sentence.

ON Monday, the Englishman reported :-

"Life' for a brinjal.—At the Alipur Sessions Court on Saturday a Bengali, with many previous convictions, was sentenced to transportation for life for the theft of a single brinjal."

Next day an explanation from the sentencing Judge appeared in the same paper. Mr. J. Knox Wight, the Additional Sessions Judge wrote:--- wrote:—

"In the issue of the Englishman of the 14th, a paragraph appeared to the effect that a man had been transported for life on account of the theft of one brinjal. The real ficts are these: The accused Kedar Kola had a number of previous convictions for theft and house-breaking by night against him. He had spent 12½ years out of 16 in jail. In consequence of the frequency of thefts in his village, the villagers agreed to set up and watch. One night he was caught stealing brinjals. He was arrested as he was leaving the garden with a basketful of brinjals. He was ataken to a homestead, but managed to escape. The villagers saw nothing of him again until they met him some weeks later in a Criminal Court, where he was being tried for another offence, viz., that of housebreaking by night and cattle lifting. The man was committed to the Sessions under both charges, that of theft of brinjal on one date, and of house-breaking by night and cattle theft on another date. In the former case the jury unanimously found him guilty. Sentence was deferred. In the second case the jury (a different one) also unanimously found him guilty. As it was clear that there was no probability of curing the man, and that he was a hardened offender, he was ordered to be transported for life."

We do not understand Mr. Wight when he says that the wight who

We do not understand Mr. Wight when he says that the wight who received from him the last sentence of transportation for life, "had spent 12% years out of 16 in jail." Was it that Kola was altogether sentenced to 16 years for repeated offences and was confined only or 12%, the balance of the term being remitted? Or that he is 16 years of age, one-fourth of which only he spent in innocence? We shall not suppose that Kola was convicted first when he was not yet four years of age, for the law exempts a child under seven from punishment. Taking it then that his conviction began legally, that is when he had obtained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequence of his conduct, the Judge must have been sick of him for his continued crimes, and was determined that he should be incapacitated from committing any more offence. Not permitted to main the limbs, and unable to send the culprit away from the world, he orders him out of the 24-Pergunnas, or to lose his freedom for another 20 years.

NOTES & LEADERETTES,

OUR OWN NEWS,

&

THE WEER'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

FRANCE has just passed through a crisis. The Cabinet resigned after being defeated in the Chamber of Deputies in a debate initiated by the Socialist members in connection with the State guarantees given for railways. The Chamber was asked to express its dissatisfaction with the Government for leaving the question to the Council of State, which decided that the interest was to be guaranteed in perpetuity and the motion was carried against the Ministerial protests by a majority of twenty-two votes. That resignation was followed by that of the President of the R-public himself. A letter from M Casimir Perier was read in the Chamber on the 16th explaining his reasons for the step taken. He states that it is due to the last campaign of calumny and insult directed against the Army, the Magistracy and other heads of the State. He cannot see the best servants of the country insulted, nor continue to bear the onus of office without power. A scene of great excitement thereupon ensued in the Chamber. Many cites were raised of " Vive le Roi l"

Owing to the state of affuirs in Paris, the Duc d' Orleans left Stowe House for Dover. A manifesto to the French nation issued by him on the 17th states that recent events prove that the Republic smerely provisional, and that the hour is near when the country will wish to revert to that form of Government which has been the glory of the past, and will prove a guarantee of the future. The Duc D'Orleans declares that when the country calls he will be teady a fulfill the task, and will give his life-blood for France, which his air estors made great and respected.

The same day the National Assembly elected M. Felix Faure, Minister of Marine, President of the Republic. He is of the Moderate Party. The Socialists had protested against the election. The moderate section of the French press generally expresses satisfaction while the Radicals are furious.

THE Czar is all Peace—armed Peace. In a rescript to the Minister of War, the Emperor felicitates him on the progress made by the Russian army, which is the surest pledge of the maintenance of peace. It concludes by affirming the Czu's love of peace.

THE Japanese troops are steadily advancing against Chinchow, and the Chinese are slowly retiring to the Great Wall, where the final stand against the invaders is expected to be made. The cold is very severe, and deep snow delays operations. The Chinese who have arrived from Manchuria bring ghastly reports from that province. In several places they say the entire population has perished, and groups of frozen corpses are seen everywhere. The country is completely denided of its provisions, hindering the movements of troops on both sides Further telegrams giving particulars of the capture of Huphong by the Japanese, state that at least two hundred Chinese soldiers were killed, while the number wounded is unknown. The loss on the Japanese side is not stated. Admiral Fremantle's first has gone to Japan, with the object, it is presumed, of following the Japanese movements. H. M. Cruiser Pylades, which was proceeding to Australia, has been ordered to join the China squadron.

ISMAIL Pasha is seriously ill with internal cancer. The doctors say that death is likely to occur at any moment, and advise his immediate removal to Egypt.

THE French have bombarded a Hova fort near Tamatave, the gartison retiring with heavy loss. 'A French cruiser has started for the west coast of Madagascar to occupy, it is stated, Majunga.

THE Times publishes a telegram from Rome stating that the undisguised efforts of the French to instigate the Emperor of Abyssinia against the Italians is causing irritation at Rome, and obliging the talians to despatch reinforcements to Marsowah.

MAJOR Baratieri surprised the thousand Abyssinians under the command of Mangascia, at Contit, and after a severe fight the latter retired with heavy loss, while that on the Italian side was slight.

THE King of Ashantee has declined to entertain any suggestion from the Governor of the Gold Coast Colony for the appointment of a British Resident at Coomassie, and has assumed such a defiant attitude that the necessity of another expedition is considered probable.

Major Urssmann has started for the Cameroons.

HEAVY snowstorms and severe gales have occurred throughout Great Bottom causing serious damage and loss of life. Many shipping disasters have taken place. The storms have been followed by a rapid thaw and flods are apprehended. Similar boisterous weather has been experienced on the Continent, where much destruction is also reported.

THERE was an unusual sur in the fashionable quarter, Rue Monceau, Paris, caused by the bursting of a bomb at midnight on Jan. 13. The Concierge of the house which the perpetrator of the outrage had selected to wreck, saw a bomb on a windowsill, and immediately threw it into the middle of the street, when a tremendous explosion followed, doing much damage to the houses in the neighbourhood. Nobody was injured. An English biscuit box filled with bullets was used as the bomb.

THE death is announced of Professor Seeley.

IT is announced that Lord Brassey has been appointed Governor Victoria in succession to Earl Hopetoun.

In a speech made at Galsgow, Lord Bussey he said that it was the duty of the Government of India to prepare the Natives for taking a larger share in the higher administration of their country, and that the removal of Russian bugbear should result in a reduction omilitary expenditure in India.

THE Times' special article on Indian Affairs, reviewing articles published by the Indian newspapers on the question of the duties on cotton goods, says that it is a struggle which is inevitable between a powerful and justly influential interest in England and what the Indian peoples consider their rights

Mr. Balfour, addressing a meeting at Manchesther, said that he believed that the Minister honestly tried to safeguard the principle of free trade with regard to the imposition of the cotton duties and to execute an ungrateful task in the least injurious manner possible. Mr. Balfour also declared that a reform of the currency was the only real solution of the exchange difficulty.

THE condition of Lord Randolph Churchill has assumed the gravest nature, accompanied by a failing of the heart's action.

THE Newmarket Magistrates have, on the application of representatives of the Anti-Gambling League, granted a summons against the Stewards of the Jockey Club. The Stewards are the Earl of March, the Earl of Ellesmere, and Lord Rendlesham.

SINCE the arrival of the Viceroy, he has been assailed with applications from persons, good, but and indifferent, for private interviews. Many have been the interviews—both private and public. The last official reception was that of the Micharaja of Independent Tepperah on Tuesday.

LADY Elgin paid a visit to the Dofferin Hospital. She was accompanied by Dr. Franklin, Surgeon to the Viceroy, and conducted by the Lady Superintendent round the several wards.

THE Maharaja of Kapurthala left Calcutta for Rangoon where he arrived on the 12th. After a stay there, of four days, with the Financial Commissioner, he is on his way back to Calcutta.

THE winter this year is so mild that it can hardly be called cold season, and we had had seasonal weather only for a week. This abnormality is the cause of sickness prevailing in the capital. There were during the week ending in 5th January, 346 deaths against 318 and 281 in the two preceeding weeks, or 35 more than in the corresponding week of last year. In the three weeks, deaths from cholera numbered 38. Small-pox carried away as many in two weeks. The general death rate of the week was 38.7 per mille per annum against 29'7, the mean of the last five years. On account of the prevalence of small-pox, the Health Officer, as a preventive measure, recommends the heads of families "to see, without delay, to the vaccination of every member of the household who has not previously had the disease." "All residents on the infected premises who are above seven years of age and who have been vaccinated in infancy and all children below that age who do not bear good vaccination marks should be vaccinated." "This," Dr. Simpson thinks, if done properly and in time, will undoubtedly protect from the disease." At the municipal vaccination stations, vaccination or re-vaccination is performed free of charge. The operation may be done at private houses on payment of a fee of 4 annas for each vaccination and charges for the lymph child not exceeding Rs. 2, or, for the calf an additional 4 annas per head. Information of every small-pox case is to be given him, that measures may be taken to prevent, as far as possible, the spread of the disease.

THE two last appointments to the Bengal Legislative Council are out of the ordinary course. For the first time, a Divisional Commissioner has been gazetted a member. But Collectors being eligible, Commissioners need not cause any surprise. Mr. Romesh Chunder Dutt is the first Bengali who has risen to be a Commissioner of a Division. He is besides an author. Khan Bahadur Mahomed Yusoof had at first declined the honour. Awaiting a membership of the other Council or a Judgeship of the High Court, he can not have any zest for the appointment thrust upon him and which he had already held.

THE Gangasagore Meia passed off well. Twenty to twenty-five thousand persons had congregated. The arrangements were so far satisfactory that there were only three deaths from cholera and one from another cause, and only four criminal cases, three of which were disposed off summarily. A death by drowning is also reported. Some three or four Nepalese lived in a jungle close by. A channel or creek divided their home from the mela land. Whenever they had occasion to come to the mela, they swam over to it. In crossing the stream thus during the tide, one of these who had about him three hundred rupees, was carried away by the current and found no more.

Three temporary jetties were erected for easy landing. Enclosed places were set apart as latimes. But the convenience which chiefly accounted for immunity from disease and death was the storage of river water for drinking. There were present the District Engineer. the District Superintendent of Police, and Mr. Temple, the Joint-Magistrate of Alipore. The Sub-divisional Officer of Diamond Harbour also had pitched his camp there.

THE Inspector-General of Registration, Bengal, has addressed the following printed circular to all District Registrars. It contains no mark of authenticity except perhaps the frank on the cover, and he thinks that his name in leaden types is enough to make the world grow pale :-

trar when inspecting rural offices should scrutinize the account, and note the result in his inspection memorandum.

Extra Mohurrirs should not be entertained by Rural Sub-Registrars unless arreads accommlate, though the required amount of work is exacted from the permanent establishment."

The authority referred to runs thus :--

"No profit is allowed to be made out of this allowance. At rural offices a clerk should not receive less than Rs. 15, or a mohurrir less than Rs. 8 a month."

The tot of the rural sub-registrars is already hard. It is now to be made harder. It is a condition of the appointment of a rural sub-registrar that he must be a pensioner or a man of means; have a masonry building of his own to house the office; out of his own pocket pay the establishment; excepting the registers, index books, printed forms and the machine-made medium paper required for copies under sections 64 and 65 of the Act, must pay for the registration ink and other stationery. Furniture and other requisites he must find. The establishment again must be sufficient to allow no arrears or he will lose the appointment. He is not permitted to accept gratuities under any circumstances or fees of any description not prescribed, and is personally responsible for any fee or gratuity taken by his subordinates. He must not hold any other appointment or engage in any trade or profession or do any other work except as an Honorary Member of Benches of Magistrates, District, Local and Municipal Boards. He is responsible for the safe custody of Government money from the time that he receives it until it is deposited in the treasury. While appearing as a witness before a judicial officer, the rural sub-registrar is not permitted to draw his travelling as a Government servant. He is only entitled to the allowance of a professional witness. For thus slaving to the great British Government in India, the rural Registrar Baboo is remunerated by poor commissions and allowances on graduated scales. Thus :-

For the Commission-

When the number of regisirations does not exceed

	60 111	a month	•••	•••	•••	Ks.	40
Abov	re 60 an	d not excee	ding 80	•••			50
11	80	Do.	125	•••	•••		70
11	125	Do.	170	•••			85
"	170	Do.	200	•••	•••	,,	95
",	200	Do.	250	• • •	•••	"	105
"	250	Do,	300	•••	•••		110
11	300	Do.	350	• • • •	•••	,,	115
,,	350	Do.	400	•••	•••	,,	125
"	400	Do.	450	•••	•••		135
12	450	Do,	500	•••	• • • •	,,	145
17	500	Do.	•••	•••	•••	1)	150
and no m	iore.

For the Allowance-

When the number of documents does not ... Rs. 10 exceed ... Above 100, not exceeding 400 ... , 5 per 50 docts, ... , 11 per 100 docts ,, 400 ,, 500 Do. 500

,, 500 ,, 12 per 500 docts, with full allowance for fractions of 50 or 100 completes during the

The Registration is a developing Department. Notwithstanding, the rural sub-registrars must drag a miserable existence. With opportunities and temptation for corruption, they are circulated to turn out good honest work on pality pittances. The original idea that pensioned officers of Government who could afford to do the work willingly and satisfactorily on nominal renumeration no longer holds. It was a visionary idea. Its impracticability was soon found out. There are now more offices than pensioners, and the appointment is now a patronage of the Bengal Secretariat. With the expansion of offices, has developed corruption which has invaded quarters where least looked for. While therefore better temuneration might be expected, is issued an order to make the little allowance less. We are at the same time not sure that the new order passed by the Inspector-General is according to the rule quoted. It prohibits any profit. Government equally with the tural sub-registrar is excluded from sharing in it. The intention of the rule evidently is that the allowance must be expended in maintaining a sufficient and qualified staff and well-paid establishment. It is for the first time we learn that peous do not form part of an office establishment.

But why this auxiety for economy by furthering starving the famishing? There is no need for it, if the receipts of the Department are considered. The offices have spendily increased from 301 in 1887-88 to 346 in 1892-93, at the rate of 3 in the first three years and more than 10 in the second three. The surplus receipts over expenditure have also gone up. In the same six years, they were respectively,

SIR,-I have the honour to point out that the existing orders containof the Registration Manual that no profit is to be made by Rural Sub-Registrates out of their establishment allowance, have not been carried out uniformly. In some cases the salary of a peon and other unauthorized charges have wroughy been debited to the establishments. lishment allowance.

Henceforth, a correct account of the same received for estab-2. Hencetorin, a correct account of the same received for establishment allowance during the official year should be kept month by month by each Rural Registrar, the amount received and the pay disbussed to the different members of the establishment being entered in full in the cash-book. At the end of the year if any savings are left, they should be credited to Government. The Special Sub-Regis.

88 to 346 in 1892-93, at the rate of $\frac{1}{2}$ in the first three years and members of the establishment being entered have also gone up. In the sauke six years, they were respectively they should be credited to Government. The Special Sub-Regis.

REIS & RAITIET

Saturday, January 19, 1805

A NEW TREATY WITH NEPAL.

" Or one thing you may be sure, the British Government does not forget those who have deserved well at its hands." Even this is what Lord Lansdowne uttered, while speaking at Quetta in October 1889. As a declaration of British policy, nothing could be nobler. The history of that policy in India affords numerous examples of claims to Britain's gratitude freely admitted in words and expressed in deeds. Unfortunately, however, for the fair fame of England in the East, with the extension of Empire and the non-existence of any power within India itself capable of coping with it, the traditions of British rule have come to be fairly forgotten. Individual administrators may now and then seek to frame their policy according to those traditions, but the jingo spirit has been too much abroad to permit a continuous maintenance of righteous relations. Writing to the Secret Committee of the East India Company on the 30th of May 1858, Lord Canning said,—"I had the satisfaction of offering to the Maharajah Jung Bahadur, in full Durbar, my cordial thanks for the aid which the Government of India had received from him and from his brave soldiers, and my assurance that the triendly conduct of his Government and the exertions and successes of his troops, would be held in grateful recollection, not less in England than in India." Those who still remember the dark days of the Sepoy Mutiny can attest to the sense of relief that was

The Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science.

210, Bow-Bazar Street, Calcutta,

(Session 1894-95.)

Lecture by Babu Run Chandra Dutta, F.C.S., on Monday, the 21st January, at 4-15 P. M. Subject: Potassium, &c.

Lecture by Mr. B. Chaudhuri, B. A., B. Sc., on Monday, the 21st lust, at 5 30 P. M. Subject: Biology -Heredity and the theory of

Lecture by Babu Rim Chandra Datta, FCS, on Tuesday, the 22nd I ist., at 4 15 P M. Subject: Iodium and Ammonium

Lecture by Babu Rajendra Nath Chatterjee, M. A., on Wednesday, the 23rd Inst., at 6.30 P. M. Subject: Penumatics. (continued)-Instruments depending upon the properties of Air.

Lecture by B du Syamadas Muknerjee, M. A., on Thursday, the 24th last, at 4 P. M. Subject. Special forms of the equation of the second degree. (command).

PRACFICAL CLASS in Chemistry under Babu Run Chaudra Datta, F.C.S., on Thursday, the 24th Inst., at 4-15 P. M. Suoject :

Lecture by Mr. B. Chaudhuri, B. A., B. Sc., on Thursday, the 24th last, at 5-30 P. M. Subject : Histology-Epithelium, Lecture by Dr. Mahendra Lai Sucar, on Friday, the 25th Inst., a 6 30 P. M. Subject: Propagation of Heat-Conduction, (concluded). Lecture by Mr. B. Chaudhuri, B. Sc., on Saturday, the 26th Last., at 4 P. M. Subject: Practical Biology-Frog (continued).

Lecture by Mr. B. Chaudhuri, B. A., B. Sc., this Saturday, the 26th lust., at 5 P. M. Subject: General Biology-The principles of Biology.

Admission Fee, Rs. 4 for Physics, and Rs. 4 for Chemistry; Rs. 6 for both Physics and Chemistry; Rs. 4 for Physiology; Rs. 4 for General Biology; Rs. 6 for complete course of Physiology and Bulogy. The charge for a single lecture is 2 Annas.

MAHENDRA LAL SIRCAR, M.D.,

- Honorary Secretary.

universally felt by the friends of British rule when news came, after a period of prolonged and intolerable suspense, that Maharajah Jung Bahadur had de-clared himself for the British and that he had actually set out with a strong force of Goorkhas for meeting the insurgents. The circumstances under which that expeditionary contingent, 16,000 strong, in two divisions, left Nepal, however well-known in that country, are little known in India. The historian of the Sepoy War has not referred to them. The story, however, deserves to be told. The King, under the Nepal constitution, has little or no power. In 1857, as now, the Prime Minister was all in all. At first, Lord Canning was unwilling to call down into the plains a strong Goorkha force which, summoned for aiding the British Power, might side with the Mutineers. The spectacle was seen of sepoys that were high caste Brahmans shedding their blood for setting up a Mussulman sovereignty. The whole of Gangetic India was ablaze. The insurrection seemed to present some features of a national struggle. Every vestige of British sovereignty disappeared from large tracts of the country. The inoffensive milestones, so serviceable to the children themselves of the soil, were either defaced or pulled up, for in the eyes of the people they were evidences of English su-premacy. The fears of Lord Canning, therefore, were legitimate. The Resident, Colonel Ramsay, however, knew Maharajah Jung Bahadur better. His voice at last prevailed. The Governor-General wrote to Maharaja Jung Bahadur for assistance which was freely offered. In Nepal there were then two parties. One was for taking advantage of the British distress. It was headed by Dhir Shumshere, the youngest of the brothers of Jung Bahadur, and the father of Bir Shumshere, the present Prime Minister. The other was headed by Jung Bahadur himself. His superior knowledge and statesmanship enabled him to see through the disaster that had overtaken the British and he at once decided to aid them in their hour of need. Whatever his political leanings, the military abilities of Dhir Shumshere pointed him out for the command of the expeditionary force. Accordingly, Maharajah Jung Bahadur placed that force under his lead. After the appointment, however, Dhir Shumshere was reported to have said that he would, on arrival at the scene of action, take his own course as circumstances would point out, Maharajah Jung Bahadur, on hearing it, immediately cancelled the appointment and gave it to Colonel Pahalman Sing, himself a companying as the chief civil and, if need be, military Commissioner for directing the movements. The Commissariat was placed under his fifth brother, the late Maharajah Sir Ranadip Sing. How thoroughly the Goorkha contingent did its work has been told in the pages of history,

With Lord Canning's grateful acknowledgment before us, of that work, in terms that are at once binding upon both England and India and that may be said to be still ringing in the ears of England's friends and foes in Asia, the policy pursued of late towards Nepal by our Government seems to be simply strange. Unless the jingo doctrine of regarding words as uttered for only the purposes of the hour and, therefore, intended to be forgotten when necessary, be accepted, that policy would be perfectly inexplicable. At a time of profound peace, the Prime Minister of that country, who had always been a faithful ally of the British Government, was foully assassinated. The hands that fired

The misplaced confidence of Sir Ranadip Singh made the way clear for him. His inordinate ambition has been gratified. Having murdered the uncle who was more than a father to him, he seized the person of the infant Adhiraj and cunningly spread the report that General Ranbir Jung, the successor elect to the Primiership of Nepal, assisted by his brothers, had done that dastardly deed. With the aid of those troops who had only that morning been placed under him at the Prime Minister's orders, Bir Shumshere next sought the lives of General Ranbir Jung and his brothers. Some of them had, through the merest accident, heard of Sir Ranadip's murder, and thinking it unsafe for themselves to remain in their own palaces, hastened towards the Residency. General Ranbir Jung was the only one among them that went to the regiments under his command. Bir Shumshere had stationed his men along the road for shooting the General without challenge. By avoiding the main road he succeeded in saving his life. One of his faithful attendants, however, who had committed the indiscretion of riding his master's well-known horse, while proceeding in search of his master, was shot dead, having been mistaken for the General himself. To his infinite regret, General Ranbir, when he came to his own regiments and gave the word of command, found the soldiers unwilling to obey. Some of the officers explained the situation. They believed him to have murdered the Prime Minister. That they or their men did not shoot him dead at his first appearance, was entirely due to their unbounded devotion to him. If he wanted to save his life, he should immediately repair to the British Residency. He expostulated with them but found them inexorable. Reluctantly he went to the Residency whither his brothers had preceded him. He was the last of the refugees that entered that place. 1958.
The acting Resident of Nepal was Colonel Berkley. He was absent on a hunting expedition. The Residency Surgeon, Dr. Gimlette, was a man of courage. He did all that was needed for protecting the princes. Colonel Berkley returned the next day. His conduct towards the noble refugees was strange and inexplicable. Instead of showing them that attention which was doubly their due in view of the sudden distress and danger that had overwhelmed them, he sought to get rid of them as soon as possible. He allowed the Residency itself, without a word of remonstrance, to be surrounded by the blood-hounds of Bir Shumshere. Any other man would have known how to assert British dignity at that time. How an Englishman could act as Colonel Berkley acted towards men the fatal shot were those of a beloved nephew. suddenly plunged into such distress, cannot but The time selected for the parricidal deed was will create surprise. The Nepalese have their own the venerable man was engaged in his evening explanation of the matter. Ask any of the redevotions in the bosom of his family. According fugees at Calcutta or Benares, and he will tell ing to the Constitution that Maharajah Sir Jung you what everybody at Katmandu said. British Bahadur had caused to be adopted as a solemn prestige as represented by Colonel Berkley must act of State, Bir Shumshere, as the son of the have fallen too low when that officer felt himself youngest of the seven brothers of whom Sir Jung unable to continue his protection to the refugees till was the eldest, could not expect to succeed to the at least the time by which the army and the citizens Prime Ministership of Nepal till after the demise of the Nepalese capital could be expected to succeed of all those that stood between him and that in discovering the truth about the assassination of Sir Ranadip Sing. If allowed to remain, within less than a week, General Ranbir Jung and his brothers would have succeeded in avenging the murder of their uncle by a judicial and public execution of the usurper.

The rightful and honourable course open to Colonel Berkley was not adopted by him. He was a mute spectator of the foul assassination of England's faithful ally in Sir Ranadip Sing, and of the eldest son and grandson of Sir Jung Bahadur. He saw unmoved the act of usurpation which despoiled the sons of Sir Jung Bahadur of that power which was legitimately theirs under the Constitution of the kingdom. The traditions of the Nepal Residency were forgotten. The splendid services of Sir Jung Bahadur, acknowledged so handsomely by Lord Canning in the name of both England and India, were quietly ignored. The murderer of England's faithful ally was recommended to be recognized as the Prime Minister of Nepal. The sons of Sir Jung Bahadur became refugees in British territory, uncared for to this day by the British Government. The Foreign Office accepted the recommendation of the Resident. Lord Dufferin too yielded to the influence of Anglo-Indian bureaucracy. The princes and chiefs of India found what value was set by Lord Canning's successors on Lord Canning's grateful acknowledgments. British credit was lowered in the eyes of every one. It was no excuse for Lord Dufferin's nonintervention in the affairs of Nepal that the Burmese campaign followed by the annexation of Burma was enough for one Viceroyalty. Sir Ranadip Sing's blood cried for vengeance against those that had shed it. The services of Sir Jung Bahadur demanded interference on behalf of his sons. The Constitution of Nepal, accepted for about half a century, and flagrantly violated by a dastardly assassination, called for an ally's support. Amongst other articles, the treaty with Nepal, of 1801, provides "that the principals and officers of both Governments will cordially consider the friends and enemies of either State to be the friends and enemies of the other; and this consideration must ever remain permanent and in force, from generation to generation." By the murder of the Prime Minister of Nepal, Bir Shumshere had constituted himself an enemy to that state. The British Government, however, setting every solemn obligation to the winds, hastened to take the hand of a murderer and usurper, the hand still red with the blood it had shed. No time was allowed for its washing or drying. No consideration of interest could excuse such conduct. The pleas put forward by the semi-official organs, evidently under the inspiration of the Indian Foreign Office, were of the shallowest. Indeed, they involved an insincerity which produced consequences more injurious than silence, however undignified, would have done. Nepal has China for her Suzerain. What would the celestial

DEAFNESS An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deaf-ness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free.—Attificial Ear-drums and similar appliances entire-ty superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

Empire think if the Viceroy of India were to remonstrate with one who had assassinated a faithful ally of England and stepped into the place in violation of the Constitution drawn up by another faithful ally of hers? The Indian Foreign Office had found out its mistake in respect of the treaties with Nepal China had not sanctioned them. The dread of China, therefore, prevailed. The Indian Government, unable to offend China, felt itself bound to shake hands with the murderer of Sir Ranadip Sing and Juggut Jung and Yudh Protap Jung, and despoiler of the sous of Maharaja Jung Bahadur.

It is unnecessary to combat such a plea. who advanced it could not be supposed to be so simple as not to know that it was contemptible. A plea was wanted, and old Æsop has told us that when one is wanted, one is found. That it is not good is due to those eternal conditions which invest ingratitude, illiberality, and meanness. Having originally failed in its duty, our Government, through successive administrations, as if for accentuating its policy of ingratitude, has thought it fit to cultivate a closer intimacy with Bir Shumshere. Not content with recognising Bir Shumshere, it has honoured him with its complete confidence and gratified him by its cold neglect of General Ranbir Jung and his brothers. There can be no doubt that it is interest,—narrow, immediate, interest of the hour,-that has dictated this policy. The exclusiveness of Nepal is well-known. Maharaja Jung Bahadur resisted all attempts to show the condition of his military strength to British officers. He resolutely objected to the construction of even a good road from British India to Nepal. He cut short all negociations for obtaining from him a sanitarium in Nepal for British regiments requiring change of air. His legitimate successors, who looked and would always look upon the country as theirs and whose patriotism would stand the bribes of flattery, continued his policy. They would continue it at any cost, indeed, as long as they would be in power. A change of administration might im-prove our chances. A bloody revolution, effected through accident, offered itself. To seize it and make it subservient to "British interests," phrase has come to be now understood, was regarded as consistent with administrative wisdom. gratitude and treaty obligations were accordingly quietly ignored.

holiday tour to Nepal. The Indian press knows nothing of that mission. That it was regarded as highly important to British interests is, of course, proved by the fact that none less than a Governor was thought worthy of being entrusted with it. Sir Charles was well received by Bir Shumshere, with whom he was closetted for some hours. To Bir Shumshere himself, the visit of Sir Charles has been productive of immediate benefit. A large number, believed to be about 800, of rifles and a battery of cannon, have been presented to him by the British Government. The policy of subsidising the Ameer of Cabul has, it seems, been extended to Nepal, The object in view must, in the case of Nepal, be held to be the same. A friendly Nepal may keep out the Russians if ever they think of seeking a puth to India through that country. In soher seriousness, if that be the object of the subsidy in arms to Bir Shumshere, has it not been a downright mistake? Bir Shumshere can never be as strong in Nepal as the administration that would have naturally succeeded Sir Ranadip Sing. The administrative and military talents of General Ranabir Jung, the ablest of the sons of Sir Jung Bahadur, would certainly have offered a more reliable guarantee than any measure of cunning which Bir Shumshere may, in consequence of his successful assassinations, be regarded to be possessed of. One trembling for his own safety can scarcely guarantee the safety of others.

DR. SAMBHU CHUNDER MOOKERJEE.

11.

To most men, wrote Sir William Taylor, author of Phillip Van Artavelle, habits of obedience come more naturally than habits of command. It is this pliability in human nature which alone makes civilization possible. Some there are who, without the power of impressing their will on others, are incapable of discipline, and such men are grits in the wheels of human progress. Obedience is, therefore, the first lesson which a child should learn. It must not be carried too far, lest the unique personality which each of us possesses should be watped or crushed; and the difficulty of striking a happy mean in this respect renders education the tremendous task it is. Mooketjee's training was very far from being an ideal one. His intellect was forced at the expense of his moral sense; and to the end of his life he retained many characteristics of a spoiled child. Impatient of control, wayward and impulsive, he brought into play but a smill portion of his great talents, and leader of men. We find him "everything by turns and nothing long;" and it was only when life's shadows began to lengthen that he settled down in the literary path, looking neither to the right hand nor to the left.

After two years' work on the Hindes Patriot he suddenly resolved to be a "limb of the law," and became an articled clerk in the office of Messrs. Allin, Julge and Linghum. But he was not long in finding out that the profession was one wholly unsuited to his in finding out that the profession was one wholly unsured to his genius; and the death of his mother, to whom he was devotedly attached, occurring on the eve of the Attorney's Examination, he bade far well for the time to lawbooks. He was welcomed back by his friend Hurish Chunder Mukerji and formally appointed Su's-Editor of the Hindoo Patriot. During the next three years he virtually edited that paper; for his chief was seized by a sickness to which, after a prolonged struggle, he succumbed. Mookerjee became his biographer; and his work bears eloquent testimony to his own culture as well as to the ment of his bourtactor. Though his own culture, as well as to the merit of his benefactor. Though poor Hurrish Chunder was cut off at 39, he left a profound and abiding impression behind him. Like his annalist he came of a Kulin stock; but unlike him, he was thrown penniless on the world at the outset of active life, and his education was laboriously acquired in the scanty leisure left by absorbing duties. While still a boy, he became a clerk in a Calcutta mercantile house; and, years afterwards, was promoted to similar but botter paid functions in a alterwards, was promoved to similar but better pild functions in a Government office, which he held till his death. The story of the Hinless Patriot's birth and vigorous youth is told in this biography. The piper arose from the ishes of the Bongal Recorder, one of the ephemerisles which herald the awakening of a nation's literary spirit. The proprietor found it a losing speculation: and in June 1854 offered the press and good will for a mere soing. Hurish Chund'r Mukerji, was hill been one of the leading contributors, saw an opportunity of gratifying a dailing ambition, and became the purchaser. The transaction was necessarily brami: for his mister, the Military Anlitor General, would hardly have approved of a proprietor editor of a journal as one of his subordinates. The "unit of stray" pur forward was a celebrother, Babu Haran Chundia Mokerp, but the entire labour of editing and management fell on Hurish. The struggle was long and severe: and at one time the poor kerami's salary was taxed to the extent of Rs. 100 a month to meet the deficit in income. He hore the ordeal with heroic courage, which was at last rewarded by the pecuniary success of his venture. His untimly death, however, robbed his family of the benefit they might have derived from a saw an opportunity of gratifying a dailing ambition, and became jobbed his family of the benefit they might have derived from a the Mikabbarata, purchased the paper from the executors, and satisfied the claim of the kenamidar by a trifling solution. In the course of 1860, Dr. Mookerjee wrote a pamphlet containing a powerful indictment of the policy of Mr. James Wilson who had been sent out to restore equilibrium to the shattered finances of the been sent out to restore equilibrium to the shattered finances of the Empire. One of his expedients for refilling the exchequer was the cordially hated Income tax, which violates nearly all the essentials laid down by economists as those of an equitable assessment. Nor is its author alone attacked. The then Viceroy, Lord Canning, comes in for a share of invective which would be impossible in these decorous days. The history of his selection as Viceroy is told, I believe, for the first time, thus:... "The Prime Minister of England exercises an almost divine prerogative in influencing by a single choice the fortunes of two hundred millions of his fellow single choice the fortunes of two hundred millions of his fellow creatures. People, however, come to entertain very low ideas of the ministerial sense or re-possibility when they learn what considerations lead to the choice of Governors-General. One is a coasin to he provided for; another is better abroal; and as for Tom, he was a fine tellow at College. It is reported that when Lond Palmerston was asked the sort of 'mure inglorious Miltonism' which his penetrating vision discerned in Lord Canning to entitle him to his present appointment, he naively exclamed, --'Ah, well, well, his tather was the first man who gave me a place in the Cabinet and --'". The pamphleteer's views have much of the crudeness of youth about them. He lays down the truism that Government is but a question of rupees, annay and pice, and that it must be judged by the practical success of its financial measures. But he goes on to argue that the obnoxious impost is opposed to the spirit of the Queen's Pro lamation; that taxa tion of all kinds implies popular representation. He did not reflect that the times were not propitious for experiments in the art of ruling. The India of 1858 had but just emerged from a civil war which had drenched her fairest provinces with blood; and her mala lies needed firm as well as sympathetic treatment. De Tocqueville sounds a note of wholesome warning when he remarks that there is no period so fraught with danger to a bid Government as that in which it enters on a course of attempted reform. The events of 1857 showed that ours then came out in the category.

The new proprietor of the Hindon Patriot was a vouthful millionaire with generous---too generous-- instincts. Dr. Mooketjee vainly strove to avert the ruin foreshadowed by his employer's extravagance; and when he found that his own reputation would be sullied by further association with a spendthrift, he sought another sphere of work. He finally closed with an offer made him by Babu Dakhma Ranjan Mukerji, who after a chequered career, had Dato Dato: A Kanjah winkerji, wo after a chequeted careet, had established himself as a landowner in Oudh, to proceed to Lucknow as Secretary of the brand-new Taluqdar's Association. Under the auspices of that body he edited a weekly journal in English called Samaibar Hindustani, in opposition to a local Anglo-Indian Journal edited by a Mr. H. D. Chick, a bitter opponent of the Taluqdars. Mookerjee soon showed that he carried too many guns for his antagonist. The latter's paper collapsed and he beat a retreat; while Mookerjee was hailed as a deliverer by the Taluqdars trembling for their new status. It was while editing the Samaibar trembling for their new status. It was while editing the Samachar Hindustani that Mookerjee had frequent passages at arms with Dr. D. B. Smith who then was in charge of a little paper called The Hills issued from Masuri. In these encounters Mookerjee proved his resoutcefulness and ability for controversy. From Lucknow he also sent contributions to the Hundo Patriot which was then under the charge of his friend Rai Kristo Dass Pal Bahadar. During his stay there he took lessons from that sweet singer Mish Amir Ali, grand-son of the famous Shori Mish, the Verdi of Hindustani music. Throughout his life he cherished a passionate love for that beautiful art, which satisfied the cravings of his emotional nature. Gothe art, which satisfied the crayings of his emotional nature. Getties has laid down as the three essentials of culture that a man must never spind a day without listening to good music, gazing on a splendid picture, or conversing with a lovely woman. The first, and perhaps the last, are difficult but not impossible of attainment. in India, but the second, appreciation of which evidences a far wouth. A Government which disposes of wores of millions hardly possesses a single picture worthy of study. Mooketjee's enjoyment of mush was intense. It is related of him that a few years them of mass was microsc. It is related or min that a rev years before his death he was a guest at one of those splendid entertainments given by the great Houses of Calcutta to celebrate the Durga Ravished by the melody produced by the best artists of our day, he was called back to a sordid world by the ill-timed chattering a man who, millionaire like the host, began prating of the sub-tinearest and dearest to him---money. The Doctor withered ject nearest and dearest to him---money. his interlocutor with a glance and stalked out of the hall in

We have seen how Mookerjee's captice and distaste for routine led him into the cardinal error of chancing his profession. The same defects militated against his success as an employ. It is, indeed, difficult to conceive a nature less liable than his, I so prone to subject his own will to the whim of a master. Service, the old proverb hath it, is no inheritance: but it has the immense advantage of disciplining the mind and teaching a lesson which Mookerjee was fated never to learn - self-control. In 1864, he was introduced by his close friend the Nawab Abdool Lutecf Khan Bahadur to the Nawab Nazim of Bengal who still kept up a semidance of Majesty' on very inadequate resources at Murshida-

bad. The Nazim had fallen out with his Deway, and was seeking to replace him. Mookerjee's evident culture and his distinguished manners caught his fancy; and he appointed him. Political Adviser and soon afterwards Dewan. Here Mookerjee found himself in the vortex of a whirlpool of intrigue. The discarded minister had a strong following among the amla; and every action of his successor was misrepresented. He failed, too, in the caution necessary in so ticklish an office. Drastic changes were carried into effect which raised a nest of hornets about his ear. Amongst them was a reduction in the perquisites of the cunuchs--a class which wields immense, if occult, influence in an oriental Court. Echoes of the intense irritation that resulted reached Mookerjee's father, then grievously ill at Baranagore, who sent a nephew with strict in-junctions to bring his 200 daring son home at any cost. The young Dewan, however, stuck to his guns for a retreat would have given his foes cause of rejoice. More active measures on their part followed. Mookerjee's house was beset by a gang of ruffians; and but for the timely arrival of the Police, he would have suffered the gravest indignities. Then the law was prostituted to serve private spite. A false information was laid in the criminal court to the effect that the Dewan had misappropriated state papers: and the Joint-Magistrate of Lalbagh was induced to attempt a search of his home. The official was met on the threshold by Mookerjee, who begged a hearing ere unmerited disgrace was inflicted on him.

A parley ensued: and the Magistrate was inclined to believe that A parley ensued: and the magnitude of accusers, however, the story told him was false. The band of accusers, however, were urgent in repeating their calumnies. He was hesitating when an express came from the District Magistrate at Berhampur direct-mandature suspension of proceedings. His enemies were baffled; but the too ardent resourcer was not destined to trouble them much longer. He was summoned to Calcutta to person his father's sraddh and returned no more to the scene of his first essay in administration. A suit was afterwards brought against him by the Nais Dewan, claiming damages for the alleged loss of state-papers confided to his care. A more which might have been his ruin redounded to his advantage. Not only did he succeed in proving to the court the groundlessness of the charge, but he established a counter-claim for a large sum due on commissions for purchases made in Calcutta, which was recovered from the plaintiff.

Mookerjee's day-dreams of glory to be acquired in the sphere of politics ended, he was fain to return to the Hindoo Patriol. Among reviews written by him at this period were those of Si William Hunter's Rural Bengal, and Talboys Wheelet's Hutery of India. His discrimination and wide reading eminently fitted him to shine as a reviewer; and he had the larest of qualities—that of withholding praise where none was due. But his love of change was incessantly spurring him to seek new fields of labour. He was offered the head-mastership of the Calcutta Training Academy, and after some hesitation accepted it. The "twice-boiled cabbage," as Juvenal calls it, of the school-room was even less to his taste than the drudgery of office; and his career as a dominic was a brief one. It was not without a beneficial influence on his development; for while residing at the Hindu Hostel as Principal, he became the centre of a coterie which included the fire flavor of the Indian intellect of the day. Among them were Bibu Krishna Kamal Bhattatharjia, now Principal of the Ripon College; Scama Charan Garguli, who fills similar functions in the Utterpara[Institution, Dwarka Nath Mitter, the most learned and unsoiled of Indian Judges; Syama Charan Biswas the greatest of our Accountants-General; Ashutosh Mukerjee (sentor) the distinguished holder of a Premehand-Raychand Scholarship. These, and other lesser lights of this generation met regularly at Mookerjee's quarters and beguled the hours of might by discussing Lichte, Comte and Scholarship. These, and other lesser

But the charms of these symposia were far from making amends for the irksomeness of a difficult and thankless profession. In 1868 he fell in readily with advice given by his friend Nawab Abdool Lutieef Khan to accept an offer of the post of Secretary made by the Raja Sheoraj Singh of Kashipore. His new employer had recently obtuned a seat on the Viceregal Legislative Council: and being a noble of the old school, found his ignorance of English a serious obscacle in that august assembly. Mookerjee was engaged to be his "ghost" in modern literary slang, and accompanied him to Kashipur. The Raja's servants had celebrated their master's approaching return by a great hunting expedition, in the course of which they laid a mighty boar low. The first sight that met the former's eyes on entering his palace was the dead monster laid out for his inspection, surrounded by a group of exultant Sharu. Overjoyed at the happy omen, he ordered the noble quarry to be divided, and sent a goodly portion of the meat to his new secretary. Mookerjee found himself in a dilemma. As became a staunch Brahman, he was a vegetarian : while a strict adherence to his seners would cause offence to his patron. dread of losing caste prevailed; and he sent back the obnoxious haunch. The Raja strove hard to conquer Mookerjee's scruples: and even assembled Pandits to decide the knotty point. Their verdict was to the effect that wild boars' flesh was not tabooed by the Shastras. But Mookerjee, though "convinced against his will," still respectfully declined the present. It is to the Raja's credit that he showed no resentment at this display of independence: and warmly recommended his sturdy follower to the notice of the Nawab of Rampur who needed a Personal Assistant. Mookeriee was invited to Rampur and soon gained great influence over the chief--so great, indeed, that the jealousy of the leading courtiers was evoked. Unable to tolerate a Hindu in a position of trust about their sovereign, they intrigued hard to prevent his final and formal appointment to the vacant post. The outcome was delay and excuses; and when the Nawah made a definite offer to Mooverjee, it was clogged with the condition that he should give up all relation with a brother of whom the chief was intensely jealous. Now, a friendship, dating from his stav in Murshidabad, united Mookerjee to this scion of the Rampur House. He nobly refused to sacrifice it to a prospect of wordly advantage, and lest the Rampur territorics. While making arrangements for a tour in the Upper Provinces which would have embraced Jeypur and probably changed the current of his life, he was recalled to Calcutta by the news of his wife's serious illness. As I have already related, the issue was long and doubtful : but skilful medical help and ther husband's unceasing devotion at length restored her to her family. In the intervals of watching at the invalid's bedside he found time to start a Magazine which bore his name and had a very fair circulation until merged in the larger venture of Reis and Rayyet. Nor was the Hindon Patriot, that arena of his early journalistic efforts, forgotten. In its columns appeared a biography of that curious phenomenon, the Begum Sekandra of Bhopal, which has profound interest for those who advocate the fullest play for woman's faculties. The most conservative must admit that when an Indian female has been vested with power, she has generally used it to greater advantage than the majority of rulers belonging to the stronger sex as it is called.

^{*} I became intimate with this unfortunate Prine while I was officiaring as Magistrate of Murshidabad in 1883. He was always preceded in his walks abroad by a Chobdar, who proclaimed his styl: and titles in a loud voice, a ceremony by the way, which was adopted by an Anglo-Indian of high official rank as lately as 1825. The Nazim Mansur Ali was a loveable and accomplished man; and more than one of his sons would have gained distinction but for their birth in a thread-bare purple. Those who knew and still lament poor Sultan Saheb will agree with me,...F. 11, S.

^{*} Rich nobodies aspiring to shine in the firmament of art, politics or literature, often engage people better equipped with brains than money to write, paint or carve for them. Such is human nature that they come to regard their gbost's productions as bona fide their own.—F. H. S.

The law always exercised a strange fascination on Mookerjee. We have already seen that he was unable to endure the long probation required by the attorney's profession. As the attainment of the status of Pleader made no such demands on his patience, he appeared at the annual exmination at Allahabad, but a severe attack of asthma cut short his efforts as a candidate. He was soon recalled to Calcutta to preside at his daughter's marriage; and did not return to the capital of the North Western Provinces. During the next year or two he was absorbed in press work; but the nomad spirit finally became too strong for resistance. In the winter of 1876 he waited on His Highness the Maharaja of Jeypur, † who was on a visit to

• I have been favoured by Babu Kisari Mohan Ganguli with the following note on Mockerjee's Magazine:---

"The first series of the Magazine extended from February to June 1861, altogether five numbers. The second, a new series, ran from July 1872 to December 1875, ten numbers being issued every year. The celebrated Barada number bilonged to this series. It was a seathing attack on the abortive attempt to judge the unfortunate ruler Mulhar Rao by a council of his peers. When it came out, it created a great sensation. Lord Northbook, although it was an unsparing criticism of his proceedings towards Mulhar Rao, almired it highly. For a long time it was believed to be the production of Mr. Montriou of the Calcutta bar. The ability of the writing, as discovered in this book, appeared so great that those who did not know Mookerjee well could not believe that a native could write so vigorously and show so complete a mastery of the details of criminal law, of Indian politics and of the intrigues of native courts."

† Babu Kisari Mohan Ganguli writes as follows: -" Maharajah Ram Sing of Jeypore was a sincere admirer of talent. He had heard of Mookerjee many years previously. As one of the commissioners selected by Lord Northbrook for trying Mulhar Rao fon the accusation of Colonel Phayre, the Maharajah had a personal interest in the Barada number of Mookerjee's Mangazum. He had heard that the book was a very able impeachment of Lord Northbrook's Baroda policy, and that many new arguments were addressed to the reader bringing out the innocence of Mulhar Rio. The whole question, again, of the relations of the native chiefs to the Paramount Power was discussed for the first time by an Indian scholar of reputation who was thoroughly conversant with everything published on that topic. Maharajah Ram Sing, it is said, caused the book to be translated into Urdu and read to him. Having mastered its contents in this way, he formed a very high idea of the abilities of Mookerjee. The very next time he came to Calcutta, he sent his trusted adviser Babu Kanti Chandra Mookerjee to see Dr. Mookerjee and arrange an interview. Babu Kanti Chandra Mookerjee to see Dr. Mookerjee and arrange an interview. Babu Kanti Chandra had at one time been a teacher in the Janai school and was well known to Mookerjee's friend, the lamented Babu Jadu Calcutta, and obtained from him, without any solicitation, a promise of the post of Private Secretary with a reversion to that of Dewan. While witting for a formal appoint near, he noticed an advertisement in the Indan Daily News annourcing the Maharaja of Hill Pipera's Jestre to appoint a successor to his minister, Babu Nilmoni Das. desire to appoint a successor to his minister, He immediately submitted an application, of which he heard no-thing for many months. Then came an autograph letter from the Maharaja which announced its receipt but enquired the reason of the inordinate delay in forwarding it. Mookerjee saw that his letter had been detained owing to palace intrigues; and acting under His Highness's advice, he sent a second application which was im Tip rightess a advice, he sent a second application which was im-mediately complied with. He was appointed Minister of Hill Tippera on a salary of Rs. 500 per mensem with a residence and various other perquisites probably amounting to as much more in value. In December 1877 he proceeded to his new sphere of action. It was one even less suited to a man of his tastes than Murshidabad had been. There he had been within easy reach of the capital, at a court still retaining some of the amenities which had distinguished it while its master ruled Bengal, Behar and Orissa. Tippera was a congeries of low hills clad with trackless jungle, then on the easternmost confines of British territory. The Maharaja was a man of culture and even erudition; but his sons were still boys and the rest of his family plunged in pristine barbarism. Socicty, so far as it existed at all, was in the same plight. Mookenee was cut off from the cheerful ways of man as completely as Ovid, that sweetest singer of the Augustan age, when banished by imperail jealousy to the shores of the Black Sea. Nor was his outlook, from by dissensions arising from the "Great Water Question," as it was called. Like the rulers of most of our hill territories, the Maharaja was fully persuaded that he was of pure Kshatriya stock, a descendant of the Lunar race: but many good Hindus believed as firmly that alliances in the past with non-Aryan mountaineers have sullied the purity of his discent. Such scepties declined to take water from his hands, though no Barhman would scruple to accept a draught from a genuine member of the warrior easte. Others were draught from a genume memoer of the wifrior caste. Others were less scrupulous: and in process of time this shibboleth was exacted from all candidates from office. The Maharaja never reflected that a man capable of sacrificing his religious prejudices to worldy profit " was not likely to be a trusty servant or a disinterested adviser. Hence, had counsels prevailed: the palace became a hot-bed of intrigues : and greater importance was attached to hood-winking the European Political Agent than executing indispensable reforms. Mookerjee found his endeavours for the public good constantly thwarted by unseen influences. An estrangement from his master followed; due in part to the latter's weakness, but also, it must be admitted, to Mookerjee's pride and that excessive sensitiveness which anticipates a slight. Phings came to a climax in October 1879; when Mookerjee learnt that a sanhedrim of Pandus from Eastern Bengal was being secretly planned in view of obtaining an Nath Ghose of the Stals' Free College of Calentra, 'the Arnold of India' as Kristodas used to call him. With Babu Jadu Nath, Kinti Chandra came to Dr. Mookerjee and arranged the mach desired interview. Dr. Mookerjee wis received with great conditive by Mahatajah Ram Sing. His polished conversation, his thorough committed of Urdu, and the ring: of his information, as once struck his illustrious host, who was no mean judge of human nature. The impression made by Dr. Mookerjee on the Mahatajah created deep jealousy among certain officials of Jeypore. Whin Dr. Mookerjee next went to visit the Mahatajah, he was kept writing for a long time in the hope that he would feel annoved and go away. The old official of the Nizimut knew enough of the ways of native courts to attrich much importance to those tactics. He waited and at last the Ettala (information) hid to be sent. When the Mahatajah met him, the usual politic enquiries were exchanged. Dr. Mookerjee informed his host of what had happened. The Mahatajah called his superior officials and attendants, and warned them seriously, saying that Dr. Mookerjee had not come of his own accord, but that he was an invited and honored guest. If, after that warning, anyboly dared to delive in sen log the Ettala, the Mahatajah knew hoev to behave town is him. With many appologies for the rudeness of his servants, the Mahatajah dismissed Mookerjee early than he had wished. The latter, before his departure, took care to impress upon one official in particular that his pealousy was canceless, for he (Dr. Mookerjee) had not the rem test wish to supplant him, or, indeed, to enter into the Mahatajah who admited statesmandike qualities in a ruler."

* The institution of monar by his its advantages: but honourable men must doubt whether they are not counterbalanced by the debauchery of publi, motals caused by certain of its phases, It appears to be a limited that any man has a right to barrer his religion for a throne. Henry IV of France did so and his pithy excuse that "Paris is well worth a mose" is quoted in his extenuation by good Protestants. His example has been repeatedly followed, notably by the father of the king of the B-ligians, and by the present Czarina of all the Russias.---F. H. S.

authoritative recognition of the Maharaja's claims. Not only was he offended at the evident want of confidence in himself thus dis-played, but he foresaw failure and disgrace involving all who were, or were presumed to be, advisers of the Maharaja. He, therefore, resolved to abandon a false position; and went to Calcutta without obtaining leave but with a determination to return no more to the Hill Territory. Hill Territory. To pursue this Tippera episode to its close : the Maharaja fetained a profound sense of his minister's intellectual powers and made more than one attempt to win him back. While on his way to Brindabun in 1884, he induced Mookerjee to accept the post of paid Adviser on the understanding that Calcutta, and not Agartala, should be his headquarters. It is characteristic of my not Agartala, should be his headquarters. It is characteristic of my subject's utter disregard for pelf that he never deigned to draw the salary attached to his office, though it was regularly provided for in the state budget, thus surrendering nearly Rs. 20,000 in the aggregate. In 1885 I became Magistrate of the British district of Tipperra and ex office Political Agent of the Hill Territory. Like most of my colleagues who have held that office I strove hard to restore equilibrium to the finances and to raise the character of the distriction. My effort were mirroreseased by the the the other distriction. restore equilibrium to the mances and to raise the character of the administration. My efforts were misrepresented by the "reptile press;" and to my surprize I found Reis and Royset—of which more anon--ranged on the side of brass-bound conservatism. Now I am impervious to anonymous press attacks. "As the world educates men to become indiffernt to praise and censure, as neither perfection nor devotion ensures its favour, misfortunes ensure its contempt, success its envy and hate, the best course is to seek the approval of one's own conscience." But the case was different when I saw a man whom I respected misled by persons interested in the maintenance of gross abuses. I, therefore, gave Mookerjee a candid account of the facts on which my action had been based. He replied in a conciliatory strain and animadversions in his paper ceased. regret not having preserved the correspondence which passed be-tween us. Mookerjee's private letters, like his literary work, have a distinct flavour of their own, --- and I never knew a more complete illustration of the saying "a man's style is himself."

On Mookerjee's return to civilization he was named by the Chief Justice of Bengal a member of a Commission appointed for the partition of the estates of the Rani Rashmani. He entered on these functions with zest: for he had known the deceased lady; and had qualified her as "a remarkable woman who as one of the greatest land-owners in this country, a she-Crossus of Calcutta, had managed to foil the eagles of the period." Alas! her property, Alas! her property, gaverned with consummate care during her life-time, became the proy of less noble birds after her death. Amongst them--in a igurative sense, of course---I must include the legal tribe and the commissioners for the partition. This is always a tedious process, and it is not shortened by the system of remuneration adoped by the High Court--a fee of five gold mohurs to each commissioner for a sitting.

In 1882 he founded the wellknown weekly paper Reis and Rayyet which has always been conspicuous for literary finish and generally for breadth of view. Here at length he found his proper place—an editorial chair from which he could deal with the topics of the day in his own peculiar vein---the professor's tempered with a certain dry humour. No weekly periodical, not even the Ilindoo Patriot in the days of Kristodas Pal, enjoyed a degree of influence approaching that of Reis and Rayyes. It brought Mookerjee into confidential relations with the makers of history Lord Dufferin, amongst others, was his constant correspondent. It sobered his judgment, and deepened his sense of responsibility. Finally it anchored him to a position for which he was especially fitted. The intervals between his editoral labours in 1883 were occupied in the production of his Travels in Eastern Benngal -- a rich and -a rich and fertile tract to which he was bound by ties of ancestral sympathy. The book is rather prolix and desultory; but it contains some wonderful pieces of word-painting. The reader is penetrated by the subtle influences of nature as manifested in those Netherlands of Bengal. The skies lit up by sunsets of transcendant beauty or darkened by masses of rolling cloud; the broad expanses of vivid green broken only by the clumps of graceful folium which mask green broken only by the clumps of graceful toliage which mark the jealously-guarded penates of a wealthy peasantry; the majestic rivers covered with outlandish crafts whose pattern has not altered since Vikramaditya reigned and Manu laid down the law; the swirl of the tall rice plants against one's boat as it is vigorously impelled by the black but comely gondoliers:—all comes back to him who, by the black out comery gondoliers;—all comes back to him who, possessing local knowledge, peruses this record of travel. Not less will he acknowledge the unfeigned goodness of heart which underlies an affected cynicism. In May 1884 he came prominently before the public in a new capacity—that of after-dinner speaker. There are few faculties rarer than that which enables a man to make a creditable display in that character; and he showed that he possessed it in a marked degree. I was present on the occasion—a public dinner given at the Raja of Paikpara's Calcutta mansion in honour of Mr. Joubert, the organizer of the International Exhibition of 1883, and was introduced to Dr. Mookerjee by mv old friend Mr. W. H. Grimley, now Commissioner of Chota-Naggur. Dr. Johnson said of Burke that no one could spend five minutes in his company while sheltering himself from a shower under an archway without discovering that he was an extraordinary man. My experience of Mookerjee reminded me of this remark. We were neighbours at table and I had ample opportunity of observing him. He looked much older than his years---forty-six : and his spare frame and deeply-lined features gave one the idea of a man long past his prime. His face was of the highest Aryan type, his eyes penetrating and luminous; while sedate humour played round his mobile lips. We soon became absorbed in colloquy to the neglect, I tear, of the ban-quet and the other guests around us. Never have I passed a more delightful evening --- not even at the house-dinners of the Savage Club. which attract the best Englishmen of the day. The Doctor's originality of mind was not less conspicuous than his memory. The first enabled him to pour forth the quaintest criticism of men and things: the second to illustrate his views by a flood of apt quotations. These pre-occupations did not prevent his acquitting himself more than creditably as an orator. He instituted a masterly comparison between the great Show on the eve of closing and its predecessors since 1851. Shortcomings were not concealed, but due credit was given for the dauntless energy which triumphed over so many ob-stacles. "India," he said, "had neither the soil nor the elasticity statics. Ithus, no said, "nau nother the son her the control the enjoyed by young and vigorous communities; but presented the arid rocks and deserts of an effete civilization, hardly stirred to a gained advantages." He was cheered to the echo; and there were some present who regretted that gifts so rare had not found wider scope in his country's service.

--- The Naunal Magazine.

F. H. SKRINE.

THE HANDFUL OF THINGS WE KNOW.

THE HANDFUL OF THINGS WE KNOW.

SEVERAL years ago an American humorist and poet published some verses called "Luttle Breeches." This was an odd name given to a very small boy who was caught out in a tremendous snowstorm, and finally found in some hay quite a distance from the house. However the boy got there bothered everybody to explain. It was certain he never could have walked. So his father said the angels must have done it; "they just stooped down and toted him to where it was safe and warm, he said." The poetry about it (supposed to have been written by the youngster's father) starts off in this way:

I don't go much on religion,
I never ann't had no show;
But I've a middling light grip, sir,
On the handful of things I know.

That's it; the handful of things I know.

That's it; the handful of things I know.

That's it; the handful of things I know.

That's it is only one cause. Nature develops and makes differences; never a new force.

but there are a few. And one of them is this: That for a hundred results there is only one cause. Nature develops and makes differences; never a new force.

Here, for example, is an incident which shows our meaning. About Christmas, 1889, Mr. E. B. Wright had an attack of influenza. Previous to this he had always been strong and hearty. Well, he got over the influenza; still, it had given him (as he says) "a shide." After this he got along fairly well, until February of this year (1892) when the influenza attacked him again. This time the maiady "meant business." Nearly every bone and muscle in his body ached like some teeth. His skin was hot and dry, and to bed he was obliged to go. For sixteen days he was under a doctor. At the end of that time he found himself alive and that was about all you could say for him.

In his letter he goes on to tell what happened next. "I had a foul taste in the month," he says, "and my teeth and tongue were covered with a thick slimy phlegin. My wife says my tongue was like an oxyster shell, and I'm sune it was rough as naturing grater. What I'ate, which wasn't much gave me pain in the chest and sides. After a mouthful or two I felt full and blown out, and I used to swell to a great size. By and-by a hacking cough set in and my breathing got short and quick. At night I lay for hours gasping for breath, and often coughed so I was afond I should burst a blood vessel. I got weaker and weaker and weaker and also had burst a blood vessel. I got weaker and weaker and weaker and the coughed so I was afond I should burst a blood vessel. I lipe to work to say the washina, but he wasn't able to relieve it. Although I live only two minutes' walk from the factory where I work, I had to stop and rest on my way many a time.

"Thus matters went with me until June, 1892. Then one day I took asthma, but he wasn't able to relieve it. Although I live only two minutes' walk from the factory where I work, I had to stop and rest on my way many a time.

"Thus matters went with me until June, 1892. Then one day I took up the Essex Newsman, and read of a man living at Eusham, near Bungay, having been cured by Mother Seigel's Cutative Syrup. I got some of this medicine from the International Tea Company, Braintree. After a few doses my breathing grew easier, and by keeping on with the Syrup my food soon digested, the cough left me, and I gained strength. I am now as strong as ever, can ent anything, and walk for miles. I am a buishmaker, and work at the factory of Messis. John West and Sons, High Street, Braintree, and have lived in this town over forty years. (Signed) E. B. WRIGHT, Sandpit Road, Braintree, Essex, Angust 2374, 1892"

Now let us see how this illustrates the proposition we started one with. For almost three years Mi. Wright was ill with whin accomed like a series of different diseases. He had the influenza twice, the asthma once, and another disease which he gives no name to even of the pains and troubles he mention, and he doesn't describe them all, either. You would fancy he had half a dozen ailments at least. Yet he had but one—indigestion and dyspepsia—of which all his bodity disturbances (influenza included—a blood disease) were symptoms, all came out of the stomach, and when Seigel's Syrups et Mad.right the others quertly departed.

What. then, is one thirs of "the handful of things we know?"

others quietly departed.

others quietly departed. What, then, is one thing of "the handful of things we know?" Answer: That nearly all sorts of diseases are really symptoms of indigestion and dyspepsia, and that Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup cures it.

Double that fact up in your fist and hold on to it tights.

THE MAHOMEDAN LITERARY SQUIETY.

The Thirty-first Annual Conversazione of the Mahomedan Literary Society of Calcutta will be held at the Town Hall on Wednesday the 30th January 1895, at 9 P M.

A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMAN, Honorary Secretary.

16, Taltollah. The 17th January 1895.

To Contractors.

r. Sested Tenders will be received by the Superintendent up to 6th February 1895, for the supply of cloth, coal, coke, oils, timber, tin ingot, and other stores (more or less) to the Small Arms Ammunition Factory Dum-Dum from the 1st April 1895 up to the 31st March 1896. The term "more" includes the supply of stores if required into 35 per cent, in years stores, if required, up to 25 per cent. in excess of the original tender
2. Printed forms of tenders for the supply

Printed forms of tenders for the supply of stores for which tenders are invited are ob of stores for which tenders are invited are obatinable from this office daily (Sunday and holidays excepted) on payment of one rupee.

3. Tenders should be accompanied by a deposit as earnest money in Bank of Bengal receipt or in Government promissory notes calculated at the rate of two per cent. on the stores tendered. This deposit will be returned on execution of the contract deed or rejection of the lenders. of the tenders.

Preference will be given to local manu-

4. Preference will be given to local manufacture.
5. Tenders will be opened at this office at 12 o'clock on the 7th February 1895. Parties tendering are invited to attend.

The Inspector General of Ordnance does

The Inspector General of Ordnance does not bind himself to accept the lowest or any

7. Further particulars as to conditions of tender will be found in I. O. Form 103, which will be furnished with the tender form.

J. G. STONE, Lieut. Col., R. A.,

Subcrintendent.

Small Arms Ammunition Factory Office. Dum-Dum, 7th January 1895.

"SOUVENIRS OF INDIA."

"SOUVENIRS OF INDIA."

Celebrated Models of our Indian Domestic Servants)

1. Khansama, (Butler,) 2. Dhoby, (Washerman,) 3. Bhisty, (Waterman,) 4. Malee, (Gardener,) 5. Chaprasee, (Peon.) 6. Syce, (Groom.) 7. Ayah, (Nurse.) 8. Bearer. 9.
Sweepet. 10. Tailor. 11. Grasscut. 12 Barber.
N. B.—These are perfect Models of our Servants beautifully painted in natural colours.

Price, Rs. 4 complete set Price, Rs. 4 complete set of the servants beautifully painted in natural colours.

Terms:—Cash in full with order, or at least 25% of value must accompany, balance being drawn for by V. P. Post.

Note—Orders received without a Remittance or deposit will be charged for at Rs. 6, the set.

Address all Letters, Remittances, &c., to The Agent,

ALEXANDER MACGREGOR & Co., DEL.HI, (Punjab).

In Pamphlet, Price 4 annas or 6 copies for a Rupee.

A Cheap Reserve for the Army.

By Capt. ANDREW HEARSEY, Late Her Majesty's Service.

Apply to Reis & Rayyet Office, Calcutta.

Congress Sketches: A Review

OF THE

SPEECHES AND THE SPEAKERS

AT THE Fourth Indian National Congress Held at Aliahabad.

Reprinted with additions and alterations from Reis & Rayyet

With a portrait of Mr. George Yule, President, Sold by the publisher G. P. Varma, and at the office of the Advacate, at Lucknow for 8 Annas a copy, besides postage.

TEXT BOOKS IN ENGLISH.

BY SARADA PRASAD BANERJEE. SPECIMEN PAPERS AND ANSWERS

on THE ENGLISH ENTRANCE COURSE

For 1895. Having the largest sale of all similar works,

ENGLISH PREPARATORY COURSE

FOR 2nd & 3rd CLASSES.
This book has been approved by the Central Text Book Committee.

INDIA READERS NO. 2 FOR 4th & 5th CLASSES. INDIA READERS NO. 1

FOR 6th & 7th CLASSES.
These books are of remarkably simple style and quite suited to Indian students.

The attention of School authorities in the N.-W. P. and Oudh, the Punjab, Madras, Bombay, the Central Provinces, Assam, and Burma, invited to the above publications of unique Invited ... merits.

To be had of

S. K. I.AHIRI & Co.,
College Square, Calcutta.

THE WORKS OF DR. JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE. Rs. As.

Commentaries on the Hundu Law of 16 0

without a copy of this GREAT Work.
(Sd.) Nana Bhai Haridas."

Work.

(Sd.) Nana Bhai Haridas."

Bengali translation of the Dyabhaga and the Mitakshara.† Price ... 2 8
Bengali Translation of the Ditakachandrika.† Price ... 0 8
The Evidence Act with notes in Bengali.† Price ... 1 0
The Civil Procedure Code with notes in Bengali.† Price ... 4 0
Principles of Zemindari Management and Bookkeeping in Bengali
First Lessons in English for Bengali and Bookkeeping in Bengali
First Lessons in English for Bengali ... 0 4
Bharat Sasan Pranali* ... 0 8
The Philosophy of Religion from the point fivew of Common Sense. Price Rs. 5.

CONTENTS.

I. Historical Analysis of the evolution of

t. Historical Analysis of the evolution of restorical Abolysis of the evolution of religious systems.

Definition of the term "religion."

The problems of the philosophy of religion and their solutions, old and new.

(a) Why do Hindus believe in ten Ava-(a) Why do Hindus believe in ten Avalatis of incanations including in the series three that are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a fortune, and a hoar.
(b) Why is it that all ancient systems recommend the scriftce of animals, and the burning of ghee or incense.
&c. &c. &c. &c.
The weapons offensive and defensive of religious teachers.

religious teachers.
The power of fine words,
The art of becoming a prophet.
The cumulative effect of hardswearing

for ages.
Specimens of Puranised history.
Brahminical and Christian priesteraft

The artificial miseries of men caused by

religion.

religion.
The good man's adversity is the sharp man's opportunity.
Swindling as a fine art.
New Supersitions that may be suggested for the benefit of the priests.
The great prophets of the world and their doings.
Probable origin of the Saiva religion.
Tautric mysticism and abominations.

* To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink &

* To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink & Co., only.
† To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink & Co., and also at the Suradhani Agency, No. 11, Raja Nabakushua's Street, Calcutta.

A Wonderful Medicine.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

ARE universally ad-ARE universally admitted to be worth a Guinea a box, for Bilhous and Nervous Disorders, such as wind and Pain in the Stomach, Sick, Hendache, Giddiness, Fulness, Swelling after Meals, Dizzmess and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costveness, of Breath, Costveness, Sciep, Frightful Dreums and all Nervous and Trembling Sensation, &c. The first dose will give relief in twenty minutes.

Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one box of these Pills, and they will be acknowledged to be

WADJULT 1

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

For females of all ages these Pills are invaluable, as a few doses of them carry off all humours, and bring about all that is required. No female should be without them. There is no medicine to be found equal to Beecham's Pills for removing any obstruction or irregularity of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box, they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and robust health. This has been proved by thousands who have tried them, and found the benefits which are ensured by their use.

For a Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, and all Disorders of the Liver, they act like magic, a few doses will be found to work wonders on the most important organs in the human machine.

human machine.

human machine.

The Natives of India will find Beechan's Pills the finest medicine ever introduced to their notice; the European residents also will find them of great value for cooling the blood. For throwing off fevers and preventing inflammations in hot chimates, they stand without everal.

a rival.

These are Facts testified continually by members of all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debilitated is, BEECHAM'S PILLS have the Largest Sale of any Patent Medicine in the world.

Beecham's Magic Cough Pills.

As a remedy for Coughs in general, Asthma, Bronchial Affections, Houseness, Shortness of Breath, Tightness and Oppression of the Chest, Wheezing, &c., these Pills stant minivalled. Let any person give Beecham's Cough Pills at all, and the most violent Cough will in a short time be removed.

Beecham's Tooth Paste

Will be commend uself being efficacious and economical: it is packed in neat antight collapsible Tubes.

NOTICE.—G Atherton & Co. will forward on receipt of letter, samples at the following rates: size 9½d, at 8 annas per box; 1:1½d, size 12 annas per box; 25.9d, size 2 rupees per box; footh Paste 12 annas per Tube, these rates do not include the cost of postage which will be added to the amount.

Sole Wholesale Agents for India, BURMAH & CEYLON. G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3, NEW CHINA BAZAR STREET. CALCUTTA.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF

۵۱.	MEMORIAL FUND.
			Rs.
I.	. His Highness The Maharaja of I bhanga K.C.L.E.,)ur. 22	2,000
2.		r _{IZ1} .
3-	anagion, G.C.I.E., Bahadu His Highness the Nawab Bahadu Managhad abad Ameril Onco G.C.	rof	800
4.		ıdh,
5.	G C.S.I His Highness the Maharaja Baha	dur	500
6.	of Cooch Behar, G.C I.E.	 anı.	500
٠.	K.C.S.I, and Nawab Bahadur	K
7.	Khan Bahadar Bhai Bahaudain, C i	E.,	500
8.	Vizier to the Nawab of Junagadi Maharaja Bahadur Sir Joundra 1		300
9.	han Tagore, K C.S.I	•••	250 200
10.	Babu Jodu Lai Mullick Messrs Mackinnon Mackenzie & Prince Wala Kidr Syed Hosem	Co.	200
	Muza Bahadur	•••	150
12.	Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Nav Syed Zamul Abdm Khan Baha
13.	Feraz Jung Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee, C.	 S.I.	140 100
14.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chan Madhab Ghose		100
15.	Prince Mirza Sir Jahan Kadar Ba
16.	dut, K.C.LE., The Houble P. Playfair		100
17. 18.	Haji Kasim Ariff Lieutenant-General the Hon'ble	 Sır	100
	H. Brackenbury, K.C.B.,	•••	100
19. 20.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Guru I)48 	100
21.	The Honble Dr. Rash Behary Gh Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt.		50 51
22. 23.	Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt. Shahibzada Mahomed Obidulla Kl	han	50
	Bahadur, C.S.I Maharajkumar Benoya Krishna	•••	50
24. 25,	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice E. J. Tre	ve-	50
26.	Iyan Tue Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jab	bar	50
27.	Khan Bahadur		50
88.	Maharaja Duga Charan Law, C.1 Maharaja Duga Charan Law, C.1 Nawab Jahandar Meerza Nawab Huzoor Muza The Hon'ble W. C. Bonnerjee Nawab Syed Ameer Husem Syed Numl Huda, Eg., C.S.,		50
29.	Nawab Jahandar Meerza	· · · ·	50 50
30. 31.	The Hon'ble W. C. Bonnerjee	···	50 50
32. 33.	Nawab Syed Ameer Husem Syed Numl Huda, Esq., CS.,	•••	50 50
34. 35.	Syed Nurul Huda, Esq., CS., Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan L.G. Ruche, Esq., CS.	•••	50 50
36.	J. G. Ritchie, Esq. C.S., F. J. Rowe, Esq Montal M. Shandasa Naha Khan I		32
37.	Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi Khan I		25
38. 39.	Kumar Radha Prosad Roy Kumar Dinendra Natain Roy		25 25
40. 41.	Babu Pashupatty Nath Bose Kumar Doulat Chandra Roy	•••	25 25
42.	Babu Guru-Prosonna Ghose		25
43.	Rija Sir Sommdra Mohan Tago		25
44. 45.	Raya Jotindra Nath Chowdhury Babu Rama Nath Ghose	•••	25 25
46.	Raja Steenath Roy Raja Sew Bux Bogla Bahadar	•••	25 25
47. 48.	R. Belchambers, E.q Raja Surja Kanta Acharjee Chowdi		25
49 50.	Kai Bodicedas Mokim Bahadur	•••	25
Š1. Š2.	Babu Gopal Lal Seal Moulvi Syad Abdus Salam	•••	25 25
53. 54.		•••	25 25
55. 56,		•••	25
57. 58.	F. H. Skime, Esq. Cs.,	•••	25 25
58. 59. 60.	F. H. Skime, E.q. C.S., The Hon'ble H. J.S.Cotton C.S., C.S Prince Mahomed Bukhtyar Shah	, 1. 	20 20
60. 61.	B theo Strendta Nath Pal Chowdry	•••	20 20
63. 63.		•••	20 20
64.	D. Panioty, Esq Chowdry Mahrined Arjamand Kha H. E. A Cotton Esq., Barrister-at-l	•••	20
65. 66 ₆ .	H. E. A Cotton, Esq., Barrister-at-	ฯ₩ เก	20 20
67.	Khan Rahadur	d,	17 8
68. 69.	T Lucia For Co	•••	16 16
70. 71.	F. F. Handley, Esq. C.S. The Honble Mouly: Strajul Isla		16
	Khan		16

72. Moulvi Serajuddeen

•••	15
	10
•••	10
•••	10
	10
•••	10
	10
•••	10
•••	10
•••	10
•	10
•••	10
	5
•••	5
eceived	by
3ahad!	UR,

AJ RUMAN SANADHICAN BARRAS 4, Buttsh Indian Street, Calcutta, and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMAN, ESQ., Barristet—atLaw, 16, Taltolla, Calcutta. Rs. 6 "UNDAUNTED" WATCH.

Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, smill, open-faced, nickel silvern, keyless, short winding, patent, "UNDAUNTED" watch, with hand setting methanism, secondhand for Doctots, ornamental bold dial, for Rs. 6 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' guarantee. Warranted to stand the roughest use. Runs more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. E. sily reparable. Others seil at double our rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Juo. Dickson of Haputal Railway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps splendid time and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jerks. × Di. H. Moore of Royal Artiflety from Poonamaltee says:—I sold it for Rs. 16. × Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Regi. from Dumdum says:—I have sold a for Rs. 20. × Mr. T. B. Scott of Patia Opium Department says:—The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time.

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real Guaranteed three Years.

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Solid Gold Watton Rs. 24.

Pretty Canadian gold chain Re. 1-8-o.Fashionable Canadian Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeralis, at Re. 1-8 o. Mr. G. Smith, Salt Inspector from Sanikutia, says: "A German valued the diamond ring at Rs. 50 and ruby at Rs. 30." Key winding, Government stamped, solid silver hunting case, Royal watch with extres and full three weets." stamped, solid silver hunting case, koyal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee, for Rs. 13 Pte. G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light Infantry from Purandhai says:—For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I solid to a sergeant for Rs. 28 x Pte. H. C. Bishop of L. F. L. Regt. from Kamptee says:—A Corporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch. Gentlemen's open faced, keyless real solid gold worth Rs. 30: Indues' Rs. 21: both with extras and men's open faced, keyless real solid gold watch Rs, 30; ladles? Rs, 24; both with extras and guaranteed for 3 years. Mind they are guran-teed to be of real solid gold. No agents kept, all goods sent only by us from Bombay per V. P. P.

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO, BOMBAY,

CATARRH. Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness. A NEW HOME TREATMENT. Sufferers are not generally aware that these Guiferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the inning membrane of the nose and custachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these distressing diseases are rapidly and permanently cured by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphiet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUFFON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. FORONTO, Canada.

GENUINE HOMŒOPATHY.

A CARD.
Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S.

Homospathic Practitioner,
May be consulted by letter or personally
daily at his residence, 30-1, Colootolah Street, Culcutta

daily at

... 15

"IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer find sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering: while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs is amost too remarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the of TOOTHACHE? A single applica-iton will relieve you.

In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the result speak for itself,

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Physicians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of nomes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar pre-paration has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throughout the world.

Agents in Calcutta: Smith Stanistreet & Co. R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Bathgate &

REIS & RAYYET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT) WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

Review of Politics, Literature, and Society

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

If paid in advance, Yearly ··· ks. 12 Half-yearly Quarterly ... Monthly ,, 7 ••• Ke. 1-8 ... Ke. 1.8 Montnly ... Single or sample Copy

If not paid in advance, Rs. 18
 Yearly
 ...
 ...
 14

 Half-yearly...
 ...
 10-8

 Quarterly
 ...
 n
 6-8

 Monthly
 ...
 n
 2-4

 Single or sample Copy
 ...
 Ans. 0-1
 No additional charge for postage or peon.
 ... , 10-8
... , 6-0
... , 2-4
... Aus. 0-12

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insertion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5. Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and parabless (carriage paid) to The "Edings" of Rayer.

& Rayyet."

OFFICE: 1, Uches Duits Line Well. Street, Calcutta.

DROIT ET AVANT.

Reis Rayyet

(PRINCE & PEASAÑT)

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

AND

REVIEW OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, JANUARY 26, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 659.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

-reses

ON THE MASSACRE OF A CONVENT OF NUNS AT PARIS, AT THE TIME OF THE REVOLUTION.

I STOOD in France's capital,
'T was Terror's dismal reign,
The sights of fear I witnessed there
May I ne'er view again.

Oh 1 may I never hear on earth
Such sounds as met mine ear,
The murderous shout, the horrid mirth,
The shriek of deadly fear.

The curse of blood was on the place—
On woman, child, and man,
And a stream of blood, like an autumn flood,
Through all the city ran.

And aye was seen a hellish band
Of fiends in carnage dyed,
And the clothes they wore were sprinkled o'er
With a dark and ghastly tide.

Where'er they came, that blood-stained crew, Nor age nor sex they spared, And in search to slay, like beasts of prey, Their eyes insatiate glared;

And fierce they laughed a fearful yell,
In wild and fiendish glee,
And loud was the shout of that fearful rout,
Aud their shout was "Liberty!"

Yes! so did they profane that time
The Watchwurd of the Free,
As if her name to deeds of shame
Could e'er a sanction be.

Oh, God! it was a dreadful sight
The dying and the dead:
And the blood-red light through the gloom of night
That the torch of Carnage shed!

I feel, I know, I saw it all,
Yet can't tell where nor how;
Though it did seem some fearful dream,
'T is all before me now.

It was a nation's bloody zeal
Their monarch to destroy,
Show her their queen who erst had been Tant people's pride and joy.

I saw the tears of bearded men

Shed o'er their children dead,
And dame, and knight, and maiden bright,
To the same scaffold led.

While the gory axe with ceaseless stroke Still sped the work of death; And its baleful sound fell on all around, Like the Siroc's blasting breath.

But one day I remember well

The sun was shining o'er,

So bright his smile, I dreamt awhile,

That carnage was no more.

But, as I mused, broke forth afresh,
That cry of fiendish joy,
And I knew by the sound that the axe had found
Fresh victims to destroy.

I looked on these, 'twas a female band In Religion's garb arrayed, And at their side in horrid tide Their ruthless murderers strayed.

Some there were gray and ancient dames,
With feeble step and slow,
Whose souls, I ween, long since had been,
Dead to this world below.

But some were maids of noble birth,
And beauteous as the day,
With form and face that well-might grace
The bridal's bright array,

Yet all unmoved they passed to death,
Their eyes were fixed on heaven,
They prayed e'en then for those bloody men,
That their sins might be forgiven.

When sudden from their lips arose
A strain so pure and sweet,
Methought such sound alone was found
Where angel spirits meet.

'T was a song of praise I loved to hear
In peace and tranquil time,
But its glorious swell no tongue can tell,
Amid that rush of crime!

Oh! never can remembrance lose
Their rapture-breathing strain,
As they gazed on high at the cloudless sky,
Where they hoped to meet again!

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, if possible, as the safest and most convenient medium. particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receips will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

I saw no more-I turned aside. I could not see them die; But in mine ear rang loud and clear Those notes of ecstasy.

But fainter, feebler grew the sound. As ceased each victim's breath ; Till-one sweet tone was heard alone, Then all was hushed in death.

And horror-struck I left the spot, That land of blood and crime, And many a sun his course has run Since that ill-omened time.

But never can my soul forget That wild and hellish cry. And still I fear whene er I hear The shout of "Liberty !"

Oft, too, in sleep those maidens bright, Like angel visions throng, And voices sweet around me meet. In that triumphant song.

WEEKLYANA.

WITH the commencement of next month, the Lieutenant-Governor makes a short tour in Midnapore. Starting on the 1st, he, accompanied by Lady Elliott, Colonel McArthur, Superintending Engineer, and Captain Currie, Private Secretary, visits Midnapore and Funlisk, and comes back to Calcutta in the foreugon of the 9th February.

SIR Charles and Lady Ethott enc. and, hast Wed a try, the Earl and Countess of Elgin to dinner.

SIR Charles Elliott's time draws migh. He will the second of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal before the year is one. A Committee, with Mr. Allan Arthur as "resident, Mr. J. O'B Stunders as Treasurer, and Mr. David MacLaren Morrison Decision, v, 15 working for a parting portrait to Lady Filliott. Ann'r, and appearea valuable help to Sir Charles Elhott. If he has on carn ca memorial, she well deserves the honour. The maximum subscription is Rs. 20.

THERE will be a Convocation of the University of Calcutta for conferring degrees, at the Senate House, this day. ...

THE examination for Sanskrit Titles for the year 1895 will begin on the 12th February.

THE first criminal sessions of the year in Calcutta will begin on Wednesday, the 6th February.

E holidays of the year for the Cal		Cause	Court Hr	e :
New Year's Day	•••	•••		1
Basanta Panchami, January 31 a	and Febru	ary r,	•••	1
Dole Jatra, March 11		•••		1
Eed-ul-Fitr, March 29 and 30	•••	•••		-
Good Friday including Chaitro	Sankranti	April 12	and 13
Queen-Empress' Birthday, May	24	•••		1
Dashara Ganga Snan, June 3	•••	•••	•••	1
Id-uz-zohá, June 5 and 6	•	•••	•••	,
Muharram, July 1 to 3			•••
Janma Ashtami, August 13				•
Fatiha Dauz Dahum, September	r 2
Dusserah vacation, including and Kali Pujas and Bhrat October 19	Mahalaya	, Durga, September	Lakhi 18 to
Jagadhatri Puja, October 28 and		•••		3
		•••	•••	:
Christmas Holidays, December and all Sundays.	23 to 31	•••	•••	•

AR SIAC DEIGN CHE TUIT O	r Avestions	anu ,	monays for	Arts C	oneges
n Bengal for 1895 :
New Year's Day	•••	•••	'		I
Sripanchami	•••	•••			2
Dole Jatra			•••
Id-ul-Fitr, March 29		•••	•••		I
Good Friday and Cha Easter Saturday	it Sankra n t	i}	•••		2
Summer Vacation, Ma	y 6 to June	22			42
Muharram, July 3 and	4				2
Janmashtami		•••	•••	•••	I
Fauha-dawazdaham	•••	•••	•••	•	١.
Mahalaya, September	18				1
Puja Vacation, Septen	her 23 to C	October	29		32
Christmas holidays, D	ecember 23	to 31	•		8
Sundays			•••	•••	52
				_

We give below the List of Vacations and Holidays for Arts Colleges

Total ... 146 The number of holidays for Collegiate and 1st grade Training schools will be 78 days, and for Zilla schools 63 days, exclusive of Sundays.

THE following is an excellent recipe for an accident to which every body is subject :-

When a speck of dust or metal gets into the eye, the best plan is to shut it, and keep it shut for over a minute. Nature will then come to the relict, and there will be enough tear-like moisture to get rid of the obstruction, which will be found in one of the corners when the eye is finally opened.

The macellous mechanism of the human eye affords enough protection to that valuable organ, and always works for its safety.

As view desprit, the following can scarcely pass muster :--

As typus Caprit, the following can scarcely pass muster:—
My good woman, said the learned Judge, 'you most give an arrows of the fewest possible words of which you are capable, to the plantes', uple question whether, when you were crossing the street with the beyon your arm and the omnibus was coming down on the 10 fit side and the cab on the left and the brougham was trying c pass the omnibus, you say the defendant between the brougham of the cab, or whether and when you saw him at all, and whether or of near the brougham, cab, and omnibus, or either or any two, of which of them respectively, or how it was, '"

The answer may, for much anybody knows to the contract of the cont

The answer may, for aught anybody knows to the co or see a simple "No" Oi, if "Yes," the witness may say, -I saw had bet seen the omnibus and the brougham while he latter attempted to pass the former, at a point equally direct from the two. Irrespective of the answer, however, as an instance of a complicated question, it is not impassable, although judges and counsel do sometimes puzzle honest witnesses by a stream of words.

THE Saturday Review says:-

"Whatever his faults may be, it cannot be gainsaid that M. Zola has deserved well of the republic of letters. But he seems to be bent upon making himself almost as ridiculous as the German Emperor. M. Zola has now offered himself as a candidate for membership of the French Academy for the filteenth time, and heen rejected in favour of the son of M. Atseine Houssaye, who is said to possess all the dull trlents necessary for an Academician. Mr. Whistler behaved with more self-respect in never condescending to connect as a candidate for reductive for a facilities. in never condescending to compete as a candidate for admittance to our own Academy.'

Election always and everywhere carries with it its own evils.

In a school in the town of Leicester, a teacher asked one of the young pupils, "Why was Moses hidden in the bulrushes by his mother?" The prompt answer was,-" Because she did not want to have her baby vaccinated." Leicester is said to be "a fadstricken town." If compulsory vaccination be, as it undoubtedly is, an evidence of fad, more towns will come under the category than Leicester. India has got her Medical Congress, and with so many officials of pronounced sympathies with medical men, we shall all have to put up with many a fad before the year is out. A short Bill, making it compulsory for every man, woman, and child, in Bengal, to live in a well ventilated house, to drink nothing but filtered water, pronounced to be free from bacilli by the Civil Surgeon of the District, to wear no clothes which have not come from the dhobi within the last twenty-four hours, to eat no food without having submitted it to a medical man of the orthodox school, and to summon, when ill, no medical assistance save that of one who holds a certificate from the Magistrate of the District, countersigned by the President of the Indian Medical Congress, stating that he has no faith in Homocopathy or Kaviraji, and that he has been known to have declared before two honest witnesses that Hahnemann and Charaka were imposters, may do much good to the land. The Bill should also make it obligatory on every adult male to kill at least fifty dogs in a year and a hundred poisonous snakes, so that these pests of humanity may soon be externinated. Such slaughter is sanitation, par excellence, with regard to at least deaths from hydrophobia and snake poison.

NOTES & LEADERETTES, OUR OWN NEWS,

Q.

THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

In view of the assembling of Parliament, speeches are being made by ministers in support of their actions, past and prospective. Lord Rosebery, speaking at Cardiff, declared that the campaign against the House of Lords was inevitable since the Reform Bill of 1884. Government did not propose to touch the House of Lords, but merely to readjust the relations of the Upper Chamber in respect to the House of Commons. He further stated that the first measure in the coming session would be the disestablishment of the church in Wales. Mr. Asquith, addressing a meeting at Hull, said that extensive additions to the Navy were being provided for during the coming year. Government fully appreciate the necessity for the maintenance of British suzeramty on the seas, which is the best guarantee for the security of peace. Referring to the imposition of the cotton duties in India, Mr. Asquith declared that the step taken was essential for the improvement of the finances of that country; and as England held India in trust for the Indians it was impossible to exempt any particular English industries from the operation of the Tariff Acts. We wish the English Cabinet were always true to the trust! Sa W. Vernon Harcourt, in a speech delivered at Derby, declared that the peace of Europe was never more assured than at the present moment. He denied that he was adverse to a strong Navy, or that any dissension existed in the Cabinet. The Chancellor of the Exchequer also said that an early dissolution of Parliament was not contemplated, the intention of the Government being first to pass the principal measures of their programme. The Secretary of State for Wai, speaking at a Liberal meeting at Motherwell, said that Government had resolved to secure the naval predominance of Great Britain. The relations between England and Russia had never been more favourable and friendly than at present. Earl Spencer, in a speech made in Lancashire, said that the naval programme of the Government maintains. British supremacy on the seas and includes a provision for increased armaments and sufficient harhours of refuge in various parts of the world.

At a meeting of cotton spinners at Heywood resolutions were passed accluming that the reimposition of the cotton duties in India would further embarrass the home industry and that the utmost must be done to get the blunder rectified.

THE opinion prevails in shipping circles in London that the movement to induce the Indian Government to legislate in the matter of accommodation on board vessels carrying lascal crews, is inspired by the new labour amounts, with the object of ousting the Asianc in favour of the European seaman.

A Force of seventeen thousand Chinese has been attacked and defeated by the Japanese troops near Harcheng. On the Japanese side 41 were killed and wounded, while the Chinese loss is stated to amount to nearly a thousand. A telegram received from Chefoo states that a portion of the Japanese fleet is bombarding Tenchowfu. H. M. S. Daphne and the American man-of-war Yorktown are cruising in the vicinity. It is also telegraphed that 25,000 Japanese troops landed amid a severe snowstorm at Tunching, thirty-five miles from Weihauwei, a Japanese man-of-war having previously silenced the shore batteries. The British squadron has been cruising in the vicinity.

nity during the past week. The Japanese forces are closing round Weihaiwei, which is now isolated, and an assault on the defences by the Japanese troops is believed to be imminent. No news is obtainable of the state of affairs in the town, as the telegraph line from Weihaiwei to Fientsin has been cut. The Japanese have, however, been repulsed with heavy loss near Weihaiwei after several hours fighting. Foreigners are leaving that town by every available means. A large Japanese force has landed at Ninghai to assist in the investment of Weihaiwei. British, American, French, and German marines have been landed from their respective wirships for the protection of the foreign settlement. According to the latest telegram, Weihaiwei is completely invested by the enemy.

M. FELIX FAURE'S supremacy in France has not commenced happily.

M. Bourgeois having repeatedly failed to form a Cabinet, M. Ribot has been summoned to the Elysees

THE Greek Ministry has resigned. The reason is stated to be that M. Tricoupis had objection to the Crown Prince appearing in the street during a demonstration, and ordering the troops and police not to interfere with the people. M. Nicholas Delyanis, the son of M. P. T. Delyanis, the celebrated statesman and President of a former Greek Ministry, has formed a new Cabinet composed of non-Parliamentary members to carry on the Government during the general elections which the crisis has rendered inevitable.

MR. Cecil Rhodes, addressing a meeting of the Chartered South African Company, said that the new territory that had been acquired by them north of the Zimbesi would be virtually self-supporting. The country was healthy, fertile, and suitable for large bodies of British colonists. Mi. Rhodes prophesied an eventual federation with the Cape, and urged upon his hearers the immense advantage that Colonial expansion conferred upon British trade.

THE town of Kuchan, in Persia, has been destroyed by an earthquake. A number of persons have been killed, one hundred women being buried in one building alone.

An insurrection broke out in Hawan on the 6th instant with the object of restoring Queen Lilinokalam to the throne. After two days' desautory highing the revolution was suppressed. The losses on either side were slight. Eighty persons, mostly of British and American nationality, have been arrested for participation in the rising. It is stated that the 26,000 Japanese population of Hawan is showing signs of restlessness and inclination to acts of turbulence which are causing much anxiety to the Government. An American man-of-war has been ordered to Honolulu.

THE transcar employes of Brooklyn have gone on strike and have assumed a threatening attitude towards any attempt being made to obtain fresh labour. Numerous nots have already occurred, and disturbances have reached such dimensions that the authorities have been compelled to call our seven thousand troops to restore order. Several conflicts have taken place between the troops and the roters, in which many have been injured.

THE agreement on African affirs concluded between Great Britain and France defines the boundaries of the two Powers in Sierra Leone and concedes recipiocal facilities for trading on the land frontier. The French Press rejoices at the satisfactory settlement of this dispute, which removes all chances of future conflicts in the district, and hails it as a good augmry for the negotiations that are proceeding with regard to other questions at issue between England and France in Africa.

LORD Randolph Churchill died on the morning of Thursday, the 24th January, after having been unconscious for the previous thirty-six hours.

A statesman of promise, who had shown the stuff he was made of, is taken away when he had hardly completed his fortysixth year. He had been round the world in search of health but that travel proved or hastened his death. He returned home only to die.

MONSEIGNEUR Izmirlian, the Armenian patriarch, has presented a most resolute letter to the Porte, in which he gives notice of his intention to send an independent person to Sassun to enquire into the truth of the atrocities committed by the Turkish soldiers and officials.

THE Novoe Vienya referring to complaints received from the Pamir region that the Afghans continue to maltreat the inhabitants of Shignan Rashan and to appeals made by the latter for Russian protection, urges upon Government the necessity of a prompt occupation of Shignan and Roshan by the advance posts of observation to legitimate the limit of the Russian southern boundary. The Novoe Vienya declares that Russia should act rapidly in such questions like England without asking for permission.

We confess we do not understand the phrase "to legitimate the limit of a boundary." Plets of kinds have, from time to time, been put forward for extension of territory. They seem not exhausted yet, ALDERMAN Ritchie dismissed the summons against the members of the Albert Club who were charged with infringing the provisions of the Betting Act. Leave to appeal against the decision was granted to the City Solicitor.

THE next or the thirty-first Conversazione of the Mahomedan Literary Society comes off next Wednesday night—9 to 12. Founded by Nawab Abdool Luteef Bahadoor, as Secretary, it is kept up with unfigging zeal by the next incumbent his son, Mr. Abdin Rahman. It is an institution of the city where all faces meet, where you meet friends, the distinguished visitors to, and the great of the city, and are treated to the Latest improvements in science. You have besides rare things collected for your delectation.

MR. C. C. Stevens has been re-appointed an Additional Member of the Governor General's Council. An official, he has, while acting dependently, spoken independently. It is significant of the recent nominations to the Council, that none of the native members has been reappointed. Following Mr. Norton, though from a different cause, the representative of the Madias Legislative Council to the Supreme Council, Mr. Bashyam Ayengar, has resigned his seat. He has not since his election been, and will not be, on account of professional engagements, able to attend. Hence the resignation. The Bombay member Mr. Perozshah Mehta was unable to be present last session. This does not bode good for an elected Supreme Legislative Council.

MR. Nolan is expected back to India by the middle of next month. Mr. Williams, officiating for him as Commissioner of the Rajshahi Division, and unwilling to revert to a District Collectorship, has applied for three months' leave. He has been consoled with the offer of the Chairmanship of the proposed Collecty Commission.

THE Mirror, not Indian but American, edited and published by the prisoners in the Minnesota State Prison, writes :-- prisoners in the Minnesota State Prison, writes:—

"Many a career of crime has ditted from the days that a convict completed a term of imprisonment and found that he could not cast aside disgrace. Think of turning such a character out upon the world without a cent in his pocket, or a human being he can call a friend. Think how little encouragement there is to him, hated, suspected, abandoned as he is, to begin life anew. Think how little encouragement there is to develop the good qualities which he may possess. You can not then be surprised that a criminal once, is a criminal for ever. He is turned adrift empty-hinded, interly dependent, to face a cold and scornful woild. He is despised and rejected by men. The reminders of his crime follow him like a haunting spirit. Aftering the cold and scornful woild. He is despised and rejected by men. The reminders of his crime follow him like a haunting spirit. Aftering this, he meets a soner or a taunting smide. After heroically struggling to reform, he yields again to tempiation. He steals another horse, buighauzes another house or forges another cheque. Not because he was not in cunest when he formed that resolution of reformation in his prison cell, but because, from his own reasoning, there seemed nothing else for him to do. Good resolutions are highly commendable, but they do not satisfy hunger. Noble resolves challenge our warmest admiration, but they do not clothe the naked. The cravings of hunger, the wretchedness of exposure and the hopelessness of despair are powerful incentives to crime. Necessity for the moment overcomes the better purpose. The once pentent prisoner is driven to his life of crime. Society is again made to suffer. The state is again encumbered with additional expense and in spite of all precautions, the rigours of the law have proved if vain."

It is a faithful picture and a powerful appeal. Judges in India too have expressed themselves to that effect or admitted the mefficacy of rejeated sentences. Mr. Justice Noiris of the Calcutta High Court, would not sentence an old offender to a very long term of imprisonment, because the property stolen was small in value and his disability, as a convicted thief, stood in the way of his obtaining an employment. Mr. Knox Wight, the Additional Sessions Judge of the 24-Pergannas, ordered a hardened criminal to transportation for life because of many petty thefts and attempts at thefts, and the Judge found no other means of protecting society against that habitual offender. In the North-Western Provinces, where the percentage of crime to population is greater than in Bengal, they have found what the Moror says to be very true. They have established a Society under the name of Aid to Discharged Pusoners' Society, North-Western Provinces and Oudh. The object is to grant a released prisoner a small subsistence allowance for a short period, and to set him up with the necessary appliances to follow the trade he has learnt in jail, or until such time as he can secure a suitable employment. The Society is registered under Act XXI, of 1860, and is managed by a Committee with Sir Charles Crosthwaite as President and Sir John W. Tyler as Secretary. This is the first experiment of the kind in India which has proved so successful in England and Scotland. The promoters deserve every encouragement and all the aid they require. Their humanity to the released prisoner is as much a matter of sympathy, as the consequent protection to society is deserving of earnest consideration by every member of the community Other Provinces than the N.-W. P. are equally interested in a movement which aims at the reduction of crime and the reform of cummals.

A CONTEMPORARY remarks that "sanitation has reduced the mortality in Bengal jails to less than one-half of what it was twenty-five years ago, but dysentery and lung disease still prevail to an extent which puzzles the medical faculty." There is nothing to puzzle here if those medical men who have given then consideration to the question have their eyes about them. It is only among convicts belonging to the better classes of society that dysentery appears, This is certainly due to over-exertion and insufficiency of food. The juil diet is utterly unsuited to them and they are absolutely unable to live upon it. If the imprisonment be with hard labour, the regulation measure of work is exacted. No wonder, therefore, that they suffer from dysentery. This painful disease is often caused by dry food, and in its earlier stages a little quantity of ghes taken warm with old rice has been known to do good to the patients. The prison diet is not famous for its oily ingredients. Coarse rice, phaseolus radiatus, and a large quantity of potherbs, form the principal fare o the native convicts in the jails of Bengal. In many jails, the prisoners have no allowance of mustard oil to rub on their persons before bathing. So far as the causes of dysentery are understood by the people the wonder is that large as the number is of deaths from that d sease in our juls, the number is not larger yet. The mortality in our pails, from dysentery, is really larger than that shown in the officia returns.

One cause of the lower figure is that, where possible, diseased and dying prisoners are made over to their relatives and friends before death, so that they may die outside the juls. Of those that thus die more die of dysentery than of any other disease.

THE same journal draws the attention of Sir John Lambert to what he calls the handbill misance of Calcutta. At the corner of Government. Place and other fashionable parts of the town, handbills are ceaselessly thrown into every passing or standing carriage, to the infinite annoyance of ladies. Gentlemen also feel the practice to be troublesome. The conduct of the men who thus disturb occupants of carriages is described as "ungallant and wicked." The proper place tot advertisements, it is said, is a newspaper, for "in a newspaper one expects them, one welcomes them, but in posters and handbills they are too obtiusive, and a nuisance, and quite out of place." There can be no doubt that these remarks are called for in view of the evil that has suddenly grown up in our midst. In the two Railway stations also, viz., Howigh and Sedda, we hear that handbills are distributed by thousands every hour at certain seasons. The Railway Companies also drive a roaring trade by placing the walls of their principal stations at the disposal of advertisers. They, however, who distribute handbills and utilize the walls of railway stations, forget that gentlemen seldom read woat is thus thrown into their carriages or posted on the walls of tailway stations. Perhaps, one bill or placard is read out of a hundred. It is so much waste of energy and money. Advertisements inserted in newspapers have far better chances of being read by the general public and are surely read by those whom they concern. The wisdom, again, of preferring weeklies to dailles for one's advertisements can scarcely be questioned. Dailies are washed off the table every day. Weeklies are certainly kept longer.

WHEN Englishmen in India see any one amongst themselves killed by a native, they generally lose their heads. The desire for vengeance becomes strong. Suggestions emanate from every quarter for the prompt change of the penal law in order to make an example of the assassin. Hanging, at such times, appears to them a very merciful mode of dealing with the offender. Death, than which there can be nothing more terrible this side the grave, is sought to be made more terrible still by the devices of ingenuity. It is not necessary to refer to the conduct of General Neil at Campore towards those who were suspected of having spilled English blood during the days of the Sepoy supremacy. The cruelties committed at Delhi by the English soldiery, too often with the knowledge of the superior officers, and at a time when there was not the slightest prospect of resistance from any quarter, are full of the most harrowing details. The story of Hodson's shooting the princes, which was received with a shout of execuation by the whole civilised world, curdles the blood by its details. England has warred with other enemies but never were the worst passions of English soldiers so roused as on the occasion of suppressing the Indian mutinies. The Sepoys had no doubt been guilty of excesses. But the punitive measures adopted by the reconquering army touched not the Sepoys only The unoffending country-people came in for a large share of the vengeance that was exacted by the conquerors, Even Christian missionaries coolly proposed the wholesale extermination of suspected villages. It required all the strength of Viscount Canning to restrain Europeans from further acts of violence upon a population incapable of even crying out under their sufferings. When Justice Norman was stabbed to death by Abdulla, the lifeless body of the Mussalman condemned to death by hanging, was under orders of a British proconsul, burned, to keep him away from his heaven. In the frontier, vengeful justice has sanctioned worse indignity. A murderous Ghazi must not only be hanged and his body burnt, but that body must be shockingly outraged before the final un-Mahomedan fiery disposal by being robed in hogskin. Englishmen often forget that there is nothing so majestic as the silent tread of British Justice as it solemuly pursues the criminal and sends him out of the world. The tragedy at Muridki has, as might be expected, thrown many Englishmen into hysterics. The sad fate of Colonel Money has exexcised many of his brother officers so greatly that one of them has written to the Pioneer proposing that the assassin, instead of being hanged, should be blown away from the mouth of a cannon, The letter which the Pioneer has thought fit to publish, should be known more widely. Here are the strange arguments upon which "Dynamite" urges the doing away of hanging and the substitution of what he considers "a more terruble form of death "

"The terrible tragedy of the Muridki camp suggests the thought whether such crimes should not be met with a more deterrent punishment than death by hanging. This kind of punishment—terrible as it is—does not strike such terror into the hearts of evil-disposed persons as that other—the blowing away from a gin. It seems the only fitting punishment for a solder who takes the life of his superior, be he a commissioned, or a non-commissioned officer. Especially should it be meted out to offenders of the Native Army. In these days of prometion by selection and not by senority, a great deal of heart-burning is caused in the Native Army by the new order of things. In the old days, where the senior man got his promotion whether he was fit or not, the procedure caused no ill feeling, for their was no passing over. It is impossible in these days of high pressure to promote men solely on account of their seniority, u-less they are fitted for advancement in other respects as weil. The commanding officer anxious to have a smart regiment naturally advances the best men he has moder him, but he does so at the risk of creating a great deal of ill-feeling in those passed over. A man of morose disposition, somed by disappointment, broods over the slight and injustice done him (from his point of view); he thinks his strat gone—taken away by the commanding officer who promoted his junior—and he considers the injury can only be wiped out by blood, and, worked up to a point of frenzy, he shoots his commanding officer. He can only be hanged for it. Hanging possesses no terrors for him—he was present at the military execution of Private A, and it was nothing, a kick or two in the air, and all was over. The blowing away from a gin cannot be but more impressive, and must strike terror into every one's heart, as it did into those of the mutineers of 1857. It is only right that Government should protect commanding efficers, who, in furthering the interests of the army, expose themselves to all sorts of personal risks, and this protection, I venture to think, can best be afforded by ordering for every aggravated military crime, the blowing away from a gun of the murderer."

At a time when jurists are seriously discussing the desirability of abolishing capital punishment altogether, the above effusion, which a journal like the Pioneer sees reason to publish, affords a telling commentary on the progress India has made in humanity. All offenders who kill their superior officers are not alike in the eyes of "Dynamite." The European Private may escape with hanging. It is only the dusky Sepoy that is to be blown away from the mouth of a cannon. Probably, the European Private shooting his officer for a slight, intentional or fancied, has some sort of right to do so. Only the native soldier who acts similarly is to be reserved for a severer fate. " Dynamite," however, does not know the Sepoy. To the latter, hanging is a worse form of death than the soldierly death which the cannon inflicts. The Sepay is no coward where mere death is concerned. His religion, however, makes him a coward. Hanging inflicts a death that his religion condemns, if he be a Hindu. The Mussalman also considers hanging as a very sneaking mode of exit from the world.

LORD William Betesford figures in the papers in connection with a criminal cause. The complainant is one Damodar Dass, whose allegation is that the defendant, at the Amritsar Rullway station, used "the most offensive, insulting, and abusive language" to him, and finally struck him two blows on the face. The reason, as assigned by the complainant, was that defendant believed his servant's fingers had been injured by complainant at the Mian Mir station. The Deputy Commissioner of Ludhiana, in whose Court the complaint has been filed, made a reference, under section 185 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, to the Calcutta High Court. Justices Beverley and Banerjee having differed, Mr. Justice O'Kinealy was appointed by the Chief Justice as the third Judge to dispose of the reference. It has been decided that no ground exists for the reference under the section quoted. The papers have accordingly been directed to be returned to the Deputy Commissioner to deal with the case as he likes.

The complamant is reported to have said in course of his statement on oath, that "he bore the insult with great difficulty, and did not take the law in his own hands." Supposing that the defendant did treat the complainant in the manner described, it would have been the best thing if the complainant had not been so meek. To come to Court after suffering an unprovoked assault, which every one, when opposed man to man, ought to be capable of avenging on the spot, is scarcely dignified. Even a gentle slap on the cheek, returned for the heaviest blow, would, under such circumstances, teach more than a fine of Rs. 10 or 20. Some years back a very big official, who often lost his temper, malticated his duftry. The latter, a Mussulman of spirit, inflicted some hard blows in return on his assailant. The official, from that time, became as meek as a lamb. Instead of punishing the duftry by dismissal, he rewarded him for his independence and always acknowledged him as a benefactor. An emment advocate of the Supreme Court, a terror to all, in or out of Court, was similarly brought round by his Bengali "Baboo" to whom he was ever after grateful, even in retnement.

THE Social Puritans of the City, under the ægis of the Puritanical Governor, made a move to purge at of its Social Evil. The Commissioner of Police, belonging to a different School, set his face against any new law which could alone summarily clear the metropolis of the necessary Evil. But the reformers proving superior, a Bill has been introduced in the Bengal Legislative Council empowering the Governor and the Police Commissioner to suppress the evil. The Bill does not propose to eradicate it, but only to punish tonting. "Any police officer, above the rank of native constable, and such other officer as the Local Government or the Commissioner of Police may specially appoint in that behalf, may arrest without warrant any person, who in his sight and in a public place solicits any other person to commit an act of immorality, if the name and address of such person be unknown to him, and cannot be ascertained by him then and there." The punishment for such solicitation is a fine not exceeding fifty rupees or imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any period not exceeding eight days.

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, January 26, 1895.

SIR TRIVULLUR MUTHUSAWMY IYER.

There quietly passed away, at three in the morning of Friday the 25th January, a great Indian in the person of Sir Trivullur Muthusawmy lyer, K.C.I.E., the native Judge of the Madras High Court. He had been in indifferent health and was about to go on leave when, on the 15th instant, after leaving Court, he felt a pain in his legs. That pain developed into erysipelas and ended his life. He was conscious till the last moment and died a quiet and peaceful death, as he had lived a simple and unostentatious life, while respected by those who knew him

He was born on the 28th January, 1832. After passing the B. L. examination of the Madras University, he entered the public service at the age of 22, in 1854, as Record Keeper in the Collector's Office at Tanjore. After this initiation in the revenue department, he was transferred to the educational as Deputy Inspector of Schools, in the district of Tanjore, South Arcot. It was not till May 1857, however, that he was put into his proper line, the judicial, when he became District Munsiff of three Taluqs in the same District. There he made such a mark that he was selected by the Governor Sir Charles Trevelyan as a member of the Imam Commission charged with the delicate and responsible duty of resuming or assessing with a quit rent grants of rent-free lands. After a labour of two years on the Commission, he was made a Deputy Collector and continued in the revenue service in charge of four taluas till the year 1865, when he became Principal Sudder Amin of Mangalore. In three years more he was a Presidency Magistrate for the city of Madras. From the Police he was drafted to the Small Cause Court. Having thus, in various capacities in different departments, qualified himself for the last and the highest place open to a Native of the country and given evidences of his legal acumen, he was selected an officiating Judge of the Madras High Court in July 1878, which he so much adorned. He was confirmed in the post in 1883. With his elevation to the High Court Bench he was created a Companion of the Indian Empire and for his eminence on that Bench, he was subsequently made a Knight Commander of the same Most Eminent Order.

The Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science.

210, Bow-Bazai Street, Calcutta.

(Session 1894-95.)

Lecture by Mr. B. Chaudhuri, B. A., B. Sc., on Monday, the 28th Inst., at 5-30 P. M. Subject: Biology—Past History of Animals and their Geographical Distribution.

Lecture by Dr. Nilratan Sarkai, M. A., M. D., on Wednesday, the 30th Inst., at 5-30 P. M. Subject: Chemical Physiology—General Review of the Protoids.

Lecture by Mr. B. Chaudhuri, B. A., B. Sc., on Saturday, the 2nd Yeb., at 4 P. M. Subject: Practical Biology-Frog (continued).

Lecture by Mr. B. Chaudhuti, B. A., B. Sc., on Saturday, the 2nd I'eb., at 5 P. M. Subject: General Biology—The theory of Evolution. Admission Fee, Rs. 4 for Physics, and Rs. 4 for Chemistry; Rs. 6 for both Physics and Chemistry; Rs. 4 for Physiology; Rs. 4 for General Biology; Rs. 6 for complete course of Physiology and Biology. The charge for a single-lecture is 2 Annas.

MAHENDRA LAL SIRCAR, M.D.,

Honorary Secretary.

Sir Trivullur Muthusawmy Iyer was a true Dharmavatar—an embodiment of Justice. He was not only the ornament of his own Court, but his judgments commanded respect in the courts of the other Presidencies as well. His European colleagues had the highest admiration for his character and sound knowledge and exposition of law, and wondered if any of his judgments were not upheld by the Privy Council. Of the Indians who have sat on the Benches of the several High Courts, the name of Sir Trivullur Mathusawmy Iyer will be longest remembered.

All the Courts at Madras were closed yesterday to mark their sense of the loss occasioned by that death. Mr. Justice Shephard lamented the death as that of a Judge of great capacity for taking pains, of extreme scrupulousness in work, of wide and varied knowledge of law, and of an unswerving sense of justice and firmness.

Who is to be the next Native Judge of the Madras High Court? Dewan Bahadur S. Subramania Iyer has already officiated in the place, and every eye points to him after dropping the sad tear for the death that makes the place vacant.

THE SHUFFLING TARIFF POLICY.

Manchester has not been appeased after all. The excise duty upon Indian cotton does not sweeten the pill of the new tariff. Mammonopolis is up in arms. It still harps on the cry of Protection. An organised agitation is being set up against the re-imposition of the cotton duties. The timid policy of March last has thus been discomfited. It has now been abandoned without pleasing any party. It is thus that injustice always pays itself, and well were it if the Government took the lesson to heart.

As to the talk of Protection, who does not know that it is all moonshine? As between Lancashire with all her resources of civilization, her wealth and art and knowledge, on the one hand, and poor India, on the other, just stepping on an industrial career in imitation of the Western people, the suggestion is absurd. And it is not we only who say this. The Finance Minister himself has shown how unjust is the clamour. After a thorough enquiry into the condition of the cotton industry in Bombay, Sir James Westland has put on record a minute which completely exposes the hollowness of the cry of Protection. The Indian mills work at great disadvantages which more than outweigh a small 5 per cent. duty on the English imports. These disadvantages arise from the cost of machinery which has to be all imported from England, from freight, packing, insurance, building and erecting, cost of European supervision, cost of coal which lies next door to Manchester, including depreciation of machinery, which is much greater in India, and the greater cost, in the long run, under the head of wages. These are drawbacks of a serious character enough to entitle the Indian industry to the most liberal fiscal treatment. And they are not all. The products of these mills do not actually enter into any competition with those of Lancashire. Our yarns are scarcely higher than 30s., Indian cotton being unsuitable for higher counts, while the import of American cotton is out of the question. In the face of these facts, it is a mere fiction to talk of Indian competition with Manchester and of Indian protection against her.

Admitting, however, for argument's sake, that there was such a thing as Indian competition, the proposals

January 26, 1895.

of the Indian Government of a countervailing excise | ed to only carrying out the behests of the appointing duty of 31/2 per cent., and of the line of taxation being drawn above counts of 24, were liberal in the extreme. Certainly they should have satisfied the demands of the most insatiable of the so-called free-traders. But they are, it is evident, not enough. The Secretary of State goes further, and though he is not able to give reasons for his interference with proposals arrived at on the spot after careful examination of facts, he puts his foot down on a 31/2 per cent. ad valorem duty and the line of 24s. as the right one. He draws the line lower down at 20 and levels up the duty to 5 per cent., on the ostensible ground of preventing the slightest possibility of protection, where there was no protection at all. Lord Elgin does not envy the responsibility of the man who imputes motives to the Secretary of State. Unfortunately, that responsibility sits so lightly on one's shoulders that it is not the Indian press alone that has ventured to make the imputation. The English press has in this been in perfect accord with the press of this country. The voice of the (London) Daily News has, in view of this unanimity, really degenerated into a whine. Surely, the measure was devised as compromise and, as such, it could not go farther, or be more on one side and less on the other. Well might the Secretary of State reckon upon the satisfaction of Manchester. But he was reckoning without his host, if he did so. While the world looked aghast at these tactics of a so-called Liberal Government-tactics professedly employed to propitiate the Manchester votes-what does Manchester do? Certainly, if there was a case in which a graceful acceptance of so much concession would have been becoming, it was here. But there is no grace, to say nothing of gratefulness. Her attitude is anything but creditable. Such a state of things predicts real danger to India. The English Cabinet, Liberal or Conservative, have begun to rule India in the interests of party politics. The Supreme Legislative Council has enunciated a new doctrine of loyalty to the Cabinet and Parliament. It has been broadly asserted by the very highest political authority in India that, as Parliament and the Ministry are supreme, it is the duty of the Government of India to always accept, without serious protest, every measure that those authorities may recommend. It is useless to select for notice this or that individual member for the length to which he has gone in the matter of enforcing by his utterances this novel doctrine of official loyalty, when all the members of the Government have accepted it after deliberation. The non-official members have resisted it to a man. far as soundness of argument is concerned, it is entirely on the side of the opposition. Lord Elgin has made the case worse by attempting to justify it. The attitude in one which, from its very nature, is incapable of justification. Parliament, through the Cabinet, appoints the members of the Supreme Council. That Council is certainly under the general control of the appointing authority. But it does not follow from this that it is bound to obey the behests of the appointing authority in the details of Indian administration. Either the Council is deliberative or it is not. If it has the power of deliberation, it goes without saying that it is certain to come at times to conclusions other than those of the appointing authority. If it is not deliberative, the sooner it is abolished the better for both India and England, for who would pretend to justify such a costly machinery if its duty extend-authorities in England? It would not require an English nobleman, taken though he is from second . class of English politicians, with a number of highly paid Councillors by his side, to only execute orders received, by the telegraph or the mail, from his masters at St. Stephen's or Downing Street. To pretend that the Viceregal Council is deliberative but that its deliberations are expected to be always in accord with the conclusions arrived at in Parliament or by the Secretary of State for India, would, on the face of it, be absurd. The only other plausible view is that, though vested with deliberative authority, it has not the power of initiation and, hence, while it is the Secretary of State's to initiate a particular measure relating to the Government of this country, the Viceroy with his Council is at liberty to work out its details. Even then the Indian Viceroy must take care to walk along the precise line chalked out for him. Judging, however, from the manner in which the Indian Tariff has been dealt with by the Viceroy and his Council, can even this much of freedom be said to be possessed by them? Was the Viceroy left any liberty to settle even those questions of detail that are connected with the Secretary of State's financial policy? Has he not been ordered to levy an excise duty on the particular quality of cotton yarns manufactured in India? If in the matter of the Tariff and the excise duty connected with it, the Secretary of State has been able to do what he has done, with the perfect acquiescence of the Viceroy and his Council, what is there to prevent the same authority from forcing some other measure upon India with the same loyal acquiescence on the part of those in India who were hitherto supposed to be responsible for the good government of this country?

The fact is, the position taken up by Lord Elgin and his Council is utterly untenable. To preserve the reputation of their independence they would be forced to admit that they have the right of independent action only in such questions as have not been thought out for them by the Secretary of State. The moment, however, the latter thinks out for them, their liberty of action is gone. The people of England are agitating for the abolition of the House of Lords as a second branch of their legislature. The House, however, and its friends have adduced many cogent arguments for showing the error of the agitation. Here in India, although nobody has yet begun the agitation for the abolition of the Supreme Legislature, yet that Legislature, through its own members, has given the world abundant grounds for its immediate dissolution.

Cetters to the Editor.

DR. SAMBHU CHUNDER MOOKERJEE.

DR. SIR,--Mr. F. H. Skrine's second article, in the National Magazzine, on this great journalist, reproduced in your columns, seems to me to be a very short one. I expected that Mr. Skrine would exhaustively deal with the subject with the fascination of his pen. The history of the origin and growth of the Hindoo Patriot of which Dr. Sambhu Chunder Mookerjee was an active conor which Dr. Sambhu Chunder Mookerjee was an active Constructor and supporter, should have been narrated at greater length. As Doctor Mookerjee corrected and improved the following lines about the history of the Hindio Patrus in my biography of the Hon'ble K. D. Pal published in 1886, may I solicit the favour of your reproducing them in your columns?

"One Baboo Madhu Sudan Roy of Bara Bazar, who had a Press and state the street, first conceived the idea of stateins a newspace."

at Kalakur Street, first conceived the idea of starting a newspaper, and it was from his Press that the Hindoo Patriot was first issued in the beginning of the year 1853.* The first Editors were the three well-known brothers of the Ghose family at Simla, viz., Babus Srinath Ghose, Girish Chunder Ghose, and Khetra Chundra Ghose. Babu Sreenath Ghose was then head clerk of the Calcutta Coolectorate, under Mr. Arthur Grote, who has now retired. They were assisted now and then by Babu Hurish Chunder Mukherjee, a clerk in the Military Auditor General's office (now called the Military Comptroller General's office) on a monthly salary of Rs. 100. After 3 or 4 months, the brothers Ghose gradually severed their connection with the paper, and the entire task of editing thus fell on Hurish Chunder Mukherjee. In those dark days of the pre-University period of English Education in Bengal, the native journalist had uphill work to perform. He had no constituency to support and cheer him. The European community took no interest in Indian affairs, and native newspapers in English, however ably conducted, were little appreciated by the public. There were few in those days who could read English newspapers, and fewer still who could afford to pay for them. Even the better classes were apt to think that a paper edited by a native could not be up to the mark. Hence the circulation of the Hindso Patriot was confined to a few uative only, and received very little public support. The location of the office and the press in one of the back lanes of Bara Bazar, moreover stood in the way of its success.

The proprietor accordingly transferred it to a house in front of the well-known shop now situated at No. 12 Radha Bazar Street. He hoped also, by this removal to one of the busiest parts of the town, to secure printing orders. But this expedient failed to produce the desired effect, and the Hindos Patriat was looked upon as a bad speculation. During this period of despondency, Hurish Chunder continued, without any remuneration, to edit the paper. He regarded it as a labour of love. No pecuniary prospect was necessary to keep alive the spirit of disinterestedness that was within him.

But a crisis arrived which threatened the very existence of the Hindoo Patriot. The paper did not pay; on the contrary, the losses incurred were great. The proprietor, impatient of an undertaking which offered no hopes of success, determined, after a few months, to dispose of the press and the paper to the Editor. Hurish had suffered great inconvenience in having to come to Radha Bazar every week and staying there all night. The offer was a reasonable one and it was formally accepted. We can form but a faint idea of the joy which must have thrilled through every nerve of the great literatur, as he formed his future plans. The Hindoo Patriot was to be his own; he could mould it as he liked! But the difficulties which beset his path were not to be easily overcome. He was a poor clerk, and the purchase of a press was far beyond his slender means. But Hurish was determined, and for once the poet was wrong when he sang:

'Oh, ever thus from childhood's hour, I' ve seen my fondest hopes decay.'

By dint of the strictest economy, a sum of money sufficient to meet all demands was collected, and the purchase completed. The Hindoo Patriot passed into new hands, and Bengal, at least, has benefitted by the change.

Having realized his grand object, Hurish Chunder secured the lease of a house at Bhowanipore near his own and had the press and office removed to it. The building stood on the road to Kalighat and opposite to Moulvi Habibiul Hossein's mansion.† The ostensible proprietor was his brother Babu Haran Chunder Mukherjee, who was appointed manager. The annual subscription was then Rs. 10; but even at this rate the Hindoo Patriot had scarcely a hundred subscribers. It consisted of two sheets of a smaller size than the paper now issued, and was published by Babu Wooma Churan Dey. But as might be easily inferred, the 'get up' of the paper was not very satisfactory. With the removal of the press, however, to the neighbourhood of the late Sudder Dewany Adalut, its financial prospects became more assuring. The educated Bhowanipore public and the native gentlemen connected with the bar and the office of the Sudder Court, (who mostly resided in that neighbourhood) felt a sort of local interest and pride in the paper, and began to patronize it. At that time there was no other English weekly in Bengal, conducted by natives, except the Hindoo Intelligencer, edited by Babu Kashi Prosad Ghose; and the only journals of the same kind in the other Indian Presidencies were the Madran Riing Sum, and the Hinda Harbinger of Bombay. Amongst the earliest subscribers to the Hindoo Patriot was the well-known Indian statesman Mr. Sashia Shastri, now Regent of Puddocotta. From the year 1853 down to the close of the year 1855. Hurish Chunder conducted his paper with great ability, and at considerable sacrifice of time and money. In 1856 the Widow-Marriage question occupied much public attention and Hurish Chunder lent his powerful pen to the advocacy of reform. But though the independence with which the Patriot was conducted was not exactly calculated to secure the good will of the public---particularly the Indian public who, in matters of reform, are strongly conservative---the Editor never swerved from what he considered to be his path of duty. No consideration, however important, ever led him to sell his conscience, and notwithstanding the frequent pecuniary losses he had to bear, he uniformly refused to receive outside assistance, even when voluntarily offered by friends and admirers.

There are only two instances in which we find him breaking his resolution. It is said, that on one occasion the Patriotic zemindars Rajahs Protap Chunder Singh and Ishur Chunder Singh, of Paik-para, proposed to make him a grant of a comparatively large sum of money to reimburse his losses, and to enable hin to improve the Hindoo Patriot. But nothing tempted, he declined the kind offer, thankfully yet firmly. When, however, the type showed progressive signs of decay and complaints began to pour in, that the broken type and numerous typographical errors unduly taxed the eye of the reader, he at last consented to receive the proffered aid. He knew that to maintain his own self-respect, as well as the independence of his paper, he must rely upon personal resources and his own high character. He valued his independence and honour more than anything else. That he was a man of the highest character and rare courage, is attested to by his colleagues still living, among whom stands first Babu Sambhu Chunder Mookerjee, Editor of Reis and Rayyet. As a journalist he published what he thought proper without regard to popularity or interest."

The above extract is long, but corrected as it was by Dr. Mookerjee himself, at my earnest and respectful request, it should be read along with Mr. Skrine's able article.

Mr. Skrine's allusion to the pamphlet the Doctor wrote in 1860 is somewhat incomplete. The Doctor having written the pamphlet indicting the policy of James Wilson, thought it most inopportune to publish it in India at that time, i. e., immediately after the hurricane of the Sepoy Mutiny. The pamphlet was therefore sent to Mr. Malcolm Lewin, the famous second Judge of the Sudder Court of Madras, who was suspended by the Local Government together with two of his colleagues for having protested against the injustice done to the Hindus in cases between Christians and Hindus (vide my Reminiscences and Ancedotes of Great Men of India, p. 87). Mr. Malcolm Lewin, than whom the Hindus had never a sincerer friend, was then in England, and it was this gentleman who, struck by its literary power, got it printed and published in London in that year.

As Editor of the Samachar Hindusthani, Dr. Mookerjee, by his writings, created enemies in official quarters, and the abrupt close of his career in the North-Western Provinces was not a little due to that circumstance.

As regards the short paragraph of Mr. Skrine describing Dr. Mookerjee's career at Moorshedabad, I have to remark that it is too concise to be of any use to the public. Mr. Skrine as a Government servant and a Civilian to boot is the last person to describe those intricate relations which Dr. Mookerjee had with the numerous English officials. It was Mr. Heely who saved Dr. Mookerjee from the intrigues of his enemies.

As regards Dr. Mookerjee's career in the Tipperah Raj, Mr. Skrine seems to have suppressed facts in regard to his relationship with the local political agents which I candidly confess could not be unfolded in a public journal without serious detriment to the reputation of those political officers.

In conclusion I hope Mr. Skrine will, in his next article, review

In conclusion I hope Mr. Skrine will, in his next article, review at length the literary side of Dr. Mookerjee's character.

RAM GOPAL SANYAL.

Taltolla, January 21.

A PERMANENT SETTLEMENT FOR THE WHOLE OF INDIA.

Dear Sir and Editor,...I and many others have to thank the Morning Post of Allahabad for reproducing, in its issue of the 9th instant, Captain Arthur Banon's admirable speech at the recent meeting of the National Congress at Madras on the advisability of a new Permanent Settlement for the whole of the Indian Empire. Although agreeing with him as to the advantages of the suggested Settlement for the whole of India there is in my mind one reservation and that a most serious and insurmountable one. If such a law were once passed and sanctioned, would the Indian Government of the present or some future day be bound or compelled by any means whatsoever to keep their promises? The public, I feel confident, are well aware how for years and years the covetous and envious eyes of the Bengal and Behar officials have been fixed on the financial prosperity of the Zemindars of those provinces, and how they, with remeasurement and fresh record of rights, &c., &c., have been working underhand and endeavour-

[•] From the Frend of India of that year, it appears that the paper was first published in June 1853.

[†] I have been informed by a friend of Babu Hurish Chunder that before he purchased the Press from Babu Madhu Sudan Roy in 1858, he had transferred the office of his paper from 12 Radha Bazar to Bhownipore and published his paper from a private press whose name was, if I recollect aright, Bidya Jima Gyan Sancharmi.

ing to the best of their abilities to upset Lord Cornwallis's promises and force on the Zemindars fresh liabilities.

But let us, for the sake of argument, surmise that the permanent settlement in Behar and Bengal is withdrawn in favour of a uniform and permanent settlement for the whole of the Indian Empire. Who is there in India, I ask, who would, after seeing the fate of the Famine Insurance Fund, for one instant put any faith on the solemn assurances of the Indian Government that a new and universal settlement would be permanent and final? If that Government could break the solemn assurances it has repeatedly made concerning the Famine Fund, it would not be wanting in pretexts when it suited its purposes to break its new covenant and promises.

Why is it that, as a rule, the Zemindars of Behar and Bengal are, comparatively speaking, so outspoken and independent, whilst the Taluqdars of the North-Western Provinces, Outh and other parts of India are so cringing, so subservient and so time-serving? It is that in Bengal and Behar there is a permanent settlement, whereas in the North-Western Provinces, Oudh and other parts of India the temporary settlements make the Taluqdars, so to of India the temporary sectuaments make the raluquars, so to say, the slaves and tools of the Executive, and their Collectors, as I was once informed by a Commissioner of Berilly, "were kings in their own districts" and have the power to ruin them if they dare to oppose their wishes, if they do not lend them their elephants to go out shooting, and do not lay daks and offer their carriages when the Burra Sahib wants the use of them and for the hire of which the Burra Sahlo wants the use of them and for the hire of which the said Burra Sahib receives travelling allowances from Government. It was this sort of thing which was the true and real cause of the Civil Service Commission of which, if I liked, "I could a tale unfold." but I will only partially disclose what "I could a tale unfold." but I will only partially disclose what I do know. Lord Randolph Churchill did not come out to India to pry into and expose the shortcomings of Government officials but he came out here as a sportsman to shoot with his own rifle a royal Bengal tiger. Whilst out here, and especially whilst in camp, being a man of great observation and a man of the world, in camp, being a man or great observation and a man or in worm, he clearly perceived how the land lay, and what he did not under-stand was clearly and lucidly explained by an intelligent English-speaking landholder in a strictly private conversation. By what he had seen and by this conversation Lord Randolph Churchill came to the conclusion that reform was necessary, and on his return to England forced the Civil Service Commission on the Indian Government. How the scope of that Commission was curtailed is now a matter of history, but the credit will ever remain with Lord Randolph Churchill of being an honest and far-seeing statesman who did his best to secure for the people of India not only Gov-cinment Reform but also considerable financial improvement for the Indian Empire.

India has been for years and years the milch cow of the British nation, and English statesmen at the head of affairs, for the sake of power and place, have not failed to milk her dry--even to the last drop--particularly for the benefit of the Covenanted Civil Service. Many members of that Service receive each a supend of 4,000 rupees a mouth, and there are not few who make half a lac of rupees a year. Several draw 2,200 rupees a month, and they are many who are able to save quatter of a lac a year and this, exclusive of the pension of £1,000 per annum they carn after comparatively a few years' service.

after comparatively a few years' service.

The interests of India have, time and again, been wantonly sacrificed to England—not to the people of England but to and for the advantage of the individuals, the statesmen in power at the time being, to enable them to continue that power, and not for the good of the people of India themselves. I will, as an instance of this policy, take the destruction of the salt trade and manufacture on the coasts of Orissa and Bengal and parts of the Northern Coasts of the Madras Presidency. During the last flux to the best of my recollection and belief during the years of the India Company—it was to the best of my recollection and belief during the years 1853–54 or -55, that the discussion was going on in Parliament concerning the renewing of the charter to the Company. To enable the Directors to secure a majority in the Lower House for the sametoning of that charter it was found necessary to destroy the enormous manufacture of salt that was carried on in the Government Salt Golalis of Orissa and Bengal. Thus to satisfy the greed of a few mining and shipowning interests, hundreds, nay, thousands of poor hard-working men were thrown our of employment, men who used to supplement the cultivation of an acce or two of ground by salt manufacture for the Government of India, and who, after the suppression of the Salt Golalis, were prohibited with the ocean at their doors from manufacturing even salt enough to preserve the fish Providence supplied them with, on the pain and penalties of prosecution, fine and imprisonment, as was clearly proved by enquiries recently instituted by the Secretary of State for India at the instance of Lord Stanley of Alderley.

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely caring cases of all kinds. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Sireet, Westminster, London, S. W.

What happened to this charter? It did not last two years, but

What happened to this charter? It did not last two years, but the salt industry of Bengal and Orissa, which had existed from the most ancient times, was destroyed for ever. The reison of the shippers and mine owners, particularly of the former, was that their vessels should not be sent out to India in ballast, that the salt exported from England would more that pay for its export and leave a good margin for profit, and the ships would return laden with country produce, the salt so imported would find a ready market throughout Bengal and Bihar where its manufacture had been prohibited and declared contraband. But here again Providence is stepping in, for the salt tiade is tast shipping out of British hands into those of German, rule the return of the Excise Department of Calcutta of salt shipped from German ports so that now one can say that the Bengal and Orissa salt trade has been secrified for the profit and branch for German has been sacrificed for the profit and benefit of Germans.

At this very moment we have the strange anomaly of not only the people of India but Anglo-Indians of all classes entreating to be taxed, but for sooth such taxation of the Indian people may remotely injure the interests of the Manchester manufacturer and so weaken the prospect of those in power at the next general elections. Can history shew a parallel to such a political farce as that of a nation demanding to be taxed and a Government refusing to tax them?

There is not the slightest doubt that a Permanent Settlement for the whole of the Indian Empire is a great and glorious conception. There is not the slightest doubt but a permanent settlement would, where it does not at present exist, double, ave treble, the actual value of land, that it would throw open the whole country to increased agricultural enterprise and bring thousands and millions of pounds sterling to be invested in India from Great Britain, for with the present insecurity of temporary settlements who date invest their capital in land? Or, if it is so invested, who date increase their cultivated area or improve the irregation of their crops? It they do they will find at the end of a quarter of a century's hard work that the settlement officer will come down and they will be mulcted at the very least fifty per cent, of their annual profits. This is no exaggeration. To corroborate what I state I give an extract from a letter from a Zemindar in a district in the North Western Provinces under settlement, dated 7th January 1895:--

"The weather though now and again cloudy has been all one could desire and the crops are now looking very promising. The recent showers, however, have not been altogether an unmixed blessing to us for we hear from —pore where the settlement operations are still going on, that the rain there has so changed the appearance of the fields that land which formerly would have been registered of the 31d class (settlement nomenclature) is now being entered in the 2nd class and even in some cases as 1st class land, which as you know means an equivalent enhancement in the yearly land revenue."

All honest statesmen will, I feel perfectly certain, agree with me that it will be quite time enough to extend the Permanent Settlement to the whole of the Indian Empire, when the Indian Government has learnt to act fairly and justly and not to violate its most solemn promises, or if such Settlement is secured by an Act of Pathament.

Longview, Derah Dhoon, January 10, 1895. Andrew Hearsey, Captun, Late H. M. Service.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL CONGRESS.

Sir,... Your leader on the Indian Medical Congress has produced an impression on those who really know the actual state of helplessness of them dieal profession. With all their vaunted pride, most of theme head men do not know what they are doing when treating a case. They follow the antiquated routine practice of subserviency to their predecessors in prescribing, whether the case he an ordinary or a difficult one. They generally follow the plausible arguminum add homition and think themselves perfectly justified in all their actions. Intellectuality is lost in the gloom of official or non-official consultations. Old Indian practitioners in their advanced experience do not think it a shame to call a European medical man just out of his teens, for consultation.

The practice of medicine is generally quackery, or, if better, empiricism. The reign of law is ignored and some have the impudence to ridicule the existence of laws in medicine. Laplace and Newton have been honoured, but their illustrious countrymen of the present generation especially take delight in disacknowledging those laws. The universe is guided by laws. Only medicaments, one would suppose from observation of what is called orthodox practice, do not operate by laws on diseased organisms.

The laws of antipathy, home opathy and isopathy which are handed down to us from the time of Charaka, and successively acknowledged by Hippocrates, Galen, &c., are to be ignored. Dr. Lauder Brunton said that the art is in an unprogressive state but does it not occur that there is even retrogression?

" Evolution ever climbing after some ideal good,

And reversion ever dragging evolution in the mud."

This sanhedrim of pedants is essentially a self-laudation society. An Elliottic dream has been realized. Dr. Harvey, unlike his great predecessor, the discoverer of the circulation of blood, has found out a rich Utopian plateau. Dr. Hart was simply heartless in his crusade against pilgrimages. The cholera germ has at last found a good soil in his brain. But Lord Elgin came to the rescue; otherwise it would have been a tale of sanitation with violence. After all, this was a conclave of "tonguesters" to display their united wisdom.

But, it may be said for these medical worthies that they do not come to help suffering humanity. They have nothing to do with the poor living by the side of the rich. Such is their declaration. They advise only those who can pay for their own comforts, and that advice must be paid for in coin. As medical men, they have nothing to do with a world of filth and squalor and poverty. Themselves liking "champagne and the Order of the Bath," they live for those that drink champagne and have their eyes turned towards that distinction. Absolutely, by their faith and learning they are for men who can pay and not for those who are to be paid. So all their thoughts are concentrated on their patrician chents.

As to the expression of your opinion against the unprogressiv: state of pathology, you are somewhat inaccurate. The pathology of diseased organs has vasily progressed, but not so the general pathology, especially pertaining to functional detangements or where the lesions leave behind insufficient mark. It is not in the pathological progress that the defect can be found. But it is in the rational application of medicine, the scope of the laws by which medicines act, to the diseased organs or organisms lies the halting point. There a scrutinizing observation not of an ordinary character is wanted. Experience on the solid basis of trustworthy facts can only bring forth the desired result. It is not in the administration of compounds but of single medicines that experiment can proceed.

HEM CHANDRA RAY CHAUDHIRI, L. M. S.

VASUDEVA VIIAYAM.

Vasudiva Vijayam, revised and enlarged by Rama Natha Tarkaratna. The Vasudeva Vijayam professes to be a Mahakavya. If a Ml-chehha may presume to give an opinion, Pandit Rama Natha Tarkaratna has succeeded admirably in catching the spirit of the compositions which go by the name of Mahakavya or Epics. The style of these poems is somewhat artificial, and perhaps a little too flowery for Western tastes. But there seem to be indications that our author has dipped into European poetry. Some of the stanzas our author has dipped into European poetry. Some of the stanzas are certainly very beautiful, and the whole poem is carefully finished and polished. The time laber has not been spared. The result is a work which, we cannot help thinking, must meet with the approval of the author's learned countrymen.

The subject of the poem is the war between Krishna and Indra for the possession of the Parijata tree, which was produced by Krishna when, with the help of the Ditiyas, he churned the sea of milk, using the mountain Mandaia as a churning stick. Narada, who is often represented in Indian poetry as loving to stir up estrife, comes and represents to Krishna that Indra had acted wrongly in carrying off this tree which Krishna had been the main agent in producing (Ind Canto, stanza 20). He accordingly tries to induce Krishna to refemand the tree, and produces one marvellousin producing (.1 ind Canto, stanza 20). He accordingly tries to induce Kirshna to telemand the tree, and produces one marvellously fragrant flower from it, which he had obtained by propitiating India's gardeners. For, as the Sage Narada states, in the most pathetic way, Indra, though entieated over and over again, had refused to give him a single flower. However, Krishna is deaf to the suggestions of Narada. He observes, "Since I, the younger household be a produced to the suggestions of Narada. He observes, "Since I, the younger of India, am obedient to his orders, and very much attachnot the day of the day Natada "the strife-maker" is not so easily disposed of. He determines to work through female influence. He instigates a lady named Kalavati to deal with Satyabhama, one of the wives of Krishna. Kalavati informs her that Narada had brought the flower in order to present it to her, and that Krishna had snatched it away, and pliced it in the hair of Rukmini, a rival wife. Satvablama, or Satva, as she seems to be called by the poet, is irritated by the spretae injuria former, and has an attack of "nerves." After sandalwood and the other remedies usually employed in these cases have fuled, Krishna is sent for. He at last takes a mighty oath, "If I do not easily disperse the hosts of the gods, and conquer the monarch of the gods by the might of my valour, and bring back, DEAFNESS An essay describing a really genuine Cine for Deaf-ness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post face.—Arthur E. E. defurms and similar appliances entire-ty superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

O fair one, the Parijata tree, may you be, O lowely one, estranged from me as much as you please." Accordingly Kriahna lays the matter before his council, and an ambassador is sent. But Indra, the king of the gods, refuses to surrender the tree, and Krishna marches against him. After the army of Indra has been reduced to stratts, Krishna and Indra meet in single combat; but just a Krishna is about to hurl his terrible discus, Brahma intervenes as a peace-maker.

Matters are arranged amicably. "Indra gave to the enemy of Matters are arranged amicably. "Indra gave to the enemy of Madhu (Krishna) the Parijata-tree, the ornament of the city of the gods, that fiulfils all the wishes of petitioners, as if it were his own manifested glory." The principal charm of the book lies in its descriptions. That of Krishna's city of Duraka in the first book, and of the sunrise in the fifth, may be instanced. But Indian scenery, Indian vegetation, and the conditions of Indian life altogether are hardly intelligible to Europeans. European poets deal in the service and might be the sun the service and this poets in the service and the in roses and nightingales, and Hindu poets in lotuses and Brahmany ducks. The moon befriends one kird of lotus, and the sun another. All these allusions are perfectly natural, but they make thorny the path of the translator.

We cannot take leave of Pandit Rama Natha Tarkaratna, without congratulating him on the skill with which he wields the ancient classical language of India. Probably few of our English ancient classical language of India. Probably tew of our English pandits could, in these degenerate modern days, write a poem of equal length in Virgilian hexameters without leaving "Priscian a little scratched."—C. H. Tawney, in the Imperial and Asiatic Quarterly Review and Oriental and Colonial Record. January, 1895.

THE HANDFUL OF THINGS WE KNOW.

THE HANDFUL OF THINGS WE KNOW.

SEVERAL years ago an American bimorist and poet published some verses called "Luttle Breeches" This was an odd name given to a very small boy who was caught out in a tremendous snowstorm, and finally found in some hay quite a distance from the house. However the boy got there bothered everybody to explain. It was certain he never could have walked. So his father said the angels must have done it; "they just stooped down and toted him to where it was safe and warm, he said." The poetry about it (supposed to have been written by the youngster's father) starts off in this way;

I don't go much on religion,
I never am't had no show;
But I've a middling tight grip, sir,
On the handful of things the know.

That's it; the handful of things we know. There aren't many of'em, but there are a few. And one of them is this: That for a hundred results there is only one cause. Nature develops and makes differ-

On the handful of things I know.

That's it; the handful of things we know. There aren't many of 'em, but there are a few. And one of them is this: That for a hundred results there is only one cause. Nature develops and makes differences; never a new force.

Here, for example, is an incident which shows our meaning. About Christmas, 1889, Mr. E. B. Wright had an attack of influenza. Previous to this he had always been strong and hearty. Well, he got over the influenza; still, it had given him (as he says) "a shake." After this he got along fairly well, until February of this year (1892) when the influenza attacked him again. This time the maindy "meant business." Nearly every bone and miscle in his body ached like some teeth. His skin was hot and dry, and to bed he was obliged to go For sixteen days he was under a doctor. At the end of that time he found himself alive and that was about all you could say for bim.

In his letter he goes on to tell what happened next. "I had a foul taste in the mouth," he says, "and my teeth and tongue were covered with a thick simpy phlegm. My wife says my tongine was like an oyster shell, and Pm sure it was rough as nuturing grater. What I ate, which wasn't much gave me pain in the chest and sides. After a monthful or two I felt full and blown out, and I used to swell to a great size. By-and-by a hacking cough set in and my breathing got short and quick. At night I lay for hours gasping for breath, and often coughed so I was aftend I should bin at a blood vessel, I got weaker and weaker and weaker and weaker and weaker and weaker and was like be oken-winded horse. The doctor said it was asthma, but he wasn't able to relieve it. Although I live only two minutes' walk from the factory where I work, I had to stop and rest on my waw many a time. nutes' walk from the factory where I work, I had to stop and rest on asthma, but he wasn't able to relieve it. Although I live only two minutes' walk from the factory where I work, I had to stop and rest on my way many a time.

"Thus matters went with me until June, 1892. Then one day I took up the Essex Newman, and read of a man living at Earsham, near Bungay, having been cured by Mother Seigel's. Curative Syup. I got some of this medicine from the International Tea Company, Braintree. After a few doses my breathing giew easier, and by keeping on with the Syrup my food soon digested, the cough left me, and I gained strength. I am now as strong as ever, can eat anything, and walk for miles. I am a brushmaker, and work at the factory of Messrs, John West and Sons, High Street, Braintiee, and have lived in this town over forty years. (Signed) E. B. WRIGHT, Sandpit Road, Braintree, Essex, Aligust 23rd, 1892"

Now let us see how this illustrates the proposition we started out with. For almost three years Mr. Wright was ill with what seemed like a series of different diseases. He had the influenza twice, the asthma once, and another disease which he gives no name to even if the panes and troubles he mention, and he doesn't describe them all, either. Vou would fancy he had half a dozen ailments at least. Yet he had but one—indigestion and dyspepsia—of which all his bodily disturbances (influenza included—a blood disease) were symptoms. All came out of the str mach, and when Seigel's Syrup set that right the others quietly departed.

What, then, is one thing of "the handful of things we know?"

came out of the stemach, and when Seigers Syrup sermon light me others quietly departed.

What, then, is one thing of "the handful of things we know?"

Answer: That nearly all sorts of diseases are really symptoms of indigestion and dyspepsia, and that Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup

Double that fact up in your fist and hold on to it tight.

PREVENTION OF SMALL-POX.

PREVENTION OF SMALL-PUX.

HEADS of Families in which a case of small-pix appears are strongly recommended to see, suithout delay, to the vaccination of every member of the household who has not previously had the disease.

All residents on the infected premises who are above seven years of age and who have been vaccinated in infancy and all children below that age who do not bear good vaccination marks should be revaccinated.

This, if done properly and in time, will undoubtedly protect from the disease.

Vaccination or revaccination is performed free of charge at the following public vaccinations stations:

contion stations :-

Vaccine Station.	Section &Wards.	Days of Vac- cination.	Hours.
I Chitpore Dispensary Mayo Hospital 39 Beadon St. Medical College Hospital Municipal Office 59 Ripon Street Dispensary Hastings Mu-	E & G C, D & F H & I J,K, L,M	M. W. & F. T. & Sat. M. W. & F. T. Th. & Sat. M. W. & F. T. Th. & Sat. M. W. & F.	7 to 9 A.M.
Amalgamated Suburbs. 8 Entally Muni- cipal Office	Ward 19	,
9 Bhowamp or e Manicipal Office 10 Alipore Mu- nicipal Office	22	M. W. & F.
Municipal Office 12 Ballygunge	20		7 to IO A M
Municipal Office . 13 Kolderpore Monicipal Offi	21	1 06 8 %
Municipal Office	25

Persons desirons of having vaccination of re-vaccination performed in their own houses will have to apply to the vaccine station of their respective wards (on the working days and hours of such station), or to the Superintendent of Vaccination, Municipal Office, or to the Deputy Superintendent of Vaccination, No. 39, Beadon Street, one day previously, and to pay a fee of 4 annas for each vaccination for which they, will obtain a printed receipt and the conveyance, &c., charges for the lymph child and exceeding Rs. 2.

Parties wishing to be vaccinated from the calf at their own houses will have to pay conveyance charge for the calf in addition to the fees (4 against per head.)

W. J. SIMPSON, M.D.,

W. J. SIMPSON, M.D., Health Officer. 2nd January 1895.

Congress Sketches: A Review

OF THE
SPEECHES AND THE SPEAKERS
AT THE
Fourth Indian National Congress
Held at Allahabad.
cprinted with additions and alterations from
Reis & Rayyet

The a portrait of Mr. George Yule, President, Sold by the publisher G. P. Varma, and at the office of the Advocate, at Lucknow for & Annas a cong. besides postage. for 8 Annas a copy, besides postage.

In Pamphlet, Price 4 annas or 6 copies for a Rupee.

Cheap Reserve for the Army. By Capt. ANDREW HEARSEY, Late Her Majesty's Service.
Apply to Ress & Rayyel Office, Calcutta.

TEXT BOOKS IN ENGLISH.

By SARADA PRASAD BANERIEE. SPECIMEN PAPERS AND ANSWERS on

THE ENGLISH ENTRANCE COURSE For 1895.

Having the largest sale of all similar works, ENGLISH PREPARATORY COURSE

FOR 2nd & 3rd CLASSES.
This book has been approved by the Central Text Book Committee.

INDIA READERS NO. 2 FOR 4th & 5th CLASSES. INDIA READERS NO. 1

FOR 6th & 7th CLASSES.

These books are of remarkably simple style and quite suited to Indian students.

The attention of School authorities in the N.-W. P. and Oudh, the Punjab, M.ddras, Bombay, the Central Provinces, Assain, and Burma, invited to the above publications of unique erits.

To be had of
S. K. LAHIRI & Co.,
College Square, Calcutta.

THE WORKS OF DR. JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE

- R. Commentaries on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, Marriage, Adoption, Wills &c.* Price

 No student or practitioner should be without a copy of this GREAT Work. 16 0
- . (Sd.) Nana Bhar Haridas." Bengah translation of the Dyabhaga and the Midakhara † Price ... 2 8
 Bengah translation of the Dyabhaga and the Midakhara † Price ... 0 8
 The Evidence Act with notes in Bengal † Price ... 1 0
 The Civil Procedure Code with notes in Bengal † Price ... 1 0
 Price pass of Zeminderi Min operation of the Price in the Bengal † Price ... 4 0
 Price pass of Zeminderi Min operation of the price in the Price in Bengal in Bengal † Price ... 0 10
 Last its is in England in Bengal ... 0 10
 Last its is the Price ... 0 10
 Bengal Price ... 0 10
 Bengal translation of the Price ... 0 10
 Bengal translation of the Dyabhaga ... 10
 Bengal translation of the Dyabhaga ...

- The PRODUCT OF THE PR
 - Historical Analysis of the evolution of
 - Historical Analysis of the scolution of religious systems.
 Definition of the term \(\frac{1}{2}\) ' grom.\(\frac{1}{2}\)
 The problems of \(\frac{1}{2}\) is the opply of religious and their solutions, old and new.
 (a) Why do Hindus believe in ten Avaitas of micantations including in the series three that are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a tortoise, and a boat.
 (b) Why is it that all ancient systems recommend the secrifice of animals, and the burning of ghee or incense &c. &c. &c. &c.
 - &c. &c. &c. &c. &c.
 The weapons offensive and defensive of
- religious teachers.
 The power of fine words,
 The art of becoming a prophet,
 The cumulative effect of hardswearing
- for ages.
 Specimens of Puranised history.
 Brahminical and Christian priestcraft
- compared.

 The artificial miseries of men caused by
- religion.

 Tyranny and taxation of religion.

 The good man's adversity is the sharp man's opportunity.

 Swindling as a fine art.
- New Superstitions that may be suggest-ed for the benefit of the priests. The great prophets of the world and their doing.
- Probable origin of the Saiva religion.

 Tautric mysticism and abominations.
- * To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink & Co., only.
 † To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink &
 Co., and also at the Suradhani Agency,
 No. 11, Raja Nabakushna's Street, Calcutta.

THE PIONEER DIAMOND RING

THE PIONEER DIAMOND KING WE guarantee these Rings for appearance, &c., to a genume Diamond Ring, costing 50 times the money charged for these. The Crystal is of medium size and of such hardness that will stand the ordinary test of a Diamond. It may be worn by either a Lidy or Gentleman, however fastidious in such matters, without hear of detection. The mount is beautifully finished and a perfect substitute for bright 18 Cara Gold.

Carat Gold
PRICE RS 6 8. (Post free.)
Terms: Cash or V. P. Post.
Extracts:—A Lady from Bellany writer:—
My friends here saw the Ring which you sent me and like n." A Merchant from Tutcorm says:—"It is pretty and of good

ADDRESS-THE AGENT, ALEXANDER Mac GREGOR & CO.

DELIII, (PUNJAB.) NOTE:-For any further information, &c send a Reply Post Curd or a Stamped Cover.

CAUTION!

Ir having been notified to the Proprietor of Beecham's Pills that certain unscrupulous dealers have recently been perpetrating a Gaud in connection with the 4 nona box lately introduced, the public are requested to see that the retail prices, (vis., 4 annas, 8 annas or 91/2d, 12 annas or 1s. 11/2d. and Rs, 2 or 2c. 9d.) are clearly printed on the lid of each box. The fraud to which attention is drawn is that in the case of the two smaller sizes, the prices have been obliterated and the boxes represented to be of higher value than they really Sole Wholesale Agents for India, Burma and Ceylon.

G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3, NEW CHINA BAZAAR STREET.

CALCUTTA.

NOTICE - Should any difficulty be expenenced in obtaining supplies the Agents will be happy to forward sample boxes at above Rupee rates plus V. P. P. Charges and Postages.

THE MAHOMEDAN LITERARY SOCIETY.

The Thirty-first Annual Conversazione of the Mahomedan Literary Society of Calcutta will be held at the Town Hall on Wednesday the 30th January 1895, at 9 P. M.

A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMAN,

Honorary Secretary.

16, Taltollah. The 17th January 1895.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF

	MEMORIAL FUND.
ı.	His Highness The Maharaja of Dur-	Rs.
		2,000
2.	anagram, G.C.I.E., His Highness the Nawab Bahadur of	1,000
3.	His Highness the Nawab Bahadur of Moorshedabad, Amerul Omra, G.C.I.K.	800
4.	His Highness the Nawab of Junagadh,
5.	G C.S.I. His Highness the Maharaja Bahadur of Couch Behar, G.C.I.E. Nawab Bahadur Sir K Abdul Ghani,	500
6.	of Cooch Behar, G.C.I.E	500
0.	K.C.S.I., and Nawab Bahadur K. Ashan Ulla, C.I E
7.	Ashan Ulla, C.I E Khan Bahadar Bhai Bahauddin, C I E.,	500
8.	Vizier to the Nawab of Junagadh	300
	Maharaja Bahadur Sir Joundra Mo- han Tagore, K.C.S.I	250
9. 10.	Babu Joda Lai Mullick Messrs. Mackionon Mackenzie & Co.	200
11.	Prince Wala Kadr Syed Hosein Ali
12	Muza Bahadur Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Nawab	150
	Syed Zamul Abdin Khan Bahadur	140
13.	Feraz Jung Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee, C.S.I.	100
14.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chandra Madhab Ghose	100
15.	Prince Mirza Sir Jahan Kadar Baha-	100
16.	The Hon'ble P. Playfair	100
17. 18.	Haji Kasim Ariff Lieutenant-General the Hon'ble Sir	100
19.	H. Brackenbury, K C.B.,	001
20.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Guru Das
21.	The Honble Dr. Rash Behary Ghose	50 51
22. 23.	The Hon'ble Dr. Rash Behary Ghose Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt Shahibzada Mahomed Obidulla Khan	50
_	Bahadur, C.S.I	50
24. 25.	Maharajkumai Benoya Krishna The Hon'ble Mr. Justice E. J. Treve-	50
26.	The Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jabbar	50
27.	Khan Bahadur	50
88.	Muharaja Durga Charan Law, C.I.E., Nawab Jahandar Meetza Nawab Huzoor Muza The Hou'ble W. C. Bonnerjee Nawab Syed Ameer Husein	50 50
29.	Nawab Jahandar Meerza	50
30. 31.	The Houble W. C. Bonnerjee	50 50
32. 33.	Nawab Syed Ameer Husem Syed Numi Huda, Esq., C.S.	50
34	Syed Nurul Huda, E.q., c.s., Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan	50
35. 36.	J. G. Ritcher, E.q. C.S., F. J. Rove, E q	50 32
37.	Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi Khan Ba-	25
38.	Kumat Radha Prosad Roy	25
39. 40.	Babu Pashupatty Nath Bose Kumar Doulat Chandra Roy	25 25
41. 42.	Babu Guru Prosonno Ghose	25 25
43.	Raja Sir Souriodra Mohan Tagore,
44	Raya Jotindra Nath Chowdhury Babu Rama Nath Ghose	25 25
45. 46.	Raja Sceenath Roy	25 25
47. 48.	Rai Sew Bux Bogia Bahadar	25
49	Rija Surja Kunta Achariee Chowdhur	25 y 25
50 51.	Rabi Gonal Lai Seal	25 25
52	Mouly: Syad Abdus Salam	25
53. 54.	Moulvi Syad Abdus Salam A. T. Apcar, Esq. H. Luttman Johnson, Esq. C.S.	25 25
55. 5 i.	Manufacture Banast K.C.I.E.,	25 25
57 58.	F. H. Skrine, E-q. CS.,	25
59.	Prince Mahomed Bukhtyar Shah	20
61.	The Honble H J S. Cotton C.S. C.S.I. Prince Mahoured Bukhtyar Shah Baboo Surendra Nath Pal Chowdry Aukhoy Kumar Ghose Montri Imadd Ah Rai Shib Chingle Nandy Rahadar	20 20
62 63.	Moulvi Imadd Ali Rai Shib Chundei Nundy Bahadar	20 20
64.	D. Panioty, Esq	20
65. 66.	Chowdry Mahomed Arjunand Khan H. E. A Cotton, Esq., Barrister-at-law	20 20
67.	Moulvi Syed Ashruffuddin Ahmed, Khan Bahadur	17 8
68. 69.	T. Inglis, Esq. C.S	16
70.	F. F. Handley, Esq. C.S. The Honble Mouly Strajul Islam	16 16
71.	K080	16
72.	Moulvi Serajuddeen	15

7*7*. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. the Honorary Joint Secretaries,
RAI RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI BAHADUR 4, British Indian Street, Carcinta, and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMAN, Esq., Barrister--ai Law, 16, Taltolla, Calcutta.

Rs. 6 "UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Guaranteed three Years.

Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurace, pietry, small, open-faced, mickel silvern, keyless, short winding, patent, "UNDAUNTED" watch, with hand setting mechanism, secondband for Doctors, ornamental boild dial, for Rs. 6 V. P. P. with an exita glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' guarantee. Warranted to stand the roughest use. Runs more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily repairable. Others sell at double om rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Juo. Dickson of Haputal Railway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps splendd time and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jerks. x Dr. H. Moore of Royal Artillery from Poonamallee says:—I sold it for Rs. 16. x Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Regi. from Dumdum says:—I have sold it for Rs. 20. x Mr. T. B. Scott of Patina Opum Department says:—The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time.

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty Canadian gold chain Re. 1-8-o.Fashtonable Canadian Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, at Re. 1-8-o. Mr.
G. Smith, Salt Inspector from Sanikutia, says:
"A German valued the diamond ring at Rs. 50
and ruby at Rs. 30." Key winding, Government stamped, solid silver hunting case, Royal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee,
for Rs. 13. Pte. G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light Infantry from Purandhar says:—For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Sergeant for Rs. 28 x Pte. H. C. Bishop of L.
F. L. Regt. from Kampiee says:—A Corporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch, Gentlement's open faced, keyless real solid gold watch
Rs. 30; ladies' Rs. 24; both with extras and guaranteed for 3 years. Mind they are guranteed to be of real sound gold. No agents kept, all goods sent only by us from Bombay per V. P.
WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO.,

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO., BOMBAY.

CATARRH, Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness. A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagrous, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these distressing diseases are rapidly and permanently cured by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUTFON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORONTO, Canada.

Scientific American.

GENUINE HOMEOPATHY. A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S.

Homeopathic Practitioner,
May be consulted by letter or personally daily at his residence, 30-1, Colootolah Street,
Calcutta.

"IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer and sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering: while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most chronic form.

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous

relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs is almost too renarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the tortures of TOOTHACHE? A single application will relieve you.

In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the esult speak for itself.

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Physicians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of nomes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar pre-paration has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throughout the world.

Agents in Calcutta: Smith Stanistreet & Co. R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Batngate & Co. Limited.

REIS & RAYYET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT) WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

Review of Politics, Literature, and Society

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

If paid in auvance, ...

Han-yearty	•••	•••		7
Quarterly			"	À,
Monthly		•••	Κe.	ī-8
Single or sample	Copy	•••	Ans.	0-8
If no	t paid in ad	ivance.
Yearly	·	•••	R۹.	18
Half-yearly	•••	•••	11	10-8
Quarterly	•••		"	6-0
Monthly		•••		2-4
Single or sample	Сору	•••	Ans	0.12
No additional	cnarge for	postage	or pe	eon.
		-	•

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT

Advertisements (three columns to the page Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insertion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5. Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphlets (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayyet."

Street, Calcutta.

(PRINCE)P E A S A N TWEEKLY NEWSPAPER

AND

LITERATURE REVIEW OF POLITICS AND SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 661.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

THE WEDDING DAY.

I AM married! I am married! Weep, ye flirting maids of Cam; The deed is done, the point is carried-What a lucky dog I am ! What a pleasant dream my life is ! (Best of dreams because 'tis true!) What a charming thing a wife is ! (I almost wish that I had two!)

Noble brow of thought and feeling-Lips whence music breathes her spell-Cheeks whose blushes are revealing What that music dares not tell-Eyes, in whose blue depths divine, oh Purest spirits deign to lodge-All these beauties now are more, oh Marriage is a splendid dodge!

I'm so glad I fixed on Nancy! Laura speaks so loud and quick; Caroline quite took my fancy But her ankles are too thick; I are should be an hair's breauth shorter, Helen is a size too small, Rose I'm sure drinks too much porter. Fanny is too thin and tall.

They all loved me-how intensely Maiden ladies only know-Oh, I pity them immensely, They have much to undergo ! Such a devotion, such attention, Whispers, blushes, smiles, and tears, But 't is hardly fur to mention All they do, poor little dears!

Nancy's hit the proper medium, (What the French call juste milieu,) Who could feel a moment's tedium. Sportive Nancy, when with you?-Gentle, tender, soft, complying, Yet not wanting intellect, · Oh my every glance relying, Looking up with sweet respect.

3S. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free,-Artificial Ear-drums and similar appliances entirely superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

How I wooed her, how I pressed her, By one little word to bless, On my bended knees addressed her, Till the darling whispered "yes;" Haif a dozen men of fashion All rejected for my sake; To reward her soft compassion What a husband I will make!

When she plays I'll turn the leaves, and When she works I'll hold the skein, Soothe her kindly if she grieves, and If she laughs I'll laugh again; Read aloud in rainy weather, Give her up the easy chair, Never smoke when we're together. Nor at other women stare.

Every moment play the lover, Let her have a female friend. Never sleep when dinner's over, Make her presents without end, Pay her bills when she requires it, Fill her purse with joyful haste, Cut my hair if she desire it, (But I know she's too much taste!)

Happy then, thrice happy we, love Thus to share so bright a fate; Married life to us shall be, love, One delightful tête-à tête ! Turn we from the world's caressing, From its pleasure, pomp, and pride, To enjoy life's dearest blessing, At our own beloved fireside!

-Sharpe's Magazine.

WEEKLYANA.

THE new French Cabinet is composed of :-President of the Council and Minister of Finance, M. Ribot, Deputy. Minister of Justice, M. Trarieux, Senator. Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Hanotaux, Minister Plenipotentiary Minister of the Interior, M. Leygues, Deputy. Minister of Public Instruction, M. Poincaré, Deputy. Minister of Public Works, M. Dupny Dutemps, Deputy. Minister of Commerce, M. André-Lebor, Deputy. Minister of Agriculture, M. Gadaux, Deputy. Minister for the Colonies, M. Nantemps, Deputy. Minister of War, General Zurunden. Minister of Marine, Admiral Besuard.

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, if possible, as the safest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

MR. H. H. Johnston, C. B., High Commissioner of East Afreia, has come to India. His object, as he said to an interviewer, has come to India. His object, as he said to an interviewer,

"is to arrange with Government for the continuation of the system by which 200 Sikhs are allowed to volunteer for service in British East and Central Africa for the purpose of suppressing and keeping in check the odious slave trade. Originally one hundred men were despatched some years ago, they were followed by further rainforcements, since which there has been no renewal.
The term of service of the second batch is up during the present summer, and I am desirous of inducing fresh Volunteers to come and fill their places, but I do not wish it to be supposed that I am in any way proposing to act the part of a recruiting Sergeant, or that anything more extensive in the military line is in contemplation.
I am also desirous of visiting old soldiers of the first batch who have returned to India, the value of whose services has, I am glad to say, been lately testified to in most signal manner by the award, with her most gracious Majesty's sanction, of the African war medal for their campaigns against the Arab slave traders."

To the question. Have you any other object in visiting India?

To the question, Have you any other object in visiting India? There is a notion abroad that you intend advocating the colonisation of East Africa by Indians, Mr. Johnston continued :-

of East Africa by Indians, Mr. Johnston continued:—

"Yes, it is true. This is one of the objects that I have in view, but I shall not take any positive action in the matter, but rather let the stream that has already begun to set in towards Africa continue to flow naturally. I am certainly in love with the Sikhs, and would be only too glad if a few more would come over. They get on admirably with the Africans. They will thrash them one day in battle and the next day shake hands in the good old manly fashion of the knights of the Middle Ages. Moreover, we are greatly in need of population, while India appears to teem with it. It would also be far preferable, if there is to be an immigration of the Hindus, that it should occur towards our territory rather than Natal where, owing to the greater prevalence of Whites, they are not wanted. Moreover, our climate is more suited to them than that of Natal."

In reply to further questions, Mr. Johnston stated that

In reply to further questions, Mr. Johnston stated that

"Central East Africa had, become sparsely populated owing to the slave trade, and that the part administered by the British Government was about the size of England and Wales. As an instance of the successful colonisation by the Indians mentioned, some years ago, the lower Shire, which is as big as an English county, was a bluck and hopeless marsh, apparently useless, and almost uninhabited. There came to it Khojas and Memons from the Bombay side, and like a miracle trade appeared, and the Negro immigration increased so much from 1,000 to 10,000 that a Magistrate and Collector had to be appointed, and in time all other conconitants of a prosperous settlement. It is now paying its way. The country is big enough to hold both the Negroes and Hindus, and I should be glad to see the latter dealing with the other low-lying lands in the same way."

Have you any other object in seeing India, Mr. Jhonston?

"Yes, I want to study its forms of administration and imitate them in British East Africa. It seems to me that there are only two forms of Colonial Government possible. The first responsible Government of the White Colony, and then a benevolent despotism of the tropical country inhabited by colonied races. India belongs to the latter category, and some day British E six Africa will develop its Government services similar to what you have in India at pesent. We have to begin to walk before we can run, and I want to learn some lessons in the art of walking from the inspection of your Indian methods of Government." methods of Government."

Shall you make a long stay in this country?

"No. I intend visiting part of Northern India and shall leave Calcutta about the middle of March."

THE Arms Act is being worked with a vigour which is more humiliating than the law itself. When the sister law-the Vernacular Press Act was repealed, the Arms Act, though all wed to disfigure the statute book, was made less galling by freer exemptions under it and altogether a mild working. For some time, its application is being rigorously enforced. From time to time we hear of such persecutions. Only this week the Bengal High Court released one Pabun Sheik from prison who had been sent there for one year, by the Deputy Magistrate of Perozepore, for possessing a gun and obstructing a search of his house for the arm, and in addition fined him Rs. 60. The man was in jul for four months and a half. The High Court remarking that the sentence was altogether in excess of the offence committed, reduced the term of imprisonment to the period already worked out and remitted the fine.

THE appeal of Raja Jogendernath Roy of Natore will be taken up on the 13th February. The hearing was first fixed for the 4th February, but on application of the complainant, Baboo Gungagobind Sircar, it has been further postponed for the convenience of his counsel Mr. Hill.

THE charge of wrongful detention of title deeds made by Denobundoo Podder against Janokey Nath Roy, in the Calcutta Police Court, has been thrown out by the Magistrate Nawab Syed Ameer Hossain,

The case for the prosecution was that Denobundoo was already in debt to Janokey Nath and, wanting more money, deposited some title deeds for a fresh loan. Baboo Roy would neither advance the money wanted nor return the title deeds to enable the raising of the loan elsewhere, but wrongfully held them as a security for the amount due to him. The Magistrate was not convinced that the title deeds were deposited for the purpose stated. In making the order, the Magistrate said that pressure of business had prevented him from writing out a detailed judgment, but he would do so later on.

SYED Ahmed, not the Allyghur Knight but a Bahadoor still who delights to call himself by the unmeaning name of Delawar Hossain, stationed as a Deputy Magistrate, at Alipore, has been appointed, in succession to the late Nawab Meer Mahomed Ali, a member of the Parmanent Committee for the supervision of Mahomedan Marriage Registrars appointed under Act I (B. C.) of 1876, and of Kazis appointed under Act XII of 1880.

MR. James Nicholson Staurt, of Messrs. Balmer Lawrie and Co., naving retired from India, has resigned his seat as a member of the Bengal Legislative Council. He was also a member of the Calcutta Port Trust. The Bengal Chamber of Commerce has elected Mr. J. G. Dickson, senior member of Messrs. Gladstone Wyllie and Company to the vacant place on the Board of the Trust. In this connection, Capital points out that all the representatives of the Chamber represent only the ship-owning interest.

In Colinga, a native girl, while carrying an open kerosine lamp, her clothes catching fire, was burnt to death. These lamps are a nuisance and a disaster, but their numbers are increasing on account of their cheapness.

ANOTHER girl, in the Northern Division of the town, while picking out pieces of coke from a huge pile, the pile collapsing, was entombed to death.

FOR clandestinely removing a number of blankets, the head jemadar of the Alipore Lunatic Asylum, has been sentenced, by the Hon'ble Abdul Jubbar Khan Bahadur, to one month's rigorous imprisonment.

THE Home Department has ruled that the expenses for buying paupers dying within Cantonment limits are to be borne by the Cantonment Funds, while those of disposing of such dying out of those limits will be defrayed by the Magistrate of the District. What has been the cost-in stationery, postage, the pay of those consulted, &c. &c.,-in arriving at this decision?

MR. H. W. C. Carnduff officiates as Deputy Secretary in the Legislative Department of the Government of India, while Mr. T. W. Richardson acts for him as Registrar on the Appellate Side of the High Court, Bengal.

BABU Pran Kumar Das, Personal Assistant to the Commissioner of the Patna Division, and Babu Chunder Narain Sing, Personal Assistant to the Commissioner of the Bhagulpur Division, change places.

MR. C. A. W. Fordyce, Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector, Dacca, has obtained leave for one month and twenty-five days from the 18th January, to fight his caluminators.

A TELEGRAM from St. Petersburg, dated Jan. 10, says :-

A TELEGRAM from St. Petersburg, dated Jan. 10, says:—

"The trial has just concluded, before the District Court of the Province of Viatka, of eleven persons belonging to the peculiar local sect known as Vottaks. These persons belonging to the peculiar local sect known as Vottaks. These people, who are still addicted to inolatry, not only sacrifice animals to their gods, but even on occasion human beings, in order to propritiate the wrath of Koutbane, as they name the Spirit of Evil. From the evidence given at the trial, it appears that the accused induced a certain beggar man, named Matriounine, to visit the house of Moses Dimitrieft, one of the prisoners. After making the beggar drunk, they cut his throat and decapitated him. They then suspended the headless trunk from the ceiling, and, after making five incision, collected the blood in dishes and extracted the man's heart and lungs, which they subsequently used in their idolatrous rites. The mutilated body was thrown by the side of a high road. This atrocity was perpetrated as long ago as March 1894, during the great Russian famine and the object of the sacrifice was to appease the anger of Koutbane, and prevent a fresh visitation of the scourge. The accused, who were inhabitants of the sillage of Staraia-Moultana, included men from thirty- affairs in Armenia. If the atrocines alleged against the Turkish five to forty-five years, and one old min of seventy, while several were leading inhabitants of their district. Three of the prisoners were acquitted, and of the remainder some were sentenced to penal servitude for life, and the others to deportation to Siberia.

MIRZA Muhammad Khan, a Butish news-writer at Kandahar, has arrived at Sibi, having been, he says, compelled to leave Afghanistan by the persecution and despotism of the Afghan officials,

THE number of persons who visited the Indian Museum during the 22 days of January last that it was open to the public, was 44,342. This gives a daily average of 2,015 persons, including male and female, European and Asiatic. The Europeans numbered 1,219 male and 506 female; the Asiatics 32,481 male and 10,136 female.

NOTES & LEADERETTES,

OUR OWN NEWS.

THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

THE War in the Fat East still tages. The credentials of the Chinese Envoys deputed to offer terms of peace not having been found to be in perfect order, the Japanese Ministers have refused to enter into any negotiations with them. The Chinese Envoys were told to leave Japan immediately. They proceeded to Nagasaki under protection. A Conference is reported to have been held between the Japanese Ministers and Chinese Envoys of peace, but the proceedings have not transpired. According to despatches received from Japanese sources the Chinese fleet did not leave Wei-hai-wei. The forts on the island of Linkungtao and the Chinese fleet were keeping up a furious bombardment on the Japanese ships. The other ports of Weihaiwei were captured on Thursday afternoon last week. The loss on either side was very heavy. The Chinese troops garrisoning the forts retreated to Glinchu. On the 5th the Japanese made a night attack on the Chinese fleet in Wei-hai-Wei harbour and, after having torpedoed, sank two of the largest Chinese monclads-the Chenvuen and Tingyuen Liu-Kungtao Island is now virtually in the hands of the Japanese. A strong Japanese force landed, on the 7th, near Chefoo and at once commenced simultaneous bombardment of the eastern and western forts. All foreigners in Chefoo are under arms. The gates of the city have been closed, and barricades erected.

INTERSE cold prevails throughout England and Scotland. Unprecedentedry low temperatures are recorded. In many parts the thermometer is below zero. Terrific snowstorms have occurred in Scotland.

PARLIAMENT reassembled on Feb. 5. The Queen's Speech was read by commission. It states that the relations of Great Britain with Foreign Powers are friendly, and refers with satisfaction to the agreement concluded with France, settling the frontier question of Sierra Leone. It regrets that the war between Japan and China continues. It states that Government has maintained a close cordial entente with the European Powers interested in those regions, and will lose no favourable occasion for phomoting a peaceful termination of the contest. Owing to reports received by the Government of excesses committed by Turkish troops on Armenians in Asia Minor, it was thought right, acting conjointly with other Powers, to make a representation to the Porte on the subject. The Sultan has declared that the guilty will be severely punished, and has sent a commission of enquiry to the district to report on the allegations. The Speech announces that the following measures will be brought forward during the session: The Irish Land Bill, Evicted Tenants Bill, Welsh Disestablishment Bill, Local Veto Bill, Bill for the Abolition of Plural Voting, payment of the charges of returning officers, a measure for the conciliation of labour disputes, and amendment of the Factory Acts, completion of Scotch County Government, and further Legislation on the Crofter question.

The same afternoon, the House of Lords voted the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. Lord Rosebery said he was convinced that the Porte desired to ascertain the truth of the state of issued on or after the 1st March.

soldiers were proved, it was impossible for the Christian population in the Armenian provinces to remain in the present state.

In the House of Commons the Speech from the Throne was also taken into consideration. So W. Vernon Harcourt referred to the death of the late Emperor Alexander as a calamity to the cause of peace, though war was not desired by any of the European Powers. Regarding the question of increasing the Navy, the Chancellor of the Exchequer declared that the Government now resolved loyally to continue carrying out the naval programme, and denied that the question of Home Rule had been shelved. The measure was still the main object of the Liberal Party. Mr. Balfour, after paying a warm tribute to the memory of Lord Randolph Churchill, dwelt upon the absence of any reference to the Navy in the Queen's Speech and characterised the Government programme as a farce. He said that Lord Rosebery declined to introduce any resolution dealing with the House of Lords at the opening of the Session, because a dissolution of Parliament must immediately follow as a result of such a step.

Mr. Buxton, Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, promising to introduce a Bill to enable Australia to enter into fiscal relations with the other Colonies, Mr. Howard Vincent withdrew the amendment in favour of a customs union for the Empire. On the 7th, the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced that a Select Committee would be appointed to take into consideration, the distress arising from want of employment. The debate on the Address continues.

THE Rev. Dr. John Percival, headmaster of Rugby, and the Right Rev. Dr. Atlay, Bishop of Hereford, have openly expressed themselves in favour of the Disestablishment of the Church of Wales.

THE French opened the New Year at Madagascar with the occupation of Mojanga, the chief port on the north-west. There was no opposition. The Hovas retreated while the French advanced.

M. HENRI ROCHEFORT has arrived in Paris, and has been received with immense enthusiasm.

FURTHER intelligence received from Hawai shows that the recent attempt at insurrection has not been entirely quelled, an agitation being kept up to restore Queen Liliuokalam. Martial law has now been proclaimed, and the ex-Queen arrested. On her house being searched, a quantity of aims and dynamite bombs were discovered.

THE Conference of various Australian Premiers, assembled at Hobart, approved of the introduction of the Federation Bill and the formation of the Convention of members elected under popular suffrage to meet on an early date for the purpose of drafting a federal constitution for the Australian colonies.

A POSTAL Conference was held at Hubart, and a resolution was passed to the effect that in any future English Mail contract entered into by the Australian colonies, a clause should be inserted stipulating that coloured labour should be rigidly excluded from all steamers carrying mails.

A CROWDED meeting was held at Blackburn on leb. 5 to protest against the imposition of cotton duties in India. The resolutions were unanimously passed.

THERE will be Chapters of the Orders of the Star of India and the Indian Empire in the Government House Grounds on Thursday, the 7th March, 1895, at 9 30 P. M. Members of the Orders who will be present in Calcutta on that day are expected to attend and to communicate their addresses to the Secretary to the Orders, who is the Secretary to the Government of India in the Foreign Department. Only the members of the Orders and members of the Consular body will be invited to attend. Other persons desirous of attending must apply for tickets, not later than the 25th of February, to Colonel A. Durnad, Military Secretary to the Viceroy. Tickets for admission will be

AFTER the installation, on the 1st of February, of the minor Maharaja of Mysore, there was a State dinner at the Residency. In proposing the health of the Maharaja, the Resident, Colonel Henderson, after lamenting the death of the late ruler, referred to the arrangement made for administering the State during the minority:—

"You have to-day heard that the dignity and position of Regent of the Mysore State has been conferred by the Government of India on Her Highness the Maharani. The announcement has been hailed with enthusiasm by her fellow-countrymen, who know that in the control of her private affairs and the management of her family. Her Highness has been wise and judicious, while the calmiess and self-restraint she has displayed since her grievous bereavenient have won the respectful sympathy of all, both Englishmen and her own countrymen. Under such pui-lance there is every reason to be assured that His Highness will receive the education and training which will fit him to receive ruling powers in due course. Till that time comes there is further every reasonable assurance that the administration of the State will be satisfactorily conducted under the Regency of the Maharani, who, in the interviews she has been good enough to grant me, I found to be well conversant with public affairs. Joined to natural gifts of perception and intelligence Her Highness has received a good education in her own and the English languages, and is capable of forming a just opinion on questions that may be submitted to her. Her Highness has given in assurance that she will be readily accessible to her advisers, and in view of the sentiments so repeatedly expressed by her of firm loyalty to, and reliance on, the advice and support of the British Government, I have every confidence that when the Maharaja, quahfied by age, enters upon the active duties of ruler of the State, he will still find the administrative system a model and example for all States in India. The Regent will still have the good fortune to retain the services of Sir K. Seshadri Iyer, the Minister, to whose conspicuous abilities the State so greatly owes its position in the van of progress. In due course Her Highness, with the approval of the Government of India, will probably nominate other Councillors, who will share with the Dewan the heavy burden of administrative duties, and t

As "speeches" in India go, the above is a fair specimen, barring only a single lapse in the repetition of the word "receive." It is satisfactory to note that in the last sentence the walls "ring with cheers" instead of being "distinguished by the presence" of any body.

THE Manchester Guardian has the following :-

"The compulsory retriement of Su Joseph Fayrer from the position of President of the Indian Medical Board has revived the outcry against the application of the sixty-five years' rule to distinguished specialists. The other day Dr. C. Rieu was compelled under the warrant to abandon his post at the British Museum, and the University of Cambridge now has the benefit of his services as Professor of Arabic. If he had entered the employment of some foreign country, the authors of the superamutation regulations would have looked rather foolish. The discharge of the emment Expitiologist, Renouf, not only inflicted a great—one might almost say an irreparable—loss on the British Museum, but also filled the saturits of the Continent with astonishment. Another case in point is that of Dr. Rost, who at the height of his intellectual activity and reputation as a Sanskrit scholar was deprived of the librarianship of the India Office, as if he were only a second-class clerk who could be replaced at a moment's notice. The question is raised whether the limit of age rule, salurary though it be in ordinary curcumstances, was intended by its framers to drive from the service of the State such men as I have named. Sir Joseph Fayier is, I hear, pecunianly a great loser by his retirement. If he had remained in India he would have been entitled to a pension of about qool, per annum higher than what he will now receive."

We are glud to find English papers censuring, however late in the day, the forced retirement of the specialists. But for the last returement, perhaps, the Guardian would not have spoken. We do not know of any other paper adequately expressing its sense of indignation at the discharge of Dr. Rieu of the British Museum and Dr. Rott of the India Office. The after conduct to the latter is shabby, indeed. He is retained as a back. The University of Cambridge went out of its way and altered its statutes to employ Dr. Rieu. The action of the University was severely criticized in some quarters, but the efforts of Mr. E. G. Browne, the Persian Reader at Cambridge, succeeded in securing for the University the greatest Arabic and Persian scholar in England. It is time for a question being put in Parliament.

IT is said that Sir Charles Eiliott recently censured a Deputy Magistrate who, while reading a judgment, stood up in his Court, for honouring the Lieutenant-Governor standing among the listening spectators. The censure was proper. In respecting Sir Charles Elliott, the Deputy forgot his respect for Her Majesty the Queen-Empress, for every Court, Civil or Criminal, of even the lowest jurisdiction, is supposed to be presided over by the Sovereign. The Judge or Magistrate that forgets this, is deserving of punishment. If the Deputy was desirous of honouring the Lieutenant-Governor, he ought to have, without rising, invited Sir Charles to a seat beside his own on the bench. The story of the schoolmaster who did not rise at sight of the king, deserves to be widely known in this country. The strong common sense of the monarch told him that the absence of the customary marks of honour was dictated neither by ignorance nor the desire to offend. Without taking any offence, therefore, the illustrious visitor took the chair that was offered and interested himself in examining the children. The inspection over, his Majesty left the room, the schoolmaster following him. When the king was fairly out of sight of the children, the schoolmaster kaelt down in reverence and begged for pardon, saying that he had no knee for his sovereign in the presence of his pupils; that he had kept his seat for showing them that their teacher was a person inferior to none in the land. How far such a belief was necessary not simply for the government of the school but for securing an unquestioning acceptance by his pupils of everything that would fall from his lips, could not possibly be unknown to the monarch. As his conduct, therefore, was prompted by the desire of giving his Majesty a century or so of good subjects, he trusted that his Majesty would kindly pardon his seeming offence. The monarch, appreciating the motive, raised the schoolmaster and ever after numbered him among his best friends.

THE sacred books of ancient India mention an incident bearing on this point, which did not end so happily. Suta, or, as he is otherwise called, Ugraçravas Sauti, meaning one possessed of keen power of hearing and born in the Suta caste, was by profession a reciter of sacred histories. One day, as seated on the pulpit or elevated altar, in the midst of a large concourse of regenerate Rishis, in the woods of Naimisha, Suta was reciting some sacred history, there came Rama, otherwise called Valadeva, of Yadu's race, the hero who had a plough for his weapon and who is described as always inebriated (Kshiva) with Kadamvari wine. Seeing the mighty hero, all the Bighmanas rose for honouring him. Suta, unlike others, kept his seat, pursuant to what has been called the "old" practice. The fact is, the elevated seat occupied by the reciter of sacred histories was and still is called "Vyása-pitha," or the seat of Vyása, the compiler of the Vedas and author of the Mahábhárata. For the honour o that great Rishi, the occupier of the "Vyása-pitha" has not to rise at sight of even the king. Inebriated as Valadeva was, he forgot the custom and slew Sura as one that had insulted him. The assembled Biálimanas attered a yell of execuation at the nortid deed. Ugraçravas was regarded as a portion of Vishnu himself, and, notwithstanding his caste, was highly honoured by the Brahmanas for his extraordinavy memory and learning. The Yalava hero, although he was the elder brother of Krisma himself and had large family interest, was forced to explate his crime by a painful pilgrimage to diverse sacred waters in the Punjab and other parts of India, and make large gifts to the Brahmanas. The deed itself was atrocious, and the Brahmanas were powerful enough to exact an expiation. Valadeva found himself in a very uncomfortable situation till those who had pointed out to him the mode of expiation afterwards pronounced him sinless. Since that time, the occupier of the "Vyasapitha" in India has not to rise at the advent of any person, how highsoever for rank or wealth.

Returning to Sir Charles Elliott, we are glad that he has put a check upon the sneakish spirit of subserviency which officials of a certain class have begun to discover, in total forgetfulness of what they owe to the Sovereign they represent and to themselves as her representatives. These men who cange to authority often prove to be personifications of insolence to their subordinates and the public, No wonder that they become so many Atmaram Sircars of the public service. Poor Atmaram, whose memory has faded into an indistinct tradition, is to this day the butt of endless ridicule and galf with the Vediyahs of India who go about performing feats of legerdemain for the amusement of people.

At the Hilary Pass Examination, 1895, or the General Examination of students of the Inns of Court, held at the Middle Temple on the 17th, 18th, 19th and 20 h December 1894, the Council of Legal Education awarded to 148 students certificates that they have satisfactorily passed a Public Examination. Among them were 13 Hindus including 5 Bengalis, 8 Mahomedans, 4 Parsis and one Chinaman. Of Asiatics, the Hindus have hitherto been the pioneers. The Mahomedans now show great advance. Considering the smillness of their number in comparis in with the other nationalties, the Parsis may be said to have topped them all. Of the four Parsis who have passed, two are from Calcutta and brothers, sons of Mr. R. D. Mehta, the ex-Sheriff. The younger brother Byramjee Rustomjee has passed very creditably in Roman Law answering the questions in Litin. He is only 19 years of age and will not be called to the bar for two years until he is 21. Both the brothers are now studying for the Indian Civil Service Examination,

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, February 9, 1805. THE CONVOCATION OF THE CALCUTTA

UNIVERSITY. The Vice-Chancellor's address of the year at the Convocation of the Calcutta University, has certainly been a distinguished performance. In form and matter it has been such a deliverance as is due to the entire body of Fellows at their annual conclave. As in the absence of the Chancellor, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal was the highest official present, the speech was formally addressed to him by his official designation, besides, of course, the members of the Senate. The fluctuations in the results of the examinations, with particular reference to two of them, viz., the Matriculation and the B. A., were noticed. In the former, the number of successful candidates has been 2,269 against 3,722 of the year previous. In the B. A., an increase has been marked of 182 successful students over 315 of 1893-94. Such violent fluctuations have always appeared strange to persons unacquainted with the inner working of the University. They were unknown for many years after the establishment of the University. The Vice-Chancellor felt bound to take the public into confidence and endeavour to explain the method adopted for equalising the standard of merit insisted upon for success. Examiners may be lenient, or they may be strict. To get rid, as the Vice-Chancellor put it, of the "personal equation" in respect of examiners, those upon whose judgment and skill the Syndicate can rely are frequently re-appointed. Sir Alfred Croft is always happy in his quotations. Such re-appointment has accordingly been referred to as quite in keeping with Polonius's advice to his son about grappling, with hooks of steel, friends one

The Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science.
Lecture by Bibin R on Chindric Ditta, FCS, on Monday, the 11th Inst, at 4-15 P.M. Subject: Potassium.
Lecture by Mr. B. Crondhur, B. A., B. Sc., on Monday, the 11th Inst., at 4-15 P.M. Subject: Origin of Species.
Lecture by Babin R on Chandra Datta, FCS, on Toresday, the 12th Inst., at 4-15 P.M. Subject: Sodium and Ammonium.
Lecture by Babin R. on Chandra Datta, FCS, on Wednesday, the 13th Inst., at 4-15 P.M. Subject: Magnesium.
Lecture by Brin Stratan Sinkar, M. A., M. D., on Wednesday, the 13th Inst., at 4-15 P.M. Subject: Magnesium.
Lecture by Dr. Nitratan Sinkar, M. A., M. D., on Wednesday, the 13th Inst. Subject: Carbo Hydrates.
Lecture by Bibin Syunadas Montherjee, M. A., on Thursday, the 14th Inst., at 4-P. M. Subject: The Principle of Duality and the Theory of Reciprocal Polats.
Practical Class in Chemistry on Thursday, Finlay, and Saturday.
Lecture by Mr. B. Chandhur, B. A., B. Sc., on Thursday, the 14th Inst., at 5-30 P. M. Subject: Epithellium
Lecture by Dr. Nilrian Sircar, M. A., M. D., on Thursday, the 14th Inst., at 6-30 P. M. Subject: Blood Vessels.
Lecture by Dr. Mienda, L. Il. Sircar, on Friday, the 15th Inst., at 5-30 P.M. Subject: Nervous System—Development.
Lecture by Mr. B. Chandhur, B. A., B. Sc., on Saturday, the 16th Inst., at 5-M. Subject: Concluding Remarks on Evolution.
MAHENDRA LAI. Sircar, M.D.,
February 9, 1895.

already has and whose adoption has been tried. The number of examiners newly appointed is generally very small. Thus four-fifths of the examiners of the past year will be examiners for the new year, only one-fifth having been newly appointed. Since some time the practice has been followed of stating, on the question-paper itself given to candidates, the marks assigned to each question. To ensure carefulness in according marks to answers of different degrees of correctness, the headexaminers call a preliminary meeting in which they and their colleagues come to some sort of satisfactory understanding. Without following the Vice-Chancellor into regions of further details, it is pretty clear that so far as examiners are concerned, all that is capable of being done by forethought and attention is at last sought to be done for securing uniformity in the test of merit. While commending, however, the Syndicate for the general excellence of their arrangements, explained for the first time by the Vice-Chancellor at Convocation, we cannot avoid saying that the fluctuations in the results are so violent that their cause or causes must be held as still remaining undiscovered. In 1892-93 the number of successful candidates in the Entrance Examination was 2,031. Next year it was 3,722 Last year it was 2,269. The personal equation in respect of examiners having been chaminated, one cannot but hold that candidates improve or deteriorate according to some unknown law which the Vice-Chancellor is unable to explain. So far as teachers are concerned, we are pretty sure that the personal equation is still less noticeable among them than among examiners, It is, however, very difficult to believe that candidates, like crops, actually depend, in respect of both quantity and quality, on the meteorological aspects of different years. We must, therefore, fall back upon the examiners themselves as potent causes of the violent fluctuations that every one notices in the annual results. There are only two parties to the matter, the examiners and the examinees. Variations by the year in the intellectual calibre of the latter are out of the question. Hence, one must full back upon the former for explaning them, notwithstanding the elaborate precautions taken by the Syndicate as described by the Vice-Chancellor . To us it seems that those precautions are, on the face of them, rather inadequate. However much they may secure uniformity of test in respect of the knowledge shown by the candidates of a particular year, the examiners do not bestow the slightest thought upon comparing the standards of different years. The mere fact of a large number of eximiners being reappointed cannot secure such a comparison. Each examiner sees a certain number of papers. He forgets, after the expiration of a year, his own manner of proceeding. Till a uniform and ard of merit begins to be applied not simply to the candidates of a particular year but as regards candidates of different years, the elimination of the personal equation cannot be complete. At the preliminary meeting, described by the Vice Chancellor, of the examiners, something may easily be done, especially if the examiners are old and not new ones, to have their memories refreshed respecting the procedure adopted in the previous year in the matter of assigning marks to answers. The following method, we think, may be advantageously applied, not only for making the standard equal as regards different years but also for making it uniform in respect of candidates of even the same year. A certain number of answer-papers of every year may easily be kept for reference in the next year. There should be no indication in the answer papers themselves of the marks assigned to each answer. These should be noted in a separate register. The head-examiner should arrange for the same set of answer papers,—numbering, for example, half-a-dozen,—being examined by every one of the examiners separately. By doing this and comparing results, the examiners will understand one another far better than by adoption of any other scheme. The present method consists of the headexaminer's selecting at random 5 papers from among every tale of a hundred for seeing how the work is proceeding. We do not insist upon abolition of the present practice, but we wish to have added to it what we recommend. Until that is done, real uniformity cannot be secured in the standard of merit demanded from candidates. The utility of this procedure is so obvious that we wonder the Syndicate have not adopted it as yet, seriously bent as they must be held to be upon elimination of the personal equation.

By far the most potent cause connected with the fluctuations is not personal peculiarities of the examinees in assigning marks to answers of different degrees of error or correctness, but in setting questions of different degrees of difficulty. There is very often a great inequality in the question-papers of different years. The Vice-Chancellor did not touch this subject at all. Every one employed in the act of teaching knows that it is this and not any difference in the system of assigning marks to answers that produces the inequalities noticeable in the results of successive years. We hope the Syndicate will turn their attention to this. We think that the mere fact of appointing the same set of examiners will not, of itself, equalize the question-papers of successive The importance of the matter would justify a conference between the Syndicate and the Principals and headmasters of affiliated colleges and schools.

In former years the Syndicate used to jealously keep from the candidates a knowledge of the marks gained by them in each branch. Since sometime the healthy rule has been enacted that if candidates wish to ascertain their marks the Registrar will let them know on receiving a formal application accompanied by a fee. To this rule, however, should be added another. Many candidates complain that the marks forwarded to them sometimes do not come up to their own forecasts. The Syndicate think that candidates are very often mistaken in the estimates they make of their own proficiency. Accordingly, applications for re-examination of particular papers are invariably refused. The practice prevails of destroying answer papers immediately after the publication of results. This haste prevents a reference for even a revision of totals. We think a great injustice is done to many candidates by a re-fusal to re-examine their papers. The history of the Calcutta University is not so pure as one may imagine. Dozens of instances have occurred of candidates having been first declared unsuccessful who have, however, afterwards been declared successful. At one time the Registrar's department was a sink of corruption. Was not a clerk dismissed and protected from a criminal prosecution who had been convicted of systematically tampering with the marks of particular candidates? Much has been done of late years to prevent such practices, and we are perfectly willing to believe that not a trace exists of that and unmistakable.

loose and careless regime which had made it possible for a clerk to tamper with the results of our examinations. But can there be no error? In summing up the marks assigned to each separate answer, there may be error. In writing down the mark intended to be set, the examiner may make a mistake. Why then sternly refuse to open up a way for correction of errors? Supposing that candidates are really mistaken in the estimates they make of their own proficiency, their teachers can seldom go wrong. * Surely, an intelligent teacher or professor, who has taught a student for one whole year or two years, should be held to know him better than an examiner who has necessarily to work under serious drawbacks, the chief of which is the shortness of time within which he must send in the results. Under the circumstances, the Syndicate would act wisely by making a rule that when a candidate makes an application for re-examination of any paper of his, and when such application is backed by his teacher or professor, it should be granted. A fee may be levied for such re-examination. By granting it, another step is surely to be gained in the elimination of the personal equation.

The Vice-Chancellor referred, somewhat elaborately, to the suit brought by a B. L. candidate last year, in the High Court, against the University. The suit was dismissed by Mr. Justice Sale with some observations which the Vice-Chancellor quoted with approbation. We were amongst those few that had condemned the action of the candidates who sought to steal a march over the University, and of those members of the Senate who exerted themselves most injudiciously on their behalf. The severity with which the candidate's conduct has been noticed has our approval. The ground of action was perfectly frivolous. The decision seems to be good law. So far however as Mr. Justice Sale's arguments are concerned, we are not sure that they are infallibly correct. The University is the giver of degrees. Courts of law should never arrogate to themselves the functions of the University by pronouncing a candidate successful who has not been declared so by the University. If this reasoning be held to be correct, the High Court then would practically cease to be a court of equity for enforcing corporate bodies to proceed according to their known and published rules. The decision should have been based upon not the incompetence of the Court to interfere but the undesirability to interfere under the particular circumstances of the case before it. The error in the Calendar upon which the candidate based his action was immaterial. It was a transparent pretence that nobody knew that the head-mark had been increased with the increase in the number of subjects. Then, again, as far as the rules go, there are other technicalities that stood in the way of the Court pronouncing a decree. If the High Court be actually incompetent to interfere, even in the case of a material irregularity, there would then be no power in the land, save public opinion which is very weak in India, which would be able to force the University to comply with its own rules of procedure.

The Vice-Chancellor paid very graceful tributes to the memories of those distinguished Fellows who breathed their last in course of the year under his review. In each case the characterisation has been singularly felicitous. They could come from only a master hand. The strokes have been few, yet the outlines of every figure have been clear and distinct

We have not been satisfied with Sir Alfred Crost's peroration, exhorting the graduates to show love and affection for the University. In the earlier part of his address, Sir A. Croft pointed out that the Calcutta University is only an examining and not a teaching body. This view, we think, is not wholly correct, for by regulating the examinations it is the University, and not the institutions affiliated with it, that determines the subjects taught, their extent, and the manner of teaching them. For all that, the University, as a corporation, can scarcely be said to have a body for which it is possible to show any affection, or a soul for which one can utter a blessing. The only associations which our graduates can carry away with them of their University into the great world, must be connected with the tortures of the examination hall. The Syndicate hold their meetings in secret. The very names of the members are not generally known.

THE SORROWS OF A COURT OF WARDS' WARD. WHEN the age of majority was raised from 18 to 21 years for young men whose estates were to be managed by the Courts of Wards, the Board of Revenue framed an excellent resolution. It was wisely determined that the additional years should be utilized in preparing the wards for their future responsibilities by initiating them into the principles of Zamindari management, and endeavouring to reduce the influence of evil counsellors to a minimum. To secure due attention to their resolution, the Board directed that whenever a minor, whose estate was vested in the Court of Wards, attained the age of 18, the Collector under whose superintendence he would be placed should report to the Commissioner the steps he proposed to take for gradually teaching the Ward the business of the estate. Excellent as the provision is, it is more honoured in the breach, than the observance. Collectors have so many things to do that it is almost impossible for them to think of what should be done in order to fit the wards for their future position. There are wards and wards. In the case of wards belonging to such families as Burdwan, or Cossimbazar, or Paikpara, who are too much before the public eye, Collectors, however overworked, would not venture safely to ignore the Board's direction. But in the case of wards whose estates are of little value, Collectors are very often unconscious of their very existence. A local manager is appointed, on a monthly pittance, who is supposed to manage the estate and render accounts to the Collector's Deputy, who, in his turn, is supposed to examine and pass them. We have grave doubts if those accounts are ever looked into by anybody. The Collector reposes complete confidence on his Deputy, and the Deputy has complete confidence on the local manager, so that the latter is always the master of the situation. Differences often arise between the manager and the Guardian, who is generally some relation of the ward, but the Collector is always the Collector and, hence, the manager, who is a mercenary individual, is always supported against the Guardian who has every reason, for the ties of blood and affection, to be faithful to the interests of the ward. To give a particular example. The Banerjees of Baranagore represent an old family. At one time, they possessed considerable property in the form of Zemindaries and houses and land in Calcutta. Through causes unnecessary to be adverted to, the splendid possessions of the family dwindled away, till at last, in the general wreck,

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all kinds. Full pirticulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public, Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Street, Westmiuster, London, S. W.

an income of about Rs. 10,000 was all that was left for the support of two minors, the eldest of whom is, again, deaf and dumb. The Court of Wards took possession of this little property, appointing a distant kinsman of the family, on a pay of Rs. 15 a month, as the local manager. The little property has been further reduced, proving the infinite divisibility of matter. The present income of the family is about Rs. 6,000. There are, again, some debts to pay. The local manager is all in all, and the Guardian, the grandmother of the wards, is nobody. She has no voice over even the movements of the younger ward who has passed his twentieth year and will complete his minority only nine months hence. Like almost all wards whose education has been supervised by the Court, the Baranagore ward has not made much progress in his studies. A few months back he desired to examine the accounts of the local manager, with a view to learn something of the estate and see how the trust has been fulfilled. He was then going on in his twentieth year. Every person of any consequence in Baranagore knows that this young man's moral character is exemplary. Indeed, though he has not been able to pick up a sufficient knowledge of Euclid and of English history, yet he has not contracted any of the vices of the period. The income of the estate being very small, no evil counsellors have converged towards him. Instead, however, of praising his resolution and helping him to carry it out, the Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs at once issued, on the representation of the local manager, a mandate for his immediate removal from Baranagore to Chinsurah, where he was admitted in the third form of an elementary school and lodged in a boarding establishment for boys whose feed costs the very handsome amount of Rs. 4-8 per month. The Guardian objected to the removal. The following extract from her communication to the Board of Revenue may be read with interest not only by the Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs, through whom it has been addressed, but by all those who have anything to do with the supervision of the education of our wards. "Your petritioner wishes to particularly lay it before you that the ward, Matilal, is not a minor under the law of minority as conceived by the Hindu sages and applied by the British Indian Courts to all but an infinitessimal fraction of the population of India. He will be 20 years of age next Kartik (September-October). Even the limit of age that the Cornwallis's Code provided, viz., 18 years, with respect to the scions of the biggest landed houses within the permanently settled provinces, has been long ago passed by him. It is only under a special law, which provides 21 as the limit, that he is to be treated as a minor. If his estate had not been taken charge of by the Court of Wards, he would, under both the Hindu law and the Cornwallis' Code, have been fully competent, at this age, to enter into every sort of legal contract. If he had been married in timehe would have been a father. Although his intellectual progress has not been satisfactory judged by the test of public examinations, he is not the only scion of a respectable house that has been so backward, as cannot but be well known to you. He is quite competent to judge of the effects produced by the management of 18 years on the estate he had inherited from his ancestors. Your petitioner states the bare truth when she submits that that management has been such that, if continued for another 3 or 4 years, the estate will assuredly be managed off to absolute disappearance or extinction. The period left for Matilal's attaining to majority under the especial law is only one year and two months. Your petitioner respectfully submits that instead of forcing him to spend this period in an ineffectual study of Euclid and of some papers of Addison and Johnson and Friswell and Smiles, and some poems of Cowper and Campbell and Southey, it may be spent much more profitably in teaching him to understand Jumma-Wacilbaki papers, the principles of Zemindari Tomar, the particulars that should be included in pottabs and kabuliyars, the rules of land-measurement, the incidents, as regulated by the Rent-law, of the relationship between landlords and tenants, and the steps through which a rent suit must pass before what is due from recusant tenants can be expected to be realised. The Manager . . . • has persistently thrown every obstacle in his power in the way of Matilal's picking up such useful knowledge. Few wards in India succeed in acquiring the power of turning out good sentences in English, or solving problems and working out theorems in Geometry and Algebra; but many of them certainly can pick up such knowledge of Zemindati management as is absolutely needed by them if they are to live in happiness and peace. Your petitioner, therefore, earnestly prays that further efforts may be discontinued for forcing Matilal to pick up such knowledge of English and Mathematics and History and Geography in an English school as he is, to judge by past experience, incapable of picking up with even his best efforts after the manner of most wards throughout the country? For Matilal can by no means be held singular in this respect. She earnestly implores that the very short period that remains for his attaining to majority be allowed to be devoted to the acquisition of knowledge that will be really useful to him, --- knowledge, that is, of Zemindari management."

This representation to the Board is dated August 10, 1894. To this day, so beautiful is the system of red-tapeism under which we live, it remains even unacknowledged. In all probability it has not been forwarded by the Collector as yet. He must have made it over to his Deputy, who, in his turn, has made it over to the local manager upon whose explanations, although he is the party complained against, the Collector will doubtless base his ukase. That ukase will be supported by the Board in spite of its own circular order already referred to regarding the manner in which wards are to be fitted for their suture responsibilities. Sir Charles Elliott is credited with sometimes looking into things with his own eyes. Have the accounts of the Baranagore estate been ever audited? Can the Deputy who is supposed to examine them take upon himself to say that he has done his duty to his own satisfaction amid his multifarious work?

We desire to add an extract from the petition addressed by the ward himself touching his stay at Chinsurah. "Without referring to the other letters that passed between his Guardian and the Collector, your petitioner begs to submit that ill and weak though he was, seeing that the Collector was immovable and utterly regardless of even the most urgent representations to him, he (your petitioner) proceeded to Hooghly on the 20th July last and got himself admitted in the 3rd class of the Hooghly Collegiate School, the rate of schooling being Rs. 3-8 per month. Your petitioner had to join the Chinsurah Boarding establishment where he remained for a little less than a week, repairing to the school from that place. During the short period your petitioner remained in the Boarding Establishment, he had to endure every sort of inconvenience. The total monthly charge in this establishment for a single student is Rs. 4-8 per month. The Chinsvrah Boarding Establishment, it will thus be seen, exists for the children of the poorer portion of the middle classes. Rs. 4-8 is utterly incapable of providing such comforts to which your petitioner has been accustomed from his infancy. He does not at all exaggerate when he submits that the fare supplied by that Establishment is truly such as made him fear that a month's residence there would bring about the actual dissolution of his body. Your petitioner found that the entire number of students, about 65 in all, are waited upon by only one servant, who, again, does not attened all days of the week. Your petitioner from his infancy, has been accustomed to be waited upon by a loving and careful valet. Even if he could anyhow keep body and soul together upon the food supplied by the institution, the total deprivation of the services of a valet was what your petitioner could not stand. He had been ill when he went'to Hooghly. His illness increased greatly, in consequence of the insufficient food he had to live upon. He, therefore, was obliged to come away.......

His health has gone down daily, the anxiety attendant on his situation retarding the cure of his maladies and aggravating them in every way."

This is a pretty tale coming from a place so near Calcutta as Baranagore. The ward himself, having applied for permission to examine the accounts of his estare, finds himself ordered to leave home under color of a solicitude for his education, and forced to take up his residence in a place where the conditions of living are not at all suited to him. From what we know of Mr. Collier. we have not the slightest doubt that he has been prejudiced by successful misrepresentation. A European official has very little means at his disposal, unless he happens to be exceptionally able, for testing the correctness of information officially supplied. There are men of culture living at Baranagore. It would have cost Mr. Collier very little trouble to ascertain what the actual age of his ward is and to judge for himself, before issuing his mandate of removal from home, what good would be done to the young man by forcing him to cultivate the philosophy of Friswell and the epigrammatic prelections of Similes, aided by the Hints offered by Messrs. Rowe and Webb for the cultivation of English composition, instead of examining his Hastabood and checking the returns of his arrears by a careful Tomar. If the Collector had time to do his duty, he would, of his own accord, have before this aided the young man to accomplish what he wants.

MILITARY EXECUTIONS.

A correspondent, who accepts the dynamite," urges that blowing from a gun is a more effectual penal-dynamite," urges that hanging. The suggestion opens up a feet to be the control of the A correspondent, who adopts the appropriate nom de plume of ty for military murders than hanging. The suggestion opens up a large question, which, as is usual, has more sides than one. In the first place, it is not by any means clear that the form of execution which he advocates is so abhorrent to the native military mind as the gallows. In the eyes of uncultured Mahomedans a peculiar ignominy attaches to the latter, for a reason which cannot well be expatiated ou in these columns. That Hindu soldiers prefer the cannon to the halter as a solvent of their existence is evidenced by the history of a forgotten episode of the Indian Mutiny. In May 1857, the Raja of Nurgund, a small State in the South Mahratta country, threw off his allegiance. Like Nana Shib he was deaply aggricved by the refusal of our Government to recognise the national custom of adoption; for, being childless, he knew that his territories would be annexed after his death. He signalised his defection by the slaughter of Mr. Manson, a Political Agent, sta-He signalised his tioned at Belgaum, who had rashly made a demonstration into his territories with a small native escort. A field force was speedily got together, consisting of two guns R. A., two companies of the 74th Highlanders, and one of the 28th Bombay N. I., with two hundred Mahratta horsemen under Colonel Malcolm; and siege was laid to the rebel chieftain's capital. Nurgund is about 30 miles from Kittur. The frontespiece to Mrs. Leopold Paget's Camp and Cantenment, from which I have extracted my story, show it to be a perfect Gibraltar in miniature, perched on a scarped rock several hundred feet above the squalid town which nestles in its shadow. It had, indeed, defied the assault of Tippu Sultan; and, held by lew determined men, it could never have been taken by the small force detailed for the siege. But no serious resistance was offered. On June 1st, the Raja sallied forth at the head of a horde of several thousand horsemen, who, on being fiercely charged by Malcolm's troopers, retreated into the town. The howitzers made some splendid shell practice amid the crowded streets, and drove the defenders to take refuge in the citadel. On the following morning a storming party marched forth in silence to capture the latter. They climbed the rocky path leading to the principal gate, expecting every moment to be greeted with a leaden ball. But all was still, and the troops reached the base of the ramparts without encountering a semblance of opposition. Then a solitary defender looked over the parapet, and began pelting the assailants with stones. He disappeared, however, when a couple of Enfield rifle bullets whistled past his head. A sowar then volunteered to climb the wall and open the gate from within, a feat which he performed without being molested. It was found that all the Raja's troops had evacuated the fortress: and the few poor creatures left, sought death by throwing themselves over precipices. The Raja with only seven attendants, all implicated in Manson's murder, took refuge in would not fight; and he supposed that his followers suffered from the same complaint." When condemned to die he expressed in-tense horror at the thought of being hanged. Like Nana Sahib he was a Brahmin of the bluest blood; and he dreaded the loss of caste far more than death itself. He, therefore, repeatedly petitioncaste far more than death seen. Its, therefore, repeatedly petitioned that he might be blown from agun. His prayer was refused:
for our policy was jealously watched by a sullen population; and men were heard to murmur that the rope was not made which could hang a Brahmin. Things looked at one time as if the supersition rested on some basis; for the execution was miserably bungled.
The condemned wretch was kept waiting at the foot of the gallows for three-quarters of an hour, while the drop was being adjusted: and when it fell the rope broke, necessitating a second and successful attempt. Yet another instance, culled from Mrs. Paget's artless narrative, of the stoicism with which soldiers regarded this terrific punishment. "Leopold's battery," she writes, "was datained for a week at Kolapur to witness the execution of two native officers who were concerned in the outbreak at that station and sentenced to be blown away from guns." She thus described the scene :--"The troops in the garrison were formed in long line on the parade, with the guns in advance of the centre, and the prisoners unbound, standing amongst their guard. Their sentence was read in English at each end of the line; after which Brigadier-General Jacob addressat each end of the line; atter which Brigadier-General Jacob addressed the native regiments in a fine, animated speech in their own tongue. The prisoners then quietly and with perfect stocism, walked up to the gnn, one of them, an old subadar, turning and salasming to the gun as he passed. They placed themselves with their backs to the muzzles, and extended their arms which were loosely tied to the wheels. They remained in this position while the troops formed three sides of a square. Then the word was given—make ready and the glimmer of the portfires might be seen in the growing dusk. The moment of breathless suspense was cut short by the word 'Fire!"—a puff of smoke, a discharge—and nothing remained but a few small black fragments on the ground and a smell of burnt flesh polluting the sweet evening ground, and a smell of burnt flesh polluting the sweet evening sembled to witness the execution; but unfortunately they rather consider being blown away an honourable death, and therefore the moral effect of such an example is lessened."

It is, therefore, clear that blowing from a gun is deemed by the native army a more soldierly form of execution than the gallows. The latter has the added terror, in the eyes of Hindus, that it involves loss of caste, Macaulay's Schoolboy has probably read that when that marsh-snake Naucomar expiated his intrigues on a gibbet, erected at Coolie Bazar, now called Hastings, the Calcutta Brahmins, filled with horror at the sacrilege, plunged the crowds into the sacred Hughli to wash away the sin of assisting at so great a crime. It is not so generally known that many families abandoned the accursed city and founded a Brahmin hive which still thrives in the Howrah suburbs of Bally and Uttarpara. If the main object of the death penalty is deterrent, then the indelible stigma of the gallows is too valuable a check in crime to be disregarded. In point of fact the problem is not one for subjective treatment. The European, thrilling with vitality and cursed with a shrinking terror of the problematic hereafter, and the fathomless Oriental, with his low-strung nervous system and his ingrained fatalism, must not be judged by the same standard. A fate full of unspeakable horror for the one is regarded by the other with feelings akin to equanifility. Ten years ago I became rather intimate with an old Rajput of good samily in South Behar, a great sportsman and very hospitable to Europeans. I knew that he had had a narrow "squeak" nospitable to Europeans. I knew that he had had a narrow "squeak" in the Mutiny, and one day got him to tell me the story. He had been compelled by his kinsman, Kuar Singh, to join the host be-sieging the famous house at Arrah; and he took part in the action, fought with the relieving force under Eyre. Convinced by the crushing defeat his side sustained that the Sahibs must ultimately win, he drew off his followers and waited events at a shooting-box win, he drew off his followers and waited events at a shooting-box in the wilds of Chutia Nagpur. They developed unfavourably for the chieftain. Betrayed by a servant, he was arrested, and brought with thirteen contrades to Dinapore, where a drumhead court-martial made short work of their trial. All were con-lemned to be blown from guns early on the following morning. He passed the night trussed like a fowl at the quarter-guard; and at dawn next day found himself tied to the wheels of one of a line of fourteen guns, which formed a side of a hollow square, the two flanks being occupied by all the troops in garrison. The artillerymen stood by, ready to touch off at the word of command, which was to have been given on the arrival of the Brigadier. But the clatter of hoofs, which should have been their death-knell, never sounded. There had been a "wert night" at mess to welcome an incoming tegiment, and the General had punished the Bast India Particulese Madeira to an extent which confined him to his couch and rendered him to an extent which confined him to his couch and rendered him dangerous to approach. After an hour's wait the troops were dismissed, and the prisoners marched back to durance. But the same afternoon there came a telegram from "Clemency Canning" forbidding further execution. I asked the grand old rebel what his feelings were at the supreme moment, and he said, "Sahib, it was wintry day, and well do I remember that the muzzle of the cannon felt bitterly cold against my bare shoulders and dried up my marrow.

I am a humble civilian, and express my own views on the sub-ject with becoming deference to "Dynamite," who is evidently a Son of Mars. They are these. It matters but little what form military punishment takes so long as it is promptly inflicted. Our delays and formalities result in our losing more than half the effect of the death sentence. I would bring a man who takes or attempts the life of his superior officer to a drumhead court martial and hang him within twenty-four hours. This is a policy which was at one time kept in a view at home. I remember, nearly a quarter of a century ago, an epidemic of cases of the sort, and reporting as a "selected candidate" for the I. C. S. trials of soldiers held on the same day at the Old Buely. They were very brief; for defence same day at the Old Bitely. Incy were very one; it of accente there was none. On the following morning I was one of a joyous picnic party going to a place on the S. W. Railway. While wairing at Waterloo, I saw two four-wheeled cabs drive up. One contained a pair of murderers closely manacled in charge of two armed warders; the other a military escort. After the party had marched through the crowded station and settled themselves in a reserved third class carriage, I asked the sergeant in command what it all meant. He told me that so many men had shot their officers of late that a speedy example were considered necessary; and that these men had been brought up from Aldershot to the Central Criminal Court for trial, instead of waiting for the Assizes. He added that they were to be hanged at Winchester on the following morning. It was a glorious summer day; and the contrast between the glad sunshine, the holiday crowd, and the utter hopelessness of the wretches condemned to die was heart-sickening. --- The Pioneer.

THE GRIEVANCES OF CIVIL ASSISTANT SURGEONS AND CIVIL HOSPITAL ASSISTANTS.

Briefly, the grievances of Civil Hospital Assistants may be classed under two heads: ---(t) Status, (2) Pay, Allowances and Pension.

1. Status.--It is admitted that of tecent years the educational and professional training of Civil Hospital Assistants has been greatly improved. They now undergo a full cutriculum of four years' medical education, and are recognised officially as qualified practi-tioners of a subordinate grade. They are ordinarily made to fulfil tioners of a subordinate grade. They are ordinarily made to fulfil the duties of assistants to Civil Surgeons, but they are frequently placed in independent charge of small districts, dispensaries and jails, and are largely used in promoting the work of rural sanitation and vaccination. It is felt that in keeping with these onerous duties the title of Hospital Assistant is a misnomer, since the comhounders, dressers, and other menial servants of a hospital, are also known as hospital assistants. This appellation serves to keep them low in the social scale, and it is felt that a change of designation to that of Sub-Assistant Surgeon would adequately describe their professional and subordinate position, and at the same time remove a grievance which is the cause of much heart-burning and dissatisfaction.

2. Pay, Allowances and Penson. -- There are three grades of Civil Hospital Assistants. The lowest receives a salary of Rs. 25 month. lty, which, after seven years, constituting the second grade, is raised to Rs. 35; following which is the highest grade, which is entered after fourteen years' service, and has a stary of Rs. 55. The independent charge of dispensaries is attended with an additional ten

In comparison with similar subordinate grades in the Public Works Department, Police, Julicial, Revenue Departments, &c., the pay, pospects and general allowances are very meagre indeed; thus a Sub Overseer in the P. W. D. can rise to be a Sub-Engineer on Rs. 400 per mensem ; a sergeant of the native police can to be an Inspector on Rs. 200 per mensem; while subordinate clerks in the Sub-Judicial and Sub Revenue departments, have an avenue of promotions open to them, which yield emoluments varying from three to six hundred rupees per measure. In none of these subordinate services is the educational and professional training as rigorous as that required for this section of the subordinate medical service. It is felt that a small increase of salary and pesion for each grade of Civil Hospital Assistants and the creation of a special senior grade, promotion to which would be made for special merit and qualifications, would fully meet the disadvantages under which they at present labor.

The other grievance is detailed in the following letter :---

Surgeon Major-General W. R. RICE, M.D., C.S.1, Surgeon-General with the Government of India.

We have the honor, on behalf of the Indian Medical Association, and of the parties concerned, to lay before you the following repre-sentation of the grievances of Assistant Surgeons of the Civil Medi-cal Department of the Presidential and Provincial administrations under your command.

I. That though the standard of qualifications of Civil Assistant Surgeons, both classical and professional, has been greatly enhanced and their duties and responsibilities heavily augmented since the formation of this service in 1841, the status, salary, prospects and pension are the sum to-day as thay were 50 years ago. That as compared with other State services locally recruited, such as the Judicial, Engineering, Educational, Revenue, Administration, etc., an Indian or Anglo-Indian Subordinate of inferior academic qualifications than an Assistant Surgeon, has the prospect of rising to the highest posi-tion in the Service to which he belongs, while the emolument of these various locally recruited State services, when compared with the emoluments of Assistant Surgeons, are a cause for serious dissatisfaction, and become a grievance of a very marked character indeed.

The fact that an Assistant Surgeon's maximum salary is Rs. 200, that his travelling and officiating allowances are out of all proportion to the expenses necessary for the up-keep of his professional work and worth find a most unsuitable recompense when compared not only with his own competers in other subordinate services, but also when compared with junior medical practitioners having inferior qualifications, exhibits a strange and disparaging anomaly. It is important in this connection to point out that the work of Assistant Surgeons in the medical charge of districts, civil hospitals and dis-pensaries, as well as jails, and the supervision of vaccination and rural sanitation, is admittedly large and onerous.

rural sanivation, is admittedly large and onerous.

As a case in point for comparison of two subordinate services, it may be stated that a First Grade Assistant Surgeon is paid a fourth of the salary of a Deputy Magistrate. These two subordinate services, when first created, were on the same footing with regard to pay and prospects. At the present time the Subordinate Deputy Magistrate, of 14 years service, draws a salary of Rs. 800, while the Assistant Surgeon of 14 years' service draws only Rs. 200. It is argued in connection with the small salary paid to Assistant Surgeons that they are allowed private practice. It is admitted on all sides, however, that the work of these subordinate officers is so burdensome that they have litte or no time for private practice, so that their added remuneration from this supprivate practice, so that their added remuneration from this sup-posed sources of income in no way represents adequate emoluments, while the ever-increasing additions of qualified practitioners to the field of private practice, makes the prospect of an income from such a source still more diminutive.

It is maintained that their impecuniosity has greatly handicapped their social status, rendering their condition both socially and pe-cuniarily one of great hardship.

That with regard to prospects, though Assistant Surgeons are 2. That with regard to prospects, though Assistant Surgeons are eligible from promotion to the Unconvenanted or higher Civil Medical Service, they are not so promoted. There is therefore no avenue or prospect of promotion open to the Assistant Surgeon beyond the three grades or his own service, which terminate with a maximum salary of Rs. 200, with no other title or rank than that of Assistant Surgeon and a pension of Rs. 100 after 30 years of laborious work.

3. With regard to status, it is felt, that when compared with other subordinate service, the position of an assistant Surgeon is very ill-defined, that he is subjected to the restrictions of the Arms Act which does not effect his compeers in similar subordinate service, and that in such State gatherings as Levees, Durbars, etc., he is without any definite status, and that the absence of some official recognition of his position, tends to degrade him and his class socially among his countrymen.

We have carefully considered the voluminous statements of the grievances of Civil Assistant Surgeons as published by them in the Indian Medical Record, the organ of the Association and of the local profession, but we feel that the lengthy correspondence referred to, resolves itself into the points raised in the communication, and we do not desire to trespass too much upon the time and patience of the Indian Government.

With this brief statement of the grievances of Assistant Surgeons, the Council of the Indian Medical Association, as representing the the local profession of this country, desires most respectfully with a view of offering such help as it may towards the settlement of this important problem, to offer the following suggestions for the kind and gracious consideration of the Government of India, viz:—

I. That Civil Assistant Surgeous be designated Assistant Civil Surgeous and that their service be merged into the present Uncovernted Medical service under the title of the Indian Civil Medical

- Service.

 11. That such service be graded as follows:--(a). Civil Surgeons (as at present graded in the Uncovenanted Medical service).
- (b). Senior Assistant Civil Surgeons. A new grade, promotion to which will be made after 20 years' service, for special merit.

 (c) First Grade Assistant Civil Surgeon.

(d) Second Grade

(a) Second Grade
(c) Third Grade
(l) Third Grade, salary and pension be arranged as follows:—
Tabular Statement iboxing Grades, duration of Service, Salary and Pension in each Grade, together with Allowances of the Indian Civil Medical Service.

GRADES OF I.C.M S.	Service for Grade.	S dary.	Pension.	Allowances.
I. Civil Surgeon*		Rs.	Rs.
2. Senior Assistant Civil Surgeon.	(Special)	500	250	The same as
3. First Grade Assist- ant Civil Surgeon 4. Second ditto, 5. Third ditto,	25 years. 20 ,. 15 ,, 10 ,, 5 ,,	400 350 300 250 200 150	150	(U.C.M.S) when in officiating charge. Grade allowinces same as the Subordi- nate Judicial Ser- vice.

Having respectfully submitted the foregoing suggestions regarding change of service and grade designation, for better prospects in regard to promotion, pay, travelling and other allowances and pension, it now remains to mention the subject of official status.

In this matter we feel that the justice and merits of the case would be suitably met by according to the Assistant surgeon class, the same public status as is at present recognised for the Subordinate Indicial Service.

In conclusion, we would most respectfully beg your generous consideration and support of this communication, as we feel that your recommendations for the amelioration of the grievances of Civil Assistant Surgeons will tend not only to the contentment and gratification of a large and worthy section of State servants, but will be the means of signal encouragement to medical education and progress in our Indian medical schools and colleges.

THE BIRDS WHISTLED "THE DEAD MARCH."

"Even the birds on the trees learned to whistle the 'Dead March."

"Even the birds on the trees learned to whistle the Dead March!"

It was an old soldier who was talking. "We were in camp," he said, "in a flit, malarious pirt of the country. Our Colonel was a splendid fighter, but didn't appear to have any idea of saintary matters. Just then we were in more danger from disease than from the enemy. Presently fever broke out and the men died by the dozen. Hardly a day but we buried some of them in the swamp. In fact, we played the "Dead March" so often that I used to fancy the birds in the trees had learned to whistle it. "Awful sorry, you know, boys," said our Colonel, "but so long as we have to stay here, we can't help having the fever "Yet the Colonel was wrong, as another regiment camped near us almost wholly escaped. But their commander fought the malaria with sanitation and preventive medicine. That made the difference."

In Juniary, 1892, the influenza was epidemic at Stebbing, near Chelmsford. Among the persons attacked were Mrs. Abram Thorogood of White House Farm, her daughter Anne, and her sons William and Eirnest. They had terrible pains in the head, sone muscles and joins, and were very feverish. The whole four—mother and three children—were confined to their beds.

In a letter on the subject Mr. Thorogood says: "my wife became quite delivrous: she did not know where she were and any stay of the control of the property of the confined me to the property of the confined to their beds.

In a letter on the subject Mr. Thorogood says: "my wife became quite delivrous: she did not know where she were and sold and a form."

Ernest. They had terrible pains in the head, sore muscles and joints, and were very feverish. The whole four—mother and three children—were confined to their beds.

In a letter on the subject Mr. Thorogood says: "my wife became quite delirious; she did not know where she was, and could neither get in nor out of bed. I gave Mother Sergel's Curative Syrup to all of them with excellent results, the fever soon left them, and shortly they were well and strong as ever, and bave sunce remained so. I may mention that many neighbours and firends had the same complaint as my wife and funily, but although the others had doctors and the best attention and advice, none recovered so rapidly as my people did. I thank God that I came to hear of Mother Sergel's Curative Syrup, for although we are a family of seven, living at home, during the eight years. I have kept it in the house we have not needed a doctor, thus saving many pounds in doctors' bills and costly prescriptions.

"The way I first used Sergel's Syrup was this: In the spring of 1883. I began to feel ill and out of sorts. My tongue was dreadfully coated and a thick philegin covered my guins and teeth. After eating I suffered from pain at the chest and stomach. I had bad nights, and sweat so much that in the morning my underclothing was soaked with motiture. In the following August carbinicles cause on the back of my neck, on my nose, and on my cheek bone. What I suffered I cannot describe. I got so low and weak that I could barely crawl about. The doctors did me no good. And as for their physic I might as well have taken tea or water. In pain and suffering I lingered on until I heard, through a neighbour, of Mother Sergel's Curative Syrup and got a bottle from Mr. W. Linsell, grocer, of Stebbing. A few doese relieved me, and soon the carbinicles disappeared, and I was well as ever. Yours truly, (Signed) Abram Thorogood's own case the disease was indigestion and dyspepsia, which poisoned his blood and expelled from the Syrup had nurrified his blood they were absorbed ^{*} Or present Uncovenanted Civil Medical Service, as it stands.

NOTICE.

The Chairman will, under Rule 15 of the Rules prescribed by the Local Government for the Election of Commissioners for Calcutas, hear claims and objections relating to the following Wards at the days and hours stated below:—

FEBRUARY 1895.	i	AT	12	AT 12 NOON.
Monday, 4th	: :	Wards	I, 3	I, 3 and 7	Wards	12, 15, 16 8 and 0	16, 17, 18	Wards 1, 3 and 7 Wards 12, 15, 16, 17, 18 At 2-30 F. M.
i.	:	: :	0	?	: :	14 and 23	23 7	Do.
Thursday, 7th	•				•	19		At 12 noon.
Friday, 8th	:	=	IO ar	10 and 24	2	4		Do.
Saturday, 9th,	:	=	20 ar	20 and 21	2	4 and 25	25	Do.
Monday, 11th	-:	2				11		Do.
Tuesday, 12th	:	2	77		=	23		Do.
					_

Under the Rule specified, all intending candidates and their agents as well as the public generally, may attend at the Municipal Office and assist at the disposal of the claims. A list of the claims and objections made in each Ward will be posted up in the Municipal Office, at least two days before the day of hearing.

W. R. MACDONALD. Secretary to the Corporation.

MUNICIPAL OFFICE:

Calcutta, 30th January, 1895.

TEXT BOOKS IN ENGLISH.

BY SARADA PRASAD BANERIEE.

SPECIMEN PAPERS AND ANSWERS

on

THE ENGLISH ENTRANCE COURSE
For 1895.
Having the largest sale of all similar works,
ENGLISH PREPARATORY COURSE

FOR 2nd & 3rd CLASSES.
This book has been approved by the Central Text Book Committee.

INDIA READERS NO. 2

FOR 4th & 5th CLASSES.

INDIA READERS NO. 1

FOR 6th & 7th CLASSES.

These books are of remarkably simple style and quite surted to Indian students.

The attention of School authorities in the N.-W. P. and Oudh, the Punjab, Madras, Bombay, the Central Provinces, Assam, and Burma, invited to the above publications of unique merits. rrits.
To be had of
S. K. LAHIRI & Co.,
College Square, Calcutta.

GENUINE HOMŒOPATHY.

A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S.

Homacopathic Practitioner,
May be consulted by letter or personally
daily at his residence, 30-1, Colontolah Street,

Calcutta.

Marcus Square Recreation Ground for Indian Students.

CON TRIBUTIONS from the public are invited towards the acquisition of the site selected. The Corporation of Calcutta has conceded the use of Marcus Square as the nucleus of the new ground. The Government of Bengal is prepared to give a donation of Rs. 50,000 and Maharaj Kumar Binaya Krishna has contributed Rs. 15,000. A further sum of Rs. 50,000, is required.

All well-wishers of the people of Bengal must see what beneficial results are likely to follow from the new Recreation Ground, where opportunity will be given for those healthy and manly exercises, which are essential to the moral and physical well-being of the rising generation.

The following is a list of subscribers :-

The following is a list of subscr
His House the Lieuteness C	Rs.
His Honor the Lieutenant-Gover-	*
Hon'ble Nawab Syed Ameer	1,^00
Hossain, C.I.R.	100 Paid	1
Mr. A. F. M. Abdur Rahman	50	- 1
Hon'ble Justice Chunder Madhub	, -
	001	1
H. H. the Nawab Bahadur of	_
Moorshedabad	1,000 Paid	1
Hon'ble Justice Gooroo Das	***	-
Banerjee Nawab Ashgar Ali Diler Jung,	100 "
C.S.I.,	50 ,,]
Kumar Dinendro Narain Roy	200
Baboos Anath Nath Mullick and		-
Promatha Nath Mullick	100 Paid	1
Mahamahopadhya Pundit Mohesh		1
Chunder Nayaratna, C.I.E., Baboo Umesh Chunder Dutt	50 "	-
(Comp. C. H)	100 "	1
Maharaja Bahadoor Sir Jotendro Mohun Tagore, K.C.S.1, Baboo Cally Kissen Tagore	100 ,,
Mohun Tagore, K.C.S.1,	2,000 ,,	١
Baboo Cally Kissen Tagore	200 ,,	-
J. G. Ritchie, Esq Raja Gobind Lai Roy, Bahadoor, of Rungpore	200	-
Asja Goning Lai Koy, Bahadoor,	to one Date	,
Kumars Manmatha Nath and	10,000 Paid	١,
Norendro Nath Mitter	1,000 ,,	-
Maharaja Doorga Churn Law,	, 11
	1,000 ,,
Raja Sir Sourindro Mohun	•	1
	200 ,,	1
Rai Sewbux Bagla Bahadur Maharaja Bahadoor Sir Noten-	100 "	1
dia Kushua, KCLE	100 ,,	1
Baboo Kali Prosanna Ghosha	50 ,,	-
Raja Peary Mohun Mookerjee,		1
CSL,	250 ,,
Baboo Debender Chunder Ghose	50 ,,	1
The Maharaja Bahadoor of Dinajpur	200	1
H. H. the Maharani Surnomoyee,	200 ,,	1
	1,000	1
Miss Elliott	100
Revd. John Morrison	30 Paid
Kumar Promada Nath Roy of
Dighapanya	1,000 ,,
Baboo Joygobind Liw Baboo Hem Chunder Gossain	500 ,. 1 00 ,,
H. H. the Maharaja of Dur-	100 ,,	1
bhanga	1,000 "
The Hon'ble Maharaji Ravan-	, "	1
eshwar Prosad Sing Bahadoor, of Gedhore	5,000	ļ
Raja Rameshwar Prasad Nara-	2 500	-
yan Sing, of Maksudpur H. H. the Maharani of Dumraon	2,500 2,000
B iboo Ambica Pershad Singh, of	2,500
Tikarı	2,000	١.
Rija Rinajit Sinha, of Nashipur	300 Paid	L
Kazi Furzund Ahmed	300 ,,	ľ
Kumar Dowlut Chunder Roy	200	1
Moulvie Sayed Mahomed Abu Sileh Khan Bahadoor	200 Paid	1
Rai Shetab Ch and Nahar Bahador	200 Paig 100
Baboo Chota Lai Sijwar, C.E.,	100 Paid
Raja Ram Narayen Singh	100
Subscriptions will be received an	d acknow-	1
ledged by Mr. O. C. Dutt, Collec	tor to the	١,
Corporation		1
J. G. Rr	TCHIE,	I

Offig. Chairman of the Corporation. 1st February, 1895.

THE PIONEER DIAMOND RING

WE guarantee these Rings for appearance, &c., to a genuine Diamond Ring, costing 50 times the money charged for these. The Crystal is of medium size and of such haidness that it will stand the ordinary test of a Diamond. It may be worn by either a Lidy or Gentleman, however fustitions in such matters, without fear of detection. The mount is beautifully found in a parties abstitute for bright is finished and a perfect substitute for bright 18

Tear of Guished and a perfect substitute of Guished and a perfect substitute of Carat Gold.

Price Rs. 6 8. (Post free.)

Terms: Cash or V. P. Post.

Extracts:—A Lady from Bellary writes:—
"My freends here saw the Ring which you sent me and like it." A Merchant from Tuttcorin says:—"It is pretty and of good houseship."

ALEXANDER Mac GREGOR & CO. DELHI, (PUNJAB.)

NOTE: - For any further information, &c., send a Reply Post Card or a Stamped Cover.

CAUTION!

Ir having been notified to the Proprietor of Beecham's Pills that certain unscrupulous dealers have recently been perpetrating a fraud in connection with the 4 anna box lately introduced, the public are requested to see that the retail prices, (vis., 4 annas, 8 annas or 91/2d, 12 annas or 1s. 11/2d. and Rs, 2 or 2s. 9d.) are clearly printed on the lid of each box. The fraud to which attention is drawn is that in the case of the two smaller sizes, the prices have been obliterated and the boxes represented to be of higher value than they really

Sole Wholesale Agents for India, Burma and Ceylon.

G. ATHERTON & CO., 3, NEW CHINA BAZAAR STREET.

CALCUTTA.

NOTICE.-Should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining supplies the Agents will be happy to forward sample boxes at above Rupee rates plus V. P. P. Charges and Postages.

> In Pamphlet, Price 4 annas or 6 copies for a Rupee.

A Cheap Reserve for the Army. By Capt. ANDREW HEARSEY,

Late Her Majesty's Service. Apply to Reis & Rayyel Office, Calcutta.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF MEMORIAL PRINT

	MEMORIAL FUND.
		Rs.
ı.	His Highness The Maharaja of Dur- bhanga K.C.L.E	,000
2.	His Highness The Maharaja of Vizi-
3.	His Highness the Nawab Bahadur of	,000
4.	Moorshedabad, Amirul Omra, G.C I.E. His Highness the Nawab of Junagadh,	800
	G C.S.I	500
5.	of Cooch Behar, G.C.I.E. Nawab Bahadur Sir K Abdul Ghan,	500
6.	Nawab Bahadur Sir K Abdul Ghani, K.C.S.L. and Nawab Bahadur K.
_	Ashan Ulla, C.I.E	500
7. 8.	K.C.S.I., and Nawab Bahadur K. Ashan Ulla, C.I.E Nawab Imad Jung Bahadur Nawab Imad Jung Bahadur Shams-ul Ulama Syed Ali Belgram Via Dahadur Jung Bahadur	500 500
9. 10.	Shams-ul Ulama Syed Alı Belgraini Khan Bahadar Bhai Bahauddin, C.L.E.,	500
	Khan Bahadar Bhai Babauddin, C.I.E., Vizier to the Nawab of Junagadh Maharaja Bahadur Sir Jotindra Mo- han Tagore, K.C.S.L	300
11.	han Tagore, K C.S.I	250
12. 13.	Massis Muckinson Mickenzie & Cu	200 200
14.	Prince Wala Kadr Syed Hosem Ali
15.	Mirza Bahadur Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Nawab	150
	Sved Zamul Abdın Khan Bahadur	140
16.	Feraz Jung Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee, C.S.I. The Honble Mr. Justice Chandra Modbo Glores	100
17.		100
18.	Prince Mirza Sir Jahan Kadar Baha-
19.	dur, K.C.I.K.,	100
20. 21.	Haji Kasim Ariff Lieutenant-General the Hon'ble Sir	100
	H. Brackenbury, K C.B.,	100
22. 23.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Guru Das	100
24.	Banerjee The Honble Dr. Rash Behary Chose	50 51
25.	Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt	50
26.	Shahibzada Mahomed Obidulla Khan Bahadur, C.S.I	50
27. 28.	Maharajkumar Benoya Krishna The Honble Mr. Justice E. J. Treve-	50
	Ivan	50
29.	The Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jabbar Khan Bahadur	50
30 .	The Right Rev. the Lord Bishap of	50
31.	Calcutta	50
32. 33.	Nawab Jahandar Meerza Nawab Huzoor Muza	50 50
34.	The Hon'ble W. C. Bonnerjee Nawah Syed Ameer Husein	50 50
35. 36.	Syed Nural Huda, Esq., cs., Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan	50
37. 38.	J. G. Ritchie, Esq. C.S.,	50 50
39.	Sir Alexander Miller	50
40. 41.	F. J. Rowe, E-q Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi Khan Ba-	32
42.	hadur, Kumar Radha Prosad Rov	25 25
43.	Kumar Dinendra N train Roy	25
44. 45. 46.	Kumar Doulat Chandra Roy	25 25
46. 47.	Babu Guru Prosonno Ghose Raja Sir Somindra Mohan Tagore,	25
48.	C.I.E Raya Jotindra Nath Chowdhury	25 25
49	Babu Rama Nath Ghose	25
50. 51	Raja Steenath Roy Rai Sew Bux Bogla Bahadar	25 25
52.	R. Belchambers, Esq	25
53· 54·	Ru Budicedas Mukim Bahadur	25
55·	Babu Gopal Lal Seal Moulvi Syad Abdus Salam	25 25
57.	A. T. Apcar, Esq	25
58. 59.	Lord William Berestord, K.C.I.E.,	25 25
60.	Manahi Chalam Rusaal	25 25
63.	F. H. Skime, Esq. Cs., The Honble H. J. S. Cotton C S. C. S. Prince Mahomed Bukhtyar Shah Baboo Surendra Nath Pal Chowdry Aukhoy Kumar Ghose	20
63 64	Baboo Surendra Nath Pal Chowdry	20 20
65 66	" Aukhoy Kumar Ghose Moulvi Imadd Ali	20 20
67.	R ii Shib Chunder Nundy Bahadar	20
68 69	D. Panioty, Esq Chowdry Mahomed Arjamand Khan	20 20
70 71.	H. E. A. Cotton, Esq., Barrister-at-lan Moulvi Syed Ashruffuddin Ahmed,	20
71.	Khan Bahadur	17-

72, T. Inglis, Esq., C.S.

73.	A. H. Giles, Esq		16
74.	F. F. Handley, Esq, C.S.	•••	16
75.	The Hon'ble Moulvi Siraju	l Islam
	Khan	•••	16
76.	Moulvi Serajuddeen	•••	15
77.	Abul Hasan, Esq.,	•••	15
78.	H. A. D. Phillips, Esq., C.S.	•••	10
79.	Baboo Kiran Chunder Roy		10
80.	E. N. Baker, Esq	•••	10
.18	Baboo Doyal Chand Bose		10
82.	" Madan Mohun Bose	•••	10
83.	" Kanai Lai Khan		10
84.	Moulvi Synd Akram Hossain		10
85.	Mouly: Aziz Ahmud	•••	10
86.	Rai Kanyelal Dey Bahadoor	•••	10
87.	H. Holmwood, Esq	•••	10
88.	Babu Harry Mohun Chunder	•••	10
89.	Baboo Chakkanlal Roy		5
90.	, Sarodaprasad Ghose	•••	5
	bscriptions will be thankfully
	Innorary Joint Secretaires.		•

the Honorary Joint Secretaires,
RAI RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI BAHADUR,
4, British Indian Street, Calcutta,
and A. F. M. Abdur Rahman, Esq.,
Barrister-atlaw,

16, Taltolla, Calcutta.

Rs. 6 "UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, preity, small, open-faced, nickel silvern, keyless, short winding, patent, "UNDAUNTED" watch, with hand setting mechanism, secondhand for Doctors, ornamental bold dial, for Rs. 6 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' guarantee. Warranted to stand the roughest use. Runs more tann 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily repairable. Others sell at double our rates. One watch free for the burchase of 8 at a time. roughest use. Runs more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily trepairable. Others seil at double our rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time, Mr. Jno. Dickson of Haputal Railway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps splendid time and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jerks. Vir. H. Moore of Royal Artillery from Poonamallee says:—I sold it with the part of the Poonamallee says:—I sold it with the part of the part Atthety from Foonamanee says.—I show to for Rs. 16.x Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Regt, from Dumdum says.—I have sold it for Rs. 20. x M. T. B. Scott of Patna Opium Department says.—The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time.

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty Canadian gold chain Re. 1-8-0.Fashionable Canadian Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, at Re. 1-8-0. Mr. C. Smith, Salt Inspector from Sankutus, says:
"A German valued the diamond ring at Rs. 50 and ruby at Rs. 30." Key winding, Government stamped, solid silver hunting case, Royal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee, for Rs. 13. Pte. G. H twkes of 2nd York Light Infanty from Parandhar says:—For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Setgeant for R., 28 × Pte. H. C. Bishop of L. F. L. Regt. from Kamptee says:—A Corporal F. L. Regt. from Kamptee says:—A Corporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch, Gentlemen's open faced, keyless real solid gold watch Rs. 30; ladies' Rs. 24; both with extras and guaranteed for 3 years. Mind they are guranteed to be of real solid gold. No agents kept, all golds sent only by us from Bombay per V. P. P.

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO., BOMBAY.

CATARRH,

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness.

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of hiving parasites in the liming membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these distressing diseases are rapidly and permanently cured by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUTTON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORONTO, Canada. ... 17-8 TORONTO, Canad ... 16 Scientific American.

"IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer find sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering: while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or tiese complaints in their severest and most chronic form.

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs

Is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the tortures of TOOTHACHE? A single application will relieve you.

In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the speak for itself.

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Phy-The Oriental Baill is used by the best Fay-sicians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of homes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar pre-paration has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throughout the world.

Agents in Calcutta : Smith Stanistreet & Co. R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Bathgate & Co. Limited.

REIS & RAYYET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT) WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

AND

Review of Politics, Literature, and Society RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

If paid in advance, Yearly Rs. 12 Half-vearly ... Quarterly ...
Montnly ... Ke. 7-8

...

Single or sample Copy ... Ans. 0.8 If not paid in advance, ... Rs. 18 Yearly ••• ••• " 10-8 " 6-0 Half-yearly... Hall-yeariy... , , 6-0
Quarterly ... , , 6-0
Monthly ... , , , 2-4
Single or sample Copy ... Ans. o-1
No additional charge for postage or peon. ... Ans. 0-12

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 hanes or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insertion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5.

Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphlets (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayet."

OFFICE: 1. Weboor Dutts Lane. Wellington.

OFFICE: I, Uchoor Dut's Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutta.

DROIT ET AVANT.

(PRINCE & PEASANTI WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

POLITICS LITERATURE OF AND SOCIETY

OL XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 662.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

--THE OLD CHURCH.

ABOUT five miles from the village of Smithfield, I sle of Wight county, Virginia, may be seen the ruins of an Episcopal Church, bearing every appearance of having been built in the earliest days of the colonies. In the bosom of a forest of ancient trees, lonely and drear, stand the remains of a once neat and even splendid temple of worship. The tower and belfry are truly antique, and the butricesses, a part of architecture not known in these days, bear every mark of the ravages of time. 'The ivy clings to the crumbling brick, and even trees of from twelve to fifteen feet in height, have taken root in the crevices, and yearly put on their green garments, and wave in the howling storm. The interior of the church presents a solemn view of the devastations of time, and the slow workings of the fingerlof decay. The altar and pulpit are, it is true, of more recent structure; but the Gothic character at the window, which once was ornamented with Istained glass, though now "bricked in," proves the great antiquity of the addice. Modern Vandals have made the walls a record of their names, their poetical abilities, and their wit jerit is a propensity to which most persons of the present age must plead guilty, to let their fellow-travellers to eternity know that they have held communion with times past and gone, by honouring a sacred relic with their attention.

The earliest record of this venerable pile is a resolution before the trustees of the church, to appropriate a certain sum for repairs of the building; and this was recorded over two hundred years ago. During the war, the building became the quarters for the British troops, who destroyed the stained window glass, and otherwise desecrated the sacred walls. Religious service was held in the building a few years back, but it now appears to be totally abandoned to the ravages of decay, the owl and the bat being the only tenants of its moss-covered walls. Some time since a number of citizens, curious to know something of its origin, dug at the four angles, for the purpose of finding the corner stone, and "removing the deposits," but without success. Under the aisle were found the bones of a human being, supposed to be those of one of the original pastors, who died within the remembrance of an old negro man, upwards of one hundred years of age.

More recently the following lines were written within the walls of the venerable curch.

> I stand within the forest drear. A clear blue sky is o'er my head ; The gnarled oak, with leaves all sere Looks down upon the sleeping dead. The broken slab no record bears Of those who lie the turf beneath : . And thro' the pine's mysterious airs The winds of winter seem to breathe.

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free.—Artificial Ear-drums and similar appliances entirely seperseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

The lizard and the adder sleep Beneath the cold and crumbling stone ; And ivy tendrils, as they creep, Seem uttering, "Alone-alone 1" Alone ! the dreary wind replies : Alone I the forest monarch groans Alone ! the gurgling streamlet sighs ; Alone! reecho dead men's bones.

Aye-all alone I thou dreary pile ! Forsken by the human throng, Who once passed up thy hallowed aisle, And praised our God in heavenly song. The awlet hoots where holy priest Breathed strains of pious elequence, And minister'd the sacred feast To Christians bent in penitence.

The bell ne longer calls to prayers, Or blithely rings the nuptial peal; Thy worshippers-long sleep is theirs ! And death hath fixed the lover's seal. The living linger round thy walls To hold communion with the dead, And hear the spirit voice that calls The wearied to a calmer bed.

I. H. H.

WEEKLYANA.

MISS Laura A. Smith contributes a paper to the Nineteenth Century on the Music of Japan. She says :-- on the Music of Japan. She says:—

"Like most nations, the Japanese have had their war songs from the time they had any existence as a people, but we are told that the lyrics which were used by the soldiers in the time of the first great Emperor of Japan, Jimmu Tenno, 606 B.C., were particularly rhythmical and finished. Japanese songs, with the exception of the heroic or historical ones, are all short, and when these are sung in times of peace they are set to the Koto.

The first of mese up-to-date mattial songs is entitled:

'Gallant Warriors.

If warriors go to war by land, the tutf shall receive the bodies of the slain. If warriors go to war by sea, the ocean shall receive the bodies of the slain. From time immemoral our gallant warriors have gone forth in swarms. Human life lasts but for fifty years; who would wish to purchase a few miserable years of life at the cost of dishonour? March and fite as long as breath remains, for our lives are at the disposal of the Sovereign, our hodies are to be sucrificed to the glory of the country: let soldiers die with all their wounds in front. The souls of those who thus defy Death shall be through the ages to come the guardian angels of Orental tranquility. So, go forth, go forth, ye warriors; warriors, go forth!'

The second battle song, which is distinctly of very recent date, is: If warriors go to war by land, the turf shall receive the bodies of the

To Pekin

China is a country where in bygone days teachings of sages prevailed; but as time rolled on the country has become retrogressive. It boasts of itself as the Celestial Kingdom, but its heart is barbarous and is the very reverse of celestial. Till its ignorance is dispelled, the

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, if possible, as the safest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be provided to the property of the period with the period of the period will be provided to the provided that the period of the period will be provided to the period of the peri sky of the Orient must ever be dark. Now is the time to plant the flag of the Rising Sun on the walls of Pekin, and to illuminate its darkness. This is the duty of our glorious Empire, the Land of the Rising Sun. Go forth, go forth, Imperial Army I March in emulation till Pekin is taken."

THE Japanese National Anthem "Kimi-Ga-Yo" (Reign of my Sovereign) is thus translated by Mrs. Antonia Williams. May our Emperor's reign endure, Stand increasingly secure. True and fast shall it last Till a million years have past. Thus shall he praised be to eternity. Just as leaves by autumn sown, Red and fair to earth are blown. Just as these never cease Year by year to shed their peace, Thus shall he reign to see eternity.

MISS Smith continues :-

"The two following lyrics are excellent specimens of Japanese songs, the first being especially popular with the almond-eyed Mousmee, with whose charms Sir Edwin Arnold has made us so familiar:

Yes! eager is my longing To look upon thy face, With thee some words to speak ! But this I must renounce: For should it in my dwelling Once chance to be divulged That I with thee had spoken, Then grievous were the trouble Would surely light on me : For certain my good name Were lost for evermore. Song.

Upright in heart be thou and pure, So shall the blessing of God Through eternity be upon thee. Clamorous prayers shall not avail. But truly a clear conscience, That worships and fears in silence.

The charming songlet which is so popular amongst the young people in the empire, known as "The Flower or the Maiden,' runs thus:

Last night the peach-blossom was watered by the rain;

At dawn the pretty girl arose and left her chamber.

She plucked a peach-flower, and placed herself in front of her mirror, To dispute the palm of beauty with it.

She asked a young man which of the two he deemed the more lovely,

The flower or the humble maiden?

The young man replied :

The beauty of the flower is incomparable.' The young girl, hearing this, became angry;

She crushed the flower between her hands,

Throwing it at his feet :

I do not think this dead flower can be compared to a living person. However, seigneur, if you wish to appreciate the charms of this flower, I advise you to take her as your mistress."

THE Bengal Legislative Council meet today. Mr. Bourdillon will introduce a Bill for the segregation or rather aggregation of pauper lepers. Following Bombay, Bengal is now prepared to confine lepers in Asylums. The Bill defines a leper to be any person suffering from any variety of leprosy in whom the process of ulceration has commenced. A pauper leper means a leper (a) who has in a public place solicited alms, exposed or exhibited any sores, wounds, bodily ailment or deformity with the object of exciting charity, or of obtaining alms, or (6) who is at large without any ostensible means of subistence. The police will arrest without warrant any person who may appear to be a pauper leper. When so arrested he is to be taken, in the first instance, to the medical officer to be appointed by Government as Inspector of Lepers. If found to be a leper, he will be next marched to a special Magistrate, who, if satisfied that he is a leper and a pauper, will send him over to the Superintendent of a Leper Asylum with instructions to receive the leper into his custody and safely to keep him in the Asylum until discharged by order of the Asylum Board. Lepers are also to be debarred from carrying on certain trades. With this object, Municipalities are to be empowered to make byelaws "prohibiting any person who is reasonably believed to be a leper from carrying on any specified trade or calling within the limits of, or any specified limits within, the Municipalities, unless and until he has obtained from an Inspector of Lepers a certificate" that he is not a leper as defined by the Lepers Act, 1895, as the proposed law is to be called.

DR. Lethbridge has been renominated an Additional Member of the Viceroy's Council for making laws. It is an unconditional appointment and will run for the full term of two years.

CANDIDATES for the Matriculation Examination of the London University to be held in Calcutta in June next, are required to apply to the office of the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, by the 28th February.

LORD William Beresford, who, though out of office, still clings to India for old love, leaves for home earlier than was previously announced. He sails from Bombay on the 23rd February. The haste is said to be due to the indisposition of the Marchioness of Waterford.

THE Lord Mayor and Shertffs of Dublin have petitioned the House of Commons for release of the Irish political prisoners.

DR. W. E. Grigsby, President of the District Court, Paphos, Cypius, is engaged in a translation of the Meijdille, or Turkish Civil Code, from the authorized Greek edition, into English, with notes and references to the Roman, French, and English law.

WE read in an English paper of the 25th January that Viscount Wolseley will start for india next month, travelling by the P. and O steamer Australia.

ACCORDING to Lloyd's Register,

ACCORDING to Lloyd's Register,

"During 1894, 614 vessels of 1,046,508 tons gross—namely 549 steamers of 964,926 tons and 65 sailing vessels of 81,582 tons—were launched in the United Kingdom, this being exclusive of warships. The warships launched at both Government and private yards amounted to 31 of 33,971 tons displacement. The total output of the United Kingdom for the year was, therefore, 645 vessels of 1,079,479 tons. The output of the year in the United Kingdom exceeded that of 1893 by more than 210,000 tons, and the proportion of steam tonnage to the total tonnage launched was much higher. In 1892 sailing tonnage formed no less than 24 per cent. of the output, in 1893 it formed 14 per cent, and in 1894 it formed less than 8 per cent. There were built abroad during the year 148 steamers of 203,279 tons and 170 sailing vessels of 73,751 tons. If to these figures be added those for the United Kingdom, the total output of the world during 1894 (exclusive of warships) appears to have been about 1,324,000 tons (1,168,000 stam, 156,000 sail). The wreck returns show that the seagoing tonnage of all nationalities totally lost, broken up, &c., in the course of twelve months amounted to about 692,000 tons (278,000 stam, 146,000 stam, 150,000 stam, 140,000 stam, 150,000 stam, 140,000 stam, 150,000 st

ALTHOUGH false, artificial teeth are of great use. But you must make a proper selection of your dentist.

a proper selection of your dentist.

"A patient consulted his doctor on account of a severe pain in his tongne. But the sufferer was assured that there was nothing the matter. He then paid a visit to his dentist, who informed him that his teeth were perfectly sound. Being, however, dissatisfied, he called upon an electrician whom he knew, and asked if it were possible that he could have any electricity in his mouth. On examining the teeth his friend found that two metals were used to fix them to a composition plate. To these metals wires were then attached and connected to a galvanometer. Then the teeth were replaced in the patient's mouth and the metals moistened with saliva. No sooner was this done than the galvanometer showed quite a large current from so small a source—enough, it is stated, to cause ulceration and severe pain when long continued upon so sensitive an organ as the tongue. The plate was covered with an insulating varnish, and thenceforward all the trouble ceased."

THE Morning Post of India writes :-

"We are being continually asked to say a good word in 'your valuable columns' for this and that journalistic venture. Some enterprising, though usually inexperienced, soul or other seems to bring out a new paper almost every week. It appears for a couple or three months, and then is lost to sight if not to memory dear. How is it possible to recommend journals that on the face of them cannot hope to exist? We commend journals that on the face of them cannot hope to exist? We should like to give them a pat on the back, but to do 50 would be to assist in a fraud on the public who pay their annual subscription, and parhaps have to remain content with half-a-dozen issues. In these circumstances it is impossible for us to say anything that might be construed into a recommendation of the latest candidate in the field. The Indian Observer is to appear at Cawnpoie appropriately enough on April 1st. Its prospectus is glowing in the extreme. The paper intends to assail the 'corruption that festers every where unchecked and undetected' in these Provinces, and to severely attack the 'blight of official cold-shoulder.' It will not confine uself 'sumply to matters political, commercial, and educational, but the cause of social and moral reform will also be dear to its heart.' But it will not be dear to its subscribers, if it obtain any. They are to have the Observer for the reform will also be dear to its heart! But it will not be dear to its subscribers, if it obtain any. They are to have the Observer for the magnificent sum of Rs. 3 (three) per annum, postage paid. Perhaps there is a bright particular genius in cheap newspaper production on the management. If so, and he will advise us how to get out the Port or less than Rs. 40 per copy per annum, we shall be happy to give him a very handsome bonus."

Cheapness and a promise to purge the country of all evils, are not the only recommendations of such ventures in Indian journalism. In addition to the paper, the subscribers are rewarded with prizes in the shape of books, &c. Another new feature is an Insurance scheme in which the heir of a subscriber is promised a sum much larger than the price of the paper paid for. But all these advantages have been cast into the shade by the offer recently made by a Bengali periodical, which is nothing less than the payment of Rupees one hundred to the nominee of a subscriber who may chance to be struck dead by lightning, or who may die of such accidents as drowning or the bite of a snake or of a mad dog, or a Railway collision, or a fracture or dislocation caused by a tram-car, a cab, a brougham, or a phaeton running over him, provided the deceased can be proved to have a copy of the periodical with him at the time of the accident. Considering how exposed man always is to dangers on flood and field, the periodical referred to ought to have a very large number of subscribers.

THE Indian Daily News writes :-

"A good deal of uncertainty still exists over the vexed question of the title of 'Honourable' bestowed upon members of Council and other officials. Under the rules now in force the title holds good in all parts of the Buttish Empire, so that a man who has a right to it in India or Australia is equally entitled to it at home. Once a member of this Government has resigned, however, his right to the title as a general rule drops, though certain exceptions are made which have provoked a good deal of citicism. In a recent London Gasette it is notified that 'The Queen has been pleased to approve of the retention of the title of 'Honourable' by William Edward Marimon, Esq., on his quitting office after more than three years' service as a member of the Executive Council of the Colony of Wostern Australia.' This has been taken up by a writer in the London Times, who not unn uturally asks why, if such titles are granted in the case of Western Australia, the same should not be done for those who have served in similar capatities in India, and who undoubtedly have at least an equal claim that they hold office under the Queen's sign manual, and that, too, in a country of vastly greater political importance than Australia now is. As a matter of fact, however, no such privilege exists in India, though one of the commonest of mistakes is to continue to address an exmember of the Viceroy's Legislative Council as the Hon'ble Mi. So-and-so after his term of office has expired. In the case of Australia, as explained by an evidently well-informed writer in one of the home papers, the facts are 'that in 1863 Sir Dominick Daly, Governor of South Australia, epresented to the Duke of Newcastle, Secretary of State for the Colonies, that certain members of the Executive Council had expressed a desire to retain the prefix of "Honourable" after the coased to hold office. He mentioned that a similar privilege had been awarded in Canada and elsewhere, and expressed his opnion that it "A good deal of uncertainty still exists over the vexed question of awarded in Canada and elsewhere, and expressed his opinion that might with advantage be applied to Australia and allowed retrospective effect.

'The Secretary of State held, however, that so long as the title was an object of ambition to leading colonists, it seemed desirable that it should remain a reward for political eminence, but it would cease to be an object of desire were it conferred promiscuously on all persons whom chance might for a time introduce into any colonial Ministry. He therefore thought that the right to retain the title after quatting office should be granted with a certain reserve and only on the recommendation of the Governor, with the understanding that Her Majesty should not be advised to sauction the retention of the title unless the return geometiles, had been three wears a member of a colonial Communication. councillor had been three years a member of a colonial Government or for one year at the head of it. This seems reasonable enough so far as Australia is concerned, but why the same privilege should not be extended to India is difficult to understand. The case would seem to be on all fours with that of Volunteer officers who have earned the military titles so much begrudged them by actual hard work of an exceed-ingly self-denying nature, but who are denied the right to utilize these titles fully after the manner of their professional brethren in arms."

Our contemporary does not quite see the risks of the extension of the privilege to India. The Game of the Gazette is already working much mischief and it is not desirable that it should be given a wider latitude. Already, with many, once an "Honourable," "Honourable" ever afterwards.

discovery of Mr. Percival Lowell, the American Astronomer. But there is a difference. Mars has a smaller water supply than Terra, and has to wait until the ice of the polar caps, is melted in order to get a proper circulation of that life-giving liquid. These observations were made last June, July, and August, and refer to the southern hemisphere of the planet, but it is probable that similar changes occur six months later in the northern hemisphere. The south polar snow cap, Mr. Lowell observed, was in May surrounded as it melted with a dark-blue border of water, which increased for a time, then diminished to a slender thread in August. With the melting appeared long narrow straits or channels of a darker tint than the existing seas. It is, therefore, doubted whether the so-called seas are really so. These areas were darkest (a blush green) when the melting of the snow began, and afterwards grew lighter, changing colour until they became an orange yellow. Moreover, their boundaries grew very vague. Mr. Lowell concludes that the flood and its ebb caused these alterations. On Oct. 13 the southern ice cap vanished altogether, leaving a yellow tint over the whole south polar region. The yellow tinge is ascribed to vegetation, produced by the fertilisation of low-lying districts under the flood water.

NOTES & LEADERETTES.

OUR OWN NEWS.

THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

EXTRAORDINARY cold still prevails in England and the Continent. The weather is described as resembling an Arctic winter. The Thames and Scheldt are frozen. The distress and suffering among the poorer classes are greatly increasing. A fire broke out in the West India Docks on the 8th. Before being subdued it destroyed two jute and corr sheds, a large warehouse, a steamer and several barges lying near. Also nine barges were damaged, as they could not be removed, owing to the severe weather having frozen them to the side of the quay. The total damage is estimated at forty thousand pounds.

Much interest has been caused in London by the fact that six hundied Grenadier Guards, were drilled on the ice on the Serpentine. The severity of the weather continues unabated.

A correspondent writing from Holyhead on the 22nd January says "I am feeling the cold more than usual, also the wind is unusually

In the Houses of Commons, on the 8th, during the Debate on the Addiess in reply to the Speech from the Throne, Mr. Jeffreys, Member for Bisingstoke, moved an amendment that "in view of the gravest, appreheusions existing regarding the disastrous condition of agricult ture, the depression of textile and other industries, and the increase in the number of unemployed, this House regrets that Ministers do noappreciate the gravity of the situation." After a warm debate, in the course of which Mr. Shaw Lefevre advocated spending twenty millions on the Government scheme of light railways, the amendment was rejected by a majority of twelve amidst considerable excitement. The Parnellites voted with the minority. It is arranged that Mr. Chamberlain moves the Opposition amendment deprecating that the time σ Parliament should be occupied in discussing measures without any prospect of passing them, and demanding an immediate submission of the resolution dealing with the House of Lords. On the 11th, Mr. Redmond introduced an amendment praying that Parliament be dissolved for the purpose of submitting the question of Home Rule to the decision of the country. The amendment was rejected by 256 against 236 votes. Mr. Balfour, the leader of the Opposition, made a declaration stating that he supported Mr. Redmond's amendment solely because he desired to bring about a dissolution of Parliament. On the 12th Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji moved an amendment to make Great Britain bear a fair proportion of the cost of the employ ment of Europeans in Iudia; also of the military and politica operations in cases where Imperial interests were concerned. The Secretary of State for India admitted the serious difficulties that exist between the Exchequers of India and England regarding the proportion of expenditure to be borne by each Government. He was THE planet Mars has its seasons, ust lik the earth, such his to desirous of a full and complete inquiry being held, but the form which it should be undertaken was not yet decided. Mr. Fowler thought that perhaps the best method would be to appoint a small Royal Commission. On this assurance, the amendment was withdrawn. Parliament may be dissolved and the Commission not appointed. Still the admission of injustice to India in quarters from which we expect justice, is something. Next day, Mr. John Clancy, Member for Dublin, moved an amendment that a general amnesty should be granted to the dynamiters now undergoing imprisonment. Government opposed the amendment, Mr. Acquith declaring that such crimes were too atrocious to be classed as political offences, and that the time for considering the question of an amnesty had not arrived. The amendment was ultimately rejected by 300 votes against 111.

In the House of Lords on February 14, a debate took place on Uganda. Lords Rosebery stated that Government was prepared almost at any moment to commence the railway, but reserved the right to determine the time of the beginning of the railway or any portion of the line. Lord Kimberley said that he had every reason to believe that the people were satisfied with British rule. Colonel Colvill, said that the protectorate should not be extended though it was necessary to occupy Unyoro.

THE Chinese Envoys have left Japan. It is stated that full powers were not sent from Pekin to enable them to renew the negotiations of peace. The Vicerory Li-Hung-Chang has been restored to power with full honours. He has been summoned to Pekin prior to starting for Japan to renew the negotiations for peace.

NEWS received in London states that Linkungtao Island was captured on the 7th instant. In the engagement between the Japanese and Chinese fleets a torpedo flotilla belonging to the former destroyed most of the Chinese warships. Details of the naval fight at Weshaiwei show that thirteen Chinese torpedo boats attempted to escape from the harbour, ten were captured, two sunk, and only one managed to get away. The Japanese despatches report that several of their torpedo boats which carried out the attack on the Chinese ships on the nights of the 5th and 6th instant, have been sunk or disabled. It is believed that altogether six Chinese warships were destroyed by torpedoes, but some uncertainty prevails owing to the similarity of names-The present situation is thus described: All the forts on the mainland are in the hands of the Japanese, and those on Zhis Island have been silenced. The Chinese warships Tingyuen, Laiyuen, Chingyuen, and Waiyuen have been sunk and thirteen torpedo boats destroyed and captured. The remainder of the Chinese fleet including the iron-clad Chenyuen and the forts in Linkungtao Island are still holding out. Japanese despatches received from Wei-hai-wei, dated the 9th instant, show that the forts in Linkungtao Island, also the Chinese warships in harbour were then holding out. The Chinese cruiser Chingyuen was sunk on the 9th by shells fired from the forts on the mainland, captured by the Japanese. Messrs. Tabu and Son, of Bombay, received a telegram on the 14th from their Tokyo correspondent informing them of the capture of Wei-hai-wei by the Japanese. Four vessels of the Chinese fleet have been destroyed by Japanese torpedoes, and the rest have surrendered. The latest report is that Admiral Ting has sent a gunboat to the Commander of the Japanese fleet with a flag of truce offering to sureender provided the safety and lives of the sailors, soldiers, and foreigners at Wei-haiwei are guaranteed.

PRESIDENT Cleveland sent a message to Congress recommending the issue of sixty-two and a half million dollars, thirty years, four per cent. bonds, payable in coin, with the option of substituting them for three per cent. bonds payable in gold. The House of Representatives has rejected the proposal.

THE Porte after long hesitation has granted permission to newspaper reporters to proceed to any place in Armenia with the exception of Bitlis. The Armenian Commission of Enquiry is sitting at Moosh.

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all kinds. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Street, Westminster, London, S. W.

A STREET mob in Alexandria set upon and severely beat three marines belonging to the cruiser Scout. The attack was entirely unprovoked. Nineteen assailants were arrested, and severe sentences passed on three of the ringleaders.

THE Egyptian Budget statement has been published, and the revenue of the past year exceeded the expenditure by £790,000 Egyptian. The surplus for 1895 is estimated at £660,000 Egyptian.

It is reported that a Fiench expedition operating against the Chief Samory in West Africa has suffered a serious reverse. Colonel Montiel, commanding the force, has in consequence been superseded.

In a conflict between a detachment of French troops and the Siamese at Kammoun, on the left bank on the Mekong, a French officer has been severely wounded.

MESSRS. Brock, Dibley, Wright, Theobald and F. Moses Coldwells, the latter an M.P. for North Lambeth, the five Directors of the Balfour Companies, against whom summonses were recently issued, were brought up at the Guildball charged with fraud and conspiracy. The prosecution is being conducted by the Treasury.

THE Glasgow Chamber of Commerce has resolved to petition Government for the abolition of the customs duty on low counts of Turkey red coloured yarns imported into Burma. Otherwise the Scotch trade will be killed.

A GREAT meeting of the cotton Employers and Operatives organised to protest against the imposition of cotton duties in India was held on February 14 in London. Among those present were twenty-six members of the House of Commons. A resolution was passed demanding a full debate in Patliament on the subject of the cotton duties.

THE Secretary of State for India in reply to a question in the House of Commons said he believed that the report of the Opium Commission would be presented to Parliament before Easter.

WE learn by the last mail that Professor Rhys Davids has gone over to America and is delivering a series of lectures on "The Literature and Religion of India." They will of course be published in book form. The first part of the work, we are told, will be occupied with consideration of the teachers of India and their influence on India and in the West. Next, the Buddhist books and their history will be examined, and after them "The Vedas as Literature" will come under survey. Other chapters will deal with "The Life of Buddha," "The Buddha's Secret," &c. The Professor is believed to be a great Buddhist scholar and is certainly deserving of the credit due to the founder of the Pali Text Society. He is famous as a translator of Pali books and a writer on Buddhism. But besides Pali and a bit of Sanskrit, he knows no other Eastern language. For the lectures in America, he will receive an honorarium of £600. He was lately awarded a pension of £200 from the Civil List. As Secretary of the Royal Asiatic Society he draws a salary of £250, and is enabled as such to push his Pali Text Society of which he is the mainstay. We hope the Professor will not, in course of his American lectures refer to what Sir Edwin Arnold has called "an act of historical justice" by making over the shrine of Bodh-Gya to "a representative committee" of Asiatic and American Buddhists, Sir Edwin Arnold's game having been played out.

A NEIGHBOURING Press—the Standard—has issued a cheap and unauthorized edition of the "Speeches by the Marquis of Lansdowne, Viceroy and Governor General of India. 1888-18894". In the volume occur almost all the addresses delivered by the Marquis during his term. The name of neither the printer nor the publisher appears. But the modest publisher adds a preface of two pages explaining that his book "contains all the important speeches of his Lordship during the period," that they "will bear favourable comparison with those of his illustrious predecessors, whether as specimens of the oratorical art or otherwise," and that "the speeches have also considerable historical value, inasmuch as they form explanations of the Government of its policy in regard to most of its important measures." Each speech or address is prefaced by a short note giving the circumstances under which, and the occasion when, it was made. The volume opens with the reply to the address of welcome by the Bombay Corporation, and concludes with that to the toast of the Viceroy's health at the Farewell Dinner at the Royal Exchange, Calcutta. Lord Lansdowne is a good speaker and, while Viceroy of India, availed himself of the many opportunities the office offered for speaking. The book cannot, therefore, fail to be valuable. As an Indian publication it has its blemishes, and although not a "standard" one, it is not unworthy of a gentleman's table.

IT was only the other day that the Statutory Civilian Kumar Gopendra Krishna was confirmed as Inspector-General of Registration, Bengal. But he is not to continue in the place. He had hoped that with the confirmation he would receive increased pay -the pay of the place as payable to a native of this country. Government, however, would not grant it to him, unless he chose to revert to the Provincial Service. The Kumar had accepted the officiating appointment on a pay less than what he was drawing, Now that it is to remain the same, he has resigned. This renders a chance of Nawab Syud Ameer Hossein again coming in, if he can, and be allowed to, withdraw his refusal to be the Inspector-General on a less pay than Rs. 1,500. If the Nawab is not solicitous of the dignity, or cannot have it, the place ought to be offered to Moulvi Abdul Jubbar, unless he has made his arrangements for the pilgrimage to Mecca. Government has not behaved justly with that experienced and conscientious officer. In his last days of service, this may be some reparation of the neglect shewn him.

THE Nator appeal has been heard and partially decided. The sentence of six months on the Raja's servant has been confirmed. No order has been passed as to the Raja himself.

FULL Dress and Evening Dress have been prescribed for the Chapters at Government House on Thursday, the 7th March. The gates will be closed at 9-15 P.M., after which no carriages will be allowed into the Government House compound till the ceremony commencing at 9 30 is over.

THERE is paint in town on account of smill-pox which rages violently. There were during the week ending 9th February, 58 deaths from that disease or 21 more than in the previous seven days. There is nothing to shew how many were the attacks during the two weeks. Cholera too has not abated. The deaths from that cause during the three successive weeks ending 9th February, were 20, 36 and 20. Many, again, are being carried away by remittent fever. The prevalence of the fever suggests an enquiry into the condition of our sewers. Are they all right? At night the narrow streets and lanes are impactable on account of the poisonous gas, which insidiously penetrating into houses, attack the unwary sleeping immates.

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, February 16, 1895.

ONCE A CRIMINAL ALWAYS A CRIMINAL.

Any one acquainted with the miseries of socalled old offenders after release from jail, must hail with joy the benevolent and statesmanlike steps taken in the North-Western Provinces to protect these unfortunate men from the harassment and oppression to which they are generally subjected. Persons once convicted of theft, house-breaking or a similar offence are done for life and lost to all that is good and honest in this world. They are obliged to repeat the offence and remain criminals for the rest of their lives. They have no rest after their release from the prison as they are haunted like ghosts by the Police, who utilize them as menial servants or labourers for as many days as they like, and then send them to jail through the Magistrate. The process of recouping the jails with released convicts, whether the conviction be the first or the seventh, is very simple. The Police gets one old sendmari from the thanna Malkhana or somewhere else, or a brass pot from some shop-keeper, and sends up the old offender with two or three witnesses, one of whom is generally a constable or head-constable. Such a case, as a rule, is undefended, and it takes the Magistrate no time to get through it, when the accused is again safely lodged in the jail for a year or two, and when he is committed to the Sessions he may get even more.

These men have no home in the practical sense of the word. They are shunned by their relatives and most cruelly treated by their neighbours. They sleep in old and deserted mosques, temples or thannas, when not housed in jails. If any of them happens to earn anything by labour or other honest means, tle lion's share of that earning goes to the pocket of the constable of the beat. He cannot get or remain in any employment unless the master bribes, so to say, the Police. Oftentimes when himself owning a house he is not allowed to occupy it by his relatives or neighbours on his return from the jail, and if he insists upon his just rights, he is again sent up with handcuffs to the Magistrate to undergo another term of imprisonment. Thus homeless and friendless, old offenders commit theft not for love or money, but to get a pass for readmission to the house of correction. Many of admission to the house of correction. Many of them have said so in Court and to jail visitors. If they get proper protection against oppression and encouragement to follow some profession or industry which they know or have learnt in jail, they will in most cases do honest work. There is no doubt that a large number of them can be reclaimed, if proper steps are taken for giving them a start in life. Here are two instances out of many. An old man of sixty who was probably convicted a short time after the mutiny, was employed by the present writer as a punkha puller. He lived in the Mahalla and there was no report of any kind against his conduct for nearly a quarter of century. He was, again, too old for committing any serious crime. As soon, however, as this man was employed, the constable of the beat got scent of it, and asked him to contribute something from his pay for the thanna people. He refused to pay as he thought that he could not be reasonably treated as an old offender after the lapse of so many years. Soon after the constables commenced to harass his employer. They called at unusual hours to be satisfied as to his presence in the house. The Police annoyed the master so much by nocturnal visits that he was obliged to dismiss the man.

Another "old offender" was subjected to still greater hardships by the Police. After his release, he lived at the house of his brother who was willing to support him. But the Police was always at his heels, and the annoyance became intolerable. It being suggested that the poor victim of Police should do some sort of work in order to earn his livelihood independently, his brother bought him an Ekka or country cab and with a horse he had, he started him as an Ekkawalla. He had carried on this business for some time when the Police again came down upon him and demanded its share of the earning, which demand increased more and more. On his refusal at last to share with the Police his hard-earned money, the cab was one day seized as stolen property and the poor fellow himself was sent up for trial as a thief. As no one claimed the horse, the Magistrate who was an experienced officer released the horse and the owner, but the man was kept out of his business for nearly ten days and kept in Hajat. After some months that man was obliged to sell his cab and horse and to leave his native city for some distant district.

In Bengal, where the executive maxim, "no con viction, no promotion "rings in the ears of judicial officers from Buxar to Cox Bazar, the question of reclaiming "old offenders" (as they are indiscriminately called whether they are new or old) and providing them with the means of earning an honest livelihood, assumes a peculiar interest, and its significance becomes greater than in any other Province. It is no secret to the Government or the public that a large number of these men are annually made to swell the population of our jails as the most convenient way to maintain a show of activity on the part of the Police and to secure rapid promotion.

The case of the Maghai Domes of Behar shows that the reclamation of criminal classes is not quite impossible. Many of these who were made to colonize in Champaran and Saran are now honest cultivators and artizans,

If Government is not inclined to do anything for the miserable class technically called "old offenders' and is afraid of reducing the population of the jails, which are gradually becoming profitable concerns, what is the use of repeating the process of releasing them from the jail and again readmitting them within a short time? This automatic process increases the work of the Police, puts the public to unnecessary trouble and fear, and teaches the people to bring false charges and to perjure in order to avoid the displeasure of the keepers of public peace.

From what is known of the socalled old offenders, a good many of them are deserving of the helping hand of philanthropists. But the extent of their misery and trouble being generally unknown, they now find very little sympathy. We too in Bengal should have a society for protecting and helping released prisoners. As in the North-Western Provinces, the Government here may take the initiative in the matter. If help be required from the public, we are sure it will be given in every form.

THE PROTECTION OF ATTACHED ESTATES. A GAP IN THE LAW

A CASE recently decided by the Calcutta High Court illustrates the singularly defective character of the law regarding the management of estates attached by a Criminal Court in India. The particulars are interesting from more than one point of view. The wellknown firm of iron-mongers in Calcutta, Messrs. S. K. Dwan and Co., are owners of certain valuable collieries, known by the name of the Seebpore and Kanthee collieries, at Ranigunge. It would seem that the proprietors had given a lease of these collieries to a European company for a period of 8 months. There was a clause in the lease binding the lessors to sell the property under certain conditions to the lessees. On the expiration of the period of the lease, a dispute occurred between the parties, the lessees refusing to give up possession and insisting on their right to purchase the property, the lessors demanding possession and refusing to sell as the conditions of the contract had been broken. Within Ranigunge, throughout the coal districts, the power of the European capitalists is supreme. In the present case, however, they found Messrs. S. K. Dawn & Co. an ugly customer, for the native firm succeeded very adroitly in dispossessing the lessees. For the first time, a native proprietor was seen to be able to assert, without the intervention of the Civil Court, his rights, as understood by him, against a European firm backed by all its influence. Dispossessed skilfully but quietly, the lessees applied to the local Criminal Court. The Magistrate, in a careful judgment, confirmed Messrs. S. K. Dwan & Co. in their possession, referring the lessees to the Civil Court for assertion of their rights. So far as the claims of summary and substantial justice were concerned, the Magistrate's decision could not be held to ignore them. Mesers, Dawn were the admitted owners. They had spent a large sum of money in laying tramways and planting machines. The European firm based its claim upon an agreement to purchase. The lease had admittedly expired. The claim to further possession was founded upon a contract whose validity having been denied by the lessors required to be established in a court of law. Admitting to its fullest extent the validity of the agreement to sell, it should be remembered that the sale had not actually been effected. A suit for specific performance of the contract was the only remedy open to the lessees. The Magistrate's decision enabled the proprietors to work the mine. The lessees carried the matter to the High Court. The evidence that had been adduced before the lower Court showed that although the lessors had been working the mine yet a portion of the Office buildings was still under the legal possession of the lessees. On this ground the High Court held that as it was not quite clear that the proprietors were in possession of the collieries in their entirety, an order of attachment should issue under Section 146 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. A Criminal Court making an order of attachment under this Section, is powerless to pass any order regarding the protection or management of the attached property. Under the law of the land, the Executive Government must step in and manage the property agreeably to the provisions of Act XL of 1858. There are some forms of property, however, notably a colliery, an Indigo factory, and the like, to which that Act cannot be made to apply. A colliery or an Indigo factory, to be protected ad interim, should be managed as it is ordinarily managed. It would require funds to manage it. There is no provision in the Act under which Government can advance such funds. Nor can the Collector be allowed to convert himself into a Superintendent of a coal mine or of an Indigo factory. As regards the latter, there may be valuable crops standing on the field and requiring to be cut down without delay and borne to the factory vats. Or, plants may be already in a state of partial decomposition in the vats. Or, the material may be in such a state that one or two more processes only are needed for converting it into the blue dye of value. A sudden suspension of operations therefore, in an Indigo factory may mean the total loss of the outturn of the year. A similar suspension of operations in a partially worked coal mine, may bring about absolute destruction of the property. The water, it is well known, that daily accumulates at the bottom requires to be daily pumped out. If allowed to accumu-

The Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science. 210, Bow-Bazar Street, Calcutta.

(Session 1894-95.)

Practical Class in Chemistry under Babu Ram Chandra Datta, F.C.S., on Monday, the 18th Inst., at 4-15 P. M. Subject: Copper and Bismuth. On Tuesday, the 19th Inst., at 4-15 P. M. Subject: Arsensous and Arsenic Salis. On Wednescay, the 20th Inst., at 4-15 P. M. Subject: Stannous and Stannic Salt. On Finday, the 22ud Inst., at 4-15 P. M. Subject: Stannous and Stannic Salt. On Finday, the 22ud Inst., at 4-15 P. M. Subject: Aluminium and Chromium Salt.

Lecture by Mr. B. Chaudhuri, B. A., B. Sc., on Monday, the 18th Inst., at 5-30 P. M. Subject: Origin of Species.

Lecture by B. M. Subject: Carbo Hydrates.

Lecture by B. M. Subject: Carbo Hydrates.

Lecture by B. M. Subject: Carbo Hydrates.

Lecture by Mr. B. Chaudhuri, B. A., B. Sc., on Thursday, the 21st Inst., at 5-30 P. M. Subject: Connective Tissue.

Lecture by Mr. B. Chaudhuri, B. A., B. Sc., on Thursday, the 21st Inst., at 6-30 P. M. Subject: Vascular System.

Admission Fee, Rs. 4 for Physics, and Rs. 4 for Chemistry; Rs. 6 for both Physics and Chemistry; Rs. 4 for Physiology; Rs. 4 for General Biology; Rs. 6 for complete course of Physiology and Biology. The charge for a single lecture is 2 Annas.

MAHRNDRA LAL SIRCAR, M. D. Practical Class in Chemistry under Babu Ram Chandra Datta, F.C.S., MAHRNDRA LAL SIRCAR, M.D. Honorary Secretary.

February 16, 1895.

late for only a few days, the supports or pillars may be so thoroughly soaked and weakened as to give way when the pumping is begun for working the mine again.

As regards the Scebpore and Kanthee mines, the Collector has, after the order of attachment made by the High Court, suspended their working. The pumps even have been stopped. The result has been that the mines have begun to fill with water. The admixed proprietors, seeing the peril to their property, have applied to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal for the prompt issue of an order allowing the pumps to be worked. Their interest to protect the property is presumably much greater than that of their late lessees who only wish to purchase it. Indeed, however eager the wish may now be of the lessees to purchase, it is certain that that wish will evaporate if the property be destroyed through the inaction of the Executive Government. Considerations of justice require that the order should be immediately given for the draining of the mines. The proprietors are willing to incur the necessary expenditure. The lessees, if their claim be ultimately upheld by the Civil Court, will be gainers by this. Surely, the law exists for the people and their possessions. The latter do not exist for the law. The very object the Judges had in view in issuing the order of attachment must be presumed to be the protection of the property in its entirety, so that the party who may ultimately be adjudged to have its control may have it unimpaired or without its value being at all deteriorated. That object is sure to be baffled if the Executive Government chooses to act with supineness. Overworked as the Chief Secretary of the Bengal Government undoubtedly is, and busy as he must be with high and wise schemes pregnant with the seeds of the immediate regeneration of dusky humanity, it is not too much to expect that he will devote a minute to the reasonable prayer of the proprietors of such a valuable concern.

In view, again, of the defect of the law for regulating the keep of property attached by Courts under Section 146 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, rules should be enacted without delay that may apply to all forms of property. Or, if legislation be needed, Act XL of 1858 should receive the necessary amendments. We have shown how an Indigo factory, if attached, may be substantially injured unless provision is made for going on with its work in the usual way. As regards collieries also, if their working be suddenly suspended, they are as likely to be substantially injured. A large number of coolies is necessary to work a mine. It requires a mint of money, if a colliery be extensive, to collect together the number of workmen needed. Advances have to be made which are gradually recovered. In the case of these mines, a large sum of money is still owing to the proprietors from the workmen. By suspending work, the advances become irrecoverable. The machines, again, by being stopped, become liable to diverse kinds of injury. As the Collector cannot be expected to work a coal mine or an Indigo factory with advances from the public treasury, why not have recourse to a system of leasing? A mine or a factory may be leased to either of the disputing parties. The appointment of a receiver who will work them with funds of his own and deposit the value of the entire outturn with a margin of profit to himself cannot be a sound principle. The system of farming upon a quit-rent which may be held in deposit for ultimate appropriation agreeably to the orders of the Civil Court, seems to be unobjectionable. In their petition to the Lieutenant-Governor, the proprietors had offered to manage the colliery on whatever terms the Government thought fit. They were in no need, of pocketing the profits immediately. They were perfectly swilling to work the mine incurring the necessary outlay and depositing every rupee of the sale proceeds with the Collector.

We may take advantage of the present opportunity for making a Service, Calcutta: P. few remarks upon the law about possessory orders passed by Courts Not printed for sale.

of Criminal jurisdiction. The rule invariably applied is that possession, if proved, should be allowed to continue till a Civil Court of competent jurisdiction decides otherwise. In most cases the application of the rule becomes certainly salutary. But there are cases in which injurious effects become obvious. A lease expires. The lessee, unwilling to give up the land, opposes the re-entry of the proprietor. The Criminal Court, if appealed to, will, under the law, confirm the lessee in his possession, leaving the proprietor to seek his remedy in the Civil Court. Preservation of the public peace is the justification of such an order. Is it not, however, opposed to what may be called the principles of natural justice? Is it not more consonant with our ideas of meum and tuum to permit the re-entry on the admitted expiration of the contract, leaving the lessee to substantiate his claim in the Civil Court? Public peace can hardly be endangered by an order to that effect. Sometimes an order confirming present possession leads to considerable injury. So far as the public peace is concerned, it may be maintained, as already said, by supporting either of the parties. The absolute refusal to examine title is a feature of the proceeding that accords very little with the demands of even summary justice. If a statement were drawn up showing in how many cases possessory orders of the Criminal Courts have been set aside in consequence of final decisions of the Civil Courts, important lessons might be deduced from it. Meanwhile, it may be urged that the plea is not so weak as some may imagine that we put forward on behalf of a summary examination of title even by inferior Criminal Courts when exercising jurisdiction under the possesory sections of the Code.

THE HISTORY AND ETHNOLOGY OF BURDWAN.*

This book, or rather booklet, of 64 pages of letter-press, does not profess to give an exhaustive account of the district, which it purposes to speak of. The object of the author, as explained by the title of the work, is to present before the public "some historical and ethnical aspects of the district of Burdwan."

In dealing with the ethnology of the district, the author refers to the manicipal preponderance of Bagdis and Sadgopas 2 in its population. He gives due importance to the latter, observing very rightly that "many of them occupy high social positions." The theory, however, that the Aguris are the product of unions between the Kshetris of the Burdwan Raj family and the Sadgopas of the Gopbhum dynasty, is not only highly offensive to both the parties concerned and especially to the Aguris, but appears to be unsupported by any kind of proof, historical or ethnological. Mr. Oldham says that his theory is based upon admissions made by the Aguris themselves. Knowing what we do of them, it seems to us impossible that any of them would have given such a humiliating account of their origin. At any rate, according to the principles of the law of evidence recognized by almost every system of jurisprudence, an admission cannot be necessarily conclusive. In the case under consideration, there are very strong reasons why, in spite of Mr. Oldham's certifying it as properly recorded, the so-called admission should be rejected altogether. The ground on which we base this view is that there are many Aguri families whose history is well known to extend to a far earlier period than the time of even Abu Roy and Babu Roy, the founders of the Burdwan house. Then, again, the ethnic and moral chracteristics of the Aguris clearly mark them out as a separate community, unlike any other caste to be found in Bengal. They are, by nature, hot-tempered, and incapable of bearing subordination, while the Kshetris and Sadgopas whom Mr. Oldham supposes to be their progenitors, are endowed by qualities the very opposite of these. A Kshetri would do anything to secure the good graces of his master. But a single word of censure or comment, though reasonable and proceeding from a person vested with authority, would cause the Aguri's blood to boil, and urge him to desperate deeds. The supposed admixture of Sadgopa blood with that of the Kshetri cannot account for these peculiarities in the moral character of their alleged progeny, except on the theory that when both the father and mother are of a mild nature, the child, by some law of physiological chemistry, must be fierce and hot-tempered. The Sadgopas belong to a lower stratum of society than the Kshetris. But their moral characteristics are almost identical, though, perhaps, a Sadgopa will not go to the same length to please his master as a Kshetri will go. The strongest argument against Mr. Oldham's theory is afforded by the fact that, unlike the other leading castes, the Kshetris recognise to some extent their connection with the bastard members of their clan. The illegitimate sons of the Bramhans, Rajputs, and of even the superior Sudra castes, have no recognized position whatever. The only alternative of the mother and the child in such cases is to adopt the faith of one of the latter-day prophets, and to be members of the casteless Vaishnav community. Among the Kshetris the practice is very different. Their illegitimate progeny have a recognized, though a lower, status. They are called Puriwals, and certainly not Aguris.

^{*} Some Historical and Ethnical Aspects of the Burdwan District with an Explanatory Index, by W. B. Oldham, C.I.E., of the Indian Civil Service, Calcutta: Printed at the Bengal Secretariat Press. 1894. Not printed for sale.

From a historical point of view, the most important families of the Burdwan district are the Rajput Zemindars settled on the banks of the Damodar. Mr. Oldham does not, however, say anything about their colonization, or about the several families in the district whose ancestors held important offices in the service of the Mogul Emperors of Delhi. No mention is made even of Dewan Manik Chand, who was commander-in-chief of the army at the head of which Seeraj-ud-Dowla invaded Calcutta, and a portion of whose mansion is still to be found by the side of the palace of the Maharaja of Burdwan. With regard to the history of the Burdwan Raj, only some passing references are made here and there. Nothing is said about its origin, or any of the events that affected it materially. A. description of the manner in which a firm of shawl and silk merchants managed to acquire almost sovereign power over a principality at least as large as Wales, ought certainly to have been regarded by its historian as a necessary and legitimate part of the work undertaken by him. Mr. Oldham says nothing on the subject, and he is equally silent on the insurrection of Sobha Sing which wellnigh crushed the Raj at one time, as also the depredations of the Mahrattas which threatened at a subsequent period to upset the affairs of the whole province.

A comprehensive history of the intrigues and mismanagement by which the great Zemindars of our country have been and are being brought to grief, however interesting and instructive it might be, could hardly be written without exposing the author to very serious risks. But in connection with the Burdwan Raj, Mr. Oldham might, without incurring such danger, have given an account of the splendid machiavelism by which its employes managed to have more than one-third of its great Zemindari sold for arrears of revenue at the beginning of the present century. Some of them became great landholders themselves by purchasing the sold out portions. The reticence about the viceroyalty of the Prince Imperial, Azim Oshan, who made Burdwan his head-quarters, is more excusable, though an enquiry as to the particular part of the town where he used to reside and hold his court, cannot but be regarded with interest by many. If the necessary investigations were made, it would, perhaps, appear that the Durbar hall of the Mogul Proconsul was exactly on the site of the Matab Manzil, and that the dilapidated mansion which is now occupied by the descendants of Dewan Manick Chand was originally built for the grandson of Aurangzebe. The tomb of the heroic but ill-fated Shere Afghan, the first husband of the celebrated Noor Jehan, is still in existence. The author has nothing to say about him or his spouse who, as consort of Jehangir, subsequently became the virtual ruler of India. To justify such omission it may be said that the book under notice does not profess to give a complete history or ethnological account of the district. The reader is puzzled to find out the raison d'être of its appearance. Fragmentary books are good when they embody the results of any original research. The kind of originality which Mr. Oldham has displayed in his attempt to establish that the Bagdis of Burdwan were the Gangaridæ of Megasthenes, or that pergunna Gopbhum was at one time subject to the rule of a Sadgop dynasty of kings, does not, we fear, satisfy the condition on which the publication of a book like his can be held to be justifiable. What appears to us most objectionable in the book is the tone in which Sir William Hunter's valuable works are spoken of. There are, no doubt, many errors and omissions in the Statistical Accounts and the other works of that great author. That is, however, necessarily the case with first editions of all books dealing with topics of wide scope. But to speak disparagingly of Sir William Hunter sounds something like the insolence of ignorance, or the flippancy of thoughtlessness. The Indian Civil Service cannot, in its long history, boast of another such name.

A word as to the Index. It is certainly as full as good Indexes generally go. Sir Charles Elliott, however, it is said, was so charmed with this booklet in spite of its conspicuous omissions, that he set the author to compile a careful index.

A SANITARY PRIMER.

This is a booklet in Bengali on sanitation, carefully compiled from ancient medical works in Sanskrit. It has been often remarked that Hinduism is a vast system of personal hygiene. The great work of Punarvasu, revised by Charaka, is more a treatise on the method of keeping health than one on disease and its cure. At least, a very large portion of "Charaka" is devoted to the consideration of health. The peculiarity of Babu Amrita Lal Chatterjee's little book is that most of the lessons it inculcates are entirely based upon "Charaka" and other medical and even religious works of ancient India. The observations on early rising, and the duties that should be gone through in the morning, would do good to every one to read and practice. The chapter on cleanliness is full of interesting matter. We cannot do better than give a summary of the contents of the pages. The mere headings will show what the reader may expect. The different ways of bathing, viz., in ponds and rivers by immersing the whole body, or in water fetched from ponds and rivers, or in that collected in masonry tanks, the results that may be expected from each of these methods of bathing, the difference of results due to difference of water used for bathing, the time of bathing, the prohibitions in respect of bathing, rubbing the body with oil, the different kinds of oil that should be used, general observations on cleanliness, the differences of dres or attire in view of the difference of seasons, the diverse rules that should be observed in cooking, the prohibitions respecting persons that should not be employed as cooks, the vessels that should be used, the manner of keeping the food after it has been cooked, the kind of water that should be used in cooking, the rules to be observed in respect of eating, the kind of articles that should be eaten, the measure of eating, what should be done after eating, the properties of some of the principal kinds of food, such as eggs and diverse kinds of meat, the properties of different varieties of truits, of pease, of cheese, of ghee, of oil, of serum, ^{*}Smaithya Sopana, Part I, or instructions on the method of keeping health from Ayuvvedic treatises of Rishis; compiled by Amilia Lal Chatterjee, and published from 3, Kumartooli Street, Calcutta. 1301 B. S.

it marrow, of sugar, of honey, of pot-herbs, and of water, the nethods of correcting the faults of water, the usefulness of sleep, he hours of sleep, the prohibitions in respect of sleep, excessive deep, the utility of physical exercise, the necessity of pure air, and he methods by which air may be purified, have all been set forth in a style that is simple and suited to the comprehension of even boys and girls. Babu Chatterjee having taken care to include nothing but what occurs in the sacred and medical books of India, there is every hope of the people accepting the instructions laid down. There are more pretentious works on the subject, based on principles affirmed by Western Science. In point of immediate usefulness, however, such works are certainly inferior to Chatterice's booklet. India is conservative to the backbone. The food that used to be taken in the days of Manu and the Mahabharata is still taken by the people. The hours also of cating and the methods of cooking are still the same. The same methods are still observed in our baths. Accordingly, an interest, at once theoretical and practical, attaches to the observations of the Rishis---the fathers of Indian hygiene. Chatterjee does not belong to the Education Department, and hence it is useless to hope for the book being ever placed in the hands of the schoolgoing population. Those, however, who wish to know what their forefathers thought of the everyday concerns of life, and who have not the leisure to look into the scattered chapters of voluminous works in Sanskrit, will find much of their contents skilfully reproduced in Swastbya Sopana.

A PRIVY COUNCIL APPEAL. VALIDITY OF "WAKES."

JUDGMENT of the Lords of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on the Appeal of Abul Fata Mahomed Ishak and others vs. Russomoy Dhur Chowdhry and others, from a decision of the Hon'ble L. R. Tottenham and the Hon'ble E. J. Treveleyan, Judges in the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, delivered 15th December 1894.

Present:--Lord Watson, Lord Hobbouse, Lord Shand, and Sir

Richard Couch.

[Delivered by Lord Hobbouse.]

The object of this suit is to establish as a valid wakinama a settlement of property effected by deed dated the 21st December The settlors were two brothers called Abdur Rahman and Abdoo Kadir, Mahomedan gentlemen, belonging to the Hanifa sect of the Sunnis. The plaintiffs, now appellants, are sons of Abdur Rahman, to whom interests are given by the settlement. The defendants, a hundred and more in number, are the settlement themselves, and persons claiming interests in portions of the settled property by virtue of transactions with Abdur Rahman subsequently to the date of the settlement. Some of these claimants are respondents to the present appeal.

The Subordinate Judge of Sylhet held that the 'settlement was valid as a wakfnama, and gave the plaintiffs a decree on that footing. On appeal the High Court took a different view, and dismissed the The great mass of the record relates to subordinate disputes suit. The great mass or the record relates to subordinate disputes—what parcels of property fall within the settlement, and what inferences are to be drawn from the way in which the settlors dealt with the property after the settlement. But the only question argued here has been the nature of the settlement itself; for in the view taken by their Lordships all others are immaterial.

The settlement begins thus:...." Committing ourselves to the mercy and kindness of the Great God, and relying upon the bounty of Providence for the perpetuation of the names of our forefathers and for the preservation of our properties we . . . have made this permanent wakf according to our Mahomedan law. Then they describe the property conveyed by them. The objects "For the benefit of our children, the children of our children, and the members and relatives of our family and their descendants in male and female lines, and in their absence, for the benefit of the poor and beggars and widows and orphans of Sylhet, on valid conditions and true declarations hereinafter set forth below. We two brothers, have for our lifetime taken upon ourselves the management and supervision of the same in the capacity of mat-to our means and position in life. We will at our own choice and discretion fix allowances for the support and maintenance of the persons intended to be benefitted by this wakf, who are now living or who may be born afterwards, and we will pay the same to them every month, and also the expenses for their festive and mourning ceremonies, when required.

"It will be competent for the matwalis and our successor matwalis to enhance or reduce the allowances of the persons for whose benefit the wakf is made, who are now living, or who may hereatter be born, in consideration of course of their position and circum-stances and the state of the income of the wakf properties. It will be competent for us the present maturalis and the maturalis who will be appointed after us, to use the wakf properties as security and to grant putni, durbutni and permanent and temporary ijara setttments in respect of them, and with the money to be received as salami for the aforesaid settlements, to purchase some other properties and to exchange any of the lands of this wakf with some other lands, and to include the lands so acquired by purchase or in exchange in the wakf, and to spend the profit of the same towards the expenses of the wakf, and to keep the surplus profit in stock in the tehbil, and to try always to increase the wakf properties and the amount in cash. Whatever properties may be acquired by us, the matwalis and our successor matwalis, after execution of this document, shall be included in this wakf. We, the matwalis and the matwalis who will be appointed in our place hereafter, shall have no power to make gift of any property in favor of relatives or strangers."

It is provided that future matwalis shall always be chosen from the male issue of the settlors, or if they fail, from their relatives. Provisions are made to prevent any of the persons for whose benefit the wakf is made from claiming anything as of right, and from calling for accounts, and from alienating his interest or subjecting it to attachment. And towards the end of the deed its object is again stated:--"The object of this wakf of properties is that the properties may the object of this wast of properties is that the properties may be protected against all risks, the name and the prestige of the family maintained, and the profits of these properties appropriated towards the maintenance of the name and prestige of the family in support of the persons for whose benefit the wast is made, and religious purposes, &c."

Such is the instrument which is propounded as a wakfnama. The motives stated are, regard for the family name, and preservation of the property in the family. Every specific trust is for some member of the family. The family is to be aggrandised by accumulations of surpluses, and apparently by absorption into the settlement of after-acquired properties; and no person is to have any right of calling the managers to account. These possessions are to be secured for ever for the enjoyment of the family, so far as the settlors could accomplish such a result, by provisions that nobody's share shall be alienated, or be attached for his debts. There is no reference to religion unless it be the invocation of the Deity w perpetuate the family name and to preserve their property, and the casual mention of unspecified religious purposes, &c., at the end of the sentence least quoted. There is a gift to the poor and to widows and orphans, but they are to take nothing, not even surplus income, until the total extinction of the blood of the settlors, whether lineal or collateral.

It seems that in the High Court the learned Advocate-General contended for the plaintiffs that a gift to the donors' descendants without any mention of the poor might be supported as a walk, and even that the Mahomedan law intends that perpetual family settlements may be made in the name of religious trusts. In the settlements may be made in the name of religious trusts. In the case of Absanula Choudby vs. Amarchand Kundu (17 L. R. Ind. App. 9.37) this Board said "They have not been referred to, nor can they find, any authority showing that, according to Mahomedan law, a gift is good as a wakf unless there is a substantial dedication of the property to charitable uses at some period of time or other."
The Board proceeded to affirm the decision of the High Court of The Board proceeded to affirm the decision of the High Court of Calcutta who held that a small part of the property had been well devoted to charity, but that as to the bulk of it, the settlement was, notwithstanding some expressions importing a Wakf, in substance nothing but a family sertlement in perpetuity, and as such contrary to Mahomedan law. The principle of this decision has been quoted and approved in a subsequent case Abdul Gafur v. Nizamudin(19 L. R. Ind. App. p. 170.) This is a sufficient answer to the arguments used in the High Court.

Their Lordships, however, cannot now say that they have not Lordships, however, cannot now say that they have not been referred to any authority for the contrary opinion; for Mr. Branson has cited to them two cases in which there are very elaborate judgments delivered in the Calcutta High Court by the two brothers, have for our lifetime taken upon ourselves the management and supervision of the same in the capacity of matwalis, and taken out the wakf properties from our ownership and enjoyment; in a private capacity, and we have put them in our possession and under our control in our capacity as maturalis."

Then are stated various incidents and duties attaching to the office of maturali, amongst which occur the following:—

"In order to maintain the name and prestige of our family, we, the maturality will make reasonable and suitable expenses according Bikani Mia vs. Shuk Lal Poddar 1(20 Ind. L. R. Cal. p. 116), where there was no gift to the poor till after the failure of the section's family. It was heard by a full Bench of five Judges, who decided that the deed was invalid, Mr. Justice Ameer Ali dissenting.

The opinion of that learned Mahomedan lawver is founded, as their Lordships understand it, upon texts of an abstract character, and upon precedents very imperfectly stated. For instance, he quotes a precept of the Prophet Mahomet himself, to the effect that "A pious offering to one's family to provide against their getting." ing into want, is more pious than giving alms to beggars. The most excellent of sadakab is that which a man bestows upon his family." And by way of precedent he refers to the gift of a house in walf or sadakab, of which the revenues were to be received by the descendants of the donor Arkan (20 Ind. L. R. Cal. 140.) His other old authorities are of the same kind.

As regards precedents, their Lordships ought to know a great deal more in detail about them before judging whether they would be applicable at all. They hear of the bare gift and its maintenance, but nothing about the circumstances of the property--except that in the case cited, the house seems to have been regarded with special reverence---or of the family, or of the donor. As regards precepts which are held up as the fundamental principles of Mahomedan law, their Lordships are not forgetting how far law and religion are mixed up together in the Mahomedan communities; but they asked during the argument how it comes about that by the general law of Islam, at least as known in India, simple gifts by a private person to remote unborn generations of descendants, that is of inalienable life interests, are forbidden ; and whether it is to be taken that the very same dispositions, which only the settlor save that they are made as wakf, in the name of God, or for the sake of the poor. To those questions no answer was given or attempted, nor can their Lordships see any. It is that the donor's absolute interest in the property is curtailed and becomes a life interest; that is to say, the wakfnama makes him take as matwall or manager. But he is in that position for life; he may spend the income at his will, and no one is to call him to That amount of change in the position of the ownership is exactly in accordance with a design to create a perpetuity in the family, and indeed is necessary for the immediate accomplishment of such a design. Among the very elaborate arguments and judgment reported in Bikani Mia's case, some doubts are expressed whether cases of this kind are governed by Mahomedan law; and it is Suggested that the desison in Abanulla Chondbry's case displaced the Mahomedan law in favour of English law. Clearly the Mahomedan law ought to govern a purely Mahomedan disposition of property.

Their Lordships have endeavoured to the best of their ability to ascertain and apply the Mahomedan law as known and administered in India, but they cannot find that it is in accordance with the absolute, and as it seems to them extravagant, application of abstract precepts taken from the mouth of the Prophet. Those precepts may be excellent in their proper application. They may, for aught their Lordships know, have had their effect in moulding the law and practice of wakf, as the learned Judge says they have. But it would be doing wrong to the great lawgiver to suppose that he is thereby commending gifts for which the donor exercises no self-denial; in which he takes back with one hand what he appears to put away with the other; which are to form the centre of attraction for accumulations of income and further accession of family property; which carefully protect so-called managers from being called to account; which seek to give to the donors and their family the enjoyment of propergive to the anones and their family the chipyment of people ty free from all liability to creditors; and which do not seek the benefit of others beyond the use of empty words.

Mr. Branson, indeed, did not contend for such sweeping con-clusions, though, as in duty bound, he submitted the arguments which led up to them. But he argued that where, as in this case, there is an ultimate gift for the poor, a perpetual family settlement expressly made as wakf is legal. He had a right to argue that point as not being covered by the decision in Absunulla Chowbhry's case This Board expressly left it open, because they found that contra-dictory views had been taken in India, and they did not desire to enter into that controversy in a case where the facts did not raise it. The facts of this case do raise it.

Having examined the authorities cited, their Lordships find a great preponderance against the contentions of the appellants. Some authopreponderance against the contentions of the appellants. Some authorities go so far as to hold that for a valid wakf the property should be solely dedicated to pious uses. On that point, however, this Board in Abanulla Chowdbry's case adopted the opinion of Mr. Justice Kemp to the effect that provision for the family out of the grantor's property may be consistent with the gift of it as wakf. In the total provision of the view now urged for the appellants, there is the Judicial opinion of Mr. Justice Ameer Ali in Bikani Ma's case, dissenting from the rest of the Court; a dictum of Sir Raymond West in the Bombay High Court in the case of Fatima Bibit on. The Abavater General of Bambay (6 Ind. L. R. Bomb. p. 53) and a decision of Mr. Justice Farran in the same Court in the case of Amrulal Kalidar vs. Shaik Husain (11 Ind. L. R. Bomb. p. 492) The weight of Mr. Justice Ameer Ali's opinion on this subordinate point is somewhat lessened by his support of the gift under consideration on the very broad grounds which their Lordships have considered to be untenable. The dictum of Sir R. West is mentioned in Abranulla Chowdbry's case. Mr. Justice Farran had before him a case very closely resembling the present one. He described the settlement as ## a perpetuity of the worst and most pernicious kind, and would be invalid on that ground unless it can be supported as a wakhama ff (11 Ind. L. R. Bomb. p. 497), and he thought that the authority of the Hedaya is against it; but he adopted the principle stated by Sir R. West, which he treated as a decision, and he supported the gift on the strength of the ultimate trust for the poor.

Their Lordships cannot assent to these conclusions. They make words of more regard than things, and form more than substance. In their judgment the Calcutta High Court have in this case rightly decided that there is no substantial gift to the poor. A gift may be illusory whether from its small amount or from its uncertainty and remoteness. If a man were to settle a crore of rupees, and provide ten for the poor, that would be at once recognized as illusory. It is equally illusory to make a provision for the poor under which they are not entitled to receive a rupee till after the total extinction of a family; possibly not for handreds of years; possibly not until the property had vanished away under the wasting agencies of litigation or mal easance or misfortune; certainly not as long as there exists on the earth one of those objects whom the donors really cared to maintain in a high position. Their Lordships agree that the poor have been put into this settlement merely to give it a colour of piety, and so to legalize arrangements meant to serve for the aggrandizement of a family.

They will humbly advise Her Majesty to dismiss this appeal

THE BIRDSWHISTLED "THE DEAD MARCH."

"Even the birds on the trees learned to whistle the 'Dead March.' '

THE BIRDSWHISTLED "THE DEAD MARCH."

"Even the birds on the trees learned to whistle the Dead March."

It was an old soldier who was taking "We were in camp," he said, in a fit, matarous part of the continuy. One Colonel was a splendid figuer, but delad appear to have my det of santiary in items. Just then we were in more danger from the ase than from the enemy. Presently fewer broke out and the men died by the dozen. Hardly a day but we buried some of them in the swamp. In fact, we played the "Dead March" so often that I used to fancy the birds in the trees had learned to whistle it. "Awfal sorty, you know, boys," said our Colonel, "but so long as we neve to stay here, we cut't help hiving the fever. Yet the Colonel was wong, as another regiment camped near us almost wholly escaped. But then commander tought the malaria with sanitation and preventive medicine. That made the difference."

In Junuay, 1892, the influenca was epidemic at Stebbing, near Chelmsford Anong the persons attacked were Mrs. Abram Thonogood of White House Farm, her daughter Anne, and her sons William and Eurest. They had terrible pains in the head, sore muscles and joints, and were very feverish. The whole four—nother and three children—were confined to then beds.

In a letter on the subject Mr. Thorogood says; "my wife became quite delirious; she did not know where she was, and could neither get in nor out of bed. I gave Mother Seigel's Cunative Syrup to all of them with excellent results, the fever soon left them, and shortly fliewere well and strong as ever, and have since remained so. I may mention that many neighbours and friends had the same complaint as my wire and family, but although the ophers bad doctors and the best attention and advice, none recovered so rapidly as my people did. I thank God that I came to hear of Mother Seigel's Cunative Syrup, for although we are a family of seven, living at home, during the eight years I have kept it in the house we have not needed a doctor, thus saving many pounds in doctors? bills and cos

TEXT BOOKS IN ENGLISH. By SARADA PRASAD BANERJEE.

SPECIMEN PAPERS AND ANSWERS

THE ENGLISH ENTRANCE COURSE

For 1895.
Having the largest safe of all similar works,
ENGLISH PREPARATORY COURSE

FOR 2nd & 3rd CLASSES.
This book has been approved by the Central Text Book Committee.

INDIA READERS NO. 2 FOR 4th & 5th CLASSES. INDIA READERS NO. 1

FOR 6th & 7th CLASSES.

FOR 0th & 7th LLASSES.

These books are of remarkably simple style and quite suited to Indian students.

The attention of School authorities in the N.-W. P. and Oudh, the Punjab, Madras, Bombay, the Central Provinces, Assam, and Burma, invited to the above publications of unique

erits.
To be had of
S. K. LAHIRI & Co.,
College Square, Calcutta,

THE WORKS OF DR. JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE. Rs. As.

- 16 o
 - (Sd.) Nana Bhai Haridas."
- Bengali translation of the Dyabhaga and the Mitakshara. † Price ...
 Bengali Translation of the Dattaka-
- 3. Bengali Translation of the Dattakachandrika.† Price ... 0 8
 4. The Evidence Act with notes in Bengali.† Price ... 1 0
 5. The Civil Procedure Code with notes in Bengali.† Price ... 4 0
 6. Principles of Zemindari Management and Book-keeping in Bengali
 7. First Lessons in English for Bengali boys. Price ... 0 4
 8. Bharat Susan Pranali* ... 0 4
 8. Bharat Susan Pranali* ... 0 4
 8. The Philosophy of Religion from the point of view of Common Sense. Price Rs. 5.
 CONTENTS.
 1. Historical Analysis of the evolution of
- - I. Historical Analysis of the evolution of religious systems. Definition of the term " religion."

 - Qefinition of the term "religion."
 The problems of the philosophy of religion and their solutions, old and new.
 (a) Why do Hindus believe in ten Avatars or incarnations including in the series three that are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a torture and a hoar.
 - appeared in the shape of a fish, a tortoise, and a boar.

 (b) Why is it that all ancient systems recommend the sacrifice of animals, and the burning of ghee or incense.

 &c. &c. &c. &c. &c.

 The weapons offensive and defensive of

 - The power of fine words.

 The art of becoming a prophet.

 The cumulative effect of hardswearing

 - for ages. Specimens of Puranised history
 - Brahminical and Christian priestcraft
 - compared.

 10. The artificial miseries of men caused by

 - The artificial miseries of men caused by religion.

 Tyranny and taxation of religion.

 The good man's adversity is the sharp man's opportunity.

 Swindling as a fine art.

 New Supersitions that may be suggested for the benefit of the priests.

 The great prophets of the world and their doings.

 Probable origin of the Saiva religion.

 - Probable origin of the Saiva religion.
 Tautric mysticism and abominations.
 - * To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink &
- * To be nau of Messrs. Thacker Spink & Co., only,

 † To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink & Co., and also at the Suradhani Agency,
 No. 11, Raja Nabakrishna's Street, Calcutta.

"SOUVENIRS OF INDIA."

Celebrated Models of our Indian Domestic Servants)

- I. Khansama, (Butler,) 2. Dhoby, (Washerman.) 3 Bhisty, (Waterman,) 4 Malee, (Gardener.) 5. Chaprasee. (Peon.) 6. Syce, (Groom) 7. Ayah, (Nurse.) 8. Bearer. 9. Sweeper. 10. Tailor. 11. Grasscut. 12 Barber.
- N B .- These are perfect Models of our Servants beautifully painted in untural colours.

Price, Rs. 4 complete set Box and Packing Annas Eight per dozen. Terms :- Cash in full with order, or at leas 25% of value must accompany, bulance being drawn for by V. P. Post.

Note-Orders received without a Remittance or deposit will be charged for at Rs. 6, the set.

Address all Letters, Remittances, &c., to The Agent,

ALEXANDER MACGREGOR & Co., DELHI, (Punjab).

GENUINE HOMŒOPATHY. A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S.

Homæopathic Practitioner.

May be consulted by letter or personally daily at his residence, 30-1, Colootolah Street, Calcutta.

Congress Sketches: A Review

OF THE

SPEECHES AND THE SPEAKERS AT THE

Fourth Indian National Congress Held at Allahabad.

Reprinted with additions and alterations from Reis & Rayyet

With a portrait of Mr. George Yule, President. Sold by the publisher G. P. Varma, and at the office of the Advocate, at Lucknow for 8 Annas a copy, besides postage.

> In Pamphlet, Price 4 annas or 6 copies for a Rupee.

A Cheap Reserve for the Army.

By Capt. ANDREW HEARSEY,

Late Her Majesty's Service. Apply to Reis & Rayyet Office, Calcutta.

A. MEITREAUX & CO.

Manufacturers, Repairers and Tuners of HARMONIUMS, ORGANS, &c.

9. UCKOOR DUTT'S LANE, CALCUTTA.

We import materials direct from Europe and guarantee the best workmanship and finish.

Iarmoniums,	Box 3	octav	es I stop	Rs.	30
Do. 7	l'able			",	50
Do. I	Oo. 4	19	3 stops		65
Organs Indi Folding w case comple			1 swe	.,	55
Organs, India:			stops & 1	swell "	70

"5 do. do. do. " 90 Do. Do. Trial solicited.

A Wonderful Medicine.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

A RE universally admitted to be worth a Guinea a box, for Billious and Nervous Disorders, such as wind and Pain in the Stomach, Sick, Headache, Giddiness, Fulness, Swelling after Meals, Dizzness and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Breath, Costiveness, of Breath, Costiveness, of Breath, Costiveness, of Breath, Costiveness, and all Nervous and Trembling Sensation, &c. The first dose will give relief in twenty minutes.

Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one box of these Pills, and they will be acknowledged to be $A^{ ext{RE}}$ universally ad-

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

For females of all ages these Pills are in-valuable, as a few doses of them carry off all humours, and bring about all that is required. No female should be without them. There is No female, should be without them. There is no medicine to be found equal to Beecham's Pills for removing any obstruction or irregularity of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box, they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and robust health. This has been proved by thousands who have tried them, and found the benefits which are ensured by their use.

For a Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, and all Disorders of the Liver, they act like magic, a few doses will be found to work wonders on the most important organs in the human machine.

wonders in the most important organs in the human machine.

The Natives of India will find Beecham's Pills the finest medicine ever introduced to their notice; the European residents also will find them of great value for cooling the blood. For throwing off fever and preventing inflammations in bot climates, they stand without a rival.

These are Facts testified continually by members of all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debitated is, BEECHAM'S PILLS have the Largest Sate of any Patent Medicine in the world.

Beecham's Magic Cough Pills.

As a remedy for Coughs in general, Asthma, Bronchial Affections, Hoaiseness, Shortness of Breath, Tightness and Oppression of the Chest, Wheezing, &c., these Pills stand unrivalled. Let any person give Beecham's Cough Pills a trial, and the most violent Cough will in a short time be removed.

Beecham's Tooth Paste

Will recommend itself being efficacious and economical: it is packed in neat airtight collapsible Tubes collapsible Tubes.

NOTICE.—G. Atherton & Co. will forward on receipt of letter, samples at the following rates: size 9½0.4 at 8 anians per box 1-1½0. size 12 anias per box, 2s, 9d. size 2 rupees per box, Tooth Paste 12 anias per Tube, these rates do not include the cost of postage which will be added to the amount.

Sole Wholesale Agents for India, BURMAH & CEYLON.

G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3, NEW CHINA BAZAR STREET, CALCUTTA.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF MEMODIAL PRINT

	MEMORIAL FUND.
	12:- ULucia The Muharaja of D		Rs,
1.	His Highness The Maharaja of D bhanga K.C.I.E., His Highness The Maharaja of V	2	,000
2.	anagram, G.C.I.E.,	1	,000
3.	His Highness the Nawab Bahadur Moorshedabad, Amirul Omra, G.C.	I. K.	800
4	His Highness the Nawab of Junaga	dh,	500
. 5 .	His Highness the Maharaja Baha	dur	500
6.	of Cooch Behar, G.C.I.E. Nawab Bahadur Sir K. Abdul Gha K.C.S.L. and Nawab Bahadur	m,	,
_	R.C.S.I., and Nawab Bahadur Ashan Ulia, C.I.E. Nawab Imad Jung Bahadur Nawab Azam Yar Jung Bahadur Shams-ul Ulama Syed Ali Belgra Whon Bahadar Bhaidshanddin C.I.	•••	500 500
7. 8.	Nawab Azam Yar Jung Bahadur		500
9. 10.			500
11.	Vizier to the Nawab of Junagadh Maharaja Bahadur Sir Jotindra N	[0-	300
12.	han Tagore, K.C.S.I Babu Jodu Lai Mullick	···	250 200
13.	Messrs, Mackinnon Mackenzie & C Prince Wala Kadr Syed Hosein	Co. Alı	200
15.	Mirza Bahadur Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Naw	•••	150
-	Sved Zainni Abdin Khan Bahac	lur	140
16.	Feraz Jung Feraz Jung Mabjer Peary Mohan Mookerjee, C. The Honble Mr. Justice Chance Madho Chore	1.8	100
	Madual Cillian	•••	100
18.	Prince Mirza Sir Jahan Kadar Bal dur, K.C.I.E., The Hon'ble P. Playfair	•••	100
19. 20.	Haii Kasim Ariff	•••	100 100
21.	Lieutenant General the Hon'ble	Sir	100
2$. 2}.	H. Brackenbury, K.C.B., Babu Jai Gobind Law The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Guru D	as	100
24.			50 51
25. 26.	The Hon'ble Dr. Rash Behary Gho Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt. Shahibzada Mahomed Obidulla Kh	•••	50
			50
27. 28.	Maharajkumar Benoya Krishna The Hon'ble Mr. Justice E. J. Tre	ve-	50
29.	The Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jabi		50
30.	Khan Bahadur The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop	of	50
31.	Maharaja Durga Charan Law, C.I. Maharaja Durga Charan Law, C.I. Nawab Jahandar Meerza Nawab Husoor Murza The Hon'ble W. C. Bonnerjee Nawab Syed Ameer Husein , Syed Nurul Huda, Esq., C.S., Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan I G. Birbia Esq. S.	E.,	50 50
33. 33.	Nawab Jahandar Meerza Nawab Huzoor Mirza	•••	50 50
34	The Hon'ble W. C. Bonnerjee Nawab Syed Ameer Husein	•••	50
35. 368 37.	Syed Nurul Huda, Esq., C.S., Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan	•••	50 50
38.	Sir Alexander Miller		50
39. 40. 41.	F. J. Rowe, Esq Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi Khan B		32
	hadur,	•••	25
42. 43.	Kumar Dinendra Narain Roy	•••	25 25
44. 45. 46.	Kumar Doulat Chandra Roy	•••	25 25
40. 47·	Raja Sir Sourindra Mohan Tagor	•	25
48.	Raya Jotindra Nath Chowdhury	•••	25 25
49. 50.	Raja Sreenath Roy	•••	25 25
51. 52	Rai Sew Bux Bogla Bahadar R. Belchambers, Esq		25 25
53· 54·	Raja Surja Kanta Acharjee Chowdh	ury	25
55. 56.	Babu Gopal Lai Seal Moulvi Syad Abdus Salam	•••	25 25
57· 58·	A. T. Apcar, Esq	•••	25 25
59-	Lord William Beresford, K.C.I.E.,	•••	25 25
61.	F. H. Skrine, Esq. C S., The Houble H. J.S. Cotton C.S., C.S.	:	25
62. 63.	Prince Mahomed Bukhtyar Shah .	••	20 20
64· 65·	Baboo Surendra Nath Pal Chowdry, Aukhoy Kumar Ghose		20 20
66. 67.	Rai Shib Chunder Nundy Bahadar	••	20 20
68. 69.	D. Panioty, Esq. Chowdry Mahomed Arjamand Kha H. E. A. Cotton, Esq., Barrister-at-le	n	20 20
70. 71.	H. E. A. Cotton, Esq., Barrister-at-le Moulvi Syed Ashruffuddin Ahme	u.	20
, • ·	Khan Bahadur	••	17.8

Khan Bahadur ... 72. T. Inglis, Esq., C.S. ...

73.	A. H. Giles, Esq		16
74-	F. F. Handley, Esq, C.S.		16
75.	The Hon'ble Mouly: Sirajul	Islam
	Khau	•••	16
76.	Moulvi Serajuddeen		15
77.	Abul Hasan, Esq.,	•••	15
78.	H. A. D. Pinilips, Esq., c.s.	•••	10
79.	Baboo Kiran Chunder Roy		10
8o.	E. N. Baker, Esq	•••	10
81.	Baboo Doyal Chand Bose	•••	10
82.	" Madan Mohun Bose	•••	10
83.	"Kanai Lai Khan	•••	10
84.	Moulyi Synd Akrain Hossain		10
85.	Mouly: Aziz Ahmud		10
86.	Rai Kanyelal Dey Bahadoor		10
87.	H. Holmwood, Esq	•••	10
88			10
89.			5
9ó.	" Sarodaprasad Ghose		5
	abscriptions will be thankfully	received
	Honorary Joint Secretaries,		•
	RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI	BAHADI	JR.
	4. British Indian Street,
	and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMA
	Barrister-		•

Rs. 6 "UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Guaranteed three Years.

16. Taltolia, Calcutta.

Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, small, open-faced, nickel silvern, keyless, short winding, patent, "UNDAUNTED" watch, with hand setting mechanism, secondhand for Doctors, ornamental bold dial, for Rs. 6 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' guarantee. Warranted to stand the roughest use. Runs more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily repairable. Others sell at double our rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time, Mr. Juo. Dickson of Haputal Railway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps solendid time and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jerks. x Dr. H. Moore of Royal Artillery from Ponuamallee says:—I sold it for Rs. 16, x Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Reg. from Dumdum says:—I have sold it for Rs. 20. x Mr. T. B, Scott of Patna Opium Defrom Dumdum says:—I have sold it for Rs. 20. × Mr. T. B. Scott of Patna Opium Department says :- The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time.

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Note that the control of the control for Rs. 13. Pte. G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light Infantry from Purandhar says: ...For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Sergeaut for Rs. 28 × Pte. H. C. Bishop of L F. L. Regt. from Kamptee says:—A Copporal F. L. Regt. from Kamptee says:—A Corporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch. Gentlemen's open faced, keyless real solid gold watch Rs. 30; ladies' Rs. 24; both with extras and guaranteed for 3 years. Mind they are guranteed to be of real solid gold. No agents kept, all goods sent only by us from Bombay per V. P. P.

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO., BOMBAY.

CATARRH,

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness. A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, 'however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these distressing diseases are rapidly and permanently cured by a few simple applications made at home by 'the patient once in two weeks. A pamphile explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUTON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORONTO, Canada.

Scientific American. "IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer find sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Gure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering: while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most hronic form,
Its magic effect in affording instantaneous

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs is almost too renarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the tortures of TOOTHACHE? A single application will relieve you.

In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the result speak for itself.

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Phyiclass in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of homes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar preparation has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re. each,

Obtainable of all respectable chemist

Agents in Calcutta: Smith Stanistreet & Co. R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Bathgate & Co. Limited.

REIS & RAYYET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT) WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

AND

Review of Politics, Literature, and Society RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

If paid in advance,

Yearly ••• ••• ... Quarterly Monthly Single or sample Copy ••• ••• ... Ans. 0-8 If not paid in advance, Rs. 18 Yearly 10-learly 10-learly 6-d Monthly 2-d Single or sample Copy ... Ans. 0-l No additional cnarge for postage or peon. " 10-8 ... ,, 2-4 ... Ans. 0-12

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

Advertisements (three columns to the page and too lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insert tion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5. Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Litters! Communications, and books and pamphless (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of Resident Correct of The Communications and pamphless (Carriage paid) to The "Editor" of Resident Correct Communications and pamphless.

OFFICE: I, Uchoor Dutes Lane, Wellie Street, Calcutta.

The state of the state of

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

AND

REVIEW OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 663.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

· THE DEATH OF FRANCIA.

BY W. BRAILSFORD.

WHEN Raffaelle sent his famous St. Cecilia to Bologna, it was entrusted to the care of La Francia, who was his particular friend, to be unpacked and hung up. La Francia was old, and had for many years held a high rank in his profession; no sooner had he cast his eyes on the St. Cecilia, than, struck with despair at seeing his highest efforts so immeasurably outdone, he was seized with a deep melancholy, and died shortly after.—Diary of an Ennnyée.

As the long shadow falls
At fading eve, when some soft note recalls
The old home voices happy childhood heard,
Upon a heart that fame's high impulse stirred,
The presence of the beautiful appalls,
And casts all old day-dreams to Lethe's brim,
As fancies vague and dim,

O, weary heart of thine,

High genius! wherefore shouldst thou grieve, yet pine,
The laurel crown and votive wreath to wear?
Why falter in your path, and fear to share
One guerdon of the soul-fed art divine?
It is not thus that man's declared intent
Should lapse in banishment.

What has thy spirit bowed In this thy winter?—what majestic cloud? Vision !—which hides thy proud heart's dearest dream, Which makes reality unearthly seem, And the true efforts of thy life dost shroud. Thus fall the flowers that bloomed so fresh and fair, All perishing in air.

Ah, the sad verity
That overcomes men's minds, and wills to be
The shadow o'er their paths of love and life,
The slayer of the fame whose ways are strife,
Where legions run the race in company.
O, certain light of truth, thy rays dispel
'Hopes erst invincible!

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all kinds. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Street, Westminster, London, S. W.

Thus fled the mystic faith
That is art's incense and its vital breath;
Thus died La Francia as some star outshone,
Over whose sphere a brighter light had grown,
And in the full eclipse had welcomed death,
Dimmed by the lustre of another's sheen,
And fading all unseen.

Yet is it well to die?
To let life's purpose yield the victory;
To die, and leave each passionate desire,
As some new tones half trembling on the lyre,
Or bud that folds its cup all silently;
To die, and pass away like some frail flower
Or wonder for an hour.

Faint not upon your way,
You who would hold o'er human hearts time's sway;
Is it not meet that those who yearn to wear
Fame's immortality, should fairly bear
The cares and turmoils of life's working day,
That thus when night proclaims her sable reign,
Their wishes prove not van?

WEEKLYANA.

EARLY in the week we received the following telegram from Hydera bad in the Deccan:—

"The public meeting held on Saturday last at the Public Gurdens to consider Dr. Hart's scheme of sanitation for Mecca ended in confusion and disorder. About five thousand people were present. Nawab Vicar ul-Omra, the Prime Minister, presided, the Resident, several nobles and high officials being present. Dr. Lawrie introduced Dr. Hart to the meeting. In his address Di. Hait dwelt at length on the hardships and mortality to which pilgroms are exposed in their voyage to Mecca, during their residence in Mecca, and in the fulfilment of their duties both there and in Medina, and gave the details of his scheme of sanitation. The learned doctor was supported by an aged Moulvi but opposed by Mollah Abdul Quyaum, Deputy Inam Commissioner, who is held in high esteem and veneration by the people. The Mollah carried the audience with him and was frequently cheered and applauded. After the Mollah's speech the Chairman put the resolutions approving the Doctor's scheme to vote when the audience rose and vociferously cried out namunzoor (not approved)! Great confusion, disorder, uproar prevailed, and all attempts to restore order failing, the meeting dispersed without adopting the resoultions. Nawab Lokeman-ud-Dowla, Staff Surgeon to the Nizam, had sent a paper to be read at the meeting but the meeting having suddenly dispersed the paper was not read. The following is the purport of the paper . The Mahomedan scriptures enjoin no one should leave the locality infested with cholera nor should one come to it from a place that is not so infested. This command applies equally to those attacked with the disease as to those that are not. Although the cause of the disease is not yet exactly ascertained, it has been found by observation that good sanitation and supply of pure water help in lessening the strength of poison. When large numbers of people flock to a place and make indiscriminate use of impure water and food, cholera finds its way amongst them easily. In Mecca and Hardwar in 1892 and 1893 the disease committed the greatest havor, but in the following year there was hardly any case. The efforts of Dr. Hart are highly praiseworthy if they are practicable. The Sultan is not styled the sovereign but the servant of the Holy City and the laws that govern the City are those ordained by the Prophet. The expenses of providing suitable drinking water to pilgiims are met from spontaneous pubhe charities termed sabil; the same may be said of the food supply. Sanitary improvements are indeed urgently needed for the holy city. During the last twelve years great progress in this direction has, however, been made. It is proof that His Imperial Majesty the Sultan is not heedless of the bygienic needs of the place but much remains to be done. In 1893 His Majesty intended to depute some medical men to Mecca to enquire into the causes of the spread of cholera but when the inhabitants heard of their intended visit to the Zemzem, so indignant they became that they were prepared to fight. This is the reason why the Sultan is deterred from carrying out improvements forcibly. Before asking the Sultan and the Nizam to interfere in the matter of sanitation, vigorous steps should be taken to prevent cholera being imported from abroad. The ship St. John was one of the ships that carried cholera to Jeddah and thence to Mecca. The disease continued when the vessel was under quarantine. She was detained forty days at Kamran. The poorer portion of the pilgrims have to perform the voyage in the holds of ships where they are so packed that they have hardly breathing room. The hardships they suffer on board make them predisposed to any disease. Many die before reaching their destination notwithstanding supply of pure drinking water on board. One can imagine what must be the state when passengers are landed. Sanitary measures must be adopted from the moment the ships leave Indian shores and continued until they reach Jeddah. If anti-choleraic moculation be really what it has been represented to be, it should be enforced on all pilgrims befere they start. An able medical man should be sent along with the pilgrims by every State and Government as is done by the Nizam's Government. His duty should be to see that people drink pure filtered water, take good food and adopt other sanitary measures. The voyage in closely packed holds of pilgrimladen ships and the evils of quarantine are alone sufficient to kill people. Such heavy loading should be forbidden. Every State and Government should send a Mahomedan doctor to Mecca to reside there permanently as has been done by the Nizam's Government to look after the health of the pilgrims and the permanent population of the city. A hospital for women and others should be established and kept up by an international charitible fund. When people have learnt the importance of scientific medical treatment they will themselves refrain from breaking the laws of health. Thus State interference would no longer be necessary. When sanitary measures were first introduced in Hyderabad, people were opposed to them; but then ideas are now changed and they flick to our dispensaries for medical aid. All this is the result of practical sanitary education. Before using force every effort should be made to make the people alive to the benefits by practical and ocular demonstration. Dr. Hart will have the support of every Mahomedan in adopting the measures pointed out above."

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, if possible, as the safest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

This report of the meeting is different from that in the Englishman. According to our contemporary, "A resolution was carried to urge the Nizam's Government to send qualified Mihomedan doctors with the pilgrims to submit a report of the sanitary conditions, and the Nizam to address the Sultan of Turkey for co-operation." It is difficult to know real facts, but specially about Hyderabad, where intrigues are incessant, where the lionized of one hour is the most detested at the next, where outward appearances are no indication of the inner working, where the object seems to be to raise a man to pull him down, where the son is opposed to the father, where fraternal love is not the rule, and where cousinly hate is most tampant.

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free.—Artificial Ear-drums and similar appliances entirely superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

We are not therefore surprised to find the Bangalore Evening Mail in its Hyderabad column anticipating the downfall of Nawab Server Jung, who only two years back, when he was appointed Peshi Secretary to the Nizam, was hailed as the deliverer of the Nizam's ill-fated downingons. It writes:—

"It is now rumoured—and the rumour is very strong in Hyderabad—that the days of Nawab Server Jung Server-ul-Mulk, as the Peshi Secretary to His Highness, are numbered, and that the Resident, Mr. Plowden, himself his found cause to be displeased with him. We are not sure what foundation there is for this rumour, but we have been assured that the rumour is hailed with juy by the people of Hyderabad. Except the near relations of Nawab Server Jung, who have been directly benefited by his sudden use, we believe there is not a soul in Hyderabad who would not be glad to see him removed from his present exalted office. Indeed, it is a consummation devoutly to be wished, and the sooner it comes, the better for Hyderabad."

WE are sorry to record the death of Mr. R. C. Sterndale. Not belonging to the favoured service, he came into prominence as Vice-Chairman of the Suburban Municipality which he ruled with a strong hand, and ended as the Collector of Income Tax, Calcutta. In the meantime, he was the Contonment Magistrate of Barrackpore. A man of general culture and wide sympathies, he did his work creditably, mixing with the people, and knowing their ways. He took an active part in volunteering and delighted more as a soldier and a magistrate than a collector of rates and taxes. He was given a military burial.

MR. A. S. Judge, District Superintendent of Police, Patna, has been appointed Collector of Income-Tax, Calcutta. He joined the Indian Service as Assistant Superintendent of Police in January 1880 and his experience has always been that of a Police officer and in the mofussil, except, we believe, on two occasions when he was posted at Howrab. In his new sphere we hope he will be guided by his own instincts and have an ear for all representations.

COLONEL P. D. Henderson's services having been replaced at the disposal of the Military Department, the Honourable Mr. W. Lee-Warner, C.S.I., of the Indian Civil Service, Secretary to the Government of Bombay in the Political, Special, Judicial and Educational Departments, Additional Member of the Council of the Governor-General for making Laws and Regulations, and the author of the Protected Native States, has been appointed a Resident of the 1st class and Resident in Mysore and Chief Commissioner of Coorg from the 20th February 1895. He will also be the Judicial Commissioner of Coorg. The Hon'ble Mr. G. W. Vidal has succeeded Mr. Lee Warner in the Bombay Secretariat.

MR. R. W. Frazer, B.A., LL.B., late of the Midras Civil Service, who came out to India in November 1877 and retired in 1866, and has evidently retained his interest in India, recently delivered, at the London Institution, a lecture on Village Life in India. He spoke of the common agricultural folk in India, of the commercial problems of India, of the principal produce of the empire, and the great increase of jute. He further expressed the opinion that the Scotch jute spinners would not be able much longer to hold their own against Indian competition. Already we find that the Dundee Chamber of Commerce has given notice that its representatives at the annual meeting of the Association of Chambers of Commerce, to be held in London in March, will submit the following motion:—

"That this Association desires to draw the attention of the Secretary of State for India (1) to the injustice of the competition with the home textile industries permitted by the laxity of the Indian Factory Act as regards the long hours during which machinery, operated by women, young persons and children, may be wrought—22 hours by women and young persons, and 15 hours by children, as against 10 at home; (2) to the want of adequate and systematic inspection by officials trained and appointed to the work as required in the United Kingdom, and whether, even if such inspectors were set apart for this work, it would be possible to prevent the intentions of the Legislature as regards the working hours of women and children being exceeded where the shift system is in operation; and (3) whether the evils naturally incident to and experienced in the United Kingdom from the employment of women and young persons during the long hours and of night employment have been sufficiently considered in permitting, under the provisions of the shift system, a new industry so to develop itself. On these grounds the Chamber submits that factories conducted by subjects of the Crown and equally under the control of Parliament, whether in India or at home, should be subject to similar conditions; particularly that they should not be allowed to employ women, young persons, or children before six in the morning or after seven at night."

NOTES & LEADERETTES, OUR OWN NEWS,

۶,

THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

LORD Salisbury, speaking at the Irish Loy dist Club on Feb. 16, said the union between the Conservatives and the Unionists was stronger than ever. The dissolution of Parliament must be taken on the single issue of Home Rule. The policy of the Government was a mixed appeal to the people and was insincere. The House of Lords would not resist a vote of the people in favour of Home Rule if the question was clearly submitted to the country. The same evening, in the House of Commons, Mr. Chamberlain moved an amendment demanding the immediate submission of a Government resolution dealing with the House of Lords, and said he did not hope for the defeat of the Government. but desired to expose their tactics in keeping back Home Rule, knowing that the country was opposed to the measure. Mr. Asquith declared that Home Rule was not at present a vital question. The Government was resolved to fulfil other pledges. The debate on the amendment was continued on the 18th. No special features were brought forward in the speeches, and on division the motion was rejected by 296 votes against 282. The Government next moved the closure on the debate on the Address, which was carried by a majority of eight votes, the result being loudly cheered by the Opposition. The Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne was afterwards voted.

FILE Newmarket Bench has dismissed the summonses against the Jockey Club and refused to grant leave to appeal.

THE Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in reply to a question, said that Great Britain had not recognised the right of pre-empton claimed by France in the Congo district.

A STRONG movement exists in Germany in favour of bimetallism. A debate has taken place in Reischstag on the question. Prince Hohenwhe, the German Chancellor, is disposed to consider the advisability of opening negotiations for an exchange of views between the Powers with the object of international measures being adopted. The Reichstag has passed a resolution calling upon the Government to convene an international monetary conference.

THE surrender at Wei-hai-wei is complete. The Chinese soldiers and sailors have been liberated, but the officers will be deported before being releases. Of the foreigners all have leave to depart except an American named. Howie. Admiral Ting and the Commander of Liokungtao Island committed suicide. A Japanese ship has arrived at Chiefoo with the bodies of Admiral Ting and other Chinese officials who committed suicide on the fall of Wei-hai-wei. All possible marks of respect and the greatest honours are being paid to the remains by the Japanese. Captain Yang, of the Chinese flagship, also shot himself as the Japanese came on board to take possession of the vessel at Wei-hai-wei. China asked Japan to send envoys to Port Arthur to meet the Viceroy Li Hung Chang for the discussion of peace proposals. The request has, of course, been refused. The Chinese Viceroy therefore proceeds direct to Japan.

The Chinese attacked Haicheng in Manchuria on the 16th inst., but were repulsed with heavy loss. The Japanese Government has made an application to Parliament for a further war loan of one hundred million yeu.

INTRIGUES of this house Pasha and several other Ministers are daily becoming more pronounced, and the invectives of the Egyptian press more victent. The correspondent of the Times, telegraphing from Cairo, attributes this hostility wholly to the influence of the Khedive, who is deterned to render impossible the existence of any Ministry that is preparated to co-operate loyally with the British control. It is believed that the british control is the believed that the british control is the british control is the british control. It is the british control is the british control in the british control is the british control in the british control is the british control. It is the british control in the british control in the british control is the british control. It is the british control in the the journal points out the misfortune under which Egyyt suffers in having a Khedive with an incurably restless spirit, and says that it is idle to imagine that the European Powers interested in Egypt will allow the country to be governed, without guidance, by a young, mexperienced Prince. Great Britain desires to maintain the authority of the Khedive and to guarantee the dynasty, provided no attempts are made to subvert the system whereby the present solvency and prosperity of the country have been attained. A later telegram in the journal says that disquieting symptoms are discernible at Alexandria which recall to mind the events preceding the riots and massacres of Europeans by the Arabs in June, 1882. The correspondent adds that there is a great influx of Bedouins on the outskirts of Alexandria. An agent of the Khedive has been seen distributing largesse among the Bedowns, enlisting them for the Khedival bodyguard. The French newspapers attack Lord Cromer and the British policy in Egypt-The Journal des Débats publishes an article justifying the Khedive's discontentment with his Ministers, who, the paper adas, have become the champions of the discredited British policy. In English official quarters the situation in Egypt is viewed with the utmost calmness. Needless importance has been attached to some signs of disquietude, which will probably go no further.

MR. Henniker Heaton put a question to the Secretary of State for India regarding the statement made by Lord Elgin during the debate on the Tariff Bill explaining the mandate under which the Legislative Council was acting. Mr. Fowler, in reply, referred to the delicate and important subject raised in the question, and said that he was prepared at the proper time to maintain the course taken by the Government and Lord Elgin on recent occasions, which was strictly in accordance with the Acts of Parliament. Mr. Fowler promised to lay despatches of Lord Argyll and Lord Subsbuy on the table of the House defining the position of the Secretary of State towards the Government of India.

THE Under-Secretary of State for India in the House of Lords on Feb. 19, expressed a hope that the report of the Opium Commission would be issued before the Easter recess. Lord Reay said that it was necessary to discuss a valuable paper contributed by a prominent Indian member of the Commission which had been received the day before.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Fowler, in reply to a question, said that it was the intention of Government to proceed with the construction of railways in India as rapidly as their resources would permit, and also to employ private agencies for railway extension whenever terms were suitable. At the same time, he said, the Government did not see its way to giving an imperial guarantee for interest on the railways.

THE Prince of Wales caught a slight chill while skaring, and was unable to be present at the Diawing-room. Postday he starts for the

A NEW American loan is announced of sixty-two million dollars, hearing interest at the rate of four per cent, payable either in gold or silver. The loan was issued simult meously in London and New York. The loan has been covered twenty times in London.

In the House of Commons on the 19th a resolution moved by Mr, Howard Vincent to restrict the importation into England of the products of Germin prison labour, was carried without a division, the Government yielding after at first opposing the question

In the House of Commons, on Feb. 21, Sir Henry James moved the adjournment of the House in order to call attention to the recent fiscal measures passed by the Indian Legislative Council, and to inquire into the effects of the Indian cooton duties upon the trade of Lincashire. He said that that trade desired fair play for mutual industries, and he charged the Secretary of State for India with giving a ready ear to agitators instead of consulting the Lancashire manufacturers before sanctioning the taxation.

Mr. Fowler, in his reply, warmly denied the accusation, and enlogised the action of Lord Lansdowne and Sir James Westland. He repudiated the statement that her Majesty's Government had sacrificed the interests of England by the re-imposition of the duties on Manchester goods, and declared that it was solely due to the deficit in the Indian Budget. He added that the duties were popular among the Natives and Europeans in India, and warned the House that discontent and danger to British rule would result from the removal of duties under Palhament's pressure. On his part he did not shrink from censure, but reminded the House that it was answerable to the people of India for any adverse decision at which it might arrive.

Mr Goschen said that it was imperative upon the House to take into consideration the feelings of India, and urged the Opposition to support the Government in the present instance.

On a division motion the adjournment of the House was rejected by 304 against 10) votes. An unusually pressing whip was issued by Government, owing to rumours that the members representing the Lancashire constituencies would support the motion. An analysis of the division list shows that several Radicals and Mr. Chaplin, and Lord George Hamilton voted with the minority. Mr. Chamberlain abstained from entering the division lobbies. Mr. Balfour being down with influenza was not present. The Times remarks that the rejection of the motion though saving the Government from a disastrous defeat, saved in the meantine the Unionists from a serious calamity, and views the result as most gratifying to all who are desirous of seeing the exclusion of Indian questions from party conflict.

A CORRESPONDENT writing from London on the 1st February says :--The weather has set in excessively cold, accompanied with very severe gales which have caused considerable loss of life and destruction of property, while the snow-drifts have considerably retarded railway locomotion. Influenzi has increased largely with the severe weather Yesterday a meeting was held at the London Chamber of Commerce when Lord Brassey read a paper on the Indian Currency question, While in the usual manner deploring the position in which India was placed by having to pay such excessive amounts for Home Charges, the only remedy he could recommend was the development of Indian railways and economy of expenditure and re-adjustment of charges. Any one not a born idiot will recognize these utterances as merely the platitudes of a politician.

Renter's latest telegram on the subject says that the frost has now lasted twenty-seven days with more or less severity. Extreme distress prevails everywhere among the poorer classes. The coroners in London are holding scores of inquests every day on persons found dead from the cold.

THE Lady Elliott Portrait Fund is wixing bigger every day. Her admirers were very well advised in putting the scheme forward long before her husband's tenure of office came to a close. It is expected that so much as Rs. 10,000 will be collected, while about a third of it is required for the portrait, the balance being utilized as a present in a suitable form,

All classes have subscribed, the Europeans of course predominating. Lady Ethott's popularity must be great indeed to attract no less an Indian than the former candidate in the Richard interest for the constituency of Deptford, who, if he had won the confidence he so eagerly sought, would probably now be fighting with Mr. Labouchere with as much fervour for the abolition of the House of Lords and, indeed, on behalf of all the measures of the New Cistle

THE Maharaja of Hutwa is expected in Calcutta early next month The Hastings House at Alipore is being fitted up for his residence.

THE statue of Sir Steutit Buyley is on its way to Cilcutta. The bust of Mr. Tawney has a ready arrived. The hist is the work of Mr. Hamo Thorneycroft and the second has been done by Mr. A. E. 1. Rost, who having froished his education has just started as a sculptor at 20, Newman Street, Oxford Street, London, W. Madias is for a statue to Sir T. Mathuswami Tyer, which the deceased Native Judge of the Madras High Court so richly deserves. Our friends down South may try Mr. Rost, who, having a reputation to make, pays special attention to his work. His charges, besides, are moderate.

Another statue for Calcutta-that of Lord Roberts-has nearly been completed by Mr. Bates. We may have it next cold weather. Mr. Bates is now engaged in designing the statue of Lord Lansdowne.

MR. Shyamp Krishnavarma, M. A., Oxon., barrister-at-law, has been appointed, in succession to Mr. Haridas Viharidas Desai, Dewan of Junagad. At a durbar held on the evening of the 6th February, the hazur firman of appointment was read and the new Dewan, who has seen service in Rutlam and Udeypore, was decorated with the robes of office and a valuable pearl necklace. He expressed his thankfulness in a rather long speech in Urdu, in the course of which he said that he sad that

"it was difficult for a man of his humble qualifications to carry on the work of administration as sausfactor, by as his great and glorious predecessors, Dewan Amaria, Dewan Gokulji Zala, and Dewan Haridas. He said that the name of the well-known Dewan Amaria meant in Sauskirt immortal, and that the name of Gokalji Zala was immortalized by the biography of that distinguished statesman, written by his learned and respected friend, Mr. Mansukhrim. He hoped, however, it at with the valuable assistance of the able and experienced Vazier, Bahanddinbha", the state affurs would be carried on to the satisfaction of his Highness and the people of Junagad."

Continuing, he said :--

"It was his ambition to be useful to Sorath, particularly as the caste to which he belongs is called Sorath, having been named after Sorath, where his forefathers originally lived. He was, therefore, the more happy for the opportunity thus afforded him for serving his old native land. He dwelt on the respective duties of rulers and the ruled, quoting several authorities in Persian, Sanskiit and English, to the effect that a ruler collects taxes from his subjects solely for the purpose of conferring on them the benefits of waves processive and the purpose of conferring on them the benefits of peace, prosperity, and happiness draws water only to return it in abundance to the earth. and happiness, just as the sun

He concluded by saying that

"virtue was its own reward, and by expressing a hope that Almighty Providence would enable him to serve the State to the satisfaction of all concerned."

The first act of the new Dewan was a graceful one and gracefully performed. At the same Durbar, immediately after his own installation, Mr. Snyamji again rose and, after recounting the distinguished and futhful services done to the State by Mr. Haridas, read a firman

"in which after concurring with the views expressed in the various firmans issued by his Highness's late Limented brother, Nawab Saheb Bahadhui khanji, G.C.I.E, regarding the valuable services of Mi. Hari-Bahadhurkhann, G.C.I.E., regarding the valuable services of Mr. Harida, his Highness stated that he himself had every teason to be satisfied of the way Mr. Haridas had discharged his duties, and expressed his regret at parting with him. The firman concluded by stating that as mark of appreciation of the unswerving loyalty and integrity with which he had served the State for nearly ten-years, his Highness was pleased to bestow on Mr. Haridas a monthly pension of Rs. 500 for life, besides a khilat worth Rs. 25,000"

The returng Dewan, who is all modesty,

"expressed in fitting terms the deep debt of gratitude he owed to his Highness for the very liberal provision made for him, which, he said was assuredly more than he ever deserved. He attributed what little he was able to do to the hearty co-operation of the Vazir Saheb, Baha uddinbhai, and other officers of the State.

The Vizier Saheb then thanked the retiring Dewan for the compliment paid him. After presentation of valuable robes to Mr. Haridas and his brother, Sudar Rao Bahadur Behechardas, the ceremonies of the evening ended with the distribution of after and fan supari.

Dewan Sahob Haridas is an inhabitant of Charitur in Gugerat His home is at Nudiad in Zella Kaira. He is 55 years of age and will be best remembered by our readers as a member of the Opium Commission of 1893 Coming of a family above want, he was in no hurry to take to service. At the age of 32, he was Nawadish and afterwards auditor at Bhownugger where he remained for 5 years and four months. Next he was State Kurbarr at Waddan for about the same period. Wakanit then wanted his services. The Raja was then just dead leaving a minor 3 or 4 years old. He stayed there as Manager for a year, when the Maharaja of Idar -- a branch of the House of Jodhpur, otherwise known as Nani Marwar-attaining majority, appointed Mr. Hurdas his Dewan. After a stay there of 14 months, he transferred his services to the Mahomedan principality of Junagao, where he did excellent service for ten long years. A man of no ambition, strictly conscientious, and wishing to biss his latter years in the comforts of home, he took one year's leave preparatory to retirement. When that leave expired he tendered his resignation. It was not, however, accepted, and he was allowed another year's leave. It was during this period that he joined the Royal Commission. While he was still enjoying his second leave, after the close of the work on the Commission, he was recalled to his duties in the Junagad Durbar, as the acting Dewan whose services were lent by the British Government, too was recalled to join his permanent post in the British service. The Nawab pressed his Dewan to remain with him till such time as he could find a competent man. The Dewan Sabeb, grateful for the consideration shewn him and full of sense of responsibility, had his leave cancelled and rejoined the post from which he has just retired with such honour and dignity The provision made in his retirement is highly honourable to his master the Nawah

Mr. Haridas Viharidas Desai is a jewel of a man-simple and unassuming, with the instincts of patriarchal days, gentlemanly feelings, without the vices of Western education, pleasant and agreeable, and with a fund of information to instruct and amuse. He may well be proud of having served his country well.

LORD Harris left Bombay on the evening of Saturday the 16th Feb. ruary. His successor Lord Sandhurst arrived on the morning of Monday the 18th February. In the interim, the Hon'ble H. M. Birdwood acted as Governor of Bombay. On his landing at the Appollo Bunder, the new Governor was presented with an address of welcome by the Bombay Corporation. In his reply, Lord Sandhurst took in good part the allusions in the address to his father and uncle, and said that it was his resolve to do his utmost for the happiness of the people of all classes and all creeds. He had said more in reply to the toast of his health proposed by the Secretary of State for India at the dinner of the Northbrook Society at the Imperial Institute, when he took as his model Mount Stuart Elphinstone, "To live up," said Lord Sandhurst, "to such a high ideal as that would be too high an ambition, but still it is a bright and noble example." If he is enabled to accomplish half of what he expects or wishes to do, Lord Sandhurst will be a model ruler himself.

It is an onerous and many-sided trust that Mr. Fowler charged Lord Sandhurst with. No Governor, not to say Viceroy, came out to India with so much preliminary flourish as the present Governor of Bombay. In concluding his address, Mr. Fowler said :-

with so much preliminary flourish as the present Governor of Bombay. In concluding his address, Mr. Fowler said:—

"I believe, Lord Northbrook, that at no preceding period of our history did the English people take such an interest in the affairs of India as they do to-day, and I will couple with that observation that I think at no period of our history have the English people as a whole been so determined to rule, and to rule righteously, firmly, and unflinchingly, the greatest possession of the English Crown. There is no talk to-day (and if there were it would be speedly drowned in a universal cry of indignation) of abandoning India, of surrendering India, The English people will hold India with all the tenacity and grip of the race, and with the determination to fulfil the great trust which Providence had imposed upon them. I think the people of England have good reason to be proud of their Administration. True enough, the Indian Government, we are told, at the present moment is very much abased. Part of that abuse falls upon my head; but those expressions are passing ebillitions which do not break many bones. So fat as the real story of India is concerned, I think that one of the reasons of this interest is that the English people are proud of their rule of India as being an illustrious achievement. Towards the close of the list century one of the greatest statesmen of that century in one of his most tremendous philippics against the Administration of India, told the House of Commons that, 'England in India has erected no hospitals, no schools, England has built no bridges, made no high roads, cut no navigation, dug out no reservoirs. Every other conqueror has left some immument of state or beneficence behind him. Were we to be driven out of India nothing would remain to tell that it had been possessed during the inglorous period of our dominion by anything better that the orang outang or the tiger.'

Now, when we recall the gigantic works, unparalleled in the history of the world, the expenditure of hundre intheral, manufacturing, and commercial resources of toat vast empire; to preserve to the Indian people the priceless privilege of the nation's guarantee of the individual freedom, the individual liberty, the individual rights of every subject of the Queen; to uphold that rigid, stern, unbending impartiality in the administration of the law, which knows no distinction of race or class or creed, and to defend the people of India from the calamity of foreign aggression, and from the still greater curse of intestine civil was from the calamity of foreign aggression, and from the sam greater of intestine civil war.

We believe Lora Sandhurst will inflexibly uphold that policy, and co-night I venture to express the assured hope that he will justify the confidence of his sovereign and the approval of his fellow-countrymen; and in your name, in the name of a representative body like this, including as it does those who have ruled, fought for, and defended India with brain and with hand, I wish Lord Sandhurst God-speed, and I ask you to drink to the health, to the happiness, and to the success of the Gevernor of Bombay. (Applause.)"

I and Sandhurst was equal to the occasion. In reply, he said:—

Lord Sandhurst was equal to the occasion. In reply, he said :-

Lord Sandnurst was equal to the occasion. In reply, he said:—
"Now I wish to impress upon this audience that I go to Bombay with the intention of using, and shall make every endeavour to use, the strictest impartiality, to which Mr. Fowler has alluded, to look at every question from every side, to judge every case upon its merits before I come to my conclusions. Now I know very well that opinions will differ as to where impartiality may cease and prejudice commence; I equally know that it is impossible to please everybody by a decision, but that fear or that knowledge will not deter me, my lords and gentlemen, from making every endeavour to reach that impatibility to which I have just alluded. I shall endeavour to cultivate as far as I can, and to obtain the goodwill of, the Indian princes and chiefs with whom I shall have to do. There are matters that have to do with health and learning—hygiene and education—io which a Governor can well interest himself with some good to the community. Now I have had some little experience of matters in London, and I have found that the more healthy and happier you can make the lives of people, the less crime and the less misery there is. That will guide me to a certain extent in dealing with those complex questions of sanitation and matters of that description when I arrive at my Presidency. I understand that in Bombay there are many hospitals which are maintained by the chartly of private individuals. Well, when I come to see these hospitals I shall be upon fundiar ground, because in this town I have for many years managed one of the largest of our hospitals, and anything I can do to promote the prosperity of such institutions and all good institutions indeed in Bombay will have my very best endeavours. The medical schools in connection with the-hospitals shall have my erriest support; and in regard to the hospitals can be supported by the chartly support and in regard to the hospitals shall have my erriest support; and in regard to the hospitals shall have my erriest support; and in regard to the hospitals shall have my erriest support; and in regard to the hospitals shall have my erriest support; and in regard to the hospitals shall have my erriest support; and in regard to the hospitals shall have my erriest support; and in regard to the hospitals and the supported to th but that fear or that knowledge will not deter me, my lords and gentlehospitals shall have my extrest support; and in legard to the hospitals shall have my extrest support; and in legard to the hospitals and nursing sisters, &c., I shall have an invaluable co-operator in Lady Sandhurst. I do not wish to be ambitious in making my first speech as Governor of Bombay, but with the best advice that I have at my hand, it will be my greatest wish to do the very best I can for all classes and every community that I have to deal with in the Presidency."

Bombay was not unanimous in her farewell to Lord Harris. The measures taken for suppression of the riots had divided enlightened opinion in that Presidency. Still there were memorial meetings and farewell entertainments in his honour, and Lord Harris left not unregretted and unsung. The opposition, however, made itself felt. There was no public meeting but a meeting of friends and admirers for a memorial to Lord Harris.

RAJA Jogender Nath Roy of Nator has been acquitted. The High Court finds that the story of the prosecution is substantially true and there is no moral doubt that the Raja was privy to the transaction, but no legal evidence to connect him with the extortion or to convict him of abetment of the offence. It was the opinion in legal circles that there was absolutely no evidence against the Raja and the reservation of order on the Raja's appeal gave rise to many conjectures. They were all set at rest on Tuesday, when the Judges, Messrs. Norris and Beverley, reversed the Raja's conviction and discharged his bail bond. As we reported last week, the Raja's employe, Mathura Nath Pal, must explate in jail for six months, the crime committed on the Assistant Surgeon Gunga Gobind Sircar. The Raja narrowly escapes the punishment ordered by the Sessions Judge, of six months" imprisonment and fine of Rs. 25,000, but is poorer by several thousands of tupees as costs of the defence. The Rija's release has given general satisfaction. Many of those who have carefully gone through the evidence are of the same mind with the Assessors. It is probable that we have not heard the last of the case.

IT is not "Viscount" Wolseley, but his brother Major-General Sir George Wolseley, that is coming out to India, The Major-General takes up the command of the Lahore district.

THE Commissioner of Police prepares us for the acturn of the dog days The Englishman of Wednesday writes :- " From to-day until the 19th of March all dogs found straying in the streets of the city and submbs will be destroyed under the orders of the Commissioner of Police, and arrangements have been made to ensure their destruction in a minner which shall not shock the susceptibilities of the most fervid of the members of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals." We are glad to find that the Police Commissioner has taken it into his head not to inflict cruel deaths on the stray animals. But what is to be the method of painless destruction? We also hope better arrangements will be made for removing the dead bodies, which are often allowed to be exposed on the public thoroughfaces,

In a paper, read on Jinuary 30, at a meeting of the Society of Arts, Mr. Thomas Child described the city of Pekin thus :--

Mr. Thomas Child described the city of Pekin thus:—

"The capital of China differs from any other city in the world in appearance, having no towering spires, lofty chimneys, or many-storeyed buildings, almost all the houses being of one storey only. The most lofty buildings are the towers over the city gites, which look very warlike and imposing, but the rows of guns peeping out of portholes are so many painted dummies. In the outside walls enclosing the Tartar city, four miles square, are nine gates. About a mile in wards is another walled city called the Imperial City, and ayain within this is the Forbidden City, enclosing the Royal Palaces, and within which no foreigner is allowed. The Chimese City is tacked on, as it were, to the south of the Tartar City, and is also enclosed by a wall about time rules in circumference merced with seven gates. It is as it were, to the south of the Lartar City, and is also enclosed by a wall about nine miles in circumference perced with seven gates. It is smaller and inferior, with narrow, dirty streets, and only one respectable building—the Temple of Heaven—but most of the business is transacted here. Each city is surrounded by a broad and deep most. The wall of the Tartar City is fifty feet thick at the base, forty feet at the top, and fifty feet in height."

In the present war, the Chinese guns have proved painted dummies

MONDAY next is the last day for applying for tickets to the Chapters at Government House.

THE sensational prosecution of Rai Ishwari Prasad of Parna, who assisted the magistracy in suppressing the budinashes of the city and is being pursued as a budmash himself, has entered its second phase. After examining the appalling number of 74 witnesses, the prosecution closed its case on the 4th February. The defence was allowed time till the 18th to decide whether it would go into evidence. The names of 37 witnesses, or exactly half the number on the other side, have been submitted. A day will be fixed by the District Magistrate, Saran, Mr. Slack, to whom the case has been transferred by order of the High Court. There is no knowing how long one enjoys the favour of the gods that be.

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, February 23, 1895.

THE AMENDMENT OF THE POLICE ACT.

THE official view of the amendment of section 15 of the Bengal Police Act (V of 1861) is that the powers vested by the existing law on the Executive Government do not go far enough. The sense of justice which every executive officer has, is frequently offended by the law as he finds it and as he is, therefore, bound to administer. In apportioning the costs of the additional constabulary, the innocent cannot be discriminated from the guilty, and those that do not actually reside within the disturbed area, however active in provoking breaches of the peace through their agents, are incapable of being touched. The criminal jurisprudence of England has always been distinguished by its humanity. The escape of even ten guilty men is regarded less injurious to society than the conviction of one innocent man. A sweeping condemnation all round of the residents of a particular area for the acts of, perhaps, only a few, is something at which the gorge of every district administrator rises. The escape also of men who lay the mine that explodes and engulphs a wide area in the common ruin, can hardly be contemplated with equanimity. The scandal to the reputation of British administration for thorough justice is very great. Accordingly, the section needs amending. District Magistrates should be empowered to distinguish the guilty from the innocent in apportioning the additional costs for preservation of the peace, and to touch those who live elsewhere though equally responsible with the

The Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science.

210, Bow-Big o Street, Calcutta

(Session 1894-95.)

Lecture by Babu Syamadas Mukherjee, M. A., on Thursday, the 28th Inst, at 4 P. M. Subject. Theory of Projection.

Admission Fee, Rs. 4 for Physics, and Rs. 4 for Chemistry; Rs. 6 for both Physics and Chemistry; Rs. 4 for Physiology; Rs. 4 for General Biology; Rs. 6 for complete course of Physiology and Biology. The charge for a single lecture is 2 Annas.

February 23, 1895.

MAHENDRA LAL SIRCAR, M.D., Honorary Secretary.

residents for the disturbances brought about. usual safeguards of judicial determinations will have no place in the procedure for discriminating the guilty from the innocent. The Magistrate will proceed to acquit or condemn with the assistance of only his subordinates, and even punish people, with the sanction of the Local Government, but without any reference, at any stage of the praceedings, to the persons themselves that are to be punished. Sir James Westland fired at the thought of anybody being so bold as to question the propriety of vesting such arbitrary power on the members of a service whose character and competence are evidenced by the very acquisition of India as a province of the British Empire and its retention as such amid the inherent difficulties and dangers of the situation. Safe as the exercise must always be of arbitrary power by every member of the "glorious service," falsified as history is bound to be in respect of the consequences of such exercise, the zeal seems to be certainly commendable that seeks to free the innocent population of a disturbed area from the obligation of paying for a constabulary quartered for the sake only of the guilty. Sir A. P. MacDonnell's connection with India is not coming to an abrupt close. He may faisly hope to succeed in the Governorship of a province and continue as a member of the Supreme Council for some years to come. Hence, India may expect to see a bill, ushered amid every solemnity, that will have for its object the exemption of all innocent men in the country from the general Police rate, for it is the guilty only for whom that rate is levied and spent. But whatever the character of the amendment, and whatever the force of the opposition it has evoked throughout the country, the serried rank of official members already convinced of its utility, is enough to pass it by a solid vote.

Meanwhile, it may not be uninteresting to have a glimpse into district administration respecting the manner in which the law, as it stands at present, is applied. It will not be difficult to show what a dreadful engine it is in the hands of the district executive for quelling the slightest assertion of self-respect by the people. The very High Court is powerless to protect people whom the executive may wish to punish. We need not go far. The metropolitan district of Nuddea, under the Presidency Commissioner, and containing a population that is certainly as advanced as that of any portion of British India, may be selected for our present purpose district head-quarters are at Gowaii. In its immediate vicinity are two churs thrown up sometime back by the Khariya river. One of these is known by the name of chur Chupri and the other as chur Paninala or Harnagore. A family of happut Vaiçyas, known by the name of Chetlangi, reading in Gowari, are owners of the full 16 annas of Cupri as mourasidars. They are also owners, as more idars, of chur Paninala, to the extent of two-thin-, the remaining third Babu Naffer Chandra being owned as mourasidar ' Pal Chowdhury of Latud Having made some money as shawl merchant nd money-lenders for at least two generations " Gowari, the Chetlangis have only recently investtheir surplus in land. The Pal Chowdhuries of touda, as Zemindars, are not of a much older date. 1 y have for some generations been men of wealth a influence. The history of the family is not kno 1 beyond their district. One of the ancestors of the amily is said to have acted as a purveyor to Dewan Gauga Govind Sing at the celebrated sraddha for w ch Warren Hastings had made a grant from the public treasury. back, Babu Naffer Chandra startled all India by offering the magnificent sum of Rs. 3,00,000 in aid of some scheme of public utility for his district. It is said that when this offer was announced, the rayyets of the Latuda house feared that every pice of the contribution would have to be met by themselves in the end. If such a fear was really entertained, it must have, been unreasonable. No Zemindar, whatever his influence, can in our times succeed in raising such a large sum from his rayyets without raising at the same time a storm of opposition and obloquy before which the most dauntless will have to yield. As snch, by his splendid offer, Babu Naffer Chandra at once established his character for both liberality and sense. We do not know the history of the rejection of the offer. Bubu NafferChandra was then in bad odour with the district authorities. He had deposited about a third of the sum with the Collector. but it was returned. We think it was the Divisional Commissioner, Mr. Monro, who strongly advised the non-acceptance of the benefaction. Nuddea is one of those districts which has, since the beginning of British rule, been famous for the cultivation of Indigo. When the Indigo crisis happened in Bengal, Nuddea was not backward in throwing off the yoke of its Indigo-masters. Between the resolute opposition of the rayyets, the Indigo Commission, and the increased vigilance of the local Magistracy, the Indigo industry received a shock from which it has not been able to recover. A few concerns outlived the crisis. In Nuddea, among those that survived the agitation, the Mahesgunge factory has been one. It was owned till recently by the Savis. The last owner. Mr. Henry Savi, having found himself in difficulties, the concern passed away from him. It was purchased by Babu Naffer Chandra Pal Chowdhury in 1884, who had to undergo a world of trouble in obtaining possession. The district authorities sympathised with Mr. Savi and prevented Babu Naffer Chandra from asserting his rights as he understood them. Criminal prosecutions were instituted against many of his men. Some of his superior servants were made Special Constables. The Civil Court had to be appealed to. He obtained a decree, but even then he had to pay a large sum of money before all could be right. Since then he has been working the factory.

Mr. Henry Savi's last Izara lease of the two churs was in force when the Pal Chowdhuries purchased the Maheshgunge concern. That lease expired in March 1893. There was a clause in it binding the lessee to give up the lands, on expiry of the lease, without waiting for a notice from the lessor and without setting up any claim to continuance of possession, The Chetlangis, as successors in interest to the lessor, though not bound to do it, still served on the Pal Chowdhuries a formal notice calling upon them not to cultivate the lands with any such crops as could not be removed by March 1893, as that was the time by which the absolute surrender of the property was to be made. The Pal Chowdhuries, disregarding the notice, sowed Indigo as usual in October 1892 and, accordingly, when their lease expired in March 1893, they showed no signs of giving up the land. They could not cut their Indigo till June or July following. As Izardars, however, all the lands were not under their direct possession, for a good portion thereof was in tion of their possession was upheld, it w the occupation of rayyets who cultivated for their out that their possession could not be

Some years own benefit, paying rent to the Izardir. Some of these, immediately after the expiry of the Izara, fearing that the Chetlangis, who had taken symbolical possession, might oust them outright, executed kabuliyats in favour of the in-coming proprietors. The latter succeeded in cultivating a few biggahs of land themselves. The rayyets also succeeded in tilling and sowing their lands. The crops that were cultivated by both the rayyets and the Chetlangis, after the Izara had expired, were kalai, wheat, linseed, barley, rye, &c. The Pal Chowdhuries, having reaped the Indigo in June and July, again sowed some of the lands with Indigo seeds and, as they afterwards alleged, with kalar also. Disputes in Bengal, at even their hottest, have two principal features, viz., a vigorous play of lungs and charges and counter-charges in the Criminal Courts by men who, if their own allegations are to be believed, ought to be lying in hospitals when they are seen in the witness-box or the dock. Actual encounters, with even fists and sticks, are of rare occurrence. A breach of the peace in Bengal means more often a constructive battery than broken heads or bruised limbs. Accordingly, after the expiry of the Izara in March 1893, when the Chetlangis sought to oust the Pal Chowdhuries, the rayyets to cultivate on their own account, and the Pal Chowdhuries to go on cultivating Indigo as before, criminal accusations and counter-accusations were filed. The Pal Chowdhury party brought more suits than the Chetlangis and the rayyets. Many of these were dismissed. Among those that were brought by the Chetlangis and the rayyets, some were dismissed and some terminated otherwise. Only one case of actual battery had occurred. There can be no doubt that both parties exaggerated the occurrence Both sides were punished. The drama of criminal accusations and counter-accusations was played out. Full six months had expired without the conservators of the public peace doing anything. The method of preventing disputes by appointing Special Constables had been tried, but the effect was not satisfactory. At last, the local authorities were roused. The lion had been asleep too long. He shook his manes and gave a roar that was by no means as gentle as that of a sucking dove. In October gentle as that of a sucking dove. In October 1893, a proceeding was instituted, upon a Police report, under section 145, C. P. C., for prevention of further disputes. All the parties were called upon to file statements of their claims. The cause of the Chetlangis was certainly weak. Whatever their rights, their possession was recent. The Pal Chowdhuries were admittedly in possession. Both the proprietors, however, admitted the possession of the rayyets the Chetlangis affirming session of the rayyets, the Chetlangis affirming that the rayyets were holding under them, the Pal Chowdhuries traversing it and alleging the contrary. The result was that the Deputy Magistrate, in a judgment propounding a novel idea of the possession contemplated by section 145, confirmed the possession of the Pal Chowdhuries, ousting both the Chetlangis and the rayyets. On motion, the High Court set aside the order so far as the eviction of the rayyets was concerned. Both the Pal Chowdhories and the Chetlangis had admitted the possof the rayyets with respect to certain land order of the Deputy Magistrate, therefore, ir as the Chetlangis were concerned, was uphe s regards the Pal Chowdhuries, although the rmanted stent with that of the rayyets, in respect, at least, of such lands as were directly cultivated by the latter. The seventy rayyets, therefore, that had been ousted, were ordered by the High Court to be maintained in possession "until evicted by due course of law." The order of the High Court was dated the 12th of May, 1894. To this day, however, the tenants evicted in consequence of the Deputy Magistrate's order of the 30th of January 1894, have not been able to approach their fields. From the commencement of the proceedings in the Deputy Magistrate's Court, they have lost season after season without being able to cultivate any crop. It is not a case of the glorious law's delay. The details are painful to contemplate. How to nullify the adjudication of the highest court of law in the land has been the game played at Nuddea. How also the law is utterly unable to afford protection to the poor when the executive authorities suffer the procedure to be abused, will abundantly appear from the sequel. We reserve that narrative for the liture. It will, we think, be the best commentary 1 the sense of justice which is claimed on behalf the executive and which is one of the principal ounds upon which the proposed amendment of e Police Act rests.

THE INDIGENOUS DRUGS OF INDIA.*

This is the text of the Address delivered by Rai Kanny Lall Dey Bahadur, on the 27th of December last, as one of the Presidents of the Section of Pharmacology of the Indian Medical Congress. Babu Kanny Lall has studied the indigenous drugs of India for a period, as he says, of more than forty years, and yet he laments the comparatively poor results he has achieved by that study. He happily quotes the well-known saying of Darwin, viz., "We only see how little has been made out in comparison with what remains unexplained and unknown." Newton also had, for expressing the same idea, likened himself to a child gathering pebbles on the sea shore. The fact is, the medicinal wealth of India, as represented by her vegetables, is almost inexhaustible. The literature of ancient India on the subject is voluminous. Unfortunately, Botany was never cultivated by the Rishis as a science. Hence no classification occurs, in any Sanskrit treatise, of the herbs and plants that were used for medicinal purposes. Names occur of all the vegetables whose medicinal properties were known, but, with the lapse of time, many of those names have become obsolete, so that the task of identifying a plant mentioned in Charaka or Susruta is often attended with great difficulty. Sometimes, with a wantonness that provokes anger, the same name is applied to more than one plant. The Hindu physicians were Kavirajes or princes of poets. They preferred to write their treatises in verse. No wonder that in many instances the same plant came to be called by diverse names, even as the same name was sometimes applied to diverse plants. Take the case of the Chebulic myrobalan or Haritaki as it is generally called by the people. There are dozens of names implying this plant. Amongst those occur the poetic one of Pathyasundara, meaning the foremost or finest of all articles used as regimen. However well-known the word to physicians of culture, we were not surprised to see Babu Yasodanandan Sircar repeating it, without understanding it, in his Bengali translation of Charaka for the Bangabashi Press. Among the commentators of Charaka, Chakrapanidatta is certainly the foremost. There is internal evidence to show that he was a Bengali of Bengal. His precise age cannot be determined, but there can be no doubt that he is removed from us by several centuries. Even in his time the names of many plants had become obsolete as stated by him in his commentary.

There are some excellent observations of Sir William Jones regarding the method of scientific nomenclature for Indian vegetables. Babu Kanny Lall quotes them in his address. The drift of those observations is that Indian plants should have their Indian names bestowed on them. Sir William Jones was fully persuaded that Linnaeus himself would have adopted them if he had known the learned language of India. The principle for which Sir William Jones contended has been adopted in a few cases with success. Thus the "Kadamva" was named Nauclea Cadamba by Roxburgh, and Authorephalus Cadamba by Bentham and Hook. So the "Devadaru" was named Pinus deadara by Roxburgh, and Cedrus deadara by Loudon. So also "Vasaka" was called Adbatoda Vacica by Nees. Linnæus himself called the "Champaka" Machelia Champaka.

Dependant as the Hindu physicians have always been on herbs and plants for the cure of disease, the fact has created some surprise that regular farms never existed in this country for the rearing of medicinal vegetables. The fact is, vegetable gallenicals have always grown spontaneously in India in very abundant quantitics. The mountains and forests and woods and riverbeds and plains of India are full of medicinal plants. The necessity has never been felt of cultivating them artificially. Every physician could obtain whatever plant he wanted and in whatever measure he stood in need of it. Considering the places where these plants generally grow, sturdy individuals of inferior castes have always acted as purveyors of the physicians in this important department. The Musheras of Central and Upper India, the Mals, Vedryas, Bagdis, Pods, Chandalas, and Kaoras of Bengal, and similar castes of other provinces have always been familiar with our medicinal plants. To these must be added the Gandba-Vaniks or the spice-sellers by profession. As regards those plants or vegetable products which are used in a dried state Hindu physicians have always purchased them from the Gandha-Vaniks who, in their turn, have to purchase them, while green o fresh, from the low castes already mentioned. The Gandha-Vanik have, like orhers, vastly improved under British Rule by availing themselves of English education. Many of them have entered the public service. The present writer, however, remembers the time when, in villages at least, on occasions of selecting bridegrooms, the youth of this caste were questioned about their knowledge of vegetable drugs. Those who showed proficiency in naming and describing medicinal plants were regarded as eligible for marriage. To return to the subject of farms for the cultivation of medicinal plants. However much such farms may be needed in our time for purely educational purposes, the supply is still so abundant that it would be a waste of money to establish them anywhere for commercial purposes. Some years back, in a letter addressed to the Calcutta Journal of Medicine, Babu Joy Kissen Mookerjee of Uttarparah advocated the establishment of such forms for their educational value, himself offering to bear a portion of the outlay needed. It is a pity that his project was not taken up by either Government or the public. But the Babu himself, if we remember rightly, deprecated the establishment of such farms for commercial ends. It is true that experimental farms may be usefully established for naturalising in one part of the country such plants as grow in another and are in constant requisition all over the world. But then with regard to plants that are indigenous to India, expensive artificial cultivation, from an economic point of view, is not at all necessary. Babu Kanny Lall Dey truly observes that there is enough belladonns on the Himlayan range which is sufficient to satisfy the needs of the whole world. He advises transplantation into districts where it does not grow at present spontaneously, but we think if the soil and climate be suitable, once transplanted, it will become indigenous. Vast sums have been spent by Government in the unsuccessfu cultivation of ipecacuanha, but the money spent on cinchona has not been a waste. In an address, however, whose express topic is the indigenous drugs of India, observations on the desirability or otherwise of the naturalisation of foreign medicinal plants are, we think, somewhat out of place.

^{*}Indian Pharmacology...A Review. An Address. By Rai Bahadur Kanny Lall Dey, c.1,E., F.C.S., Graduate of the Medical College of Bengal, &c. Indian Medical Congress, Calcutta.

We will close our notice of Babu Kanny Lall Dev's able address by a reference to the contributions of those scientific men of the West who have laboured in the cause of Indian botany or Indian medicinal botany. One of the earliest works on the subject was from the pen of Sir William Jones, entitled "Botanical Observations on Select Indian Plants." John Fleming's "Catalogue of Medicinal Plants" which appeared in 1810, Ainslie's "Materia Medica of Hindustan," which took some years to publish, are other works in the same direction. Then came Roxburgh's "Flora Indica." The author had left the work in manuscript. We think the Scrampore Missionaries superintended its printing and publication. It is a grand treatise. For the first time the Sanskrit medical books and dictionaries were searched for all the synonymes of almost every plant. The descriptions are full and accurate. The labours of Wallich and Royle, and later of Dr. F. J. Mout, can hardly be ignored. Sir William O'Shaugnessy's Bengal Pharmacopæia, which appeared in 1844, is a remarkable work. The edition has long been exhausted, and the book has not been since reprinted. We think the copyright is in the Government of India. It was Sir William, we think, who first pointed out to the Government what a source of wealth India had in her indigenous drugs. The Pharmacopæia of India also, of Dr. Waring, which appeared in 1868 is another work of signal value to the cause of science. Our own U. C. Dutt's Materia Medica of the Hindus is an excellent work, more systematical than Dr. Wise's brief work on Hindu Medicine. The valuable list of plants occurring at the end of Mr. Dutt's useful publication was prepared with the assistance of Dr. King, the Superintendent of the Royal Botanic Gardens of Shibpore. Among the later writers on the subject, the names of Fluckiger and Hanbury and Dymock and Hooper and Dr. George Watt deserve mention.

We cannot take leave of this Address without praising its writer. Within a brief compass he has succeeded in condensing observarions that are extremely suggestive. Among the graduates of the Leutta Medical Congress few names can be mentioned in the *ame breath with that of Babu Kanny Lall for the spirit of investigation and study shown in the department of Chemistry as connected with Indian medicinal Botany. The language of the address has been such that it is capable of being owned by the nest of stylists among English physicians in India.

THE RECENT DISTURBANCES IN THE DECCAN.

The following Resolution of the Bombay Government has been published with reference to the Memorial from the Piona Sarvajanik Sabha on the subject of the state of feeling between Hindoos and Mahomidans in certain places in the Deccan.

The following letter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Poona Servajansk Sabha in reply to his letters dated, respectively, the 29th November and 23rd December, 1894, and the 8th and there is unfortunately least reason to credit with any genuine and disinterested desire to allay animosities and minimise the difficulty of dealing with them, is represented in the counsels of the Sabha, and having regard to the obvious necessity for caution in examin ing any proposals really emanating from that source on the one hand, and on the other to the value to be attached to any genuine and adequate consensus of enlightened and well disposed native opinion in regard to such subjects as those under discussion, it would have been hardly fair to dispose of their representation without at least giving them an opportunity of removing any possible doubts as to the point of view from which it should be regarded.

21st January, 1895 :---In acl nowledging the receipt of your letters (No. 975, dated the 29th November, 1894; No. 978, dated the 23rd December, 1894; January, 1895), I am directed, in reply, to explain that, while the Gover a Council readily recognises the Sabha's perfect right to within he information asked for by Government in letters Nos. 8467 an 8593, dated respectively the 19th and 29th December, the unusual course of asking for it was taken only because the Sabha's let er seemed to imply a claim, not merely to that consideration on its own merits which the Governor in Council is as ready now as ever to accord to any communication received from the Sabha, out also to the weight due to an expression of the views of a recenting the Mahomedan and Parsee as well as the

Such information as the Sabha have thought it permissible to give goes only to show that they approach the subject from what is, for practical purposes, a purely Hindoo standpoint and leaves un answered the further question whether the views and line of action they advocate command the intelligent adherence of any large body even of Hindoo opinion, so unconnected with, and unaffected by, the recent course of events as to be entitled to much confidence. The Sabha will not perhaps, under these circumstances, look for more than an assurance that their representations have been carefully considered. There are, however, one or two points in regard to which a more specific expression of the views of Government may be useful.

Without following the Sabha into their review of the causes which have led up to the existing tension, Government, I am to state, are willing to note the assurance of the Sabha's belief that the actual disturbances which have taken place have originated in religious prejudices rousing one class against another, and that they have for the most part been confined to the lower and ignorant classes of the two communities. At the same time the Sabha should understand that Government have been informed, not by "low-paid and not over-scrupulous officers," but by Hindoo gentlemen of high position, and not less capable of forming a fair judgment of the causes that have led to the disturbances than are the members of the Sabha, that there is no religious antipathy amongst the lower classes such as would of itself incite to out-breaks; and that the normal but quiescent difference of opinion as to the merits of the respective religious has been fanned into flames bere and there by the incitement of better educated, better born, and better situated but worse disposed persons. His Excellency in Council does not, with these conflicting views before him, hazard an opinion as to the class within which the originators of these disturbances are to be found; but as suming for the moment that the view of the Sabha is the more worthy of credence, I am to observe that the Sabha, in repudiating the responsibility of the educated classes has made no attempt to show that, the breach once formed, the sort of writing with which a certain section of the Native press has teemed could have had, or have been intended to have, any other effect than to widen the breach, or that the gentlemen who been so busy in various places, preaching resistance and retritution and corretion by boxcotting and otherwise; publishing religious pamphlets and songs; using organized pressure to prevent Hindoos, especially of the lower classes, from taking their custo mary or professional part in Mahom dan celebrations, g tring up, at a time of much religious excitement, ostentations. Hindoo processions, accompanied by every demonstration likely to irritate the rival community, which they could induce the district authoriti es to permit; calling meetings an I counter meetings; taking part in rejoilings over the results of trials emprosed to be favourable to their own community and expressing public condemnation of procoodings having a contrary issue; promoting addresses to gentlemen convicted of disobodience to lawful authority as being marters in the cause of religion, and so on, could have been ignorant of the necessary effect of such proceedings in embittering the quarrel, provoking counter d monstrations, and encouraging and exisperating the bigotry and fanaticism which the Sabha so properly deprecate. I am to explan that these remarks are made in no spirit of recrimination or accusation. The gentlemen in question, to whichever side they may belong,—and if the Hindoo agitator has been more in evidence, it is not that the Mahomedan minority have been backward in carrying on the war in their own way, - are of course entitled to their own opinions and to act according to their own judgment and conscience, at their own risk. It is only because the faces noticed, which are notorious, suggest a possibility that the Sibha may have somewhat exaggerated not only the natural strength and death of the hatred which they would have Government to believe to exist between the lower classes of the two communities, but also the necessity for special measures, as distinguished from mere abstinence from needless provocation, to bring them together, that attention is drawn to them. have also a practical bearing, which should not be ignored, on the attitude of the district officers which the Sabha have taken it upon thems: lves to condemn as one of "violent prejudice and mistrust," and on the feelings of sorrow and helplessness which they at ribute, not, it is to be feared, without reason, to the more respected and Hindoo ommunity. Government are of course aware that one section of the latter community which is most active, and which respectable members of both communities. It appears to Government ment that officers who are responsible for the peace of their districts | ernment, as yet arisen in Bombay, become indispensable. But conare entitled to use their own judgment as to the value of the advice which may be tendered to them in times of threatened disturbance when, as the Sabha point out, the men who make themselves most prominent are not those most worthy of confidence; and that these officers are as little likely as the Sabha could desire to reject any help they can obtain from "Hindoos whom the Mahomedans respect and Mahomedans who enjoy the confidence of Hindoo." That there are in every district many such Hindoos and Mahomedans every district officer knows, and the Sabha will have deserved the gratitude of the community if the attention they have drawn to the subject should serve to encourage such partiemen in particular, and the well disposed majority in general, to use the influence which belongs to them in support of law and order, instead of yielding to their not unnatural inclination to remain passive.

There is one other point to which, before leaving this subject, I am to invite the attention of the Sabha, and that is in connection with the treatment of the social malady which they prescribe in paragraph 4 (V) of their letter, so far as the responsibilities of the district authorities are concerned. As the Sabha are no doubt aware, disturbances arising from religious or other causes are no novelty in the annals of administration, whether in this Presidency or cleewhere, both in and out of India, and the local authorities everywhere understand with sufficient clearness that their character for efficiency depends on the foresight, judgment, and firmness with which they deal with such crises when they arise. But it is unfortunately not more difficult here than elsewhere for ill-disposed persons to make trouble, and the Sabha have apparently failed to realise that for Government to announce, as they suggest, an intention of "degrading or promoting its officers according as they fail or succeed in preserving peace" by way of inducement to them "to seek to enlist the active co-operation of the leaders of both sides" would be tantamount to handing over the control of the local administration to any impressionsible mischief-monger with influence enough to get up a disturbance and a motive for using that influence.

With regard to the distinction drawn by the Sabha between religious and secular music, I am to recommend to their consideration a letter signed "Hindoo" and published in the English papers of the 10th January, 1895, the author of which is not known to Government, but which appears to place in a very reasonable and practical light some of the objections to the view taken by the Sabha, and to their proposal to make that view the basis of a general line of action. The position of Government in the matter has already been stated in their Resolution No. 1917 of the 15th March, 1894 on the Yeola riots. I am to observe that the Sabha and the Hudoo community generally may rest assured that the importance attached by the Hindoos to the use of music in their processions and celebrations, whether religious or secular, (if it is possible to draw such a distinction), is fully realised, and that neither Government nor any of their officers have the least desire to interfere in the matter further than is necessary for the preservation of the public peace, the protection of other sections of the public against annoyance and damage, and the general maintenance of order. It is obviously impossible to accept any theory which would subordinate those considerations to the religious views of either party. Theory apart Government officers have repeatedly shown their willingness in practice to allow soft music to continue when the difficulty could be got over by stopping the noisy music only. Where music has been stopped altogether, it has only been because no warrant of custom has been made out for endangering the public peace by allowing it. The one exception, if it can be called an exception, to that rule, of which Government are aware, is the order recently issued at Poona for the licensing of music in the streets,

The necessity for an order calculated to prevent the recurrence of disputes was recognized and insisted upon on all sides. form which it took, that of an adaptation of the order in force in Bombay, was, as Government understand, dietated partly by general Domay, Was, as Government understand, dictated partly by general considerations and partly by a desire to remove the question from the domain of excited religious feeling. Subject to such modifications, if any, as may appear to the local authorities to be called for in view of the practical inconviences which that order is alleged by the Sabha to involve, it appears to Government to be one which as spening to both parties a door of retreat without surrender from a dispute which had become a menace to life and property, deserves the support rather than the condemnation of bodies which, like the Sabha, claim to speak in the interests of peace and good will.

Finally, I am to observe that, while Government are not disposed to abundon, and will certainly use, on occasion arising, any powers of repression that the law now provides, they entirely concur in the views of the Sabha as to the policy of "preventing outbreaks, rather than that it should be necessary to resort to stern repression to put them town at r they have broken out." To that end official conciliative and adjudication of disputes are means which deserve considera in, can be resorted to where advisable, and might, under anditions, which have not, however, in the opinion of Govcessions made and bargains accepted as the result of such arrangements are at best little more acceptable or more likely to be observed without compulsion, or broken without offence, than such magisterial orders based on a rough appreciation of the merits of the dispute and the immediate necessities of the situation as are a matter of ordinary procedure. It is only in the restoration of those feelings of genuine amity and mutual respect, which can hardly even now be far below the surface, that any real and permanent security against the constant recurrence of the necessity for repressive measures and distasteful restrictions can be looked for. There is no Hindoo or Mussalman so humble as to be unable to render, if he so pleases, material aid in bringing about that restoration, by abstaining himself and persuading his fellows to abstain from all unnecessary causes of offence, doing what in him lies to make amends for any injury or annoyance that may have been caused to the other party, caltivating friendly relations in all matters outside the sphere of the dispute, and taking all possible means to show that, even in regard to matters in dispute, there is no desire to be aggressive, or to take offence none is intended. The question may be asked, "Which side is to begin?" The answer is that, if one side rather than the other should set the example, it should be the side which is strongest and should set the example, it should be the side which may give evidence, in the manner indicated, of a genuine desire for reconciliation will have to wait long for a response. Whilst cordially appreciating the private efforts of the Sabha in the interests of peace, forbearance, and good will, I am to commend to the earn est attention of its members the above suggestion as a practical remedy, and one that is most likely to induce that constitutional harmony which alone can give real confidence in each other's good intentions to the disputants.

Acting Secretary to Government.

THE BIRDS WHISTLED "T HE DEAD MARCH."

"Even the birds on the trees learned to whistle the Dead March."

It was an old soldier who was talking. "We were in camp," he said,
"in a flat, indiartous pirt of the country. Our Clonel was a splendid fighter, but didn't appear to hive any idea of sanitry matters. Just then we were in more danger from disease than from the enemy. Presently fever broke out and the men died by the dizen. Hirdly a day but we builed some of them in the swamp. In fact, we played the "Dead March" so often that I used to fancy the birds in the trees had learned to whistle it. "Awful sorry, you know, b-ys," said our Colonel but so long as we have to stay here, we can't help having the fever Yet the Colonel was wrong, as another regiment camped near us almost wholly escaped. But their commander fought the malaria with sanitation and preventive medicine. That made the difference."

In January, 1892, the influenza was epi-mic at Stebbing, near Chelm-ford Among the persons attacked were Mis. Abnam Thorogood, of White Hause Firm, her daughter Anne, and her sons William and Earnest. They had terrible pains in the bead, sone muscles and joints and were very feverish. The whole four—mother and three childrensers controlled to their beds.

In a letter on the subject Mr. Thorogood save "my wife became "Even the birds on the trees learned to whistle the 'Dead March."

Earnest. They had terrible pains in the head, sore muscles and joints and were very feversh. The whole four-mother and three children-were confined to them beds.

In a letter on the subject Mr. Thorogood says $\frac{\text{str}}{\text{in}}$ my wife became quite delirious; she did not know where she way, and could neither get in nor out of hed. I gave Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup to all of them with excellent results, the fever soon let them, and shortly they were well and strong as ever, and have succeremained so. I may mention that may neighbours and friends had the same complaint as my wife and family, but although the others had doctors and the best attention and advice, none recovered so rapidly as my people did. I think God that I came to hear of Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup, for although we are a family of seven, living at home, during the eight years I have kept it in the house we have not needed a doctor, thus saving many pounds in doctors' bills and costly prescriptions.

"The way I first used Seigel's Syrup was this: In the spring of 1883 I beg in to feel ill and one of sorts. My tongue was dreadfully coased and a thick phlegon covered my gams and teeth. After rating I suffered from pun at the chest and stomach. I had bad high s, and sweat so much that in the morning my underlothing was sonked with maisture. In the following August carbuncles came on the back of my neck, on my nose, and on my cheek bone. What I suffered I cannot describe. I got so low and weak that I could barely crawl about. The doctors did me no good. And as for their physic I might as well hive taken tea or water. In pain and suffering I lingered on until I heard, through a neighbour, of Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup and got a bottle from Mr. W. Linsell, grocer, of Stebbing. A few doses relieved me, and soon the carbuncles which poisoned his blood and caused the carbuncles, which are growths on the underlying layers of the skin. After the Syrup had munfied his blood they were absorbed and expelled from the system. The effect of

MILITARY SECRETARY'S OFFICE. NOTIFICATION

Calcutta, the 8th February, 1895

Calcutta, the Sin Tebruary, 1995

No. 3648-1.—His Excellency the Grind Mister of the Most Exilted Order of the Star of India and the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire will hold an Investiture of both Orders in the Government House grounds on Thursday, the 7th March, 1895, at 9 30 P.M. Admission to Government House on the Cocasion will be by tickets only occasion will be by tickets only.

All persons desirous of attending, except members of the above-mentioned Orders and members of the Consular body who will be invited by the Foreign Department, are requested to apply for tickets to the undersigned not later than the 25th February, 1895, after which date no applications will be received. Tickets will be issued on or after the 1st March, 1895.

> By Command, A. DURAND. Lieutenant Colonel.

Military Secretary to the Viceroy.

MILITARY SECRETARYS OFFICE.

NOTIFICATION. Calcutta, the 12th February, 1895.

Calcutta, the 12th February, 1895.

No. 3674-1.—In continuation of this office Notification No. 3688-1., dated the 8th February, 1895, it is hereby notified that, on the occasion of the Investitures of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India and of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, to be held in the Government House grounds on Thursday, the 7th March, 1895, at 9 30 P.M., those entitled to wear uniform will appear in FUN Dress, and those not entitled to wear uniform will appear in Evening Dress.

Those having the private entitée are re-

Those having the private entitle are requested to enter the Government House grounds by the south-west gate, and alight opposite the private entrance in front of the gun. Their carriages will be passed out by oppose the private entrance in most of the gun. Their carriages will be passed out by the south gate.

Those not having the private entrice are requested to enter by the north-east gate, and set 46wm before reaching the grand stans.

The gates of Government House will be closed also for a few will be allowed into the Government House compound till the ceremony is over.

By Command, A DURAND. Lieutenant-Colonel.

Military Secretary to the Viceroy.

WANTED.

A Sanskrit Pandet for the Hutwah Sanskrit School who must be a passed Acharya in Bya-karan Sahuya and Dharma Shastra. Preference will be given to a Sujoopan

Apply with capies of testimonials to-

BABU DEVENDRA NATH DUTT,

Dewan, Raj Hutwa,

Shanker Bhawan,

Pisachmochan.

Benares.

Congress Sketches: A Review

OF THE

SPEECHES AND THE SPEAKERS

Fourth Indian National Congress Held at Allahabad.

Reprinted with additions and alterations from Reis & Ramet

With a portrait of Mr. George Yule, President, Sold by the publisher G. P. Vaima, and at the office of the Advocate, at Lucknow áar & Annas a.copy, besides postage.

TEXT BOOKS IN ENGLISH. BY SARADA PRASAD BANERIEE.

SPECIMEN PAPERS AND ANSWERS

THE ENGLISH ENTRANCE COURSE

THE ENGLISH For 1895.
Having the largest sale of all similar works,
ENGLISH PREPARATORY ENGLISH PKE...
COURSE

FOR 2nd & 3rd CLASSES.
book has been approved by the Text Book Committee.

INDIA READERS NO. 2 FOR 4th & 5th CLASSES.

INDIA READERS NO. 1

FOR 6th & 7th CLASSES. These books are of remarkably simple style and quite suited to Indian students.

The attention of School authorities in the N.-W. P. and Oudh, the Punjab, Madras, Bombay, the Central Provinces, Assam, and Burma, invited to the above publications of unique

erits.
To be had of
S. K. LAHIRI & Co.,
College Square, Calcutta.

THE WORKS OF DR JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE

Commentaries on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, Marriage, Adoption, Wills &c.* Price ... "No student or practitioner should be without a copy of this GREAT Work.

. (Sd.) Nana Bhai Haridas." Bengali Translation of the Dyabhaga and the Mitakshara.† Price ... Bengali Translation of the Dattaka-

2 8 chandrika.† Price ...
The Evidence Act with notes in ... 0 8

4. The Evidence Act with notes in Bengali,† Price I o

5. The Civil Procedure Code with notes in Bengali,† Price 4 o

6. Principles of Zemindari Management and Book-keeping in Bengali

7. First Lessons in English for Hengali boys, Price ... o 4

8. Bharat Sasan Pranali* ... o 8

IN THE PRESS.

The Philosophy of Religion from the point view of Common Sense. Price Rs. 5.

CONTENTS.

Historical Analysis of the evolution of religious systems.

Definition of the term "religion,"

The problems of the philosophy of re-The problems of the philosophy of re-higion and their solitions, old and new. (4) Why do Hindus believe in ten Ava-tais or incarnations including in the series three that are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a tor-ture and a hear.

&c. &c &c. &c.
The weapons offensive and defensive of religious teachers.

The power of fine words,
The art of becoming a prophet,
The cumulative effect of hardswearing for ages Specimens of Puranised history.

Brahminical and Christian priesteraft

compared. The artificial miseries of men caused by religion.

Tyranny and taxation of religion.

The good man's adversity is the sharp man's opportunity.

Swindling as a fine art.
New Superstitions that may be suggested for the benefit of the priests.

The great prophets of the world and their doings. The Probable origin of the Saiva religion. Tautric mysticism and abominations.

* To be had of Messis. Thacker Spink &

Co., only.

† To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink & Suradhani Agency, No. 11, Raja Nabakrishna's Street, Calcutta.

CAUTION!

IT having been notified to the Proprietor of Beecham's Pills that certain unscrupulous dealers have recently been perpetrating a fraud in connection with the 4 anna box lately introduced, the public are requested to see that the retail prices, (vis., 4 annas, 8 annas or 91/2d, 12 annas or 1s. 11/2d. and Rs, 2 or 2s. 9d.) are clearly printed on the lid of each box. The fraud to which attention is drawn is that in the case of the two smaller sizes, the prices have been obliterated and the boxes represented to be of higher value than they really Sole Wholesale Agents for India, Buima and Ceylon.

G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3, NEW CHINA BAZAAR STREET.

CALCUTTA.

NOTICE -Should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining supplies the Agents will be happy to forward sample boxes at above Rupee rates plus V. P. P. Charges and Postages.

GENUINE HOMEOPATHY.

A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M S. Homæopathic Practitioner,

May be consulted by letter or personally daily at his residence, 30-1, Colootolah Street, Calcutta.

A. MEITREAUX & CO.

Manufacturers, Repairers and Tuners of HARMONIUMS, ORGANS, &c.

9, UCKOOR DUTT'S LANE, CALCUTTA

We import materials direct from Europe and guarantee the best workmanship and finish.

Harmoniums, Box 3 octaves 1 stop Rs. 30 Table Do. ,, 50 Do. Do. 4 ,, 3 stops ,, 65 Organs Indian Folding with case complete. 1 swell 4 "3 stops & 1 swell " 70 Organs, Indian 5 ,, 5 do. do. do. ,, 90 Do. Do.

Trial solicited.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF

	MEMORIAL FUND.
ſ.	His Highness The Maharaja of Du		₹s.
2.		2	,000
	Anagram, G.C.I.E.,	. 1 ,	,000
3.	His Highness the Nawab Bahadur of Moorshedabad, Amrul Omra, G.C.L.	ĸ.	800
4	His Highness the Nawab of Junagad GCSL	h,	500
5.	His Highness the Micharatic Bahadi	ır
6.	of Cooch Behar, G.C.LE. Nawab Bahadur Sir K. Abdul Ghan	٠,	500
	RAWAD BAHAGUI GHAN K C.S.I., and Nawab Bahadur F Ashan Ulla, C.L.B. Nawab Imad Jung Bahadur Nawab Azon Yar Jung Bahadur Shams-ul Ulama Syed Ali Belgram Khon Bahadar Bhardahanddin C.L.B		500
7 · 8.	Nawab Imad Jung Bahadur .		500
8. 9.	Nawab Azim Yar Jung Bahadur Shams-ul Ulama Syed Ali Belgram	 H	500 500
10	Visias to the Visual of Innagadh	٠,	300
11.	Maharan Rahadur Sir latindra Ma	١-
12.	han Tagore, K.C.S.L Babu Jodu L.d Mullick		250 200
13. 14.	Babu Jodu L d Mullick	. 2	200
	Muza Bahadur	. 1	150
15.	Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Nawal Syed Zamul Abdın Khan Bahadu	r
16.	Feraz Jung Rija Peary Mohan Mookerjee, C.S.I	. !	100 110
17.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chandr.	t
18.	Madhab Ghose Prince Mitza Su Jahan Kadar Baha	. I	100
19.	dur, K.C I.E.,		001 001
20.	Hair Kasun Anti		100
21.	Lieutenant-General the Hon'ble So		100
22.	Babu Jai Gobind Liw		100
23.	The Houble Mr. Justice Gara Da Banerjee		50
24. 25.	The Houble Dr. Rash Behary Ghos Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt.		51 50
26.	Shahibzada Mahomed Obidulla Kha	n
27.	Bahador, C.S.I Marajkum ir Benoya Krishna		50 50
28.	The Houble Mr. Justice E. J. Trevelyan	•	50
29.	The Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jabba
30.	The Donks Dan the Load Distan-	of	50
31.	Calcutta Barra Disnop of Calcutta Maharaja Durga Charan Law, CIE Nawab Jahandar Meerza Nawab Huzoor Muza The Hou'ble W C Bonneijee Nawab Syed Ameer Husein Syed Nurui Huda, E.q., C.S., Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan	••	50 50
32.	Nawab Jahandar Meerza		50
33. 34.	The Houble W C Bonnerjee	·•	50 50
35. 36.	Nawab Syed Ameer Husem , Syed Nurul Huda, Esq., CS.	••	50 50
37.	I C Bashes For Ca	••	50
38. 39.	Sir Alexander Miller	··	50 50
40. 41.			32
	hadur,		25
42. 43	Kumar Dinendra Naram Roy	••	25 25
44. 45.	Kumar Doulat Chandra Rov		25 25
46.	Daba Cara Brosanna Chass		25
47.	C.L.E	٠,	25
48. 49.	Babu Rama Nath Ghose	••	25 25
50. 51.	Raja Steenato Roy		25
52.	R. Belchambers, Esq	••	25 25
53. 54.	Raja Surja Kunta Acharjee Chowdh Rai Budreedas Mukim Bahadur	ur ;	y 25 25
55. 56.	Babu Gopal Lai Seal		25
57.	A. T. Apcar, Esq	•	25 25
58. 59.	Lord William Beresford, K.C.I.F.	•••	25 25
60. 61.	Munsin Gholam Rasool		25
62.	F. H. Skrine, Esq. CS The Honble H. J. S. Cotton CS. C.S. Prince Mahomed Bukhtyar Shah	 .i.	25 20
63. 64.	Baboo Surendra Nath Pal Chowdry	•••	20 20
65. 66.	" Aukhoy Kumar Ghose Moule Imadd Ab	•••	20
67.	Rai Shib Chueder Nundy Bahadar	···	20 20
68. 69.	D. Panioty, Esq		20 20
70. 71.	Chowdry Mahomed Arjamand Kha H. E. A. Cotton, Esq., Barrister-at-l Moulvi Syed Ashruffuddin Ahme	A W	20
	Khan Bahadur	a,	17
72.	T. Inglis, Esq., C.S	•••	ić

-
	73	A. H. Giles, Esq		16
	74.	F. F. Handley, Esq , C.S.		16
		The Hon'ble Moulvi Straju	Islam
	75.			16
i	76	Moulvi Serajuddeen	•••	15
	77.	Abul Hasan, Esq.,	•••	15
į	78.	H. A. D. Pullips, Esq., C S.	• • •	10
	79.	Baboo Kuan Chuader Roy	•••	10
	8 ύ.	E. N. Baker, Esq	•••	10
	81.	Baboo Doyal Chand Bose	•••	10
	82.	" Madan Mohun Bose		10
	83.	"Kanai Lal Khan		10
١	84.	Moulvi Synd Akram Hossam		10
l	85.	Moulvi Aziz Ahmud		10
	86.	Ru Kunyelal Dey Bahadoor		10
	87.	H Holmwood, Esq		10
	88	Bibn Harry Mohan Chunder		10
	89.	Baboo Chakkanlal Roy		5
	92.	"Suodaprasad Ghose		5
	S S	thscriptions will be thankfully	received	by
		Honorary Joint Secretaries,		•
		RAI KUMAR SARVADHICARI	BAHADU	JR.

A, British Indian Street, Calcutta, and A. F. M. Abdur Rahman, Esq., Barrister-atLaw,
16, Taltolla, Calcutta.

Rs. 6 "UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Guaranteed three Years.

Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, smill, open faced, nickel slivern, keyless, short winding, patent, "UNDAUNTED" watch, with hand setting mechanism, secondhand for Doctors, ornamental bold dial, for Rs. 6 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' guarantee. Warranted to stand the roughest use. Runs more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily reparable. Others sell at double our rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Jino. Dickson of Haputal Railway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps splendid time and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jerks. x Dr. H. Moore of Royal Artillery from Poonamallee says:—I sold it for Rs. 16. x Ptc. W. Hopkins of Sussex Regt. from Dumdum says:—I have sold it for Rs. 20. x Mr. T. B. Scott of Patia Optium Department says:—The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time.

Jowelled Ring Ro. 1-8-0. Real

Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty Canadian gold chain Re. 1-8-o.Fashionable Canadian Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, at Re. 1-8-o. Mr. G. Smith, Salt Inspector from Sanikutia, says of air the state of the diamond ring at Rs. 50 and ruby at Rs. 30." Key winding, Government stamped, solid silver hunting case, Royal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee, for Rs. 13. Pte. G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light Infurty from Purandian says: -For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Serge int for Rs. 28 × Pte. II C. Bishop of L. F. L. Regt from Kumptee says.—A Corporat offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch, Gentlemen's open faced, keyless read solid gold walk. Rs. 30; laddes' Rs. 24; both with extras and goaranteed for 3 years. Mind they are guranteed to be of real soid gold. No agents kept, all goods sent only by us from Bombay per V. P. P.

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO, BOMBAY.

CATARRH,

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness.

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the liming membrane of the noise and cuistachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these districts of the simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUTFON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORONTO, Canada.

10-18 "IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer find sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering: while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most chronic torm

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the tortures of TOOTHACHE? A single application will relieve you.

In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the result speak for itself.

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Physicians in the world in their plactice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of homes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar preparation has ever before attained, Sold in Battles at I Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable chenest throughout the world.

Agents in Calcutta : Smith Stanistreet & Co. R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Bathgate & Co. Limited

REIS & RAYYET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT)

WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

Remew of Politics, Literature, and Society

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION. If paid in advance, •••

enrly

... Rs 12

man-year	y	•••	• • • •	11	7
Quarterly					4
Montain				Кe.	18
Single or	ample	Copy		Ans.	0-8
	Ifno	ot paid in ad	vance,
Yearly	•••			Rs.	31
Half-yearl	y			,,	8-01
Quarterly	•••	•••	•••	,,	Ú-O
Monthly			•••	"	2-4
Single or	sample	Copy		Aus.	0-12

No additional charge for postage or peon. RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT

Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each inser-

4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each inser-tion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5. Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "Tim Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphlets (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayyet."

OFFICE: I. Uckoor Dut's Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutta.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

AND

SOCIETY POLITICS LITERATURE AND REVIEW OF

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, MARCH 2, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 664.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

THE MINER'S DREAM.

THE day was done-he swallowed a crust-The last he had in his locker-He placed his head on a bag of dust, And his hands on the pick and rocker.

And there by the Yuba's lonely stream. His tent the murky sky, He dreamed the most aunferous dream ; Alas! that 't was all in his eve.

He saw the noble palace of gold Which the ancient Spaniards sought-The dome of gold was lofty and bold. And the pillars with gold inwrought.

On a glittering throne the Inca sat-(Of solid gold 't was builded)-' His mutton was served on a golden plate, And his gingerbread was gilded.'

And the guards wore golden plumes so tall-And then belinets shone like sons-They fired at a mark with golden ball, Which were cast for their golden gans.

The golden-rod waved in every breeze, And the gold-thread grew in the brakes-Goldfinches twittered in all the trees, And gold-tish swam in the lakes.

"I give thee all !" the Inca cried, " My palace, my guard, my throne --And the river's bed, and the mountain's side, Their treasures are thine alone."

Now over his dream a change hath come; The fields are rocky and bare, He dreams of his old New England home, And the memories clustered there.

He walks by the run at Seymour's pond, Where he hauled the pickerel in ; Ah! the grapes of which he was so fond, In the former age of tin.

Hurrah! Point Rocks! the ocean shore, And the marching tides deploy, With the same wild rush and the same wild roar That thrilled him when a boy.

Now the school-house red, with its hopper roof, And its dust, and noise, and fun, And the ferrule's whisk, and the sharp reproof, And the shout when school is done

Anon he dreams of the Sabbath day, The Sabbath bell doth toll, And serious faces throng the way And serious thoughts the soul.

And when in dreams he had ceased to roam, And walked by the Yuba tiver, He thought of his wife, and his child, and his home, And of God, the perfect giver.

Why change the treasures of the heart For glittering lumps like these? So across the isthmus he took a start, And came home by way of Chagres.

TRISMEGIST.

WEEKLYANA.

LORD Elgin seems afraid of the metropolis of British India. Half the week is spent at Barrackpore. Is it the small-pox that scares him away? The Health Officer has issued a fresh reminder for vaccination or re-vaccination as the only preventive against that dreaded disease The advertisement will be found elsewhere.

THE arrangements for the administration of the State of Mysore have been completed. The following proclamation, dated Bangalore, the 18th February 1895, has been issued by the Dewan Sir K. Seshadti Ive: :-

"Whereas His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India in Council has been pleased to declare that the administration of the State of Mysore shall, during the minority of His Highness Maharaja ST Kushinaraja Wodayo Banadan, Maharaja of Mysore, be conducted by Her Highness Maharana Vanuvilasa Samidbanada Kempananjamantavaru, C. 1, as Regent, and by the Dewan assisted by a Council of three Members, of which he shall be President, Her Highness the Maharani-Regent has been pleased with the approval of the Government of India, to appoint Highness the Manatani-Regent has been pleased with the approval of the Government of India, to appoint—

(1) Rejadharma Pravina Mr. T. R. A. Thumbu Cherty, Chief judge of the Chief Court of Mysore,

(2) Mr. P. N. Krishnamurthi, Judge of the Chief Court of Mysore, and

(3) Khan Bahadur Mr. Abdul Rahman, Deputy Commissioner of Shinoja, to be Members of the Council aforesaid, for a term of three years, being however eligible for re-appointment at the end of that period. Her Highness the Maharani Regent has been pleased further to direct that the 2nd and 3rd Members of Council appointed as above shall enter upon their duties after being relieved of the offices they now respectively hold. Mr. Thumboo Chetty will, in addition, retain his position as Chief Judge until relieved of the same in due course.

11. The Rules for the conduct of the business of the said Council, as an accorded by the Congruppent of India are as follows:

approved by the Government of India, are as follows

RULES OF BUSINESS

1. The Dewan in Council will distribute the work of the State, by

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, if possible, as the safest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

departments, between himself and the three Councillors, such distribution being recorded in the Council's minutes of proceedings.

2. The member in charge of each department will himself dispose of all ordinary work of such department, and will issue orders in the name of the Mysore Government, referring matters of doubt, delicacy or importance to the Dewan,

3. It will be for the Dewan to determine whether final orders on questions so referred should be issued as in Rule 2, or whether the question should be referred to Council.

If the matter is one which by the next following rule must necessarily be referred to Council, the Dewan will so refer it. But nothing in this rule shall prevent the Dewan from referring any matter to the Council, and if he and the referring member cannot agree, the matter in difference must be placed before Council.

4. The subject specified by His Highness the Maharajah's Notification No. 104, dated 8th July 1881, shall, as heretofore, be placed before the Council.

The decisions of the Dewan in Council shall be carried into effect, provided that if the Dewan does not concur in any opinion of the majority of the Council, he may refer the matter to Her Highness as the rity of the Council, h

But nothing in this rule shall conflict with the provision of Act 22 of the Instrument of Transfer, and it will be incumbent on the Dewau to refer to the Resident any matters requiring reference to the Government of India. In any case where a reference to the Resident has been made, whether by Her Highness the Regent or the Dewan, no orders shall be issued which may co iffer with the advice of the Resident.

6. The Dewan shall have the right to call for the production of any public records from any of the departments assigned under Rule 1 with a view to any matter being considered in council, notwithstanding that orders may have been usued by the member in charge of a department.

department,
7, With the exception of intervals of recess specified under notification of Her Highness the Regent, the Council will meet regularly once a week, unless for any special reason the Regent may dispense with its attendance. Her Highness the Regent or the Dewan may summon a Council whenever Her Highness or the Dewan, as the case may be,

may deem it necessary.

8. The business at all meetings of the Council will be regulated by

8. The business at all meetings of the Council will be regulated by the Dewan, and in his absence by the Senior Councillor present.

9. The decisions recorded by the Council on each matter referred to it shall be recorded in a Journal of Proceedings which the President of the meeting shall sign. A copy of this journal shall simultaneously be forwarded to Her Highness the Regent and to the Resident. Any individual member may require a brief abstract of his Minute of dissent on any matter to be recorded.

III. The Additional Rules prescribed by His Highness the late Maharajah under dates the 17th May 1889 and 4th July 1893, for the hearing and disposal of matters coming before the Government either in appeal or in the exercise of powers of revision under section 217th of the Mysore Land Revenue Code, will be separately published hereafter with the necessary amendments."

after with the necessary amendments."

It is said that Mr. Justice Best of Madras has been offered the Chief Judgeship. Colonel Campbell continues as Private Secretary to the Maharaja and Mr. Whitely as tutor.

With the new arrangements, Mr. Chentsal Rao retires. The Dewan thus notifies the resignation :-

" Dated Bangalore, the 18th February, 1895.

In accepting the resignation of Rajamontra Pravina Mr. Chentsal Rao, C. 1. E., Her Highness the Maharani-Regent takes the opportunity to place on record the high sense entertained by His. Highness the late Maharaji of the distinguished services which as. Member of His Highness' Council, Mr. Chemisal Rao has reinlered to the Mysore State, and Her Highness regrets that considerations of health have necessitated his retirement from the service of the State which, during the past six years, had derived such valuable help from his conspicuous ability and wide experience."

LORD Sandburst's staff consist of

Mr. S. W. Edgerley, I. C. S., Private Secretary,

Major R. Owen, 21st Hussais, Military Secretary.

Surgeon-Major H. Martin, M. B., Medical Officer

Captain H. G. Heneage, 12th (The Prince of Wales Royal) Lancers. Aid-de-Camp.

Lieutenant B. J. T. Levett, Scots Guards, And-de-Camp.

Lieutenant C. W. W. Gabb, 2nd Bombay Lincers, extra Aid-de-Camp.

Ar a meeting, last Saturday, of the Committee of the Lady Elhott Memorial Fund, Mr. Justice Beverley presiding, it was announced that 333 subscribers had been registered with a total of Rs. 6,378, and that Lady Ethott had commenced giving sittings to Mr. Howard Pullar, It was resolved to keep the list open and to purchase a dramond tiara with the surplus and present it to Lidy Ellioti,

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post fiee .- Artificial Ear-drums and similar appliances entirely superseded. Andress THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19. SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

THE Vidyasagara Memorial Committee have collected Rs. 8,000. It has been decided to apply only Rs. 3,000 for a marble bust for the Pandit. When will the bust of Mr. Tawney, executed by Mr. A. E. L. Rost, be put in place and unveiled?

THE suit in the Court of the Additional Sub-Judge of Alipore in which Mrs. Mary Creet claimed from her brother and mother, Zemmdars, Mymensing, twelve lakhs of tupees as her share in her paternal estate, has been compromised. She gives up all claim for two lakhs and twenty thousand supees.

MR. F. W. Badcock having been permitted to retire, Mr. C. M. W. Brett, from Hooghly, becomes District and Sessions Judge of Bhagalpur, Mr. J. F. Bradbury, from Pabna, being appointed District and Sessions Judge of Hooghly.

MR. H. G. Cooke being on leave for three months from 1st March, Mr. G. Stevenson, Magistrate and Collector of Cuttack, acts as Commissioner of the Orissa Division and Superintendent of the Tributary Mahals, Orissa, Mr. W. Mande, Settlement Officer and Superintendent of Survey, Cuttack and Puri, acting as Magistrate and Collector of Cuttack, in addition to his own duties.

MR. W. E. Gordon Leith has obtained leave of absence for six months from the 27th April next. Mi. H. L Bell, Barrister-at-Law, Secretary to the Indian Property Association, will, during the period, act as Assistant Secretary to the Government of Bengal in the Legislative Department.

THE appointment of Mr. A. S. Judge, District Superintendent of Police, Patna, as Collector of Income-tax, Calcutta, is gazetted this week. His operations will not be limited to Calcutta. He will have control of so much of the district of the 24-Parganas as is under the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, and of so much of the district of Hooghly as is comprised within the limits of the Municipality of Howiah.

IT was gazetted last Saturday that " the Governor-General in Councit is pleased to appoint Mr. H. W. Gordon, Indian Civil Service, District and Sessions Judge of Saran, at present officiating as a Judge of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, vice the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Trevelyan, on furlough, to officiate as a Judge of that Court, vice the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Ameer Ali with effect from February 22nd, 1895, until the date on which the Hon'ble Mr. Justice O'Kinealy avails himself of the furlough granted to him by Home Department Notification No. 165 dated the 7th February 1895, and after that date in place of Mi. Justice O'Kinealy, or until further orders." Another order appoints Mr. S. G. Sale to officiate for the remainder of the furlough granted to the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Trevelyan. Another Judge, Mr. Justice Rumpini, has also obtained furlough for six months and two days from the 9th March. Mr. J. F. Stevens, Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces, will officiate for Mr. Justice Rampini. Thus ends the hope of an officiating Mahomedan Judge for the Bengal High Court,

M. GERVAIS COURTELLEMONT has been the third Frenchman to do the pilginnage to Mecca and the second to come back alive. He did the journey as an Algerian who had been converted. Notwithstanding he posed as an Aiab and had perfect command of Arabic, he was looked upon with suspicion by his fellow pilgrims. Without being killed, he circumambulated the Kaaba seven times, kissed the Black Stone and drank of the Zemzem. He found the water not bad, in fact had liked it, found the streets not filthy but clean, and the inhabitants not a rabble of vicious and bloodthirsty fanatics whose chief aim was baksheesh, but loyal and disinterested beings and lovers of liberty and honour.

AFTER an investigation of twenty-one days, the Assize Court at Autwerp has found Mme. Joniaux guilty of the murder of her sister, brother, and uncle, and sentenced her to death.

NOTES & LEADERETTES,

OUR OWN NEWS,

&

THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

-

A BELIEF is prevalent in high official quarters at St. Petersburg, that Japan is desirous of entering into serious peace negotiations with the Viceroy Li Hung Chang on his arrival in Japan, knowing that a bad impression would otherwise be certainly created in Great Britain, Russia and France. In the meantime, the Viceroy Li-Hung-Chang has had three audiences of his Emperor, and been well received. The Viceroy has agreed to go to Japan as Chinese Ambassador for peace. The representatives of the Powers are advising him to bring about a settlement. The Times publishes a telegram from Kobe stating that the Japanese are organising an expedition for the invasion of the island of Formosa. At Wei-hei-wei they are actively engaged in razing the land forts there. According to accounts received in London the Japanese are evacuating their advanced outlying positions round Wei-hai-wei and Ninghai, while the bulk of the army has already sailed for Tahenway. The Japanese Diet has voted a new war loan of a hundred million yen.

VICE-ADMIRAL Alexander Buller, C.B., has been appointed to succeed Vice-Admiral the Hon. Sir Edmund Fremantle in command of the British Squadron in China. General Black was to have started on Feb. 28, to take over the command of Her Majesty's forces in Hongkong.

THE Committee of the Reichstag has voted seven million marks for the purpose of constructing new cruisers to protect. German commerce in the Far East, INFLUENZA is raging among all classes throughout Great Britain Influence consequence of the epidemic, the Criterion Theatre was closed on Saturday. The frost has, however, broken, and genial weather is slowly setting in.

LORD Rosebery caught a chill and is confined to his room. He is suffering from extreme insomna which interferes with his progress towards recovery. In other respects the condition of the patient has improved. The latest news is that a decided improvement has taken place. There is every sign of his early recovery.

A BANQUET was given on Feb. 27, in honour of the Marquis of Dufferin by the members of the British Chamber of Commerce at Paris. In reply to the toast of his health, Lord Dufferin declared that the relations between Great Britain and France were never more friendly and conciliatory than at present. In fact, the cordiality now existing between the two great nations had never prevailed during his whole tenure of the British Embassy in the French capital. The settlement of the Sierra Leone Rinterland dispute was, he said, a good omen for the atranging in an equally satisfactory manner of the other stubborn questions now pending between Great Britain and the Government of the Republic.

LORD Ripon telegraphed to Sir Henry Loch granting him leave of absence to return home. He will, after coming to England, resign his appointment as Chief Commissioner at the Cape. Sir Hercules Robinson has been appointed to succeed Sir Henry.

THE Russian Mediterranean squadron has orders to proceed to the

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all kinds. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Street, Westminster, London, S. W.

THE rights of the British-boin have found a new development in Egypt. A special mixed court has been founded there for the trial of offences committed by Natives against British officers, soldiers, marines, and sailors. The court is invested with the power of summary judgment without appeal. The Times, commenting on the new law, remarks that the position of Nadar Pashi has been thereby strengthened and confirmed, and that the young Khedive has shown the customary discretion which has characterised his reign when vital questions affecting the interests of his country were submitted for his final decision. The Khedive, receiving Lord Cromer on Feb. 25, assured him that no change would be made in the Ministry. On the 27th, the Khedive reviewed all the troops of the garrison at Cairo. He wore the Order of the Bath. After the march-past, the Khedive complimented Major-General Sir Frederick Walker on the efficiency and appearance of the troops.

IT is reported from Morocco that the rebel tribes have invaded and looted Morocco city after several bloody conflicts with the Sultan's troops.

ADVICES from Honolulu state that the court-martial, held on the ex-Queen Lihuokalani, on a charge of complicity with the leaders of the recent abortive insurrection, has sentenced her to five years' imprisonment and a fine of five thousand dollars. The fine will probably be remitted if the ex-Queen depirts from Hawan after the expiration of the term of her imprisonment.

ADVICES from the Niger Coast protectorate state that a punitive expedition, comprising launches manned by blue-jackets and marines from the cruiser St. George and the gunboats Widgeon and Thrush, with a force of Haussas from Lokoja, under the command of Sir Claude Macdonald, was lately despatched against the Natives along the Brase River. It attacked and burned the stronghold of Nimbi after sharp fighting, during which Lieutenant Faylor, of the cruiser St. George, and two scamen were killed, and five wounded.

In the House of Commons, on Feb 25, Mr. Asquith introduced a Bill to terminate the establishment of the Church of England in Wales and Monmouthshire and to make provision in respect of the temporalities thereof. The Bill is identical with that introduced and withdrawn last year. On Feb, 28, the Bill was read for the first time without a division. The motion of Sir W. Halcourt to devote Tuesdays to sittings, and also to take Friday manings for Government business, was adopted by a majority of fifteen. Sir Michael Hicks Beach opposed the motion on the ground that the sole object of Government was to proceed with Bills which were merely intended to maintain its majority.

ON Feb. 26, the expected debate on Mr. Everett's motion in favour of the holding of a bimetallic conference took place. Sir William Harcourt admitted that the question regarding silver was really a grave one. As he was personally a convinced monometallist, he doubted the utility of holding a conference to discuss bimetalism. It is certain that the interests of the Powers concerned would clash, and he, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, declined to subject the British currency to the mercy of any foreign Power, or to the control of any International Committee of the other Powers. He said that they were welcome to combine with regard to their currency difficulty. He accepted the motion under a distinct understanding that her Majesty's Government was not pledged to bimetallism. In conclusion, Sir William Harcourt said that the British Government was ready to join in any exchange of views on the question.

Mr. Chaplin supported the motion and declared that the closing of Indian Mints was a mortal blow inflicted upon silver. The levying of the duties upon Manchester goods imported into India was no remedy for crippled Indian finance. He regretted his right hon, friend Mr. Balfour's absence from the House that night owing to illness. He wished he had been there to powerfully support the motion with his eloquence. After some further debate, Mr. Everett's motion was adopted by the House without a division.

The Times regrets that the proceedings show a weakening resistance to the question of bimetallism hitherto made by the House of Commons.

THE English press generally rejoiced at the prospect of the nomination of M. de Staal-a cautious statesman and a lover of peace-as chief of the Russian Foreign Office. But it was not to be. Prince Lobanoff has been appointed successor to the late M. De Giers.

THE Secretary of State for India, in reply to a question, said that he expected the capitation rate payable by the War Office on account of the British forces in India to be maintained during the coming financial year, would be seven pounds ten shillings per head, giving a total of £548,000 sterling. The question whether this amount was to be increased or decreased would be considered in the course of the approaching enquiry into the proportion of the charges to be borne by the British and Indian Exchequers. Mr. Fowler also stated that a discussion was still being carried on regarding the question of manufacturing cordite in India.

THE Chancellor of the Exchequer, in reply to a question put by Sir William Wedderburn, said that, taking all circumstances into consideration, he considers that the British Exchequer ought to bear the whole cost of the Opium Commission. The Times announces that Mr. Pease signs with the majority the report of the Opium Commission and that Mr. H. J. Wilson alone is presenting a memorandum of dissent on certain main questions in the report. After the part Mr. Wilson had taken at the enquiry, he could not be true to himself to agree with the majority.

SIR Charles Crosthwaite has been nominated a member of the Secretary of State's Council for India in the place of Sir Robert H. Davies, whose term of office has expired. The question arises-who is to be the next Lieutenaut-Governor of the N.-W. P. and Chief Commissupper of Oudh?

THE Investiture of the Star of India and the Indian Empire will be held, by the Viceroy, the Grand Master of the Orders, at Government House, on Thursday next, at 9-30 P. M. Full Diess of Evening Diess must be worn on the occasion. The gates will be closed for carriages at 9-15. The notifications on the subject will be found elsewhere.

THE High Court has declared the validity of the will of the late Mahant Madhub Chunder Giri of Tarakeswar. The Advocate-General had worked heroically to upset the judgment of the District Judge of Hooghly and has won the day. Messrs, Justices O'Kinealy and Gordon, who heard the appeal, have decreed it, and directed that probate do issue to Satish Chunder Gui, as executor. The costs of the appeal are to be paid by the respondents and so much as cannot be realized from them to be paid out of the estate.

SATURDAY last was a gala day to the girls in the Church of England Zenana Mission Schools superintended by Miss Hyton at Baranagar and its neighbourhood. It was their annual prize-day, held, as usual, in the house of Mr. Thoms, Manager of the Jute Mills. There were about 300 girls assembled, being an advance on the numbers of previous years, while the ceremony was in other respects also a more interesting one. Mr. and Mrs. Thoms, whose hospitality and interest in all good work are wellknown, had invited several of their friends, who were greatly pleased with the appearance and demeanour of the children. There were songs and recitations and, of course, sweetmeats to the little ones to make anomatelish, their prizebooks and dolls more heartily.

IT is much to be regretted that the native press should still harp on the assault by Mr. Beatson Bell. Why, what is it that these journals would have? The very head and front of Mr. Bell's offending has been that, rightly or wrongly, believing himself to have been made the victim of a conspiracy among the Zemindu's amla, he gave the man he saw before him a few cuts with a small cane that happened to be in his hand. The character of the annoyance has been set forth in Mr. Beatson-Bell's explanation. To one that has not been subjected to it, that annoyance may appear petty, especially as Mr. Beatson-Bell was not in the midst of a desert. Unfortunately, the victim of an annoyance is incapable of making a philosopluc estimate of the degree of wrath at should excite. When a accessors an illustrious line of learned Brahmans who for the number man is out of temper, he fires up at a trifle. Supposing that the cuts were of the precise number stated by their victim, or that some of them drew blood, the matter can only be deplored as an ugly accident. Surely, Mr. Breatson-Bell's conduct cannot be taken as evidence of a general determination on the part of the Indian Civil Service to go about, cane in hand, inflicting cuts on every native suspected of pro-Congress sympathies. Sir Charles Elliott is not wrong in holding that the exposure which Mr. Belt has brought upon himself, and the pecuniary compensation he has freely awarded to the victim of his temper, have been sufficient punishment. Sir Charles has also censured him. The claims of justice have thus been satisfied. Surely, nobody will suggest that Mr. Bell has merited dismissal from the service by what he has done, or that his has been an offence which cannot be washed away without incarceration in some Indian gaol, hanging being, of course, out of the question. To say that an official is bound under every circumstance to keep his temper,-that, in fact, he should never be in a huff,-is to insist upon his being more than a man. Then, again, one does not, by becoming an official, lose one's right to assert the privileges of a gentleman. A hundred circumstances may be imagined under which it would be the duty of one professing to be a gentleman to break the law by using his fists or his walking stick We do not say that the law would act unwisely by taking notice of such conduct, or that there should be no law for punishing such conduct. But the fact is, men are men, and should be treated as such. Mr. Beatson-Bell is a man. He committed an offence. He has expiated it. If the case had gone on before an Indian Magistrate. could the accused have been fined even Rs. 50? It would be unreasonable to demand anything more.

MR. Beatson-Bell's Deputy, however, cannot be let off gently. The explanation offered by the Bengal Government is scarcely satisfactory. He had been suffering from cerebral complaints. He had taken medical leave and was allowed to rejoin without a medical certificate of restoration to samty or cerebral soundness. Such an explanation looks well on paper. But does it agree with the facts? Did this precious Deputy exhibit similar marks of cerebral weakness many other case either before or after? Are any indications of cerebral arregularity noticeable in the explanation he submitted of his conduct? If there was madness, there was method in it. That madness was such that it induced the man to act in a way best calculated to gratify his official superior, by protecting him from the legal consequences of his act. Mr Secretary Cotton, by hastily yielding to the theory of cerebial derangement, as offering the most satisfactory explanation of what the Deputy did, has himself incurred the imputation of cerebral weakness. It his cerebrum had been in good working order, why, he ought to have called for a full report of all the acts of the Deputy from the day of his rejoining to that when be was again given leave. Until that is done, and some more instances are given of the Deputy's vagaries under his cerebral malady, the action of the Bengal Government must remain mexplicable. The man has been promoted when he should have been punished.

THE indigenous institutions of Saiskiit learning in India have always been supported by the munificence of its princes and people. Hindu chiefs always delighted to endowing them with splendid gifts of land. The great Akbar, who was an eclectic in religion, encouraged Mussalman Moulvis and Hindu Pandits equally. To come to our own times: the great landed house of Burdwan and the somewhat lesser house of Nudden have freely given away land to Brahmans noted for their learning and engaged in teaching. The gentry and the common people also have always contributed their mite towards the same end. The Rishis forbade the sale of knowledge. Among the foremost duties of a Brahman are sacrifice on his own account, officiating at the sacrifices of other people, the making and receiving of gifts, and learning and teaching. Whatever may be the moral force of Hinduism in our day, good Brahmans, engaged in teaching pupils, never charge tuition fees. They have even to support their pupils with food. It is this that accounts for the liberality of ail sections, of the people towards those engaged in the task of communicating knowledge. Large gifts like those which helped to establish the house of the present premier nobleman of Bengal, for the Maharaja of Durbhanga had for he old and who for this were honoured with extensive gifts of land, may be rare in our time. But it is often seen that no Hindu gentleman who is even tolerably well off, can perform the graddha of his deceased father or mother, or marry his son or daughter, without spending an appreciable amount in gifts to learned Brahmans. If the sums annually distributed throughout Bengal on such occasions be added together, the total would come up to a very respectable figure that will, besides, be fifty times greater than what the Bengal Covernment spends on high and mass education. The Brahmans who are recipients of those gifts are always treated with the greatest respect. Those actually engaged in teaching,-that is, owning tôles,-generally receive more than those who are not so engaged. And although there is no system of public excumuations by which the ments have been ascertained of the individual members of every invited conclave, yet disputes seldom arise on the score of inequality of gifts resting on accepted estimates of individual ment. Every Pandit occupies a distinctly recognised position, in consequence of which the measure of his dole is hardly disputable The relations, therefore, between those learned Brahmans and the lay public are of the most cordial kind. They are, as a class, innocent and quiet and simple-minded. Most of them cultivate learning for learning's sake and not for the advantages it may bring. A few amongst them are uritable, but their uritability is excited only in course of dialectical disputations. In truth, that irritability is only a particular form of impatience of stupidity in an adversary, for the most irritable Pandit, as soon as he is encountered by a disputant of real learning and skill, at once shows himself an altered min Their utter want of worldliness is illustrated by many a current anecdote. One of them, having got a written grant about a piece of land from the Burdwan Raj, committed the writing to memory and instead of preserving, tore it off into pieces. Another, having been honoured by a territorial prince with a similar grant, addressed the giver, saying, that he who could trace the connection of ideas underlying the Vedánta Sutras did not deserve to be trifled with by concre wordly man of the giver's calibre, for was it not evident that the gift was made simply to wear him from his studies, so, that the giver's own Pandit might soon succeed in vanquishing him in argument? The attractions of wealth would enervate him and meanwhile his puny antagonist would, by dint of continuous application, distance him to the race of knowledge. In vain the princely giver disclaimed such motives as were imputed to him, and repeatedly solicited the acceptance of the gift. The benefaction was not accepted. Every body knows the story of Runnath of Nuddea, who regarded hun self enormously rich in consequence of his owning a full grown tamaand tree in his yard, whose leaves daily afforded him the sweetest of decoctions for his only curry. When the Calcutta Sins krit College was founded, Professor Wilson asked the Pandus he had selected to name the salary that would satisfy them. They took time to consider and at last chose one from among themselves to bear the message to Mr Wilson that they would ask for Rs 3 a day but that none of them would agree to serve for less than Rs 2 a day. The announcement came like a surprise upon Professor Wilson, for he had reported to Government that the Professors of the Sanskut College would not accept salaries less than Rs. 250 a month. When such men are insulted at any house, who is there, penetrated with a love of learning, that would not be filled with real gitef? A story has reached us of a gentleman having insulted one of the most learned Pandits of Calcutta at a graddh's recently performed at one of the neighbouring towns. The number of Pandits invited was by no means large. The gentleman took upon himself to distribute the gifts. Never having assisted at a distribution of the kind before at his own or anywhere else, he suffered his temper to get the better of his judgment and addressed words of due insult to one of the honoured and honourable guests. The latter asserted his independence, threw the invitation card at the gentleman's face, and walked out of the house, followed by dozens of his class. The host, the performer of the graddha, soon heard of his friend's misdeed and ran out for apologising to the insulted representatives of ancient learning. He prostrated himself before them, with tears of grief running down his cheeks. The scriptures say that the heart of the Kshatriya is tempered as a razor, while that of the Brahman is soft as fresh cheese. All of them forgave the insult, but refused to accept any gift at the house. If the host was truly peniof pupils they taught and fed were almost like the Rishi kulapatis of tent, they said, he should send the gifts after them to their respective old and who for this were honoured with extensive gifts of land may labores.

MR. T. Palit, Burister-at-Law, has been convicted, by a Bench of Burister Magistrates in the Police Court, for contempt of Court, He was heard to say, addressing the Bench, that "it was unfortunate that you form a Court." When tixed, Mr Palit said that he did not remember having used the expression, and that if he had, he withdrew the words and expressed regret for them. Both Mr. N. N. Mitter and Newab Ashgar Au Dilai Jung who formed the Bench had heard the words as also the Bench Clerk, and unless Mr. Palit admitted his offence, the Court would proceed against him for contempt. Mr. Palit sticking to the conditional verbal apology, the charge was gone into and the Bench Clerk examined, but no orders were passed the same day, the further hearing being adjourned. The matter was ag un taken up on Tuesday last, when Mr. Jackson, on behalf of Mr Pilit, contended that the Court, not having passed the final order on the first day, was precluded under the law from further enquiry. Another Court must try Mr. Palit. This view was not acceptable to the Bench which held that it was, indeed, necessary under the law to commence proceedings at once, but not imperative that they should be finished at the same sitting. Mr. Jackson pressed that the case might be transferred to another Magistrate, or he would call both the Magistrates, one after the other, as witnesses in the same proceedings. Finding the Court unyielding and after repeating the regret of Mr. Palit, Mr. Jackson left the Court, Mr. Palit was now left to defend himself. He did not want to be in the position of a min defending his own cruse and asked for an adjournment. Mr. Haldar, who was in Court, would not come to his rescue as suggested by the Court. At this stage, Mr. Lalmohun Ghose appeared and asked for a postponement to study the case. The Court here handed over to the counsel copies of proceedings and the case was put back for a time. When the Court reassembled, there was another change of counsel. Mr Hill now appeared and repeated Mr. Jackson's arguments, remarking-"I am in a little difficulty. I do not know exactly in what way the Court is proceeding." "Whereupon, the Chairm on, Mr. Mitter, "There are two courses open to us-to proceed under Sec. 480 or 482, Criminal Procedure Code plus 487. If we find Mr. Paht guilty, we will pass sentence under Sec. 228 of the Indian Penal Code." After a further parley, the Bench Clerk was cross-examined by Mr. Hill. The Clerk remembered that Mr. Palit had used the words "that it is a mi fortune you are a Court," Mr. Cranenburgh was next examined. He deposed and explained that Mr. Palit had said "it is a misfortune that you as a Court will not hear or listen to me at al:" He was not quite sure that the word was "hear" or "listen," It was the Chairman who in charging Mr. Palit used the words "it is a my formure you are a Court at all." In closing the defence, Mr. Hill said - 'That is all the evidence I propose to call Mr. Palit cannot admit having mole use of any such expression as he is said to have done. But if he did so it was a reon-clously used by him, and he inneservedly withdraws it and expresses his regiet for having used then. Mr. Palat never had my intention of being disrespectful to the Court. If the Court desires to have that stated in writing I on perfectly prepared, on behalf of my client, to put it in. Mr Palit pleads not gully? After in hour and a half, the Court convicted Mr. Palit under section 228, and ordered him to pay a fine of Rs 20, in default to undergo one week's simple inprisonment. The fine was paid down. The Court was crowded with native barristers, p'eaders, and others

This is not the first time that Mi. Palit has been so convicted. In the previous instance, however, he was acquitted by the High Court. This time, he has not yet applied to that tribunal. Will he not?

LAST week Mr. Justice Canadei Midhab Ghose entertained Major General Lunce, returng from the Presidency Command, to a farewell Garden Party at his residence, in Albert Road. Those not in the secret were also treated to a surprise. The host spoke a verbal address eulogising the General's brilliant military career, and his popularity, due to his sympathy, with the Natives of India. In reply, the General found in the distinguished native gentlemen present a striking indication of the possibility in the future of an intercourse between the British and Native subjects of Her Majesty which promised well for the country.

To-night, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Bonnerjee give at their residence, in Park Street, an Evening Party to meet the Houble Mr. P. M. Mehta.

THE Prize-day at the Calcutta Medressa came off last Saturday There was a large and respectable gathering. The Honble Prince Jehan Kadar presided and conducted houself excellently. He spoke in Urlu and spoke well and wisely. The satisfaction of the Mahomedan community knew no bounds as may appear from the remarks of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Andul Jubbar who moved the vote of thanks to the Chair :-

I rise, gentlemen, to propose a vote of thanks to the char. This is,

I rise, gentlemen, to propose a vote of thanks to the chair. This is, I behave, the first more in the annals of the Mediessa that a Mahomedan gentleman has presided at the distribution of piezes to the mentionions students of both the Artibut and the Anglo-Persan Departments of the oldest maintain in the metropolis of India. I mit certain it is as gratifying to me as to all my co-religiousts, old and young, to see on the chair to-day a scion of a most illustrious Mahomedan House. Apart from his family respectability, his personal qualities endear him to all with whom he comes in contact. The students of the Mediessa, specially those of the Arabia Department, will value their piezes the more on account of their distribution by the Honfole Sir Prime Jehan Koder Bahadar, whose name is a house-hold word among the Mahomedan community in India.

This institution, as you have already he full from the Chairman, was established by Mr. Warren Hastings with the main object of qualifying the Moomedan for appointments to the Judicial service in this country, and so long as Prix in was the court language and the Mahomedan law was applied to the administration of criminal justice, success in the Mediessa was a passpot to success in life. But unhappily the abolition of Persan from the Courts and the supersession of the Mahomedan law have reduced the Mahomedan touthers in Bengal, Not only are they in stratemed circumstances but then very fundy respect dury is questioned. Therefore, my advice to you, my young friends, is that you should do all you can to acquire a knowledge of the English linguings so as not to lag behind in the race of competition. I must not be understood to discourage the study of Arabic and Persan. On the contrary, I have the greatest respect for those who sacrifice their prospects in this world for the sake of learning and religion. Reagon is of the first importance to us and a knowledge of Arabic is a key to it. On Usemas must always occupy the lighest position in society. The Prophet has said that our Ull But while the Ulemas have their dettes as spiritual guides, there must be others who should work hard to maintain the grandem of Islam I exhort those to gain the advantages which a knowledge of Western literature and scence will give them. We have already suffered much bound utton and become as poor as a church mouse on account of our pist neglect, and it is for you, my young co-religiousts, to ameliorate the conation of the Midomed in suspects of Hermanian Myesty. You after year you hear the report that there are no qualified. Midomed in candidates for employment in the public service, and although the report is not perfectly correct, yet I must confess that the Mahomed in youths have not shown that zed for a successful college career which the youths of other communities have done. done.

REIS & RALYYET.

Saturday, March 2, 1805

SIR CHARLES ELLIOTT'S LAST WORDS ON LOCAL SELF GOVERNMENT.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal speaks gracionsly of the working of Municipalities in the past year. The Resolution for 1893-94 is probably the last on the subject from Sir Charles Elliott, and and in particular, of the amended Municipal Act, we the Bengal Municipalities may well congratulate them jagree. We have, on more than one occasion, made selves on having merited his approbation on the eye of his departure. Sir Charles has criticised, rather sharply, their action in the past, but his parting words are conceived in a spirit of kindliness quite becoming the occasion. It is never to be forgotten, Sir Charles says, that those are the best friends of local Self-Government who most honestly indicate its failings. Yes, criticism the most unfriendly may proceed from pure motives. It is only to be registed that Sir Charles sometimes forgets this when his own actions are criticised in the press. The failing, however, is universal of our not being able to act up to the principles we profess. Speaking of the Municipalities, the results of the past year's administration, in Sir Charles' opinion, fully viadicate their usefulness as popular institutions. Improvement has followed as the effect of criticism in every case. Suggestions made have been cordially adopted. In places where medical expenditure was insufficient, it has been increased; a broader view has been taken of lie very much at our own door.

the duty of Municipalities in respect of elementary education; something has been done towards improving drainage and water-supply; and increased activity has been shown in the preparation of schemes for the execution of these important reforms.

This testimony, from the head of the Government, is of no small value. Surely, criticism has its uses as its times and its limits, and, above all, its manners. Sir Charles acknowledges the progress that has been made, and where it falls short of the standard, he is not disposed to be unduly strict or severe. On the contrary, he palliates failings with every consideration and courtesy. Sir Charles does not forget that Municipal business throughout the province is conducted by gentlemen who, with few exceptions, give their time gratuitously, which they can often ill spare. Remembering this, he recognises that a great measure of success has been attained, and that, as a whole, the Commissioners have deserved well of their fellow-countrymen. The spirit of these remarks is certainly worthy of the head of the Government and will go far to soothe any irritation of the past.

Sir Charles has great expectations from the amended Municipal Act. So have we, where the Commissioners are of the right sort. He calls the year a notable one in the Municipal history of Bengal. A vista of further usefulness opens before the people. The amendments of the law have been designed to improve the position of the Commissioners. The new Commissioners, therefore, enter upon their period of office with larger opportunities and a fairer horizon than their predecessors. The question is as to the calibre of the Commissioners. Where they are of the proper stuff, well and good. Where other-Where they wise, the opportunities, we fear, are likely to be wasted.

Eminently satisfactory as its tone is, the Resolution, concludes with words that should be a chart for the guidance of municipal bodies. "The Lieutenant-Governor repeats his aspiration that more general attention should be paid to the four cardinal requirements of a municipal population, -water-supply, drainage, conservancy and primary education; and that greater vigour should be thrown into the administration generally by the more punctual collection of municipal dues, by a closer observance of account rules and a more complete supervision of subordinates.'

In this view of municipal responsibility generally, our acknowledgments to Mr. Bourdillon for the success with which he has got that Act passed. The Act is a decided improvement. largely defined and increased the powers of Municipal Commissioners. Although the leading strings might have been more relaxed and there might have been more of confidence and less of interference in details, still grave and important responsibilities lie upon the new body of Commissioner. Time will show how they prove themselves equal to their task. But there can be little doubt that if greater use is made of the extended powers of taxation and of control over the water-supply and other sanitary requirements, an era of progress will have been entered upon, fraught with the best effects upon the health and comfort of the people. With intelligence in the Commissioners, Mr. Bourdillon's measure deserves success, and we must say that if it does not realise what he so earnestly expects from it, the fault will

The chief difficulty in the way of progress, in this as in most other things, is financial. The present Resolution shows that this difficulty ought no longer to put off the hand of reform. The Resolution discusses the incidence of municipal taxation which is far from uniform or adequate. From a statement comparing the incidence of municipal taxation in Bengal with the results in the North-Western Provinces, the Punjab, Bombay, and Assam, it is shown that Bengal stands lowest in the scale. Turning, again, to details of municipal taxation in the towns in Bengal, the greatest inequalities are observed. The incidence varies considerably, and even head-quarters of districts are found to pay a light taxation out of all proportion to their position or their needs. This is ascribed for the most part to the appointment of Ward Committees, but is it no reflection upon the controlling authorities, so apt to interfere in the pettiest details, if they have so long allowed this taxation to stand so low? Here was a case where interference was truly called for, but there was none. The Lieutenant-Governor considers it a great error to entrust Ward Committees with the duty of assessment and insists upon the main body of the Commissioners deciding upon matters of such importance or entrusting it to sub-committees of persons selected for their position or acknowledged impartiality. The appointment of Assessors will also be desirable in some cases. Whatever course, however, is taken, it is mistaken philanthropy, as the Government justly points out, to abstain from raising the taxation where this could be done without undue hardship. There is urgent need in almost all municipalities for improved sanitation, and if we are to wipe off the reproach that is levelled against us of apathy to our insanitary surroundings, we must be prepared to scrutinise our tax-register more closely. We think there is no denying the truth that we live amidst conditions inimical to health. The standard of sanitation must be raised, if our people are to live and enjoy the inestimable blessing of health. If for this the penalty of an additional taxation has to be paid, we think the good sense of our countrymen will reconcile them to the necessity. At the same time, it is to be hoped that the assessing agency will be kept within moderate bounds, and not allowed to exercise a wigour which will be productive of actual hardship

THE UMEDIVAR.

As a general candidate for any appointment, the Umedwar is a very interesting character. Of late years, his number has been rapidly increasing. He is looked upon as a public nuisance by European and native officials alike. Notwithstanding, he is a necessary evil and cannot be avoided. As competition and other restrictions have practically placed Chubb's locks on all the entrances to public service in almost every department, so the accordingly he places himself in a position from which the Mohap number of the Umedwar in every grade, from a Nawah- or Raja-ling to a poor Baboo, Lala, or Shaik, is increasing to a he manages to salute him once, whether the compliment is returned dangerous extent. One particular class seems to be marked by or not. In other or Court also, however but the Deputy may be strong features. These are in quest only of appointments. It the salam is forced upon him. For some divis, the Umedivir stations is this particular class that we shall endeavour to describe.

The movements of an Umedwar of this particular variety are rather mysterious, his assiduity and perseverance wonderful, his sagacity and shrew-lness prais-worthy, his informa- their favour and makes himself popular with them be his quiet tion about the relations of different persons in public offices and police disposition. He does not know to contradict any one anlimited, his forbearance very great, his attendance at the He would not refuse to do some little veryor for the servants houses of officials most regular, his politeness proverbial, his or the boys, and will sometime join the nin chess or livin-tennis, nature inquisitive, his health weither-proof, his legs nature's unknown to the master of the house. Thus, ma hort time, he breyele, his head always cool, his memory unfailing as regards establishes himself in the Deputy Scheb's house, where every initials and names of European officers, and his capacity to array his testimonials most systematically within the shortest notice very laudable. He has always (whether borrowed or not) a decent suit of clothes, compatible with his position, with the inseparable adjunct of a Payree if he is a Lila or a Shark. About chhota huztee he is seen slowly moving into the "compound" of the Deputy Sahab who is known to be influential. As he proceeds towards the Bungalow, he carefully examines everything and every file he sees. He has a graceful salam with a suppressed polite smile for every servant of the house from the Khansaman to the Munshee of Ustadiee (private teacher of children). When surveying the compound with his ever watchful eyes, he is not unmindful of the bundle of certificates In his pockst. His hands are there, to be sure of the existence of the credeatials and letters of recommendation. He has cultivated the habit of speaking slowly in a tone that rouses the compassion of his hearer. On arrival at the verandah, where the servants generally sit, the saluting process is indiscriminately repeated with great energy to make a favourable impression on the minds of the inmates of the Deputy Scheb's house. As a prompt return, he is offered a seat in which he sits like a tame car until sent for by the master of the house who is in his study or reception room. On entering, and before he has a glimpse of the Deputy Saheb, he makes low bows until he is close by the table where the Deputy Saheb is seated. He is not anxious for a seat for himself, nor draws the nearest chair for the purpose, but continues standing---the picture of pity. On being asked the object of his visit, he commences with a short and terse description of his history, his mistortunes, and his qualifications and claims (referring now and then to his certificates and reading portions of them from memory). He then praises the Deputy in some choice and select sentences and asks him either to confer on him any particular post or enlist him a general candidate. With a shower of blessings both in prose and verse he retires from the room after hearing the order of the Deputy Sahah, but in going out of the room he never turns his back towards the Doputy Saheb, a difficult feat in walking, especially in a room full of furniture. The Diputy Saheb who has enough experience of candidates in miny ways knows what to say to the Umedwar. He, perhaps, says "I will see what I can do for you;" or "I will bear you in mind when any vacancy oc curs," or, "remind me if there is any vaciney under some of my friends." These empty phrases of hope the Deputy Scheb he learnt from his Civilian superiors, and knows to use them properly The Umedwar is encouraged and becomes more persistent in his quest of employment.

From the next morning the visit is repeated to the house and no inclemency of the weather prevents it. Mornings and even ings the Umedwar is seen lovering about the house or the garden. He cannot have any interview with the Deputy Scheb, but he is still haunting him like a ghost. He gradually learns from the servants the habit, and movements of the Deputy and the hours when he sits in different rooms and the verandah, and or Gar brawaz can be easily seen. For her to the morning or evening himself in different positions near the portico, under the y randah, in front of the D pure's stare, or under a rice with the boys or respectable servants of the hone. He gradually gains one appreciates his gentlemanly manners and has a good | funds and had completed his measurements. The Maharaja became word for him. He now spends his mornings and evenings for the most part in the house of the Deputy Babu who knows nothing about his having already ingratiated himself into the favours of every member of the household. Thus, with free access to the house, he goes and waits there without disturbing any body. Watching for half an hour the opportunity for enquiring after the welfare of the mosabeb, he expresses that polite desire by a graceful twist of his face with meaningful smile.

After establishing himself well in the field of Umedwari and gaining sufficient information, he increases his salutations to the Deputy Saheb and pays him occasional formal visits for five minutes which means salamkurna (saluting). Now and then he brings information of kinds and communicates it to the Deputy Saheb. The Deputy cannot now think of hearing him lightly and gets gradually tired of his uncalled for presence in the house. Now that stage has been reached when the Umedwar is seen under every tree in the gaiden or the compound like an automatic saluting statue, and the Deputy Saheb is saluted from every point of the compass.

The object is gained. The Deputy now seriously thinks of the Umedwar. How to get rid of him? He interests himself in the Umedwar, is in search of an employment for him to get him out of the way. He finds employment for him somewhere. The Umedwar's visits are now less frequent --- they are quarterly or six monthly, and on important occasions only. It is very difficult for native officers to deal with typical Umedwars, especially when they are recommended by respectable and influential men. Umedwari has become really an art and those who know it equally succeed with Europeans and Natives.

One Umedwar succeeded in getting a good appointment from the Commissioner of a Division by making himself the lamp post of his gate for nearly three months. He is now holding a respectable office. Another made himself the saluting statue of the gate of a Director of Public Instruction, and was admitted into the lower grade of the Educational service. One's task would not end if one goes on enumerating all the dodges that have been played by Umedwars who are now respectable persons in society, for the salaries they draw and the influence they have acquired over their European oflice-heads.

The Umedwar, however, is no new creation under the sun. The genus has always existed under Hindu, Pathan, Mogul and British Supremacy. The types may and do vary with the place of domicile or the character of the rule brought about by Time. The story we think is pretty well known of an Umedwar ultimately becoming the Dewan of the Burdwin Rii, during early British times, by a very simple act. The particular individual of the genus entered Burdwan with only a few copper pieces in his pocket, and a luggi (pole) measuring 4 standard cubits. One fine morning he began to measure the area on which the palace stood. He measured and remeasured, taking notes the while, all the sides of the vast building, and having finished the palace began to measure the areas of the neighbouring chowks. The Maharaja soon heard of the man and calling him to the presence questioned him as to who he was and what he wanted. The Umedwar had expected as much and had been ready with his answer which was to the effect that, having seen the mansion of the incumbent Dewan, a doubt had entired his mind as to whether it was really larger than the Maharaja's palace. It was for settling that doubt of his that he had come all the way from a distant place, unprovided with

The Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science.

Prictical Class in Chemistry under Babo Ran Chandra Datta, F.C.S., Priencal Class in Chemistry under Babin Rain Chandra Datta, F.C.S., On Wednesday, the 6th Inst., at 4.15 F. M. Subject From and Manganese. On Tuesday, the 7th Inst., at 4.15 F. M. Subject Folday, the 8th Inst., at 4.15 F. M. Subject Subject Subject Potassium, Strontom, and Calcium. On Saturday, the 9th Inst., at 3.P. M. Subject Potassium, Indium, Ammonium, and Magnestium Lecture by Babin Syamadas Makherjee, M. A., on Thursday, the 7th Inst., at 4.P. M. Subject: Theory of Projection.

inquisitive and questioned the man as to the result of the measurements taken. He was informed that the Dewan's mansoin slightly, if at all, was smaller. From that moment the Maharaja became jealous of his Dewan and soon got rid of him, appointing the unknown adventurer in the vacant place.

DR. SAMBIIU CHUNDER MOOKERJEE. III.

Darwin tells us that a nation's vitality may be measured by the length of the interval between the attainment of full growth in the average unit and the advent of old age. The longer this period of lusty prime, the more intense is the vitality of the : and when decay sets in as soon as complete development is reached, the extinction of the race is within measurable distance. Few, indeed, of the inhabitants of the Delta reach the span of seventy years, allotted by King David of old as the extreme limit of human life, but which now, thanks to physical education and the spread of sanitary knowledge, is regarded as indicating the confines merely of old age. Mookerjee, when our acquaintance began, was only 46 and looked 60. Three years later, in 1886, he showed unmistakable signs of breaking up. The attacks of his old foe, the asthma, became acuter and more frequent: and opium ceased to give him complete relief. The time was one of fierce journalistic activity: for the third and last Burmese war was in progress and its events demanded close vigilance. His attitude as regards the then Viceroy's policy was eminently characteristic of his bent of mind. He held in abhorrence anything savouring of greed and injustice and regarded the invasion of King. Theebaw's territories, inevitable as we now know it to have been, with deep suspicion. But when he found that the "reptile press" made the campaign a peg on which to hang crude and disloyal attacks on the British Government, he rallied to the side of order, and was the first among native journalists to declare his frank acceptance of established facts. The sedentary habits engendered by early neglect and confirmed by the exigencies of his profession, impaired the elasticity of his constitution. In 1890 he was warned by a terrible attack of pneumonia that the sands of his life were running out. It is to the credit of his townsfolk of Baranagore that his seeming recovery should have evoked a public thanksgiving there. Thenceforward he was too evidently a broken man. Acute chest troubles followed the slightest chill or indiscretion in diet: and each attack left him permanently weaker. It is to this cause that his death was directly due. On the 26th January, 1894, he complained, on awaking, of difficulty of breathing: and was alarmed by the absence of the cough and expectoration which had always given him relief. On the 2nd February fever supervened; and his life-long friend, Dr. Mahendia I.al Sircai, at once detected symptoms of pneumonia. Throughout the phases of this most distressing malady his mind continued clear and his judgment calm; and he was able to dictate bulleting to his medical adviser, detailing each step of his progress towards the end. On the 6th February he sank into a state of nervous prostration, worn out by insomina and struggling with his cruel foe. On Wedne day the 7th he woke apparently much better; but, alis! it was one of those fleeting Indian summers which deceive those gathered round a bed of death. At three P. M., the final store set in. It was prolonged for nearly four hours and then the laboured breathing stopped and the large heart was

It is difficult for a European, however deep his sympathies may be for all his fellow creatures boin like him to sorrow, to comprehend the inner working of a nature so complex as Sambhu Chunder The groundwork was, of course, his Hindu origin. Mookerjer's He was not for noight the descendant of thirty generations of high priests, and he consistently stood by his order. For the greater part of his life he rigidly abstained from animal food and greater part of the closing years increasing weakness rendered a stimulating diet indispensable; but it was adopted with the greatest reluctance, and in deference to his friends' entreaties. inherited prejudices were continually at war with those liberal impulses which were the growth of a life-long devotion to letters. Thus he was always ready to welcome those of his countrymen who had outraged unenlightened public opinion by crossing the seas; and he once advised a friend, who consulted him as to the readiest method of gaining notoriety, to visit Europe and take his wife with him. But after receiving a visit from one of the "England-returned" he always ordered the hokab used by the caller to be emptied and cleaned, and everything polluted by his touch to be destroyed. In this struggle between inbred conviction and acquired culture, the latter was, on the whole, victorious. His entire life was a protest against that foolish and, indeed, suicidal doctrine which lays down that there is no excellence of life or thought beyond the Hindu pale. Mahommedans were to be found amongst his closest friends : and he would frequently expatiate on the contrast between the exquisite courtesy of high-born followers of the Prophet and the thinly-disgui-ed barbarism of so many "educated" Hindus. The late Nawab Abdool Luteef Khan Bahadur, who in point of good breeding could have given points to Lord Chesterfield, was one of his On one occasion they stood together as leaders of a nommedan movement. During the last Russo-Turkish distinctly Mahommedan movement. war, the Nawab organized a public meeting for the purpose of congratulating the Turks on their early successes at Plevna. Sur Richard Temple, then Lieutenant-Governor, regarded the demonstration as one likely to offend Muscovite susceptibilities, and forbade it. Mookerjee was appealed to by the aggrieved Mahommedans. and he had courage to address a representation to Lord Beaconsfield, then Premier. He promptly received a gracious reply: and the inhibition was removed. The same breadth of mental vision led him to distrust the so-called "national" movement, which aims at teaching men to swim without going into the water. He re-garded the Congress and all its work as premature and as inspired by ignorance of mankind. Still colder was his sympathy for that foolish and dangerous agitation ostensibly directed at the conserva tion of the Cow. His attitude here was not due to any disregard for the interests of the brute creation, but to an acquaintance with the secret springs which move the wire-pullers. He was a firm friend to English rule because his instincts told him that it was not only the best but the only possible rule; and because it was transparently inspired by a deep sense of justice. Justice, indeed, was far more really his god than any of the divinities of his Pantheon. His gorge rose at a tale of wrong : and thus his impulsive nature often led him to pour forth unmeasured diatribes on men and measures which calm reflection showed him to be in no way deserving of censure. His acquiescence in the politically inevitable did not militate against a becoming racial pride. Mookerjee unconsciously plagiarized King George the Third's utterance on a memorable occasion, and gloried in the name of Bengali. He always fired up when his countrymen were traduced, as they often are, by critics who are content to take their dates secondhand.†

Heinrich Heine said "people may prate of the pleasures of poverty; but I prefer champagne and the Order of Bath,"...therein showing that his brilliant but erratic genius was associated with defective sympathies, perhaps with vulgarity of soul: Mookerjee was distinctly his superior in this respect. With aristocratic tastes and distinctly his superior in this respect. With aristocratic tastes and a love of sumptuous surroundings--his library was one of the best in -his heart went out to fellow-creatures less fortunately placed. He felt as keenly as Cicero did the brotherhood of man. It is told of him that while waiting one day in his carriage at the door of a Chowringhee mansion, he was accosted by a degraded specimen of the genus "loafer," with the usual whining plea for charity. After complying, he entered into an earnest conversation with the "mean and learnt, as he told a friend, much curious information as to the ways of the class of which he would otherwise have been In his morning walks he used often to stop and chat ignorant.‡ with the Municipal sweepers, questioning them as to their caste and social customs. On one occasion he engaged in a discussion with a palki-bearer whose acuteness had often attracted his attention. So high rose the tide of argument that the time slipped by and the cook's summons to supper was disregarded. A friend who had been invited to spend the evening with him was in high dudgeon at the delay, and received his excuses with bad grace. His servants were treated as humble friends; and their comfort deemed of higher importance than his own. Thus he never had a chiragh burning in his room at night, for trimming and replenishing with oil would have needed constant attention. When a servant had retired to rest, he was never disturbed on any pretext. Mookerjee would, on such

*His Majesty publicly declared at the outset of his reign that he "gloried in the name of Briton."

† Sir F. Mouat, once Inspector-General of Jails, whose experience had been mostly of the residuum, told the London Statistical Society in 1867 that "He was one of those who considered that, in the matter of truth and honesty, the Bengalis were neither better nor worse than many nations boasting of a higher civilization and a purer faith; and that they in no degree merited the wholesale condemnation with which they were generally visited by those who wrote and talked much but really knew very little of them"

1 I was once told a story of failure in a similar quest by a great painter. He was commanded to dine and sleep at Windor Castle, and entered the royal abode valet less and carrying his own carpet bag. Shown into his bedroom, he knelt down to unpack his be longings, leaving the door open. While thus engaged, he was accosted by a flunkey, gorgeous in red and gold, who "supposed he was that painter-chap's man," and invited to "come down to the servant's hall, where he would be put up to the ways of the place." He gladly assented, when who should pass but his fittend the Marchioness of Ely?" "Why, my dear Sir E--;" she said, "I had no idea we were to have you so soon!" While conversing with her ladyship he glanced at poor "Jeames," and could not avoid laughing at his open-mouthed distress. After she had saided on, he received next the abject apologies, which he accepted with great bembonue, and reminded his interlocutor of his promise to "put him up to the ways of the place." "Oh no, Sir," was the reply, "I could not think of doing so."

occasions, attend to the bookals himself and bring anything needed for the comfort of guests with his own hands. His regard for the interests of friends knew no bounds. His time, brains and money were equally at their call. So difficult did he find it to say "no," that he often escaped importunity by concealing himself. This prodigality in well-doing seriously crippled his resources, and prevented his making anything like the provision for his family which has been effected by journalists without a tithe of his montal but also without a tithe of his milk of human kindness. For the close of his life, Mookerjee was often tormented by doubts as to whether he had not shown an excessive degree of altruism. On one occasion, when hard pressed by the necessity of providing for a daughter's marriage expenses, he bethought him of a friend, who had long owed him a considerable sum and while hinting at the necessity of repayment, he remarked that he had at last found out that a man's best ally was the "almighty dollar." It was a high-minded contempt for sordid questions of profit that gave him that stordy independence, pethaps, his noble trait. He was as incorruptible, as Andrew Marvell, or Carlyle's "seagreen" Robespierre. Rank as well as wealth might have been his; and the first was repeatedly pressed on him. He spurned both: preferring, as did an Irish member of Parlament of the last century, "to stand well with himself." A Litin poet has given us a never failure regime for humself." A Letti poet has given us a never failing recipe for gaining the regard of others,—"Love that you may be loved." Mookerjee's unselfishness met with a rich reward; for no modern man of letters ever had a wider circle of devoted friends than He was the centre of a group of admiring youths, attracted to him quite as much by his transparent warmth of heart as by the rich stores of learning and observation which he poured forth to a congenial audience. Nor was his charity confined to his own species. Unmeasured were his denunciations of that passive cruelty which suffers our worn-out drudges to die of slow starvation. When in his daily walks he met a wretched bullock with salient ribs, roughcoat and lack lustre eye telling of desertion and friendlessness, he always sent it to the Sodpur Pinjrapol. Like Doctor Johnson, of whose portrait as graved deeply by Boswell he reminded one, he was an ardent admirer of "the harmless, necessary cat." His teline petst were often a dozen or more in number; and each had its recognised place in his sanctum. The quarrels and jealousies of a specially privileged dog and monkey were subjects of infinite amusement for his friends during his banishment to Eastern Bengal. When they were per force left behind atiNarainganj on his return-journey to Calcutta, he presented the boatman, who undertook to convey them back to Dacca, with a warm overcoat as an inducement to show them every consideration.

- -----

Mookerjee's goodness of heart was largely the result of the preponderance of the emotional in his nature. The same characteristic was evinced in his intense appreciation of poetty. His mind was a storehouse of verbal melody, and he was never so happy as when drinking in inspiration from his favourite bards. Byron was the chief. The wealth of imagery, the burning emotions, the unconquerable love of liberty which find in his stanzas their fittest expression, fascinated my subject. During his stay in Tippera he used to sit up half the night absorbed in "Childe Harold." Once he was moved so deeply by the beauty of the word-painting as to wake up his friend Babu Kumad. Nath. Banerji and thunder forth the fourth canto, beginning.

I stood in Venue on the Bridge of Sighs; A palace and a prison on each hand. I saw from out the waves her structures rise, As from the stroke of an ehchanter's wand.

The greatest of French novelists, Honoré de Bálzac, has said that a craving for posthumous fame is the passion of great spirits,

This was Richard Lovel Edgeworth of Edgeworthstown, father of the well known novelist. When the union of England and Ireland was being prepared for, he was approached by one of Lord Castlereagh's spies in view of securing his vote and interest for the ministerial side. An immense sum of money was offered as a bribe for the betraval of his country. He refused it, though in sore straits, preferring, as he said, to stand well with himself, i.e., to keep his own self-respect.

† "My dear Hem Chunder," he writes on the 20th Dec. 1887,.... "Poor Kalay Khan, my grand Bengal Tommy, is dead, I don't know why or how. Could you come and help me to find out by dissection? He was in splendid condition yesterday; but he did not enter appearance at the Cat's dinner early this morning; nor later, at 2 a.m., when I had my own meal, did he bear me company as usual. At daybrak he was found dead in the yard. I see no blood or other marks of violence on his poor body. You may remissiber Kalay Khan, a. the black car, who throve so gloriously. He was, indeed, a grand specimen of the native production, and would be worth stuffing for a museum. I am sorry for the poor creature, whom I loved the more in order to make up for the harshness of others, who despised him because he was black; and persecuted him because he was not as wise as we are."

just as that for comfort or affluence is the passion of mediocrities. man of genius who for his sins embraces the calling of journalist is debarred from gratifying the "last infirmity of noble His works are written on sand. They deal with ephemeral topics; they are meant for cursory perusal and they are clean forgotten before the broadsheets which give them to the world are dry. The English custom of anonymity is to blame for this absence of a powerful educer of all that is best in a man: and there are those who think that this drawback outweighs its admitted advantages. A youth who adopts this ungrateful profession must accept the inevitable, and will be fortunate it, by the time he is a grey-headed drudge, his fame is known to the brethren of the quill and midnight oil. The great actor has a more enviable lot. quill and midnight oil. The great actor has a more enviable lot. His triumphs are equally evanescent: but then he is sustained by the magnetism of applause, spurred to excel himself by the sympathy of his audience: while the traditions of his feats long survive him. Mookerjee was essentially a journalist; and the fact places his biographer at some disadvantage. For the average gentle reader--like Napoleon when the name of a candidate for employ was submitted to him---asks "what has he done?" It is extracts from his works; and from their very nature they have long since faded from recollection. The piety of his kinsman, Babu long since taded from recollection. The piety of his kinsman, Babu Ram Das Mookerjee, has placed us in possession of a large number of articles written by my subject. They are full of his own subtle humour; and the quaint antithesis and apposite quotation in which he delighted are illustrated in perfection. I can hardly do better than select two passages which are eminently characteristic of his personality and style.

My first extract is one of the many pieces of fine rhetoric, which are to be found in the famous "Baroda Number", of "Mookerjee's Magazine"

"With all our hearty admiration of the great ability, application, zeal, and independence of Serjeant Ballantine, we must confess to a feeling of disappointment at the defence. It looks like being wise after the event---it would be ungenerous to make the counsel responsible for what may be, after all, an accident---what is more properly, fate; but the remark holds good irrespective of the actual result. Serjeant Ballantine could not, any more than the greatest advocate that ever pleaded, effect the impossible. But even with Mulhar Rao unanimously acquitted by the Commissioners, the address of the counsel would have been poor for any noble principles, any weighty appeals, any fund of crudition which future advocates of imprisoned princehood, or injured innocence generally might draw from it. That address stands on record- a straightof the evidence, most damaging to the prosecution. There the eulogist must stop. It is a roomy, substantial structure, conceived with ability, judiciously erected, economically, of good materials, convenient, and not unsuitable for the purpose;--not a noble convenient, and not unsuitable for the purpose; -- not a noble monument of art; massive and majestic, worthy of the dignity of monument or art; massive and majestic, worthy of the dignity of the occasion, and lending it dignity, capable of resisting the ravages of sun and weather, an example for all time. It is neither a brilliant argument, nor a great appeal. This is no disparagement, for it is only a tying that the address falls much below perfection. It is not given to many men to attain the highest species of advocacy, and the learned Serjeant was wise in not travelling from the beaten path in which he has earned his laurels into ground in which his footing might be doubtful. He did full justice to his powers and to his splendid fee."

My next extract shows Mookerjee to have been free from the prevailing vice of overvaluing our age :--

"Modern enlightenment and improvements disqualify us from realizing the difficulties, and consequently lead us to undervalue the triumphs of former times. When almost every unsuccessful triumpins of former times, when almost every unsuccessful Entrance examinee talks of going to Europe to lectione a batrister, we wonder that our grandfathers made so much of Ram Mohan Roy's or Dwarkanath Tagore's visit to England. When every dancing girl in Lucknow or Delhi, in a dull season, purposes to go down to Bengal to ply her profession, we are unable to realize the enterprise of the men of Upper India who, 40 or 50 years ago made the Grand Tour to Calcutta. As yet geography was not taught either in vernacular or English out of Calcutta, Bombay, and Madias. Travelling was cultivated neither as a pleasure nor as an accomplishment. Nay, it was understood only as a pilgrimage or a penalty. Let us remember that in those days there were not only no railways but no conveniences for communication at all; that where we have the electric telegraph mutually connecting all parts of the empire, and connecting them with all civilized parts of the globe, there was an uncertain, costly, and teditions post for transmission of letters; that the steam passage was in embryo in the brain or a new experiment; that ice, then the luxury of European morchant-princes and the highest officials, was still made in the fields about the present railway station at Hooghly; that the roads were bad and dangerous; that people from Mymensing and Commilla going to Dacca hardly expected to return home; that about 50 per cent. of the Bengal pilgrims to Benares were sure to be robbed or murdered between the Doomoordah and Colgong pirates; that,--- not to talk of Naimisaran or Hurdwar or Pushkar---Baidyanath was more inaccessible than the elder Jalamookhi; that Lucknow was the capital of a Mussalman kingdom whose Botany Bay was Cawnpur; that Calcutta itself was for the most part impassable and a sink jof dirt and stinks, disease and death, where crime and violence stalked about unpunished; and we shall be better able to conceive what was involved in the perceptinations of a prince of the blood royal of Oudh. But there is no need for so much historical imagination. There is an instance in point in the later annals of Oudh itself. Some idea may be formed at once of royal degeneracy and helplessness in that classic kingdom and of the troubles of travellers in those days from the fact that on the annexation in 1856 the indignant ex-King resolved to proceed with his whole family to England to lay in person his complaint at the foot of the throne. But the difficulties he experienced in moving down country and the hardships he suffered on the voyage to Calcutta effectually cured him of all idea of venturing out on the wide ocean. Even so late as 20 years back, the respectable citizens of the Oudh metropolis, who were wont to despise the people of other parts of India as comparatively barbarous, used to flock around their friends returned from the service of His Majesty Wazad Ali Shah at Calcutta, listening to the wondrous tale of houses in the water and discussing the possibility of such edifices. In 1862 a well-known musician of Lucknow, who in his youth had been to the Deccan in the service of the celebrated Dewan Chundoo Lal, having promised to accompany us to Calcutta, at the last moment backed out, because, as he said with tears in his eye, it was a deadly journey. We have ourselves known men who remembered the sensation caused in Oudh by the boldness of Nawab Ekbalud-dowlah and of Sved Hossem Ali."

--- The National Magazine.

F. H. SKRINE.

THE GOOD SLEEP OF A BAD MAN-

IN a certain prison that we all have heard of, lay a convict upon his nar-

IN a certain prison that we all have heard of, lay a convict upon his narrow iron cot. He was to be hanged the next morning. Yet he lay there covered by a rough blanket, sleeping as quietly and soundly as a tired schoolboy. Occasionally the guard in the passage outside pered between the bars of the cell, only to find his charge breathing deeply and regularly. This man had violated the law prohibiting muder; yet he had not violated the physical laws governing his own body, and Nature rewarded him as if he had been the noblest of his race.

That same night, less than a mile away, a rich man tossed and tumbled upon his luxurious bed. He was a good and useful member of society, yet he could not seep. And, worse still, this happened to him every night. Sleep—that blessing which the Psalmist says, "God giveth his beloved," was practically a stranger to his man. What alled him? The tortures of conscience? Want of money? The fear of enemies? Nothing of the sort. Then why didn't he sleep as well as the murderer? You would like to know? Right, let us hook into the matter.

"I got no sleep at night; I would be for hours tossing about. In the morning I was worse tired than when I went to bed."

Thus writes Mis. Etza Mathews, of I, North Road, Buint Oak, Edg-

"I got no sleep at night; I would he for hours tossing about. In the morning I was worse tired than when I went to bed."

Thus wuites Mis. E 12a Mathews, of I, North Road, Burnt Oak, Edgware, near London, under date of September 22nd, 1892 Just two years before this time she lost her health. A foul taste in the mouth, loss of appetite, and great distress after eating were among the first things she complained of. She ciaved food at times, and fancied she could eat heartly, yet when the very dishes she had asked for were set before her skin grew sallow, her eyes yellow, and she had a constant pain at her? of chest, sides, and between her shoulders. Her bowels were constraited hand the least excition set her heart thumping as if it must joine up into ucher mouth. At such times it was as much as ever that she could get her heath. She got so thin and weak she was no good for work. She contain't walk out doors without stopping to rest every few tods almost. The doctor did what he could for her, all any doctor could do. At first he said he thought her illness was owing to the smell of the farmyard. This looked possible. Even the smell of violets has made strong men turn pale and faint dead away. Yet the doctor was wrong. If he had been right, she would have got better when the family left the farm at Bentley Priory and went to live at Burnt O'k. But she was not improved by the change of an; she grew worse and worse.

"In May, 1887," says Mrs. Mathews "I went over to Chelmsford to visit my aunt, Mrs. Troughton. She told me of the good Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup had done her when she had indigestion and dy-pepsia. She hought me a bottle, and I begun taking it. After a few doses I felt relief. I kept on taking it, and in two months I was strong and well as ever. My husband and friends were asionished, yet I assured them that Seigel's Syrup had done. L. Yours truly, (Signed) ELIZA MATHEWS."

The point is plain enough. The convict slept soundly because he was a healthy man, although he was a wicked one. Our rich frien

Lassured them that Sergel's Sytup had done it. Yours truly, (Signed) ELIZA MATHENS."

The point is plain enough. The convict slept soundly because he was a healthy man, although he was a wicked one. Our rich friend rolled about all night because his nerves were unstrung by the state of his stomach. Our correspondent was prostrated by the same thing—indigestion and dyspepsia. The tennedy named cured her because it has that piver. The reison temains a secret with the roots and herbs from which it is made. Yet so long as it drives away disease and gives in back our health and strength, who cares for its mystery? Results, not arguments, are what we all want.

"Burnt Oak House, Edgware, September, 22nd, 1892. I have known Mrs. Mathews for some seven years, and remember her long and lingering illness. She informs me that Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup cured her, after medical and other means failed. Mrs. Mathews is a lady of respectability, and her word can be implicitly relied upon. You can use this statement in any way you may think proper. Yours truly, (Signed) T. H. HOUSE, Grocer and General Provision Dealer, Burnt Oak Stores, Edgware."

MILITARY SECRETARY'S OFFICE. NOTIFICATION.

Calcutta, the 8th February, 1895

Calcutta, the 8th February, 1895
No. 3648-I.—His Excellency the Grand Master of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India and the Most Eminent Order of the India Empire will hold an Investitute of both Orders in the Government House grounds on Thursday, the 7th March, 1895, and 3.0 P.M.
Admission to Government House on the occasion will be by tickets only.
All nevents desired of attending except occasion will be by tickets only.

All persons desirous of attending, except members of the above-mentioned Orders and members of the Consular body who will be invited by the Foreign Department, are requested to apply for tickets to the undersigned not later than the 25th February, 1895, after which date no applications will be received. Tickets will be issued on or after the 1st March, 1895.

By Command. A. DURAND. Lieutenant-Colonel,

Military Secretary to the Viceroy.

MILITARY SECRETARY'S OFFICE. NOTIFICATION.

Calcutta, the 12th February, 1895.

No. 3674-I.—In continuation of this office Notification No. 3648-I., dated the 8th, February, 1895, it is hereby notified that, on the occasion of the Investures of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India and of the Most ed Order of the Star of India and of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, to be held in the Government House grounds on Thursday, the 7th March, 1895, at 9 30 P.M., those entitled to wear uniform will appear in Full Dress, and those not entitled to wear uniform will appear in Evening Dress.

Those having the private entrée are requested to enter the Government House grounds by the south-west gate, and alight opposite the private entrance in front of the gun. Their carriages will be passed out by the south gate.

opposite the private entrace in most of the gun. Their carriages will be passed out by the south gate.

Those not having the private entrée are requested to enter by the north-east gate, and set down before reacting the grand stars.

The gates of Government House will be closed at 9-15 P.M., after which no carriages will be allowed into the Government House compound till the ceremony is over.

By Command, A DURAND. Lieutenant-Colonel.

Military Secretary to the Viceroy

WANTED.

A Sanskiit Pandit for the Hutwali Sanskiit School wife must be a passed Acharya in Bya-karan Sahiiya and Dharma Shastra Preference will be given to a Sarjoopari

Brahman,
Apply with copies of testimonials to-

BABU DEVENDRA NATH DUTT, Dewan, Raj Hutwa, Shanker Bhawan, Pisachmochan, Benares.

Congress Sketches: A Review

OF THE

SPEECHES AND THE SPEAKERS

AT THE

Fourth Indian National Congress Held at Allahabad.

Reprinted with additions and alterations from Reis & Rayyet

With a portrait of Mr. George Yule, President, Sold by the publisher G. P. Varma, and at the office of the Advocate, at Lucknow for 8 Annas a copy, besides postage.

PREVENTION OF SMALL-POX.

HEADS of families in which a case of HEADS of families in which a case of the management of the household who has not pierously had the disease.

All residents on the infected premises who are above seven years of age and who have been vaccinated in infancy and all children below, that age who do not bear good vaccination makes hould be resourced.

ton marks should be re-vaccinated.

This, if done properly and in time, will undoubtedly protect from the disease.

Vaccination or re-vaccination is performed free of charge at the following public vaccination.

Vaccine Station.	Section & Wards.	Days of Vac-	Hours.
3 39 Beadon St. 4 Medical College Hospital 5 Municipal Office 6 59 Ripon Street	E & G C,D & F H & I J,K,L,M	M. W & F. T. & Sat. M W. & F. F. Th. & Sat. M. W & F. T. Th. & Sat. M. W & F. T. Th. & Sat. M. & F.	7 to 9 A. M.
Suburbs. 8 Entally Municipal Office 9 Bhowampore	Ward 19]
Municipal Office Io Alipore Mu- nicipal Office	22 23	M. W. & F.)
11 Baniapooker Municipal Office 12 Billygunge	20) }	to to A M
Municipal Office 13 Kidderpore Municipal	21	T. Th. & Sat	7 to
Office 14 Witgunge Municipal Office	24		7
	25	,

Persons destrous of having vaccination or re-vaccination performed in their own houses will have to apply to the vaccine station of their respective wards (on the working days and hours of such station), or to the Superintendent of Vaccination, Municipal Office, or to the Depty Superintendent of Vaccination, No. 39. Beadon Street, one day previously, and to pay a fee of 4 annas for each vaccination for which they will obtain a printed receipt and the conveyance, &c., charges for the lymph child not exceeding Rs. 2. Patters wishing to be vaccinated from the calf at their own houses will have to pay conveyance charge for the calf in addition to the fees (4 annas per head).

calf at then we veyance charge for the can ... fees (4 annas per head)

W. J. SIMPSON, M.D.,

Health Officer.

2 nd January, 1895.

GENUINE HOMCEOPATHY. A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S. Homwopathic Practitioner,

May be consulted by letter or personally daily at his residence. 30-1, Colootolah Street, Calcutta.

> In Pamphlet, Price 4 annas or 6 comes for a Rupee.

A Cheap Reserve for the Army.

By Capt. ANDREW HEARSEY,

Late Her Majesty's Service.
Apply to Reis & Rayyel Office, Calcutta.

A Wonderful Medicine.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

ARE universally ad-

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

For females of all ages these Pills are invaluable, as a few doses of them carry off all humours, and bring about all that is required. No female should be without them. There is no medicine to be found equal to Beecham's Pills for removing any obstruction or irregulative of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box, they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and tobust health. This has been proved by thousands who have tried them, and found the benefits which are ensured by their use.

For a Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, and all Disorders of the Liver, they act hike magic, a few doses will be found to work wonders on the most important organs in the human machine.

wonders on the most important organs in the human machine.

The Natives of India will find Brecham's Pills the finest medicine ever introduced to their notice; the European residents also will find them of great value for cooling the blood. For throwing off fevers and preventing inflam-mittons in hot climates, they stand without a nival.

a tival.

These are Facts testified continually by members of all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debilitated is, BEECHAM'S PILLS have Largest Sale of any Patent Medicine in the

Beecham's Magic Cough Pills.

As a remardy for Coughs in general, Asthma, Brouchial Affections, Hoarseness, Shortness of Breath, Tightness and Oppression of the Chest, Wheezing, &c., these Pills stand unrivalled. Let any person give Beecham's Cough Pills a trial, and the most violent Cough will in a short time be removed.

Beecham's Tooth Paste

Beechail 8 1000 Faste

Will recommend itself being efficacious and economical, it is packed in neat airtight collapsible Tubes.

NOTICE.—G. Atherton & Co. will forward on receipt of letter, samples at the following rates size 9/2d, at 8 annas per box; 1-1/2d, at 8 annas per box; Tooth Paste 12 annas per Tube, these rates do not include the cost of postage which will be added to the amount. will be added to the amount.

Sole Wholesale Agents for India, BURMAH & CEYLON. G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3, NEW CHINA BAZAR STREET, CALCUTTA.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF

	MEMORIAL FUND.		_
	His Highness The Maharaja of E		₹5.
1.	bhang (K.C.J.) His Highness The Mah traje of V		000
2	an igroup, GCIF, His Highness the Nawah Bahadu	l.	000
3	Moorshedabad, Amirul Omra, G.C.	LE.	800
4	His Highness the Nawah of Junaga		500
5.	His Highness the Mahar qu Baha	dui 	500
4	of Cooch Behar, GC LE. Nawab Bahadui Sir K Abdul Gh. KC.S.L. and Nawab Bahadui	ιοι, Κ
7	Ash in Ullit. C.1 F		500 500
7 8	Nawab Inrid Jung Bahadur Nawab Azun Yai Jung Bahadur Shamsal Ulana Syed Ali Belgra		500 500
10	Khan Bahalar Bhar Bahanddin, C I Vizier to the Nawab of Junagadi	E.,	300
11	Military Children Su Jounda P	., ., .	250
12.			200
13. 14.	Messa Mackinnon Mackenzie & Prince Wala Kadi Syed Hosein		200
15.	Muza Bahadui Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Nav	valo	150
-	Sved Zamul Abdın Khan Baha	dur	140
16. 17.	Feraz Jung Raja Peary Mohan Mookeijee, C The Houbble Mr. Justice Chau Modhab Cheer.	s I dra	100
18.	Prince Mirza Sir Lahan Kadar Ba	 .h	100
19.	du, KCIF., The Houble P Playfair		100
20.	Hap Kasin Ariff Lieutenant-General the Hon'ble	Sir	100
21.	H. Brackenbury, K C B, Babu J u Gobind L. w		100
22. 23	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Guru	Das	100
24.	The Horble Dr. Rash Behary Gl	 105 e	50 51
25. 26.	Sit Romesh Chandra Mitter, K'. Shahibzada M chomed Obidulla K	han	50
27.	Bahadur, C.S.I Maharajkumar Benoya Krishna		50 50
28.	The Hon'ble Mr Justice E. J. Ti		50
29.	The Hon'ble Moulyi Abdul Jai		50
30 .	The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop	of	50
31. 32.	Maharaja Durga Charan Law, C Nawab Jahandar Meerza Nawab Huzoor Muzu	I F.,	50
33.	Nawab Huzoor Muzt		50 50
34. 35.	The Houble W. C. Bonnerjee Nawab Syed Ameer Husein Seed Navel Huda, Esq. CS	•••	50
36. 37.	Syed Nurul Huda, Esq., CS, Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan	• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •	50 50
38. 39.	J. G. Ritchie, Esq. C.S., Sii Alexander Miller		50
40. 41.	F. J. Rowe, Esq. Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi. Khan		32
42.	hadur, Kumar Radha Prosad Rov	•••	25 25
43 44	Kumar Radha Prosid Roy Kumai Dinendra Nirain Roy Babu Pashupatty Nath Bose		25 25
45. 46.	Rumar Doulat Chandra Roy Babu Guru Prosonno Ghose		25
47-	Rija Sir Soutindra Mohan Tag	ore,	25
48. 49.	Ray c Jotindra Nath Chowdhury Babu Rama Nath Ghose		25
50	Rija Steenath Roy Rai Sew Bux Bogla Bahadar		25
51. 52.	R Belchambers, Esq	٠٠٠	25 25
53. 54.	Raja Surja Kanta Acharjee Chow Rai Budreedas Mukim Bahadur	•••	25
55. 56.	Babu Gopal Lal Seal Moulvi Syad Abdus Salam		25 25
57. 58.	A. F. Apcar, E. q. H. Luttman Johnson, Esq. c.s.	• • •	25 25
59. 63.	Munshi Gholam Rasool		25
61 62.	F. H. Skiine, Esq. C.S., The Hou'ble H. J.S.Cotton C.S.		25
63. 64	Prince Mahomed Bukhtyar Shah Baboo Surendi (Nath Pal Chowc	 Irv	20
65.	Monly Imadd Ali	•••	. 20
66. 67.	Rat Shib Chundet Nundy Bahad	ar	. 2ა
68. 6 9.	D. Panioty, Esq. Chowdry Mahomed Arjamand I H. E. A. Cotton, Esq., Barrister-		2.3
Ž1.	Moulvi Syed Ashruffuddin Ali	at-la med	,
72.	Khan Bahadur	•••

				16
	73	A. H. Giles, Esq
	74.	F. F. Hundley, Esq, C.S.		16
	75.	The Hon'ble Moulys Strajul	Islam
	1	Khao		16
ļ	76	Moulvi Serajuddeen	•••	15
	77.	Abul Hasan, Esq.,		15
	78.	H. A. D. Phillips, Esq., C S.	•••	10
	79.	Baboo Kiran Chunder Roy		10
	80.	E. N. Biker, E-q		10
	81.	Baboo Doyal Chand Bose		10
Ì	82.	, Madan Mahun Bose		10
	83.	Kanar Lai Rhan		10
	84.	Moulyi Synd Akram Hossain	•••	10
	85.	Monty Aziz Ahmud	•••	10
	86.	Ra Kanyelal Dey Bahadoor		10
	87.	H Holmwood, Esq		10
				10
	88.	Biba Harry Monan Chunder	•••
	89.	Bahoo Chakkanlal Roy	•••	5
	90	" Sarodaprasad Ghose		. 5
	S	ibscriptions will be thankfully	received	by
į	the	Honorary Joint Secretaries,
ı	RAI	RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI	BAHADU	JR,
		4, British Indian Street,	Calcutta
ł		and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHM	AN, ESQ.	• ı		Barrister-		•
		the Talestia Cal

Rs. 6 "UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Guaranteed three Years.

16, Taltolla, Calcutta.

Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, smill, open-faced, mickel silvern, keylers, short winding, patent, "UNDAUNTED" watch, with hand setting mechanism, secondhand for Doctors, onnamental bold dial, for Rs. 6 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' guarantee. Warranted to stand the roughest use. Runs more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily repairable. Others seil at double our rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Jino. Dickson of Haputal Railway, from Crylon says:—I have and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jetks. x Dr. H. Moore of Royal Artillery from Poonamallee says:—I solid it for Rs. 16. x Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Regi. from Dimidum says:—I have sold it for Rs 20. x Mr. T. B. Scott of Patna Opium Department says:—The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time.

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty Canadan gold chain Re. 1-8-o.Fashnonable Canadan Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, at Re. 1-8-o. Mr.
G. Smith, Salt Inspector from Sanikutia, says:
"A German valued the diamond ring at Rs. 50
and ruby at Rs. 30." Key winding, Government stamped, solut silver hinting case, Royal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee,
for Rs. 13. Pte. G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light lifatity from Purandhar says:—For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a bergeant for Rs. 28 x Pte. H. C. Bishop of L.
F. L. Regt. from Kamptee says:—A Corporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch, Gentlemen's open faced, keyless real solid gold watch
Rs. 30; Ladies' Rs. 24; both with extras and men's open faced, keyless real solid gold worth Rs 30; Iadies' Rs. 24; both with extras and guo onteed for 3 years. Mind they are guanteed to be of real sould gold. No agents kept,
all goods sent only by us from Bombay
per V. P. P
WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO.,
BOMBAY.

CATARRH,

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness.

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and enstachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby ... 20 a simple remedy has been formulated whereby
... 20 these distressing diseases are rapidly and permanently cured by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUTTON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORONTO, Canada.
... 17-8
... 168
Scientific American. "IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer find sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering; while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most chronic form.

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the tortures of TOOTHACHE? A single application will relieve you. In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the result speak for itself.

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Physicians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of homes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar preparation has ever before attained.

Sold in Bettles at 1 Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throughout the world

Agents in Calcutta, Smith Stanistreet & Co-R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Bathgate & Co. Limited.

REIS & RAYYET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT)

WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

Review of Politics, Literature, and Society RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION. If paid in advance, ...

Yearly

... ks 12

Hali-yeari	y	•••		,.	7'
Quarterly.				••	4
Montary		•••		Кe.	18
Single or s	ample	Copy	•••	Ans.	0-8
	If no	t paid in adv	ance,
Yearly		٠	•••	Rs.	81
Half-yearl	y	•••	•••	,,	10-8
Quarterly	•••	•••			6-0
Monthly		•••	•••	11	2-4
Single or	sample	Copy		Ans.	0-12
		charge for t	ostage	e.or pe	eor.

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insertion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5.

Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphets (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayyet."

Office: I, Uckoor Dutes Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutta.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

AND

REVIEW OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, MARCH 9, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 665.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

THE WESTERN EMIGRANT.

BY MRS. L. H. SIGOURNEY, OF HARTFORD, CONN
AMID those forest shades that proudly reared
Their unshorn beauty toward the favouring skies,
An axe rang sharply. There, with vigorous arm
Wrought a bold emigrant, while by his side
His little son with question and response
Beguiled the toil.

"Boy, thou hast never seen ...h glorious trees, and when their giant trunks Fall, how the firm earth groans. Rememberest thou The mighty river on whose breast we sailed So many days on toward the setting sun? Compared to that, our own Connecticut Is but a creeping stream."

"Father, the brook
That by our door went singing, when I launched
My tiny boat with all the sportive boys,
When school was o'er, is dearer far to me
Than all these deep broad waters. To my eye
They are as strangers. And those little trees
My mother planted in the garden bound
Of our first home, from whence the fragrant peach
Fell in its ripening gold, were fairer sure
Than this dark forest shutting out the day."

"What, ho! my little gul,"—and with light steps
• A fairy creature hasted toward her sire,
And setting down the basket that contained
The noon's repast, looked upward to his face
With sweet, confiding smile.

"See, dearest, see
You bright-winged parroquet, and hear the song
Of the gay red-bird echoing through the trees
Making rich music. Did'st thou ever hear
In far New England such a mellow tone?"

"I had a robin that did take the crumbs
Each night and morning, and his chirping voice
Did make me pyful, as I went to tend
My snow-drops. I was always laughing there,
In that first home. I should be happier now,
Methinks, if I could find among these dells
The same fresh violets."

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free.—Artificial Ear-drums and similar appliances entirely superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CRAMBERS, 19, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

Slow night drew on,
And round the rude hut of the Emigrant,
The wrathful sprift of the autumn storm
Spake bitter things. His wearied children slept,
And he, with head declined, sat listening long
To the swoln waters of the Illinois,

Dashing against their shores. Starting, he spake-

"Wife!—did I see thee brush away a tear?— Say, was it so?—Thy heart was with the halls Of thy nativity. Their spaiking lights, Carpets and sofas, and admiring guests, Befit thee better than these rugged walls Of shapeless logs, and this lone hermit-home."

— "No-no!—All was so still around, methought, Upon my car that echoed hymn did steal Which 'and the church where est we paid our vows So tuneful pealed. But tenderly thy voice Dissolved the illusion."—and the gentle smile Lighting her brow,—the fond caress that soothed Her waking infant, reassured his soul That volversoe'er the pure affections dwell And sirike a healthful root is happiness.

But die ons, those wild magicians, which do play Such pranks when reason slumbers, tireless wrought Then will with him. Up rose the busy mart Of his own in tire city, —toof and spire. All glittering bright, in Finey's frost-work ray. Forth came remembered forms—with curving neck. The steed his boyhood unitured proudly neighed—The from the die, exilting round his feet, Frisked with shrill popous bark—familiar doors. Flew open—greeting hands with his were linked. In Friendship's grasp—the heard the keen debate. From congregated hands, where mind with mind Doth blend and brighten—and till morning—roved. 'Mid the loved scenery of his father-land.

WEEKLYANA.

This week, the mail was delivered at Calcutta on Monday, or two days in advance.

On account of the installation, as the municipal advertisement in another column says, of new Pumping Machinery at Tullah Pumping Station, occasioning alterations to the mains, next week, the citizens of Calcutta must be prepared for restricted supply of water. From next Tuesday to Thursday, the pressure will be greatly reduced.

THERE is no abatement of Small-pox. On the contrary, it is on the increase. The deaths are four times as great as in December. Unless the heavens take pity and pour down rain, the disease is expected to continue to the end of April. A fearful prospect !

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, if possible, as the safest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

THE other day the Insolvent Court room was, by order of the Commissioner, funng ited because a man who was recovering from an attack of smallpox was present in answer to the summons of the Court. This week, the Small Cause Court ordered the release of the furniture attached in a house where there was a case of that disease. The peons in charge were also ordered to be vaccinated,

 FROM men to cows. There is a report that the disease has broken out among much cows in various wards of the city. The order of the Health Officer has gone forth that affected animals are to be segregated and the owners are not to sell their milk. The carrying out of the order, whether legal or not, will probably raise the price of milk without preventing any evil.

••• THE Hon'ble C. A. Wilkins having obtained furlough for eight months from the 20th March, Mr. T. D. Beighton, District and Sessions Judge, 24-Parganas, acts as Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Mr. J. Pratt, District and Sessions Judge, Midnapore, acting in the same capacity in the 24 Pargan is ٠.

A SULL for partition with usual prayers for reliefs, instituted in the High Court, Original Side, was thrown out for want of jurisdiction The same suit was next filed at Hooghly, the parties and prayers being the same. The Subordinate Judge subpoenced the attorney for the plaintiff in the suit in the High Court for certain papers and documents deposited with him. The attorney Claiming a lien on them, refused to produce them unless the costs, due, to him were paid The Sub Judge overruled the objection on the ground that the firm had changed with the death of one of the partners who had acted as attorney, and there was dissolution of partnership. There was in appeal from this order, and a rule issued by the High Court in its revisional jurisdiction, which rule was discharged on technical grounds Next a plaint was filed, by the living attorney and the executor of the deceased partner, in the Original Side of the High Court for balance of costs due, for declaration of the attorney's lien, for injunction against the documents being used as evidence in the suit at Hooghly, or otherwise intermeddling with the same, for in order setting aside, if necessary, the order of the Sub-Judge directing the production of the documents and, of course, for other reliefs. Pending the disposal of the sur, an order was, on a rule granted, made restraining the defendants from using the papers and document; without payment of the plaintiff's claim. The suit has now been decided by Mr. Justice Side who has decreed the attorney's claim with costs, has declared that the attorney had a valid and subsisting hen on the papers placed in his hands, and that the defendants were not entitled to use the papers or in any intermeddle therewith, except on payment of the balance of costs due to the attorney.

In the reference by the Sessions Judge of the 24 Parganas disagreeing with the acquitted by the Jury of the head courk Sishech insin Chatterjee--of the Alipore Post Offi e, charged with criminal breach of trust in respect of Rs. 4,900, M). Justice Norris, who with Mo-Justice Beverley formed, the Criminal Bench, addressing Mr. Kabiy who appeared in support of the reference, said - who appeared in support of the reference, said—

"They have been looking through the books questy and ferreting out things; and in this exmanation, which particles of the nature of a cross exmination, they seek in this way to nature the accussed to commit himself. It is a perfectly scandadous and disgreeful but mess God bless my soul! this is not a preliminary statement with a view to issuing process against the treasurer. This is a species of cross examination with a view to getting him to fix the goalt up in himself. I do not wonder that the jury did not pay any attention to this deposition.

Mr. Kilby. On the other hand, they wanted to know whether this

Mr. Kilby. On the other hand, they wanted to know whether this man was telling the truth against the treasurer.

Nortis, J.—That is not the way to ascert in that first, by cross examining him before the majoritate. One hears a great deal about executive tyranive. This is a case of judicial tyranive me or less.

Mr. Kilby.—Under the rulings that is evidence or not, but it is an unjust, disgraceful proceeding. If the result or the inquiries between the date of the mais exemination, and the date of the resemption of that so-called examination, was such as to induce the help for in the was a participal crimins, it was the dairy of the prosecution to have told lain, 'We have reason to believe that you are an accomplice, and we shall charge you? and he should have been warned that anything he said would be used against him. But you have no right to try him in this way. You ought not to put people in the dock by trapping them into making incrimin tory statements?

Ultimately, the Judges were of opinion, that at the highest it was a case of suspicion, and is such the accused was entitled to the benefit of the doubt. They accordingly upheld the verdict of the jury as a right and proper one, and acquitte I and discharged the accused.

HERE is a treatment of sprained ankles, turned ankles, twisted wiists, &c :

" It is generally within an hour after the accident that you are called "It is generally within an nonrative to accident that you are carried in to see the case. The patient is suffering very severely, and wanting very much to know at "anything is broken." After examining for fracture, order the part to be bathed in extremely hot water, every hour or two, for a period of fifteen minutes at a time. Have the water just as hot as the patient can bear a, and apply with a sponge or cloth, rather than allow the inker to be much water. Then dry and let the part rest quietly, wrapped in flararis, when an application of hamame-lis or veration and hamanelis may be made.

its or veration and han uncles may be in ide.

Before terring apply of framed builage tightly around the swollen part, only being careful that the circulation is not cut off.

It is surprising how the hat applications relieve the pain and produce absorption, and how the band by a by pressure, prevents swelling and inflammations,"——Scientiff American.

If there is no fricture, the time-honoured Indian treatment by bandage and plaster of warm time and turmeric, has been known to be highly efficacious.

THE following about be irds is from the British Medical Journal -

"It is to be feared that too many men deprive themselves of what takespeare calls 'valous's excrement,' without counting the possible list. Whether the heard be in ornament to the masculine counte-Shakespeare calls valours exercise in the masculine countenance we must leave the lodies to decide; it certainly has its uses in hiding a weak chin, and in some cases it seems to be cultivated as a vicatious compensation for a hindess so the It is not, however, in its cosmetic so much as in its hygienic aspects that the blessedness of the beard—in which term we include the whole of the harvest usually claimed by the 1/2 n - is most apparent. That it is a safeguard to the throat is generally admitted, and writers of authority have insisted on its value as a protection against toothache and facial neuralgia. This is a goodly sum of advantages to the credit of the beard. Dr. Chabbert, its value as a protection against formache and facial neutralgit. This is a goodly som of advintages to the credit of the beard. Dr. Chabbert, of Toulouse, has however yet more to say in its favour. According to this practitioner the beard seems to be a very efficient defence against that form of ficial prodysis, which is caused by cold. This affection is furmore common in women than in men, though the latter are, of course, much more exposed to the cause which produces it. When facial paralysis a frigore does occur in men, they are almost invariably individuals to whom. Nature has been step-motherly in the matter of individuals to whom. Nature has been step-motherly in the matter of beauting who have we notonly thrown away the protective covering with which she had clocked their faces. Dr. Chabber cases the experience of several physicians, in a lanton to his own, in support of his opinion. Professor André, of Poulouse, has seen several cases of the affection in question in women, but not one in main, he has heard of one, indeed which would up, out to be an excellent example of the exception which proves the infe, for the patient was a "large artist," with the faceta of mixing so distristeful to I, not Byron. Professor Pitres, of Bordeaux, has seen twice cases in women and only two in men, both the latter has seen twive cases in women and only two in men, both the latter, shaved, though a some of them unacriword that operation only twice a week his case perhaps ones not count for much unless it by held that his face was more vulnerable ifter these parished demilations. Similar observations are quited from D. O'avier of Fontouse, and D. Sudler, of Curniox. These first, though hardly sufficient to found an induction on, seem it to sit to est ourse, a perial face case for the utility of the beard agenst to oil provides of tine knot referred to. In these days when man's traditional privileges are one by one being invaded by the fnew womand, he may perhaps be foguren for making the most of such advantages as may be considered excusively his own?

DR. Mahen tralal Such's experionces regarding beards are different We read to the last (January) number of the Calcutta Journal of Meliane

"We count say much in favour of the beard affording protection to "We cannot say much in favour of the beard affording protection to the toth, the throat, or the face. We were presented by some friends to cultivate the overal for the purpose of getting and of our teeth-troubles which have been one very frequent of late, but notwithstanding that the beard is now presty respectable, the teeth-troubles have not been any which have been one very frequent of late, but notwithstanding that the bear distribution menty respect told, the teeth-troubles have not been any the less. This is a very source also of many who have never been under the order. As for facial purifysts we have never yet menty the reserved in the order. As for facial purifysts we have never yet menty that is easy to be easy to be the order. The order is a very facility of all the very frequent in our own sex. The order is a very facility of all ness. It is, however, very often a must men, and he is to to not a calculations."

It may be worshy when to mention, that the Rishis of ancient India, who are credited with a superior knowledge of personal hygiene, and anose freedom from discuse was proverhid, never shaved. The practice of not stoom may to the operation of the razor for a definite period, adopted as a very in homour of this or that deity of the Hindu pantheon over a officie t with pulmonary and other diseases, is still general to I observe the due to faith or the beard agrowing may not be capable of substictory solution, but the fact cannot be doubted that cares are sometimes effected in such individuals. The observance of the vow has descended from ancient times. In Catholic | Ch. F. Crisp, Speaker in the House of Representives, has been select-Christendom such a vow was at one time general among the sick. It should be mentioned that Charaka prescribes shaves, though certain cities in the United States are sending relief for the acute distress days and hours are stated as unfit for submitting to them. Dr. Sircar's view of beards leading to much uncleanliness seems to derive support from the ordinances of Charaka.

NOTES & LEADERETTES,

OUR OWN NEWS,

THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

NEGOTIATIONS relative to the powers and credentials to be conferred upon the Chinese peace envoys are making favourable progress. The proposed Envoys will first meet the Japanese representatives at Simonsaki, who will examine the credentials of the Chinese mission. If found in order the Envoys will be allowed to proceed to Hiroshima, where the negotiations for peace will take place. The Times published a telegram from a correspondent at Pekin stating that Li Hung-Chang has started for Japan via Tientsin. The Japanese Government has accepted his credentials. The hostilities, however, continue Newchang has been captured by the Japanese after desperate street fighting lasting thuteen hours. Nineteen hundred Chinese have been killed and five hundred taken prisoners, the Japanese loss being two hundred killed. The remnants of the Chinese army have fled to Yinkow. The Japanese Government has notified to the Powers its intention to occupy the treaty part of Newchang. According to despatches received at Hiroshima, the Chinese Forces numbering thitteen thousand mide a desperate attack on Haicheng, but were repulsed by the Japanese after severe fighting. The Japanese loss is stated to have amounted to two hundred and seventy. The Linanese Army in Minchitta is again moving forward driving the Chinese northward. The Chinese warships captured by the Japanese at Wei-hai-wei have arrived at Yokohama. The Japanese have abandoned Shantung, Wei-hai-wei, after destroying all the fortifications. The third and fifth Japanese army divisions have effected a junction near Liaoyang. The third Japanese division has occupied Aushougcheng unopposed.

A DEBATE took place in the German Reichstag on the naval estimates, the Government strongly insisting upon an increase in the number of cruisers, to enable the Navy fittingly to protect German trade and German subjects, and watch over the growing interests of Germany in various parts of the world, notably in China and Japan. Eventually the cost of four new cruisers was voted by a large majority. In his recent navai lecture at a parliamentary sonée at the New Pilace, the Emperor laid special emphisis on the importance of cruisers, The Agricultural Council, comprising representatives from all parts of the Empire, is holding sittings at B ilin under the presidency of the Minister of Agriculture for enquarity into prevailing agricultural depression. Up to the present the Conocil has only been discussing numerous vague schemes, including State monophy of grain with State control over imports.

It is all unple isant news from Russia. The Czar is suffering from an attack of influenzy, accompanied by sore throat. Repeated serious riots have occurred among the students at St. Petersburg, compelling the authorities to call out detachments of Cossacks to disperse the moters, many of whom have been seriously injured. The disturbances are of a semi-political nature, in favour of the adoption of a more liberal policy by the Czar.

THE American Congress refuses to vote the sum of 4,25,000 dollars offered by the United States Government for the settlement of the Behring Sea arbitration award. Senator Sherman has denounced the refusal as tending altogether to destroy the principle of arbitration. Mr. Gresham, Secretary of State, has expressed his Government's deep regret to Sir J. Pauncefote regarding the delay in discharging the national obligations. The Congress has finally agreed to take part in any monetary conference which may eventually be held. Mr.

ed as one of the United States delegates. Boston and several other prevailing in Newfoundland.

ISMAIL Pasha, Ex-Khedive of Egypt, who had been seriously ill for some time, died on the 2nd.

A TRAIN crowded with pilgrims left the rails and plunged down a precipice near Mexico. One hundred passengers were killed outright, and ninety injured.

A LARGE fire broke out at Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, completely destroying the business quarter of the town. The damage is estimated at nearly a million sterling. The confligration would have proved even more serious had not detachments of British and American Bluepickets been landed to render assistance. Owing to the exertions of the seamen the remainder of the town was saved.

In the House of Commons, on March 4, Mr. Morley introduced a Bill to amend the Irish Land Act in accordance with the proposals of the recent Committee. The general principle of the Bill is to protect tenants in the ownership of improvements, and reduce the term for the fixing of fair tents. The Bill also contains cert up provisions in favour of evicted tenants. It was read a first time without a division Next day, the Bill to establish boards of conciliation in labour disputes was read a first time, Mr. Chamberlam rediculed the Bill as being totally madequate to deal with the settlement of labour disputes

THE English Naval estimates for the financial year 1895 96 amount to about £19,116,000 or £1,750,000 more than the sum voted in 1804 95. The total number of men wanted in 1895 96 will be 88,900, an increase of 5,500 upon the total of last year. Important new works are to be constructed at Portland, Gibraltar, Dover, Hongkong and Portsmouth. A loan to cover the cost will be necessary. The Army estimates for the financial year 1895-96 amount to £17,881,000 showing a decrease of £200,000 compared with last year. The effective ser vices remain unchanged. Government hope to withdraw a battahon from the Army of Occupation in Egypt during the present year. thus enabling them to complete the garrisons on the South African coaling stations. The system of hiring transports will be fully tested before deciding upon the construction of new vessels to replace troopships. The additional estimates of the English Budget include a sum of £9, 500 for the cost of the Opium Commission.

Owing to the epidemic of influenza which is raging, the number of deaths registered in the London districts alone was fourteen hundred above the average of the last ten years. Sir Henry Rawlinson has fallen a victim to the disease. Mr. Fowler, the Secretary of State for India, and Mr. Campbell Bunnerman, the Secretary of State for War, are both suffering from it. Mr. Asquith too is confined to his bed.

THE Marquis of Queensberry has been arrested on a charge of libelling Mr. Oscar Wilde. The allegation states that the former left a card at Mr. Wilde's Club inscribed with wirds amplying a horrible charge against Mr. Wilde. The accused by been remanded for a week, and is admitted to bail on a sum of one housand pounds.

AT a meeting of the East India A. sciation, Sir Lepel Griffin read a paper in which he said the present war in the Far East would immensely affect the future prosperity of India. The solution of the currency difficulty was a most vital matter, and he was of opinion that himetal. hism was the only remedy. The recasting of the Indian financial system was essentially necessary. India, Sir Lepel said, will ever remain unsuited for representative Government. He also advocated limiting the liberty of the press in India, and defended the Indian Government's recent frontier policy. Sir Lepel need not be anxious for the liberty of the press in India. It has been considerably curbed since he left

An enthusiastic reception was accorded to Lord Harris on his arrival at his seat at Faversham. He was received at the station by the Mayor and Aldermen, and a guard-of-honour composed of Volunteers. A torchlight procession with bands of music, escorted him home. In the course of a reply to an address read by the Mayor, Lord Harris said he would never forget the extremely kind fatewell of Bombay. Kind the fatewell undoubtedly was of those that gave it. Unfortunately the number of those that did not join it was not inconsiderable. The latter, again, took time by the forelock, by quickly collecting all the hostile criticisms in the press on Lord Harris' administration. That goodly volume, of about 250 octave pages, of diglot letter-press, even the friends and admires of Lord Harris must admit, is an ugly fact. Bombay, however, has buried her Governor, and he ought to be beyond the reach of both praise and blame.

PROFESSOR Blackie is dead. The loss will be mourned by many as a personal one. His relations towards successive generations of youth that sat at his feet, were always cordial. He was never stiff with them, but freely indulged his humour. His independence in the domain of thought was remarkable. Considering the obloquy under which Hume and Voltaire still labour, it required real courage to recommend to young men the study of those two truly great authors. In his excellent volume on self-culture, he spoke of their writings as necessary to complete one's education.

. -----

THE Chapter on Thursday might passed off satisfactorily. No complaint has reached us. It was hold on the grounds where Lord Lansdowne, in 1889, had held his, under electric lamps, the other arrangements being the same. The Hon'ble Mr. James Westland, CSI., and the Hon'ble Mr. Frederick William Richards Fryer, CSI, were invested with the Insigma of the Second Class, and the Hon'ble Mr Charles Cecil Stevens, Mijor-General Alexander Robert Badcock, CB., and Stephen Jacob, Esq., were decorated with the Badge of the Third Class, of the Most Exilted Order of the Star of India Rija Sidhal Deo, of Bamia, C.I.R., and Colonel Henry Ravenshaw Thuilter, C.I.E., were also invested with the Insignia of the Swood Class, and Rai Bahadoor Durgagati Binnerp and Adam Gillies Tyler, Esq., decorated with the Badge of the Third Class, of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire. Besides the Grand Master of the two Orders, Lord Elgin, who presided, there attended 49 Members, namely, one GCIF, three K C.S.L's., nine K C.LE's, thuteen C S L's, and twenty-three C I E.'s.

THE Hon'ble Sir Antony Patrick MicDonnell, KCST, has been selected as the next Lieutenant Governor of the North Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oadh. His antecedents fit him for the post.

THE Evening Puty at 6, Park Street, last Saturday, in honom of the Hon'ble Mr. P. M. Mehta, was largely attended. And no wonder, for Mr. and Mis. Bonnerpe are splendid hosts. They remembered all their friends and were attentive to each of them. It was arranged on that occasion to give a general entertrumout to M. Mehta.

THERE is a good deal of sensation at Hyder drid over the Meccin lecture delivered by Dr. Harrim the prion gradens, a relegraphic account of which has already appeared in this journal. Interested parties are publishing primpilets serving that Dr. Harr's morposal has the hearty support of if the Mahomerum, and the Hyder drid

The Indian Association for the Caltivation of Spience.

210, Bow bozur Street, Calcutti-

(Session 1894-95.)

Practical Class in Chemistry under Bron Rain Chandra Datta, F.C.S., On Wednesdry, the 13th Inst., at 4.15 P. M., Surgert Inorgana A dis. On Thursday, the 14th Inst., at 4.15 P. M., Subject. Inorgana Acids (continued). On Friday, the 15th Inst., at 4.15 P. M., Subject. Inorganic Acids (concluded). On Saturday, the 16th Inst., at 4.15 P. M., Subject. Organic Acids.

Lecture by Babu Syamadas Mukherjee, M. A., on Thursday, the 14th Inst., at 4 P. M., Subject - Invariant Theory of Comes.

Admission Fee, R., 4 for Physics, and Rs. 4 for Chemistry; Rs. 6 for both Physics and Chemistry, Rs. 4 for Physiology; Rs. 4 for General Biology; Rs. 6 for complete course of Physiology and Biology. The charge for a single lecture is 2 Annas.

MAHENDRA LAL SIRCAR, MD,

March o. 1805.

Honorary Secretary.

Durbar. This to say the least is a bold statement. It is wide off the fat. The meeting instead of carrying any resolution by acclamation fouldy declared Dr. Hart's proposal namanson. The Crul and Military Gazette is about the only Anglo-Indian paper which has published a true report. The account in the other pipers represents the feelings of those who, impelled by landable motives, were heedless enough to denounce the Zemzem well. The differing roused by that ill-judged action is so great that Dr. Hart would be advised well to leave the sacred spring alone. Already, the Nizun's Government is obliged to declare officially that it does not support the maginary resolutions telegriphed to the virious papers.

THE municipal elections take place next Saturday. The day will not be observed, as in former years, a holidity, except in the municipal office, but ficilities will be given to Government servants to attend the polling booths to record their votes. In the urban area, eightt wards are uncontested. One of the suburban wards shows marked activity. Applications were made to the Chief Magistrate to disqualify miny voters and a pair of rival candidates, Mr. Pearson would disqualify none of the candidates and only pronounced a brother of one of them incompetent to vote.

THE tenth annual general meeting of the National Association for supplying female medical aid to the women of India was held yesterday, at the Town Hill. Lord Elgin presided. Sir Antony MacDonnell presented the Report. He summed up the ten years' working thus:

"An invested capital of 20 lakhs, giving an assured income for the future; an expenditure by Central, Provincial and District Branches of about 10 lakhs of inpees; the construction, largely by private benevolence, of some 70 hospitals ejected at a cost of 17½ lakhs of rupees; the employment of qualified female medical practitioners, not to count nurses and minimizes working under the Fund, the number now reaching more than 100; the attendance of 241 students preparing in the various colleges and medical schools either for employment under the Association of independent positions; and finally, medical relief afforded to more than three millions of women and children."

The other speakers were Mr. Lal Mohun Ghose and Sir Charles Elliott. The President give a long address and concluded by saving

"This Association is—as I think one of the speakers just now said therefore its officers must follow the inle which obtains in most Indian organisation, and therefore its officers must follow the inle which obtains in most Indian organisations of the kind which extend over a considerable part of the country—indital is they go on four. Lady Eigin has been on tour, and there is this peculiority of the Lady President's tours, that they must not clash with the Vectory's tours, and therefore I know something about them. Well, Ludy Eigin has been on tour, and has seen a good many Hospitals, as His Ironour the Lieutenaut-Governor has stired. But in visiting them there is one question which she has seen a good many Hospitals, as His Ironour the Lieutenaut-Governor has stired. But in visiting them there is one question which she has visiting them there is one question which she has visit in the provision that was made for the purdar arshern women, and that is the provision that was made for the purdar arshern women, and that is the provision that was made for the purdar arshern women, and that is the provision of the Report and provision of that Committee on the metre. All that I desire to say now is that the Lady President's experience, so far as it has gone, is in the direction of that provision and that is the archive and hopeful symptoms to be found. No donor, costs occur in which provision has been made, but remains mooccupied. There may even be cases in which sufficient accommodation, or proper accommodation, has not been made; but in most cases the provision is there, and is ready to be occupied if the protein apply, and in some cases it is taken advantage of. Her Excellency was very much struck by the arrangements made at Addahab and the full extent to which the wards there were occupied and there was this rather striking circumstance with regard to the protein apply, and in some cases it is taken advantage of. Her Excellency was this rather striking circumstance with regard to the protein and of the country sho

Baboo Jugganath Khunnah, having filed his schedule, compounded with his creditors for one-fourth of their claims, payable within six mouths of the recision of the order of insolvency. This order was made on the 3rd June, 1893, the insolvency dating the 15tq F-bruary, 1891. No part of the composition being paid either within or bevond the period fixed, Ram Chand Khettry sued Khunnah for the entite sum of Rs. 25,000. The defendant opposed the suit saying that the plaintiff was bound by the composition deed which reduced his claim to Rs. 6,250 without providing for the entire debt becoming piyable on failure to pay the one-fourth within the stipulated time. Khunnah did not contend that the plaintiff had lost all hold on him on the expiration of the six months without payment. Mi. Justice Sale has, however, decided in favour of the plaintiff. His judgment runs as follows:

judgment runs as follows:—
"The sole question I have to determine is whether under the circumstances in plantiff is entitled to recover the full amount of his claim, or whether the defendant's contention is correct that there has been a discharge of the original debt, and that all that the plantiff is entitled to is the composition of 4 annas which the defendant agreed to pay his creditors. The general law, relative to arrangements between creditors and insolvent debtors, is clearly laid down in Winslow on Private Arrangements between Debtors and Creditors, p. 49. "A debtor who has entered into an arrangement with his creditors must, to entitle him to the benefit of the agreement, show that he has strictly compiled with its terms. If a time be fixed within which he is to perform certain acts, he must perform them within the appointed time. . . . but if he fail to perform his agreement within the appointed time. . . . the creditors, or those particular creditors towards whom he his made detailt will be remitted to their original rights." No doubt it is open to the pritties to make whatever arrangements they may please in tespect of debts due from one to the other; and there would be mothing to prevent a creditor one to the other; and there would be mothing to prevent a creditor. to pay a certain percentage of that claim, and to give time to the denor to pay that proportion of the original claim. The cas whether the parties intended the arrangements which the have inferred from deeds of arrangements of the nature to which I have already alluded, or whether, on the other hand, it was intended by the parties that there should be an absolute discharge of the original claim, and that the creditor (the plaintiff in this case) should be confinclaim, and that the creditor (the plaintiff in this case) should be confinied to the rights that he may have under the defendant's promise to pay a portion only of the original claim. In the first place it is to be observed from the deed of ariangement that the covenant on the part of the defendant is to pay a composition of 4 annas within six months from the date on which he should obtain the withdrawal of his petition; and there is another covenant that the creditors are not to sue the defendant, or take any proceedings against him for recovery of the composition until the expiration of the six months. The latter convent name (it is argued) taken in conjunction, with the covenant to pay the composition makes it clear that what was intended was that the plaintiff should accept the promise to pay the 4 annas as an absolute discharge of the original claim. I am not able to accede to the view that that is of the original claim. I am not able to accede to the view that that is the correct construction of the deed. It seems to me that it would render meaningless the covenant so for as it is a covenant to pay the composition within six months from the date of withdrawal of the insolvency. The only reasonable construction it seems to me that can be put upon it is that the promise is not a general promise merely to pay the comit is that the promise is not a gener of promise nevery to pay the composition, but a promise to pay it within a given period; and I must, therefore, take it that the discharge is intended to be a discharge constitutional on the full performance of that convenant. It would be laying fair too great stress on the covenant not to take proceedings within the period of six months against the insolvent, to say that the limit ition of period of six months against the insolvent, to say that the limitation of time within which no proceedings are to be taken, shows that the parties contemplated that after that period what was to be recoverable from the insolvent was to be only the composition. It appears to me that a covenant of that sort is not inconsistent with the construction which I am inclined to put upon this deed of arrangement, and I think it may reasonably be said that all the parties inrended by that covenant was to assure to the debtor a period of six months for the purpose of extricating limited from the difficulty funder which, no doubt he then may reasonably be said that all the parties intended by that covenant was to assure to the debtor a period of six months for the purpose of extricating himself from the difficulty (inder which, no doubt, he then was) of raising the needed proportion of his debts which his creditions were ready to accept in discharge of their claim. It appears to me that I am fully adopting the principle relating to deeds of arrangement of this character which has been set forth in the case In re Hatlon (L. R., 7 ch. 726). The result is, there must be a decree in favour of the planniff for the full amount claimed, with costs and interest, in the usual way."

Unless there was an attempt by the defendant to defiaud the creditor-plaintiff, the judgment seems harsh. The Judge meets the contention that the composition deed did not say in so many words that failure to pay within the period hinted would entitle the creditor the claim the full amount—saying that the deed did not distinctly extinguish the original right. Without pretending to speak authoritatively on the construction of the deed which is not before us, the common sense view seems to be, that the creditor had given up his claim to three-fourths and agreed to receive one-fourth in full satisfaction of the entire demand, and agreed not to enforce his compounded claim till after six months. There must therefore be special words to show that non-payment during the period would revive a claim given up. Suppose a part payment had been mide within the specified six months, and only a small fraction of the reduced claim remuned unpaid. What would have been the claim of the creditor plaintiff? Would it have been Rs. 25,000 minus the payment? Or, would the Judge have decreed the praportion of Rs. 25,000 on the unpaid balance? The Judge seems to have treated the deed as an ordinary contract, and there being failure of payment within time, the document is invalidated. He mikes a nice distinction—too nice, pethaps, for the workaday world.

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all kinds. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Street, Westminster, London, S. W.

WE had litely occasion to point out a gap in the law about the protection of estates attached under section 146 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. We showed how certain kinds of property, notably an Indigo factory and a coal mine, require to be managed during the period of attachment in order to protect their value from being deteriorated. The Criminal Courts issuing the order of attachment are powerless to make any provision for their ad interim management. It is the Executive Government that must step in and take upon itself the protection of the property. Of course, it would be absurd for the Collector of the district to take upon himself the management of a mine or of an Indigo concern, but unless provision be made for working the mine or the factory, serious loss is certain to occur. It is very unfortunate that the Civilian Secretarrats are not strong in the law. To make up the deficiency, there is the Legal Remembrances, but that official is very rarely a bartister. It is true that the Advocate-General and the Standing Counsel are capable of being consulted, but it happens very frequently that these officials are not referred to, the Secretariat contenting itself with the opinion of the Legal Remembrancer. In the case noticed by us in our issue of the 16th of February last, it was pointed out that the High Court having attached the Seebpore and Kanthee Colliery at Raniganj, the Government of Bengal had, under the existing law, to step in and take charge of the property. And how did it protect the Colliery? Operations were at once stopped. The very pumps were not permitted to work and water wis allowed to accumulate to the permanent injury of the mines. The parties interested applied to the Bengal Government for permission to at least work the pumps for drawing out the water and protect the mines from mevitable deterioration. The reply of the Secretariat has been characteristic. On the strength of very probably the Legar Remembrancer's opinion, the Chief Secretary said that the High Court, which had issued the order of attachment, should be moved "for an order authorising the appointment of a manager." This then is the knowledge of the law which the Secretariat has. It is provoking to find that they who have such large powers should be so ignorant of what the law is of the realm. Notwithstanding that opinion, we venture to state that the High Court, after issuing the order of attachment, has no power to provide for the ad interim management of the Collicity. The result of the Bengal Government's order has been mevitable damage to the property. One of the parties to the dispute had solicited permission to work the pumps for protecting it from damage till find adjudication by the Civil Court. The other side could possibly have no objection to this. Indeed, by objecting, it would only have acted like the filte mather of the child of disputed parentage. Whoever might be findly oljudged the proprietor, all parties would certainly like to see the mines duly cared for till the final adjudication. It was clearly the duty of the Bengal Government to see that the application for winking the pumps was granted. Instead, it refused the prayer, relying on an opinion that was strangely incorrect. Surely, it is time to see that the Civilian element in the Secretariats is strengthened by the admission of a few lawyers. We have a baker's dozen of Secretaires and Under-Secretaires. Three or four lawyers would certainly be desirable among the body. As long, however, as the Civilian interest is strong, this wholesome reform will not be introduced,

THE Bengal Government pays the following tribute to Mahamahopadhyaya M. C. Nayaratna, in the Calcutta Gazette:--

"The 19th February 1895 - The retirement of Mahamahopadhyaya Mithes Chancita Nyayaratha, C. I. E., from the Principalship of the Sanskrit College affords the Lieutenant-Governor a suitable opportunity for placing on record his appreciation of the services tendered by the Pandit, during his long career as a Government officer, alike to Stockitt learning and to the spread of education. While his general culture in the field of Sauskritt learning is exceptionally wide, his special reputation as a student of Nyaya stands high among the scholars of India and Europe. Since his first appointment as Officiating Principal of the Sauskrit College in 1877, he has steadily devoted himself to the encouragement of the study of Soiskrit in the indigenous Tols of the country. The institution of the Soiskrit in the indigenous Tols of the country as popular and successful i measure, and the substantial rewards more recently offered to tol-pandits and their pupils throughout the Province, for proficency in Suskrit as tested by extimination, owe their origin to his direct mitrative. Both these measures have appealed widely to popular sympathies, and have elected large contributions from private liberality in their support. When he has been consulted upon measures affecting the public weal, the influence of the Pandit has been steadily arranged on the side of order and good government, while his soin I and temperate judgment, his uprightness and low day, have lent weight to his counsels. The condial good wishes of the Government while his soin I and temperate judgment, his uprightness and low day, have lent weight to his counsels. The condial good wishes of the Government while his soin I and temperate judgment, his uprightness and low day, have lent weight to his counsels. The condial good wishes of the Government with his well-earned retirement."

Nayaratua belongs to an ancient family of Pandits famous for their learning. In his younger days he studied Smith with his father, and Naya with his eldest uncle. Coming to Calcutta he completed his study of Naya under Professor Joynarayan Tarkapanch mana, and Poetry and Ruetoric under the famous Professor Premchand Tarkavagist. He studied Veilanta and Sankhya first under Pandit Ivotish Swarup i at Calcutta and then under Visuddhán anda. Swámi at Benaies - In Rhetoric and Naya, Nayaratna enjoys a solid reputation. The distinction of Mahamahopadhyaya created on the occasion of the Jubilee was of his devising. The title-examinations and the scholarships instituted, are due to his suggestions, as also the system of grant-in-aid to the indigenous schools of Sanskiit learning. His services, therefore, to the cause of Sanskrit scholarship as represented in this country, are substantial and promise to be enduring. As trusted adviser of Government in various matters connected with Hindu society and religion, his rôle must yet continue. His loyalty to British rule, and the readiness with which he placed his time at the disposal of officials, have gained him an influence the like of which no other Pandit has been able to acquire. His strong common sense, however, could not prevent him from swelling the cry of religion in danger on the occasion of the Age of Consent Act. His action in the matter of the Durga Poop & holidays was condemned by all his countrymen, although it must be said that the Chamber of Commerce had spring a mine upon him by asking his opinion on a strictly religious point We suppose that if the matter had been furly put before him he could ever have declared himself against the long vacation. Another complaint against Naymatna has been that he has induced many of the Pandits of Bengal to accept gifts at houses where no gifts were accepted before. This charge is scarcely fur. If the Pindits themselves had been averse from such gifts, Nayaratna could never have succeeded in conquering their scriples. As an Adhrakshii or superintendent of doles to the learned on occasions of marriage and death in the houses of the well-to-do, Nayaratna, it is admitted,

NAYARATIA has been succeeded by Nyaliokai Nilmoney Mook eijee as Principal of the Sanskirt College. There were about a dozen applications when it was known that Pandit Albes Chandra would restrict. The choice has fifly fallen on the senior Sanskirt Professor of the Presidency College. We hope the new Principal will be able to fully attend to the requirements of the College itself, which the extra cells on his time did not permit Naymania to do as much as he wished Professor Nayalankai did not lose his head on the occasion of the Age of Colsent Bill aguation. He did real service to the course of retorm by offering a correct translation of the uninswer the argument in Harda delivered by Pandit Ramnath Tarkaratna, the author of Hardaca Upiyam

The position occupied by the Principal of the Calcutta Sanskrit College is a peculiar one. By virtue of his office, he comes to he regarded as the head of at least the Bengal Pandius. At any rate, he is looked upon by Government as the channel of communication between the Government and the Pindius. A genuine Pandiu, therefore,—one, that is, who in consequence of his surroundings from childhood is capable of sympathising with the Pandius as a class,—must always be preferable to a mere scholar possessed of Scinskitt lore. As long as Professor Mithes Chandra is alive, (and we wish him a long life), nobody else can aspute to the headship of the Bengal Pandius. He may be inferior in learning to the grants of Naya and Smirit who lecture in the colleges of Nayadwip and Viktampore, but in tag and discretion, and suavity of manners, and sympathy with the representatives of Sonskiti culture, he is above them all.

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, March 9, 1895

THE AMENDMENT OF THE POLICE ACT:

OR

A GLIMPSE INTO DISTRICT ADMINISTRATION.

In our last article we have said that the game played at Nuddea has been how to practically nullify the orders of the highest Court in the land. That Court, seeing that both the proprietors had admitted the possession of the rayyets, directed that they should be maintained in possession till duly ousted by the law. The case is one of details. But unless those details be mastered, the real bearings of the Police Act empowering the establishment of an additional constability over what is called a disturbed area will not be readily understood.

area will not be readily understood.

The Magistracy of Nudder have shown an incapacity the like of which can hardly be seen even in this country. The order of the High Court affirming Nuffer Chandra Pal Chowdhury's possession as against the Chetlangis and directing the maintenance of the 77 rayyets in possession, was dated the 12th of May, 1891. The Chetlangis refrained from taking any further measures for obtaining possession by force or fraud. They have recently instituted a civil suit for partition and khas possession. rayyets, after the disposal of the motion, confident that no further obstruction would be offered, endeavoured to have what the High Court had decided to be theirs. Their endeavours were successfully opposed by Nuffer Chandra Pal Chowdhury. In every step they took, they encountered the opposition of the executive. How they have, to this day, been kept out of their fields, will appear below.

It will be remembered that proceedings under section 145 had commenced in October 1893. The Deputy Magistrate's order confirming the possession of the Pal Chowdhuries and ignoring that of the rayyets, was made on the 30th January 1894. During the pendency of the case, the Kalai crop had upened. The rayyets applied that if they could not be permitted, even after giving proper security, to reap the crop, an officer might be appointed to reap it and, after sale, hold the proceeds in deposit, in view of such distribution as the Court might direct upon the termination of the proceedings. The Pal Chowdhuries opposed this application. There were 700 biggals of land which had been sown. The application of the rayyets, so far as the appointment of an officer was concerned, was granted. After the Kills had been thus reaped, there remained on the tients wheat, barley, linseed, rye, &c. These were then not tipe. By the time, however, the proceedings were concluded by the Deputy Magistrate confirming the Pal Chowdhuries in possession, these crops had become fit for gathering. Dissatisfied with the Deputy's order, the rayyets, as already said, moved the High Court, but the Pal Chowdhuries, availing themselves of the order of the Deputy in their favour, removed those crops, so that by the time, 272., 12th May, 1894, the High Court set aside the order of the lower Court and directed the rayyets to be maintained in possession, there was nothing on the fields which they could gather. The rayvets had done their best, by applying to the lower Court, for preventing the Pal Chowdhuries The second property and a second property of the second property of from reaping the crops without offering adequate security. No action, however, was taken on their petition. The Pal Chowdhuries, having removed the crops, sowed Indigo on some of the lands, although the season was rather late. After the disposal of the motion by the High Court, the rayyets applied to the Magistrate for the value of the Kalai that was held in deposit as also for protection in their efforts to cultivate the Bhadui crop. The Pal Chowdhuries opposed both the prayers, especially the last, as some of the lands had been sown by them with Indigo. The Magistrate refused to dispose of the petition in the only way in which it could be disposed of. On the other hand, he made a reference to the High Court as if any portion of the order made by it was really unintelligible, having previously passed an order under section 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, prohibiting both parties from approaching the fields. The Pal Chowdhuries had sown Indigo, which continued to grow. The order of attachment, therefore, operated to protect their crop, while it excluded the rayyets from the land. Soon after the High Court disposed of the reference in chambers. The Judges said that their orders were very clear and that there was no necessity of saying anything more to elucidate them. It is no exaggeration to say that the reference was perfectly frivolous. The greenest Deputy Magistrate appointed in the worst days of nepotism could understand the orders of the Superior Court. Clouded as the brains were of the Magistrate, he took those orders as unintelligible. There were, as stated by him in the letter of reference, altogether 77 rayyets. They were all, as he chose to take them, what is called in Nuddea utbandi tenants; that is, the maurasidar had the right to shift them from field to field. In their applications to the Deputy Magistrate, they had described themselves as cultivating specific lands for a long course of years. Under the circumstance, the Magistrate had no right to assume that they were all utbandi tenants. They were presumably in possession of certain fields which they had cultivated and in which stood their crops at the time the pro-ceedings under section 145 were commenced. The Deputy Magistrate, in his ignorance of the law, had ousted them from their fields. The High Court set aside that order, saying that "admittedly they were in possession of certain lands; they were, therefore, entitled to remain in possession till ousted by the due course of law." Where was the difficulty in finding which piece of land was held by what rayyet? The Magistrate feared that there would be 77 heavy cases to dispose of before he could find the plots which each of them held. He had not a staff under him which he could tell off for the purpose. We do not know how old Mr. Garret is and what is the measure of his experience of the country. We do not know whether he has passed that stage of an Indian Civilian's incubation in which, fired and a laudable zeal to do justice to litigants refusing to listen to his ministerial officers whom he threatens to fine if they interrupt the proceedings with their suggestions, he insists upon the presence in his court of chandimandaps as the most material witnesses of particular transactions, and of boyels accused of having devastated the complainants' fields. We will do him the justice to suppose that the difficulty he started was really experienced by him. May we, however, enquire what orders were passed by him on the petitions of the rayyets? After the not remain in force for more than two months.

order of attachment under section 144 preventing both parties from approaching the lands, and after the disposal of the reference by the High Court, did he take any step towards the enquiry that would have enabled him to obey the order of the superior Court? Could not the enquiry be completed in 77 days, giving each day to each rayyet's petition? Could not even a single rayyet be restored to possession? Have not nine months passed away without Mr. Garret's having done anything to put the rayyets in possession? What explanation can be give of his strange indifference to the interests of the poor cultivators? Did he not finally dispose of the petitions by ordering them to be simply filed? As a matter of fact, however, the difficulty started, or actually experienced, was perfectly childish. A Deputy Magistrate of even ordinary intellectual calibre, would have been able to settle the question within at best a week's or even less time. In the petitions the rayyets presented after the disposal of their cases by the High Court, they gave the boundaries of their fields. Their rent-receipts also, granted by the Pal Chowdhuries, had been filed in the proceedings before the Deputy Magistrate Many of them had filed the papers of the rent suits that had been brought against them by the Pal Chowdhuries All these documents could have enabled the Magistrate to settle without much difficulty the question that was pending before him. Apart from all these papers there was the list which a special officer had prepared of the names of the rayyets and particulars of the fields when the Kalai crops had been reaped during the proceedings under section 145 in the Deputy Magistrate's Court. That list would have furnished a safe guide for the determination Another fact which was repeatedly pressed on the Magistrate's attention was totally ignored by him-When the Kalai crop was removed, there stood on some of the fields wheat, barley, linseed, rye, &c., which had been, as appears from the proceedings in the High Court, admittedly sown by the rayyets. These were removed by the Pal Chowdhuries after the confirmation of their possession by the Deputy Magistrate and during the pendency of the motion before the High Court. The Indigo sown by the Pal Chowdhuries, after removal of those crops, was sown late in the season. By the time, therefore, the High Court directed the rayyets to be maintained in possession, the Indigo seeds sown a little while ago had just sprouted forth. A mere sight of the fields would have enabled any man to find out the lands that had been in the occupation of the rayvets. It required very little knowledge of botany to distinguish between plants sown in spring and those sown in the previous winter. The evidence, besides, of the stumps of wheat and barley and rye and Imseed, would have been conclusive, and as there were no disputes between the rayyets themselves, the identification of their lands could have been completed within a very brief space of time Unfortunately for the rayyets, the Magistrate chose to show an imbecility that was startling. The principle upon which he admittedly acted was that because it was difficult to ascertain what lands had been in the occupation of the rayyets, therefore no attempt should be made in that direction. We have The inno mind to dwell on this point further, capacity is sickening to contemplate when displayed by the very head of the district executive.

Orders of attachment issued under section 14. 40

Magistrate, having passed the order on the 21st May 1894, made the reference on the 2nd of June following. The High Court disposed of the reference on the 18th of June. The Magistrate, without having made any effort to ascertain the fields from which the rayyets had been ousted, addressed the Government for extending the order of attachment indefinitely. The Divisional Commissioner refused to support the suggestion. There was method in the proceedings, for the order of attachment could not have any injurious effect on the Pal Cnowdhuries. Their Indigo continued to grow safely, and when the season came for reaping, they were allowed, by an order made on the 7th of July 1894, to reap their crop by depositing such security as the Magistrate demanded. It is true that the order directed that no fresh crops should be sown by either party, but so far as the Pal Chowdhuries were concerned, even this prohibition was perfectly harmless to them as will appear from the sequel. The Magistrate, seeing that the Commissioner disallowed the indefinite extension of the order of attachment, moved the Government to pass an order on the 21st of November 1894, under section 15 of the Police Act (V of 1861) for quartering an additional Police force on the disturbed area. cost of such force, it was directed, should be paid by the Pal Chowdhuries, the Chetlangis, and the rayyets, in proportion to their respective means. In levying the costs, however, the Magistrate exempted the Pal Chowdhuries, so that the Chetlangis and the rayyets are the parties who have been called upon to contribute the costs. Equitable as this order has been, a telling commentary on it is furnished by the fact of there being still an Indigo crop on the land. On the 7th of July the Magistrate had directed that neither party should be allowed to sow any fresh crops. Whence then is this crop that is now standing on the fields? The additional Police force quartered on the disturbed area and paid for by the Chetlangis and the rayyets, must have watched the fields with great vigilance. The presence of the Indigo must, therefore, be due to the singular kindness of these fertile churs for the Pal Chowdhuries. The old Hindu proverb which says that the favoured of the King is the favoured of inanimate Nature itself, may thus be seen to have found a very good practical illustration in Nuddea. Strange as it may seem, the Divisional Commissioner has rejected the appeal preferred to him by the rayyets. They had hoped to be heard by a pleader, but it seems that no intimation had reached them of the day that had been fixed for the hearing of their appeal. The price of the Kalai crops deposited with the Magistrate has not been paid to them. They lost their wheat and barley and linseed and rye. They failed to get possession of their lands even after the High Court had directed their restoration. They were unable to sow the Bhadui and the winter crops in succession. They have been called upon to pay for the additional Police Force. Meanwhile, through the excellent arrangements made by the District Magistracy for preserving the peace of the disturbed area, the Indigo cultivation of the Pal Chowdhuries is going on without let or hindrance and without their being called upon to pay as pice for the maintenance of the additional Police Force. The star of the Pal Chowdhuries has, since some time, been on the ascendant. The princely offer of the house of 3 lacs of rupees, rejected by an inconsiderof the addititional Police deserve a separate record. We commend the narrative to Sir James Westland and Sir A. P. MacDonnell in especial. The sense of justice displayed by the District Magistracy is almost perfect. When the power already vested by the Police Act is capable of being thus exercised, the Legislature should certainly have paused before enhancing it by the amending Act that has been passed in spite of the emphatic opposition of the whole country. For years the people had been accustomed to a rule of law. An infallible Executive now steps in and in the name of prevention usurps judicial functions without those safeguards, which, in every civilised country, constitute the invariable concomitants of the exercise of those functions. The clock of administration has certainly been put back by half a century.

Letter to the Editor.

DR. SAMBHU CHUNDER MOOKERJEE.

SIR,....The admirable article of Mr. F. H. Skrine on the character of this distinguished journalist is, indeed, a master-piece of word-painting. I endorse every word Mr. Skrine has used in praise of my departed friend.

I hope you will kindly allow me a little space in your journal to add my feeble testimony to the truth of what Mr. Skrine has written as to the moral character of this great man. Dr. Sambhu Chunder Mookerjee's "goodness of heart" was unquestionable. I was first attracted to him by this quality. Having been sent by the late lamented Mr. Robert Knight, in 1880, to have a talk with Dr. Mookerjee about helping Mr. Knight in his famous trial, I was so much struck by his suavity and geneality that, from that time, I sought his company almost every day. I never found him to talk flippantly even for a moment. In the wildest abandon of mirth he would never utter anything unfitted for the ears of even a delicate lady. At nightfall, he used to read to me and other close friends who used to come to his literary Mujlis, the choicest of his writings in Reis and Rayyet, and explain to me, at my request, difficult passages and allusions to the past history of this country. His conversation was so charming and teemed with such information, that I oftentimes felt as if I was in the company of the best of English literary men. He was uniformly kind and courteous to gentlemen who came to him for literary assistance or advice. It was he who, at my urgent and respectful request, spent several nights in correcting and improving the first chapter of my biography of K. D. Pal. He used to read from Richardson's Selections enoicest pieces from Byron; and sometimes he would read to us pieces from l'ennyson also. On one occasion he read, with tears in his eyes and great emotion, a piece from the latter. His kindness towards his servants was unexampled. He would disturb them on no account after they had retired for rest. His liberality towards those in distress was, indeed, very great. I frequently saw a Mahomedan woman, who was, I believe, a beauty in her day. come to him, and I doubt not that she received pecuniary help from him. One day, he gave a valuable shawl to a Dacca Pundit who resides now at Calcutta. Mookerjee loved to respect men of learning. He always sought to assist them to the best of his power. He never paraded his gifts to distressed acquaintances and friends.

of the disturbed area, the Indigo cultivation of the Pal Chowdhuries is going on without let or hindrance and without their being called upon to pay a pice for the maintenance of the additional Police Force. The star of the Pal Chowdhuries has, since some time, been on the ascendant. The princely offer of the house of 3 lacs of rupees, rejected by an inconsider the Commissioner, may now be renewed. The doings

His hospitality was of a unique character. You read frequently, in inspired paragraphs, that such and such a Maharaja or Zemindar gave an Evening Party in honour of a European lady, or a retiring Viceroy or Licutenant-Governor, or an eminent official. Mookerjee's hospitality was not of that ostentatious character. One day I was thunderstruck when I saw in the summer month of 1893, a pilgrim Brahman student of Pudocetah, by name Krishta Swami Iyer, partaking of a most sumptuous feast at Mookerjee's place. The feast was such as is generally given to only friends of influence and wealth. As soon as I went, Dr. Mookerjee asked me to join the pilgrim Brahman. I felt it an honour in doing so.

I have many things more to say about Dr. Mookerjee's unexampled moral character, but, I fear, I am running too much beyond my prescribed limit and, therefore, cut short here.

RAM GOPAL SANYAL.

Taltollah, 4th March, 1895.

MR. FOWLER ON INDIAN FINANCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

SIR,---Will you give me space in your columns for a few words on Mr. Fowler's speech at the Northbrook Society, as reported in your issue of Feb. 1?

Mr. Fowler deprecates what he terms pessimistic views on Indian finance, on the grounds, first, that the assets of India are only 35,750,000 less than its liabilities; secondly, that in the last fourteen ars there have been eleven years of surplus, and only three of deficit, the surplus having amounted to 24,000,000, the deficit to 3,000,000; thirdly, that the credit of India has enabled it recently to convert 95,000,000 of debt from a Four per Cent. to a Three-and-a-Half per Cent. Stock. To speak, therefore, of bankruptcy in connection with India is "absurd" and "untrue." "I understand," says Mr. Fowler, "a bankrupt to be a man who cannot pay his debts, whose liabilities exceed his assets, or he is living beyond his income, and that in a very short time the end will come.'

As to the assets of India, it may be noted that, though their rupee value is rising, the gold value of her liabilities is also increasing rapidly. But stock-taking is not the only or the best means of testing financial stability. The problem is not now how to face liquidation, but how to avoid it. If India can balance revenue and expenditure; if the burden of taxation is not progressive; if taxation is not in danger of becoming excessive; if there is a further safe margin of taxation to meet unavoidable claims, India is amply Otherwise, while the balance of her liabilities is progressing, her means of meeting them are approaching exhaustion. How does such a situation usually end in the long run?

At the risk of being written down a pessimist, let me review

At the risk of being written down a pessimist, let me review briefly each of the above postulates.

"There has been a surplus in eleven of the fourteen years from Is this so? Do the accounts show this? But we have to deal with the present and the future, not with the distant past. It may be contended that past experience throws light on future prospects. Very good; but, in that case, if we are to compare like with like (and any other mode of comparison is misleading), comparison must be limited to the last decade. The present dual policy---the policy, that is to say, of a vigorous development of internal resources simultaneously with an energetic military administration --- dates from 1885. That is the only possible starting-point of comparison. What does it show? Unless I am mistaken, we find that since 1885 there have been four years of deficit; that, in the current year, de ficit is again apprehended; that in one year there has been bare equilibrium; surplus in four years only. This, again, was mainly equilibrium: surpris in tour years onty. Turk, agent, was manny due to a momentary rise in exchange and to temporary causes.

Note, too, that the last surplus dates four years back, in 1891-92

Note, further, that surplus, such as it was, during the list decade, was not due to normal growth of revenues. In the hope of regaining equilibrium more than 4,000,000 of fresh taxat on hive been impos equilibrium more than 4,000,000 of fresh taxat on nive been imposed since 1885. Another million has been diverted from the Famine Insurance grant to current needs. Nearly half a million habeen taken from the balances at the credit of provincial administrations, which find themsives now without funds for any further material improvement.

As to the remaining postulates, it is not necessary to remind you who are acquainted with Indian finance know the thinden of taxation is in danger of becoming excessive, as from mentioned margin of resource to which taxation can be right to in relible small, both in itself and from pressure of policial configurations.

To return to Mr. Fowler's three tests. If Indian assus at present do not fell greatly short of Indian liabilities, it is certain that s'ie is living beyond her income. But does she pay her debts?

of her gold habilities? Has the Secretary of Scate not What of her gold manneds: this the objectivity of State nor borrowed largely in 1893 and 1894 in England to meet his gold engagements? Does any one suppose that these loans will prove temporary only---mere accommodation loans? Can the gold liabilities temporary only the met by the Secretary of Satz's drawings, or will further loans or kindred expedients be needed? As to the credit of India, it is high for borrowing purposes, because the ultimate responsibility for the administration of India rosts on Great Britain. It may be that the investing public attach undue i upor and long as their estimate of the value of such connection continues, whatever may be the state of its finances. "Pessimists" hold that in the crisis through which India is passing it is necessary that in the crisis through which india is passing it is necessary to reduce expenditure to a minimum and to nurse every possible nem of receipt. Rullways, if not, as Sir Juland Danvers puts it is his letter published in your issue of February 2, the sheet anchor of I idim finitive, furnish, next to land revenue, the most elastic item im 212 Indian receipts. At a time when taxation is being constantly added to, the tailway account in the Budget, in consequence of construction of new lines, some of which are unproductive, alls nearly, 2,000,000 to the deficit. No one doubts the stimular given to trade and industry by railway construc-tion. Noor, or the other hand, can fail to see that when such construction is ac suprimed by recurring taxation (by import duties, for example), and when current revenue is diverted from administrative needs to meer or to lessen defi it, trade and industry are liable to be hamoered. The same financial difficulties which have unhappily compelled the India i Government to place an import duty on English piece goods seem to disqualify it at present from continuing to be England's customer for large consignments of railway plant. Not only is capital annually borrowed for extension of railway construction works, but (deficit recurring annually) interest on such capital must be also borrowed. All this time expenditure exceeds income. There is no visible chance of any relief from the pressure of exchange; and the fiscal reserves of the Government are approaching a point when they will no longer be able to furnish much increased supply .--- I am, Sir, yours faithfully, Feb. 4.

A. Colvin

THE INDIAN MEDICAL CONGRESS.

(From the Calcutta Journal of Medicine.)

The close of the past year was signalized by an event which, had better counsels prevailed, might have been made the most important event for the medical profession not only in India but throughout the world.

In our number for February, 1894, we gave the news on the authorny of the Pioneer that at a meeting of the Council of the Calcutta Medical Society held on the 24th January it was decided to hold an Indian Medical Congress in Cilcutta at the beginning of January 1895. It was also decided to widely advertise the Congress, and to invite all practising medical men of the world, but especially of India and the East, to take part in it.

The Congress was widely advertized in India, but whether the more ambitious part of the programme, of issuing invitations to medical men of the whole world, was carried out or not, we cannot tell. In point of fact, but few medical man outside of India attended the Congress, of whom the most noteworthy was the world renowned editor of the British M dieal Journal, Mr. Ernest Hart, a gentleman, of whom we of the new school have to be particularly proud for his untiring crusade against our doctrines, our principles, and our pra-

The Congress was held at the end of December of the past year, instead of, as originally contemplated, at the beginning of the present.

As the first Congress of In him medical men of the oil school, it was a great success. With the Vicerov as Patron and the Lieuten ant-Governor of Bengal as Vice Patron, it could not be otherwise With Dr. Robert Harvey as its chief of anizer and justly elected President, it was bound to be a success. The ability, energy, and enthusiasm, courtesy and tact born of genuine and wide sympathy, and broad catholic views, rare in members of the school to which he belongs, are the qualities which characterize Dr Harvey; and it is to these qualities that the great success of the Congress was largely due. We are certain that if he had his own way in every matter, the success would have been greater.

The conception of holding a Madical Congress in India was an excellent one, and if the grand idea of inviting medical men of all schools from all parts of the world had been carried out, we have no doubt the invitation would have met with a ready response

In India, as no where else, we have representatives of all schools of medicine, ancient and modern.

We have practitioners of the Hinlu system, perhaps the oldest in the world. These go by the name of Kivirajs or Vaidvas, some of whom are men deeply read not only in ancient. Hindu modical writings, but in general Sinskrit literature. They are much in tivour, chiefly with orthodox. Hindus, and not unoften minutain their ; oun l, with their dieterie regimen, and, norwithstanding their we have practitioners of the Atabian system, lineally descended from the Greek as left by Gilan. These go by the name of Hakins, some of whom, like their briefinen of the Hindu system, enjoy very great reputation for learning and success. These men are much in favour with the Mahomedan community.

We have practitioners of the European allopathic system, who, having the monopoly of all official posts, constitute here, as throughout the rest of the civilizal world, the dominant school, which we from our point of view look upon as the old school.

We have last of all practitioners who have received the same regular professional education as their brethren on the old school, who, therefore, are in perfect accord with them in every thing that relates to the healing art, except in believing and acting upon that belief that there is a definite law of drug-cure which been formulated by Hahnemann in the expression similia similibus curanius, and that drugs, in order to act remedially when administered in accordance with this law, should be administered in doses less than those which produce physiological or pathogenetic action. It must be admitted that, as regards therapeutics, the primary branch of Medicine, and the verv rana d'être of the profession, the difference between the two schools is fundamental. But this is no reason why there should be an absoulte separation of the two classes of professional men so as to exclude all fellowship and communion, especially as there is no difference between them as regards the very foundation of all therapeutics, anatomy, phystology and pathology. It was to have been expected that the difference which has led to such divergence of practice in dealing with diseases, should have led to closer fellowship and communion between men who have a common object in view, commonion between men who have a common object in view, the relief of suffering and the prolongation of life. But events have taken a different turn, and the two schools are now in a state of chronic and bitter opposition to each other. The result has been that the new school, from the fact of the old school being in possession of all official positions, is still under a sort of ban, and effectually prevented from making that progress which otherwise it could have made. Hence the number of its adherents is necessarily much smaller than those of the old. Notwithstanding this, the progress it has already made under such adverse circumstances is astonishing, and in countries, as in the United States of America, where the people have a freer hand in their own government, that progress is proceeding at a rate so as to threaten the extinction of the old school with its present bigotry and intolerance at no distant future.

THE R. P. LEWIS CO., LANSING MICH. SHOWS NOT THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF

Such is the position of India with respect to the medical profession. She offers, as no other country can, the singular opportunistudying the comparative merits of the various systems of medicine that are now in vogue. The projectors of the medical Congress in India might have remembered this fact, and made the Congress a really representative one.

All classes of the Indian community would have lent their hearty support to such a project, if it had been properly laid before the public; there would have been no lack of money to accord suitable welcome to guests from foreign lands, and India would then have prevented a spectacle unique in the history of the medical profession.

But it might be supposed that nothing useful could have come out of an assembly of such heterogeneous elements, as Kavirajs and Hakims, allopaths and homospaths; of men who know nothing of the structure and functions of the human body, and of men who differ so fundamentally in their methods of dealing with disease.

It is true that if the Kavirajs and Hakims have any knowledge of the organism whose disorders they treat, it is a most erroneous and fancifal one, and therefore any contribution from them, or any discussion with them, on the pathology of any disease would be worthless and unprofitable. Nevertheless if we bear in mind that they are sometimes very successful practitioners, combating quite heroically with some of the most formidable diseases, such as dysentery, fevers, dropsies, rhomatism, paralyses, &c., which do not require much accurate pathology for their rough diagnoses, which is all that people care for, and of which the most accurate diagnoses do not often lead to their successful treatment, --if all this is borne to mind, it would be arrogating too much to assume that we can I am nothing from these practitioners. These men, therefore, could not have been altogether without use in the medical congress. It is our belief that if we could exercise tact and charity, and if we had sufficient knowledge of the languages of their authorities, we could have gathered much from their ex perience which would not have failed to be of substantial utility to Medicine.

Whatver objection might be urged assinst association with Kavirajs and Ilakims, the same cannot with invisions of reason be urged against the friendly intercourse of in a of the schools into which the scientific branch of the processor is divided. They have, as we have said, every thing in common ecorpy therapeutics so far as to atment by drugs is concerned. The expise for dissociation and disamion is the less when the new school appeals to observation and experiment for the verification of their doctrines,--observation and experiment which it is not only in the competency, but which it is the duty of every regularly trained practitioner, to make to usuary his calling. What a splended opportunity the congress would have adorded for obtaining from some of the veterans of the new school their experience with the new law of diagcure discovered by a man who, till the time of this discovery, was looked upon as one of the greatest men in the profession of his time. What a splendid opportunity has been lost for the reconciliation and tennion on Indian soil of the two schools of medicine so long and yet so widely separated, which would have tended to the advantage of both, and to the incalculable benefit of suffering humanuv.

But it is useless to express regret for the non-occurrence of what might have happened. What has happened has gone to the irrevocable at now can be done is to take a critical review of it in past, and all th order to draw from it all the lessons it is capable of yielding. For it cannot be that a Congress, which was planned and organized for nearly a year, which had the support of the Government of India and of the local Governments, and in which over seven hundred medical men took part, some of whom are distinguished by varied attainments if not by much original research, -it cannot be that such a Congress should have terminated its sittings with no substantial result, or with a result which was hardly worth the time and the energy and the money spent upon it.

We learn from a contemporary that over 200 papers were submitted to the Congress, of which 98 were actually read ;--39 in the section on Medicine, 19 in that on Surgery, 14 in that on Obstetries, 16 in that on Pharmacology and Indian Drugs, 10 in that on Legal Medicine and public Health.

The opening ceremony was a grand and imposing one. It was presided over by His Excellency the Viceroy, Lord Elgin, who delivered a short but a very significant speech. This was followed by a long address from the President. Then followed speeches from His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and Dr. Gallay, Delegate of the French Government from Pondichery, in proposing and seconding a vote of thanks to Dr. Harvey; and speeches from Surgeon-Major-General Bradshaw and Mr. Ernest Hart in proposing and seconding a vote of thanks to His Excellency the Viceroy. All these speeches were good and important, and we intend to notice them in our next. We cannot forbear expressing here the pleasure we felt in listening to Mr. Ernest Hart's eloquent speech. It was such a treat that we forgot for the time being his persistent and almost insane antipathy to Homesopathy.

THE GOOD SLEEP OF A BAD MAN-

In a certain prison that we all have heard of, lay a convict upon his nar-In a certain prison that we all have heard of, lay a consist upon his narrow iron cot. He was to be hanged the next morning. Yet he lay there covered by a rough blanket, sleeping as quieth and soundly as a tired schoolboy. Occasionally the guard in the passage outside peered be tween the bars of the cell, only to find his charge breathing deeply and regularly. This man had violated the law prohibiting nurder; yet he had not violated the physical laws governing his own body, and Nature rewarded him as if he had been the noblest of his race.

had not violated the physical laws governing his own body, and Nature rewarded him as if he had been the noblest of his race.

That same night, less than a mile away, a rich man tossed and tumbled upon his luxurious bed. He was a good and useful member of society, yet he could not sieep. And, woise still, this happened to him every night. Steep—that blessing which the Psidmist says, "God giveth his believed," was practically a stranger to his man. What ailed him? The tortures of conscience? Want of money? The fear of enemies? Nothing of the soit. Then why didn't he sleep as well as the murden? You would like to know? Right, let us look into the matter. "I got no sleep at night; I would be for hours tossing about. In the morning I was worse tred than when I went to bed."

Thus writes Mrs. Enza Mathews, of I, North Road, Bornt Oik, Edgware, near London, mater date of S-ptember 220d, 1892. Just two years before this time she lost her health. A foul taste in the mouth, loss of appetite, and gie it disters after eating were among the first thougs she complained of. She traved food at times, and fancied she could eat heatily, yet when the very dishes she had asked for were set before her she turned from them as though they were fifth from the gutter. Her skin grew saflow, hereeves yellow, and she had a constant pain at her chest, sides, and octween her shoulders. Her bowels were constipated and the least exertion set her heart thumping as if it must jump up into her mouth. At such times it was as much as ever that she could get her breath. She got so thin and weak she was no good for work. She confidn't will out doors without stopping to restevery few rods almost.

her mouth. She got so thin and weak she was no good for work. She couldn't wilk out doors without stopping to rest every few rods admost The doctor did what he could for her, all any doctor could do. At first he said he thought her illness was owing to the smell of the rarmy rid. This booked possible. Even the smell of violets has made strong men timp pale and fund dead awy. Yet the doctor was wrong. If he had been right, she would have got betten when the family left the farm it Bentley Priory and went to live at Burnt Oak. But she was not migrored by the change of air; she giew worse and worse.

"In May, 1887" says Mrs. Mathews "I went over to Chelmsford ovisit my aunt, Mrs. Froughton. She told me of the good Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup had done her when she had indirection and dyspepsia. She bought me a bottle, and I began taking it. After a few doses I felt relief. I kept on taking it, and in two months I was strong and well as ever. My husband and fitted sweet estimished, yet I issured them that Seigel's Syrup had done it. Yours truly, (Signeo) ELIAA MATHEWS." ELIZA MATHEWS'

The point is plain enough. The convict scent soundly because he was a healthy man, although he was a wisked one. Our rich friend rolled about all night because his nerves wire instruing by the state of rolled about all might because his nerves were instrume by the state of his stomach. Our correspondent was prosts seel by the same thing—indigestion and dyspepsia. The remedy nation of each her because it has that power. The reason remains a secret with the roots and herbs from which it is made. Yet so long as it drives away disease and gives us back our health and strength, who care for its mystery? Results, not arguments, are what we all want. "Burnt Oak House, Edgware, September, 22nd, 1892. I have known Mrs. Mathews for some seven years, and remember her long and

"Burnt Oik House, Edgware, September, 22nd, 1892. I have known Mrs. Mathews for some seven years, and remember her long and longering illness. She informs me that Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup cured her, after medical and other means fuled. Mrs. Mathews is a lady of respectability, and her word can be implicitly relied upon. You can use this statement in any way you me we think proper. Yours truly, (Signed) T. H. HOUSE, Grocer and General Provision Deales Burnt Oak Stores, Edgware."

Lady Elliott Portrait Memorial Committee.

Allan Arthur Hon, Justice Beverley Hon C. E. Buckland Hon C. E. Buckland W. D. Cruicksnank Baron Gaerter Col. Harles, 6th B. I. A Macdonald David McLaren Morris Hon P. Playfur.

son
A.F.M. Abdur Rahman | A. Sunson
J. O'B Saunders | A. H. Wailis

Maharaji Su J M Tagore, K C S I.

PRESIDENT—Allan Arthui.

HON. TREASURER—J. O'B. Sunders.

HON. SECRETARY—David McLaten Morrison,

At the meeting of Committee held at the Chamber of Commerce on the 19th Junuary,
it was decided to have a picture of Lady
Elliott painted, any surplus to go towards a person il present.

All subscriptions to be sent to the HON. TREASURER.

9, Hare Street,

W. O. Bell-Irving S. E. J. Clarke H. H. The Maharaja

J. Joustain, E. F. Longley, C. Moore

Dubhanga, K.CIE

Calcutta.

CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA.

WATER SUPPLY.

Owing to the installation of new Pumping Machinery at Tallah Pumping Station, certain luge alterations to the mains have become necessary.

These will be taken in hand from Tuesday next, the 12th instant, and it is hoped, will be completed by Thursday, the 14th. Between these dates, the supply to the Town will be kept up as fir as possible, but the pressure will be greatly reduced.

W. R. MACDONALD. Secretary to the Corporation

WANTED.

A Sanskiit Pandit for the Hutwah, Sanskiit School who must be a passed Acharya in Bya-karan Sahitya and Dhamir Shasita Preference will be given to a Supoquit Brahmao.

Apply with copies of testimonials to -

BABU DEVENDRA NATH DULL,

Dewan, Raj Hutwa, Shinker Bhawan,

Pis who whan, Renates

Congress Sketches: A Review

OF THE SPEECHES AND THE SPEAKERS

VI THI

Fourth Indian National Congress Held at Allahabad

Reprinted with additions and alterations from Reis & Kayyet

With a portrait of Mr. George Yule, President Sold by the publisher G. P. Varma, and at the office of the Advocate, at Lucknow tor 8 Annas a copy, besides page

> In Pamphlet, Price 4 annas or o copies for a Rupee

A Cheap Reserve for the Army.

By Capt ANDREW HEARSEY.

Late Her Majesty's Service. Apply to Reis & Rayyet Office, Calcutta.

TEXT BOOKS IN ENGLISH.

By SARADA PRASAD BANERJEE

SPECIMEN PAPERS AND ANSWERS

on

THE ENGLISH ENTRANCE COURSE

HIVING the LINES SHOW AND LINES SHOW

FOR 2nd & 3rd C1 (8818)
This book his been approved by the Central Text Book Committee.

INDIA READERS NO. 2

FOR 4th & 5th CLASSIS.

INDIA READERS NO. 1

FOR 6th & 7th CLASSIS These books are of termark row simple style and quite suited to Indian students

The attention of School contourings in the N-W P and Oudly, the Porty to M dr is, B on by, the Central Proximes, A son, and Burner matted to the above publications of imagin

To be had of

S. K. LAHIRI & Co.,

College Squar, Calcuta.

THE WORKS OF DR JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE

Commentaries on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, Marriage, Adoption, Wills &c.* Price No student or practitioner should be without a copy of this GREAT Work.

(Sd.) Nana Bhai Hairdas."

Bengali translation of the Dyabhaga and the Mircksharet Price . . . Bengali Translation of the Dattaka-

The Philosophy of Religion from the point of view of Common Sense. Pice Rs 5 CONTENT

Historical Analysis of the evolution of teligious systems.

Definition of the term "religion"

The problems of the padosophy of re-ligion and their solutions, old and new. (a) Why do Hindus believe in ten Ava-(a) Why do Hindus believe in 1en Avatus of incarnations including in the series three that are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a fortone, and a boa.

(b) Why is it that all autient systems recommend the sortice of animals, and the burning of give or incense &c. — &c. — &c. — &c. — &c. — &c. — The weapons offensive and defensive of religious terrori. The power of the words. The art of becoming a prophet.

The cumulative effect of hardswearing for ages.

Specimens of Paranised history

Bi-diminical and Christian priestcraft compared The artificial miseries of men caused by ю teligion.

Tyranny and tixiti in of religion

The good man's adversity is the sharp man's opportunity. Swindling as a fine art.

New Superstitions that may be suggested for the ben fit of the posses. The great prophets of the world and then design.

Probable origin of the Sava relicion, Tantic mysticism and aboundations.

* Fo be nad of Messis Thacker Spink & t fo be had of Messis. Thacker Spink &

Co., and also at the Surathani Agency No. 11, Raja Nabakrishna's Street, Calcutta.

CAUTION!

It having been notified to the Proprietor of Beecham's Pills that certain unscrupulous dealers have recently been perpetrating a found in connection with the ; anna box lately introduced, the public are requested to see that the retail prices, (viz., 4 annis, 8 annas or 91/2d, 12 annas or 15 11/2d and Rs, 2 or 25 9d) are clearly printed on the lid of each box. The fraud to which attention is drawn is that in the case of the two smaller sizes, the prices have been obliterated and the boxes represented to be of higher value than they really are

Side Wholesale Agents for India, Burma and Ceylon

G. ATHERTON & CO.

3, NEW CHINA BAZAAR STREET

CALCULIA

NOTICE - Should my difficulty be experienced in obtaining supposes, the Agents will be happy to forward sample hoxes at above Rupee tates pois U.P. P. Charges and Postages

GENUINE HOMEOPATHY

A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S. Homa opathic Practitioner,

May be consulted by letter or perconally daily at his residence, 30-1, Colootolah Street, Calcarta

A. MEITREAUX & CO.

Manufacturers, Repairers and Tuners of HARMONIUMS, ORGANS, &c

9, UCKOOR DULLS LANE, CALCULLA

We import materials direct from Europe and gra intee the best workmanship and finish Harmoniums, Box 3 octaves 1 stop-Rs 30

Do. Table ,, ., 50 D . Do. 4 , , 65 3 Stops Organs Indian Folding with 3 s

Organs, Indian 4 ,, 3 stops & 1 swell ,, 70

Do. Du. 5 ,, 5 do do do, ,, co

Trial soluted

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF MEMORIAL FUND. 1. His Highness The Maharaja of Durbhanga K.C.I.B.,2,000 His Highness The Maharaja of Vizi-Moorshedabad, Amirul Omra, G.C.I.E. 800 His Highness the Nawab of Junagadh, G C.S.I. ... 5. His Highness the Maharaja Bahadur of Cooch Behar, G.C.L.E. Nawab Bahadur Sir K. Abdul Ghan, ... 500 Nawab Bahadur Sir K. Abdul Ghani, K.C.S.I., and Nawab Bahadur K. Ashan Ulla, C.I.E. ... 500 Nawab Inad Jung Bahadur ... 500 Nawab Azam Yar Jung Bahadur ... 500 Shams-ul Ulama Syed Alı Belgranı 500 Khan Bahadar Bhai Bahauddiu, C.I.E., Vizier to the Nawab of Junagadh ... 300 Maharaja Bahadur Sir Jotindra Mo-Maharaja Bahadur Sir Jotindra Mohan Tagore, K.C.S.I. ... 250 Babu Jodu Lai Mullick ... 200 Messrs. Mackinnon Mackenzie & Co. 200 Messrs. Mackinnon Mackenzie & Co. 200 Prince Wala Kidr Syed Hosein Ali Mirga Bahadur ... 150 Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Nawab Syed Zaunul Abdin Khan Bahadur Feraz Jung 140 Feraz Jung ... 140 137- ARaja Peary Mohan Mookerjee, C.S.I. 100 17. The Flowble Mr. Justice Chandra Madhab Glogse 100 Madhab Ghose ... 100 Prince Mirza Sir Jahan Kadar Bahadur, K.C.I.R., 100 dur, K.C.I.R., ... 100 dur, Kasim Ariff ... 100 dur, Marke Guiu Das Banerjee The Honble Dr. Rash Behary Ghose Sir Romesh Chandra Muter, Kr. ... Shahibzada Mahomed Obidulla Fhan Bahadur, C.S.I. ... Maharajkuman Benoya Krishna The Hon'ble Mr. Justice E. J. Trexeiyan ... 50 The Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jabbar Khan Bahadur ... 50 The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Calcutta ... Maharaja Durga Charan Law, C.I.E., Nawab Jahandar Meerza ... Nawab Huzoc, Mirza ... The Hon'bic W. C. Bonneijee ... Nawab Syed Ameer Husein Syed Nurul Hudn, Esq., C.S., ... Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan 50 50 50 50 37. 38. J. G. Ritchie, Esq. CS., ... Sir Alexander Miller ... 39. ... F. J. Rowe, Esq. Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi Khan Ba-32 hadur, ... Kumar Radha Prosad Roy 42. Kumar Danendia Natam Roy Babu Pashupatty Nath Bose Kumar Doulat Chandra Roy Babu Gutu Prosonno Ghose 25 43 ... 25 Raja Sir Soutindra Mohin Tagore, 47. 48. 59. 60. Lord William Beresford, K.C.I.E., Munshi Gholam Rasool ... F. H. Skrine, Esq. C.S., The Hon'ble H. J. S. Cutton C.S., C.S.I. Prince Mahomed Bukhtyar Shah Baboo Surendra Nath Pal Chowdry... Aukhoy Kumar Ghose Moulvi Imadd Ali Rai Shib Chunder Nundy Bahadar ... D. Panioty, Esq. 62.

D. Panioty, Esq. Chowdry Mahomed Arjamand Khan H. E. A. Cotton, Esq., Barrister-at-law Monivi Syed Ashruffuddin Ahmed, Khan Babadur

72. T. Inglis, Esq , C.S.

•••

73	A. H. Giles, Esq		16
74.	F. F. Handrey, Esq., C.S.	•••	16
75.	The Hon'ble Moulys Strajul	Islant
	Khan	•••	16
76	Mouter Serajuddeen		15
77.	Abul Hasan, Esq.,		15
18.	H A. D. Panaps, Esq. C S.	•••	10
79	Banoo Kuan Chander Roy		10
do.	E. N. Baker, Esq	•••	10
.18	Banco Dayai Chand Base	• • • •	10
82.	" Madan Mahan Bose		10
83.	"Kine Ld Knau		10
34.	Mouly: Synd Ake on Hossam		10
35	Monly: Azez Annud		10
36.	Ru Kanyelal Dey Bahadoor	• • • •	10
37.	H Holmwood, Esq	•••	10
38	Baba Harry Mohan Chunder		10
89.	Baboo Cuakk mlal Roy		5
gά	"S frod (prasad Ghose		5
S	abscriptions will be thankfully t	eceived	by
the	Honorary Joint Secretaires,
RAI	RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI	BAHADU	JR,
	4, British Indian Street,	C dentta	,
	and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMA	n, Esq	,

Rs. 6 "UNDAUNTED" WATCH.

Burister-arLaw, 16, Taltolla, Carcuita.

Guaranteed three Years.

Guaranteed three Yoars.

Strong, accurate, pretty, small, open fixed, archet silveta, kevless, short winding, patent, 'UNDAUNTED' witen, with hand setting nechanism, secondhant for Doctors, ornamental bold dial, for Rs. 6 V. P. P. with an xira glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' guarantee. Warranted to stand the toughest use. Runs more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily repairable. Others sell at double our rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Juo. Dickson of Haputal Railway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps solendid time and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jerks. x Dr. H. Moore of Royal Artillery from Poonamallee says:—I sold it for Rs. 16. x Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Regt. from Duordum says:—I have sold it for Rs. 20. x Mr. T. B. Scott of Patia Opium Department says:—I he watch you sent me some veen years ago is still keeping very good time.

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty Canadian gold chain Re. 1-8-0. Fashtomable Canadian Gold Ring set with scientific hamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, at Re. 1 8-0. Mr. Smith, Salt Inspector from Smikutia, says: G. Smith, Salt Inspector from Sankutia, says: 'A German valued the diamond ring at Rs. 50 and riby at Rs. 30. 'Key winding, Government stamped, solid silver hinting case, Royal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee, for Rs. 13. Pte, G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light Intuity from Purindhar says: "For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a sergeant for Rs. 28 x Pte, H. C. Beshop of L. E. L. Regt, from Kamptee says: "A Corporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same witch, Gentlemen's open faced, keeless real tolid gold witch Rs. 30; ladies' Rs. 24; both with extras and go ounteed for 3 years. Mind they are guranted to be of real so id gold. No ageots keep, dl. goods sent only by us from Bombay per V. P. WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO. oll goods sent only by us from Boml per V P P. WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO., BOMBAY.

CATARRH.

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness.

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are diseases are contagions, or that they are due to the presence of living particules in the hining membrane of the nose, and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby a simple regardly has been formulated whereby these distressing diseases are rapidly and permanently cared by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stump by A. HUTTON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORONTO, Canada.

"IT RECOMMENDS ITSELE." All who suffer find sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering; while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most curonic form.

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs
Is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the tortures of TOO PHACHE? A single application will relieve you.
In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid
and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the esuit speak for itself.

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Physcians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of homes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar pre-paration has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at I Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throughout the world.

Agents in Calcutta: Smith Stanistreet & Co. R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Bathgate & Co Limitea.

REIS & RAYYET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT)

WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

ANT

Review of Politics, Literature, and Society RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION. It paid in advance,

Halr-vearly ... Quarterly ... Montary ... Ke. 1-8 Ans 0-8 If not pud in advance, ... Rs. 18 Yearly ...

Half-yearly ,, 10-8 Monthly , 6-c
Monthly , 6-c
Monthly 2-d
Single of sample Copy ... Ans. o-r
No additional charge for postage or poor.

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT

Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insertion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5. Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and paniphlets (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayyet."

OFFICE: I, Uckoor Dutes Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutta.

PRINCE & PEASANT)

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

REVIEW OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, MARCH 16, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 666.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

THE DEAD SON

I CANNOT make him dead! His fair sunshing head Is ever bounding round my study chair; Yet, when my eyes, now dim

With tears, I turn to him,

The vision vanishes—he is not there !

I walk my parlour floor,
And, through the open door,
I hear a footfall on his chamber stair;
I'm stepping toward the hall
To give the boy a call;
And then begin to think—he is not there!

I know his face is hid Under the coffin lid; Closed are his eyes; "sid is his forehead fair; My hand that marble felt; O'er it in prayer, I knelt; Yet my heart whispers that—he is not there!

I cannot make him dead!
When passing by the bed,
So long watched over with parental care,
My spirit and my eye
Seek it inquiringly
Before the thought comes that he is not there!

When, at the cool, gray break
Of day, from sleep I wake,
With my first breathing of the morning air
My soul goes up, with joy,
To Him who gave my boy,

Then comes the sad thought that—he is not there!

When at the day's calm close,
Before we seek repose,
I'm with his mother, offering up our prayer;
Whate'er I may be saying,
I am in spirit, praying

For our boy's welfare, though—he is not there!

Not there!—Where then, is he?
The form I used to see
Was but the raiment that he used to wear
The grave, that now doth press
Upon the cast off dress,
Is but his wardrobe locked—he is not there!

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free.—Attificial Ear-drums and similar appliances entirely superseded. Andress THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

He lives!—in all the past
He lives: nor to the last,
Of seeing him again will I despair;
In dicams I see him now;
And, on his angel brow,
I see it written, "Thou shalt see me there"

Yes, we all live to God!

FATHER, thy chastening rod

So help us, then afflicted ones, to bear,

That, in the spirit land,

Meeting at thy right hand,

'T will be our joy to find that—he is there!

WEEKLYANA.

INVITATIONS were out for an Evening Party at Government House on Thursday. Owing to some cases of measles in the Viceregal household, the Party has been postponed.

FOR the convenience of many passengers travelling towards Bombay and the Punjab during March and April, the East Indian Railway will tun a special passenger train daily from Howrah commencing from the 19th March. It is intended for passengers for Bombay and will start at 21-42 Railway time, that is, 45 minutes after the regular mail train for the Punjab.

MAHARAJA Jotendra Mohun Tagore has offered to Government Rs. 15,000 for the foundation of scholarships for the promotion of Sanskitt learning. With Mis. Annie Besant among us, there ought to be other similar offers.

RULES have been framed for the affiliation of Technical Schools to the Civil Engineering College, Sibpur. The affiliated schools will have the privilege of sending pupils to the College for further training, as apprentices or artizans. Students who have completed their course at the schools will be admissible to the 2nd-year examination of the Apprentice Department in class work and workshop practice. If they pass the examination, they may either join the 3rd-year class of the Apprentice Department, and continue their studies at Sibpur, or the fact that they passed this examination will be endorsed on the certificate they receive from their own school. Affiliated schools will be supplied with machinery and appliances made at Sibpur at specially cheap rates.

A FRENCH writer recommends aluminium builets for suppressing riots and rebellions. The light aluminium builet does not carry far, only 200 yards or so, and is much less destructive than a lead one, yet sufficiently dangerous to frighten and quell rioters

FROM "The Newspaper Press Directory" for 1895, it appears there are now published in the United Kingdom 2,304 newspapers, distributed as follows:—

"England-London, 456; Provinces, 1,342-1,798; Wales, 98; Scot-

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postdl money orders, if possible, as the safest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

land, 217; Ireland, 168; Isles, 23. Of these there are 152 daily papers published in England, 7 in Wales, 19 in Scotland, 18 in Ireland, and 2 in the British Isles."

The first edition of the Directory, that is, for the year 1846 gives the following facts -In that year, there were published in the United Kingdom 551 journals; of these 14 were issued daily-namely, 12 in England and 2 in Ireland; but in 1895 there are now established and circulated 2,304 papers, of which no less than 198 are issued duty, showing that the Press of the country has more than quadrupled during the last 49 years. The increase in duly papers has been still more remarkable, the daily assues standing 198 against 14 in 1846. There are now published in the United Kingdom 2,081 mig izines, of which more than 487 are of a decidedly religious character. Comparing 1895 with 1846 it is estimated that in that year there were only 200 of such publications in existence

"An Unrecorded Chapter of the Indian Mutiny, being Personal Reminiscenes," by Reginald G. Wilberforce, has elicited a strong protest. The following letter appears in the Times

"Sir,—A book under the above title, published towards the end of list vera, is strided to have been compiled from a dary kept by Mr. R. G. Wilberforce and from le ters written by him at the time to his father, the late Bishop of Winchester. In consequence probably of the above statement, it was received in good faith and published by the eminent from of Messis. J. Murray & Co. and most fivourably reviewed in many of the leading papers. The book is made up of anecdotes, hitherto for the most part unheard of, in which the author is the most prominent character, and of stories the extravagance of which carry their own refor iton.

Mr. Wilberforce, as juntor ensign, in February 1857, joined the 52nd Light Infantry, on the murch to Scilkote, in the Punjab. The Muting broke out on May 11, when he could not have been dismissed drill, and could have had only a very slight might into military matters. The publication of this book has caused a great deal of anoyance to the regiment, and especially to those who were at that time Sir, -A book under the above title, published towards the end mutuy broke out on May 17, when he could not have been distinsive drill, and could have had only a very slight insufficient military matters. The publication of this book has caused a great deal of annoyance to the regiment, and especially to those who were at that time serving with it, as some of Mr. Wilberforce's statements disclose a state of discipline most disgraveful to any regiment, while others, equally without foundation, reflect severely on the character of individuals. Under these circumstances, Mr. Wilberforce was written to and asked to withdraw the book. He declined to do so, though acknowledging errors on certain important points.

In December last four letters impugning the veracity of the book were published in the Mormay Post; in the Army and Navy Gazette a letter from Mayor Bayley showed, the utter want of truth of two of Mr. Wilberforce's statements; and the January number of the United Service Magazine contained an article, under the heading of 'Mutury Myths', citing by name the authority of those who could contradict the statements, and commenting severely on the absurdity and unfurthfulness of the book. To these there has been no answer. An appeal to withdraw the book has been made to Messis J Mutay, accompanied by what we consider convincing evidence of the character of the book. They, after commune ting with Mr. Wilberforce, who informed them that, notwichstanding certain maccuracies, his main facts were correct, wrote that it was Mr. Wilberforce's duty to answer theruges mide against him; that it was not for the heading papers. We do not agree with the acts Messis J Mutay take, and consider that they in their position have shown great want of diagence in publishing as history a work of such evident faction. They are, of course, the best pulges of their position is but we have no other course open to us that to ask yon, so, in the interests of the Army at large, to find space for this letter. Venus trady,

J. A. BAYLEY, Major, late 52nd Light Infantry; G. H. W. Windson Crive, Lieuten ant-Colonel, late 52nd

G. H. W. WINDSOR CHIVE, Licetten and Colonel, late 52nd Light Infrarty; THOS A. JULIAN, Life Contain 52nd Light Infrarty; SIAMOUR J. BLANK, Major-General, late 52nd Light Infrarty;

W. J. Storfogn, Lite A nature 52nd Light Infinity, who all seven in the movable column and at the siege, and, assault, of

United Service Club | Teb 18"

AFFER a suspended an motion of seven months, the Moslem World has been revived with the New Year, but very much emasculated. Mr. Mohammed Alexander Rossell Webb, in the new number-it, Vol I - of the Maslem World and Voice of Islam, thus explains the discontinuance and revival : -

"10 MY ORIFNTAL BROTHERS .

As there are thous in Is of English-speaking Mussulmans in the Ori-As there are thous in is of English-speaking Mussulm ins in the Orient who have never trury understood why the publication of The Morlem World was discontinued, and as numerous victors f dischoods and misrepresentations concerning me and my work have been circulated there by persons who have pretended to be converts of Islam, in order to better their worldly conditions, it seems proper, at this time, to explain briefly the character of my contract with Hajee Abdulla Arab Schib, of Jeddah, Arabian, under which I was given the management of THE MOSLAM WORLD Co's attains
This contract was signed at the American Consulate in Manila, the capital circ of the Paulingue Islands, in the message of an invigil, hor-

Capital city of the Padippine Islands, in the presence of an apright, honorable witness from Bombay, India. The portion of it which refers to finances reads as follows:

"We agree to advance $13,500 for the American Propaganda, for the

'We agree to advance $13,500 for the American Propagaida, for the establishment and maintenance of its publication department and lecture course for one year and, if necessary, $10,000 for each of two subsequent years for the montenance of the same. We also agree to provide for the proper montenance of yourself and family.'

After this contract was signed, the expression: 'We also agree to provide for the proper montenance of yourself and family,' was modified by motion agreement, in the presence of the witness referred to, and I consented to accept a regular salry of $200 per month, to begin on the day of my retirement from the U.S. Consular Service, r.e., the h of Sept., 1892. Hajee Abdulla Arab also made the proposition, in the presence of the Hajee Admits Arah and make the proposition, in the presence of the witness, and it was mutually agreed that this contract should run for five years instead of three.

I arrived in America on the 16th of February, 1893, and as Hajee Abdulla had failed to send $2,000 which he had promised to send me by telegraph, I was compelled to wait until the first of April in order to begin operations.

begin operations.

The total amount paid to me by Hajee Abdulla Arab was $10,243 or, which included the amount paid for myp assage and incidental expenses from Bomb by to New York. The list sum I received from Hajee Abdulla Arab under this contract, came on the 16th of November, 1893, more than a very ago. The sum total received from him for the support of The Moslem World, exclusive of my salary, was $3,256.99 less than he agreed to farmsh the first year. The total amount of subscriptions received was $518.97.

The journal was kept alive by careful management until eight numbers had been issued, and I found myself compelled to stop its publication. But from loans and contributions from others than Hajee Abdulla Arab I should have been compelled to close my New York offices on the first of January, 1894. I managed, however, in the face of most harassing conditions, to keep them open until about the 1st of June last, when they were closed permanently.

Notwithstanding Hajee Abdulla's failure to comply with the terms of his contract, and in spire of the vigorous, persistent and utterly unprincipled efforts of our enemies to destroy our mission. I have been enabled, with God's help, to continue the good work undertaken for Islain, and the results have fully equalled my expectations. God put it into the minds of furthful Mussulmans to come to my relief when help was most needed, and if He spares my life, I will perform, to the best of my ability, all I promised to do under my contract with Hige Abdulla Arab.

God knowth the hearts of all men and will judge us both.

Peace be with you and with all who follow the tree scale.

od knoweth the hearts of all men and will judge us both. Peace be with you and with all who follow the true path.

Your Brother. MD. ALEXANDER RUSSELL WEBB"

It is to be hoped that those "faithful Mussulmans" who are supporting Mr. Mohammed Webb will not, back out like his first pations, The above is, however, one side of the story. Hajee Abdulla Arab may have another version to give to the world. At any rate, the establishment of a professed Mussulman organ in the heart of Christendom is not an ordinary event. A journal written in English and devoted to the interests of the Mussulman propaganda, may effect much. Even if it fuls to gain converts or "perverts," as Christian Missionaries in loving faith generally style those who desert their fold, it is sure to succeed in vidicating the Faith from many unjust aspersions HIRE is a glimpse into the Pandemonium of the Press in India. It is not every proprietor of a newspaper establishment than can bring the dark deeds into light, nor every judge who can have the boldness to punish the mischief makers. All credit, therefore, to Mi J O'B Saunders and to Mr. K. M. Chatterjee !

Sanders and to Mr. K. M. Chatterjee!

"Mr. K. M. Chatterje, third Judge, [Calcutta Small Curse Court] heard the case of Hinalal Solkin 2x J. O'B. Sanders. This was a sunt for the recovery of Rs. 39, which plaintiff claimed on account of wages from the defendant, who is the proprietor of the Englishman. Both Bhobin Mohon Sen, ple der for the plaintiff, in opening his case said that his chent was a compositor attached to the printing scaff of the Englishman, on a salary of Rs. 25 per month. That on the 27th December last he left anwell at office And before leaving mentioned the fact to another compositor to e and requested him, in case of his absence from work on the following day, to report the illness to the head of the department. That owing to such miness he was prevented from attending to his different life is of January when on putting in an appearance he was told to discontinue his services as he had absented himself for the four previous days without leave. That although his chent considered himself entitled to pay for the whole of December lie only stied for the 27 days he had actualfor the whole of December he only sued for the 27 days he had actual-by worked.

Mr. Withall, solicitor, who appeared for the defendint contended that Mr. Withall, solicitor, who appeared for the defend off contended that having left the service on the evening of the 27th. December without notice to, or leave from, the defend off, the plantiff had by law forfeited his salary for those days by not completing the month. His client entirely defined the plantiff, allegation, but on the contrary he was instructed that plantiff had in the beginning of December applied for an increase of salary and had requested. But Sidnonath Binnerge, the Printer, to recommend the increase, which was not complied with, and that apparently plantiff took imbrage at this and wilfully absented himself, thinking that such absence would inconvenience the establishment, and thus produce the desired effect, viz., of the increment, and that two other assistants in the office be disconplantiff at the office gate on the 28th and 29th December, where he was lottering about, inducing others not to replace him. The plantiff and his witness King Lall Sett were examined and deposed to the facts as stated by plaintiff's pleader, after which the defendant's Printer Babu Sidhonath Bunneijee and two other assist ints of the defendant's office, viz, Jogendro Nath Ghose and Mihr Caunder Banneijee deposed to the facts urged on behalf of the defence.

The Court in delivering judgment made some very strong comments on the plaintiffs evidence. It found on the facts that plaintiff had deliberately, without any just cause, absented from his duties on the aforesaid four days, apparently with the object of inconveniencing the office and thus compelling his employer to give him an increased salary. It remarked that such a course of conduct by an employé, if encouraged, would be very dangerous and prove serious to an establishment like that of the defendant's and that unless strict discipline and order were observed in such an office, it would be impossible to carry out such responsible work with statisfiction. It was quite satisfied with the straightforward manner in which the Printer, Babu Sidhonath Banner, et al., and it could not help but coming to the conclusion that the plaintiff had wilfully absented himself. It would therefore dismiss the plaintiffs case and award defendant a full pleader's certificate and costs, and it hoped that this would serve as a warning to other employés who were inclined to treat their masters in a similar manner."

NOTES & LEADERETTES,

OUR OWN NEWS.

S

THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

THE Chinese peace envoys were to have left Tientsin for Japan yesterday. The Times publishes a telegram from its correspondent at Pekin stating that China, through the United States Ministers at Pekin and Tokio, has already agreed to the points for discussion at the peace conference. They include the autonomy of Corea, the cession of territory, and the payment of a war indemnity to the Japanese. The Times itself believes that Japan will demand the cession of the island of Formosa and the Liantag Peninsula. The Novoe Vieniya publishes a telegram from Tientsin stating that Japan demands from China the cession of the province of Manchuria up to Mukden and the Great Wall. Nothing authentic, however, is known in London, not to say in India which receives all her news about the East by way of London, regarding the Japanese conditions of peace. Even all official efforts to clicit particulats in respect thereto have failed everywhere.

News has been received that a portion of the first J spanese army has captured Yinkow. The Chinese fled to Thien-chiang-lai after the first onslaught delivered by the enemy. The first and second Japanese armies effected a junction later at Yinkow. It is stated that the Japanese guards are protecting the foreign settlement at Yinkow. The Japanese captured the coast forts of Yinkow on the 7th. On the morning of the 9th the Japanese forces attacked Thien-chiang-lai, to which place the Chinese had fled from Yinkow. A fierce fight, which lasted over three hours, ensued, during which the Chinese had set two thousand men and the Jipanese ninety-six. The Chinese have also been driven out of Denshodal by the Japanese with the loss of fourteen hundred. The Times publishes a telegram from its correspondent at Kobe stating that the Japanese intend using the Pescadores for a base of operations against the island of Formosa and South China.

THE Queen-Empress started for Nice on the 13th March.

HER Majesty has been pleased to confer the Order of the Crown of India upon Mrs. Fowler and Lady Sandhurst.

LORD Rosebery continues weak and depressed in spirits. Mr. Fowler's condition is so prostrate that it will be many days before he will be allowed to see anyone.

THE Right Hon. A. W. Peel, the Speaker of the House of Commons, retires on the eve of the Easter recess. The election of a successor will be the first business of the House after the recess. Thereafter, the Budget will be presented.

It is understood that Mr. Campbell-Bannerman has intimated his willingness to become the Speaker provided it is generally desired. The leaders of the opposition are favourable to Mr. Campbell-Bannerman succeeding Sir A. W. Peel, but they would support Sir Mathew

White Ridley if the Government proposes anybody unacceptable to them

CYPRUS has proved a White Elephant to England. In reply to a question, Sir William Harcourt stated that the island was absolutely useless for every purpose to England; but having accepted the responsibility under an agreement concluded between Great Britain and Turkey, England must do her best with that colony notwithstanding the growing cost of its possession.

OWING to the outbreak of influenza among them, the students of the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich have dispersed.

THE Marquis of Queensbury, charged with libelling Mr. Oscar Wilde, has been committed to trial, bail being accepted. The Marquis has declared before the Magistrate that he maintained the charge and added that he wrote words on a card implying a horrible crime against Wilde in order to save his son.

A RESOLUTION has been passed in the Newfoundland House of Assembly to open negotiations with Great Britain and Canada with a view to attain the confederation of Newfoundland with Canada. Lord Ripon, however, refuses any aid in the matter without a commission of enquiry.

THE Times publishes a telegram from its correspondent at Rome that France, in aiming and strengthening the Abyssinians, pursues a dangerous game for heiself and all the European Powers. Moreover, the correspondent adds that France in 1891 recognised anew that Abyssinia and her dependencies, including Harrar, were within the Italian sphere of influence.

...

It is reported from Obok that the expedition to Abyssinia equipped by the Russian Geographical Society and Government under the command of Captain Leontieff (lately an officer of the Guards, who was sent by the Russian Government three years back in charge of an exploring party to Central Asia, especially to the Pamirs,) has safely reached Djibuti, where the members were cordially received and entertained by the French officials. It is the intention of the clergy of Abyssinia to send an Embassy to greet the new Czar and establish regular relations with Russia.

A CROWD of infurnated inhabitants of Walsenbury, Colorado, lynched several Italians accused of the murder of an inoffensive saloon-keeper After shooting several Italians in the streets the party marched to the goal and shot dead two more of that nationality in the prison cells. The Italian Government has formally complained to the United States authorities regarding the atrocities.

DURING the debate in the House of Commons on the estimates, a statement was made on behalf of Government undertaking to hasten to the utmost the abolition of slavery in Zinzibar and Pemba.

SIR Richard Temple, speaking at the opening of the new building of the United Service Institute, urged the officers to make Imperial federation the primary object of study, as the separation of the Colonies would involve an awful disadvantage, especially in respect of the scattered commerce of Great Britain

In the House of Commons, on March 11, Sir E Ashmead Bartlett asked the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether any steps were being taken by the Government in connection with the agreement just made public between Belgium and France which affected the interests of Great Britain in the Nile Valley, also if the Government would give any information as to the position of affairs in Central Africa. He suggested that France had already secured access to the Nile. Sir Edward Grey, in reply, said that the effect of the recent treaty concluded between France and Belgium upon British interests would continue to receive the most careful attention of her Majesty's Government. He added that the combined British and Egyptian spheres of influence would cover the whole Nile waterway.

NEXT night, Mr. Edmund Robertson, one of the Lords of the Admiralty, introduced the Navy Estimates. He said that all the seventy ships provided for in the programme of the Naval Defence Act had been completed. In order to meet the expenses of protective works at Portsmouth, Dover, Portland, Gibraltar, Hongkong and some other places, it was the intention of Her Majesty's Government, Mr. Robertson said, to contract for a loan of £8,500,000, which will be disbursed in yearly instalments. He further said that this year's Naval Loan Bill will contain no provision for the extension of dock-yards at Hongkong, but the Admiralty hoped to make a preliminary survey of the harbour before commencing works in connection therewith. The Times urges the importance of avoiding further delay in undertaking the much needed protective works at Hongkong owing to the altered condition of things in the Far East. The Opposition generally approve of the Naval Estimates of 1895-96.

In the House of Commons, on March 14, at the sitting of the Committee of Supply on the Army Estimates, Sir Richard Temple moved a resolution to the effect that the home military charges horne by India were excessive and unjust. Mr. R. W. Hanbury supported the resolution. The Secretary for War said that Her Majesty's Government were anxious to save India from any unfair charges, but they were not prepared to contribute from the British Exchequer to the revenues of India for charges which they believed to be just and equitable for India to bear. He added that a Commission of Ennuiry on the matter may be useful, but probably the result will not be very favourable to Indian finance. The motion, as was expected, was rejected by 88 against 25.

THE Viceroy starts for the summer capital on Friday, the 29th March, the day after the discussion of the Budget in Council, visiting, on the way, Gaya, Bankipore and Umballa Cantonment. Lord Elgin will arrive at Simla on Saturday, the 6th April, 1895.

SIR Antony MacDonnell does not join his new post at once. Wiser than Sir Chailes Elliott, he goes home on leave of six months, and comes out as Lieutenant-Governor of the N.-W. Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh. In the meantime, the Hon'ble Mr. Alan Cadell will continue to act as he had been doing during the absence on leave of the Hon'ble Sir Charles Haukes Todd Crosthwaite, who has now resigned.

An Oriental scholar of America, writing to a friend in this country says:-

"On this side the Atlantic we mourn the loss this year of Professor Whitney. He was in some respects facile princeps in the little band of American Sanskritists; and by persistent efforts on his part, and especially by the enthusiasm for his favourite studies he inspired in others, he did more for Sanskrit learning than any of those he leaves behind with us. Professor Luman was deeply attached to his old master and is disconsolate over his irreparable loss."

Professor Whitney made his spear ring on the shield of the great Max Muller. His love of accuracy was as great as that of Colebrooke. If he hated anything, it was slovenly work. He convicted his eminent antigonist of having published a translation from Sanskirt, some of the Up inishads, that had been executed many years before and at a time when Sanskirt scholarship had made little advance. No wonder that he succeeded in pointing out some real errors. The Indian Press tailed to do its duty by Professor Whitney after his death, for, with the exception of the Times of India and Reis and Rayjet, no Indian paper referred to him and his work on receipt of the sad intelligence of his death

ACT X of 1895, which received the assent of the Governor-General on the 7th of March 11st, is an important legislative measure. It empowers Railway Companies registered under the Act of 1882 to pay, under certain restrictions, interest on paid up shares out of the capital. The first of these restrictions is that such interest shall be paid for such period only as may be determined by the Governor-General in DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deatness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely cuting cases of ill keids. Full portion us, neededing in my unsolvened testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Acric Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Succet, Westminster, London, S. W.

Council. No such payment, however, is to be made unless it is authorised by the memorandum of association or by a special resolution of the Company. In either case, the Governor-General's sanction must be had previous to payment. Then, again, such sanction will not be granted unless at least two-thirds of the share capital has actually been issued and accepted. A few other limitations occur which are called for under the circumstances of the case. It may be presumed that this Act will directly operate in favour of Railway extension in India. Hitherto, in the case of long lines whose construction could not be expected to be finished soon enough people were unwilling to invest their money. Nobody wishes to be out of pocket in hopes of profit deferred possibly for years. Quick returns are always sought. Railway Companies, therefore, were frequently obliged to complete their lines with a haste that was incompatible with either economy or solidity of constituction. It frequently happened that stores had to be purchased at high prices when reductions could be foreseen at no distant date. Expedition sometimes interferes with durability of work. With the new Act, therefore, en.powering the Companies to pay interest out of capital upon paid up shares, such interest being chargeable to construction, they will be able to avoid haste and enforce economy. Shares will be more readily taken up than before, since no one will have to wait long in expectation of some return for what is laid out. However objectionable the practice may be of paying interest out of capital, the wholesome restrictions provided minimise the objections; while the advantages expected are such that Railway extension in India is very likely to derive a fresh impetus.

Ar the Indian Medical Congress, Baboo Jogender Nath Ghosh, Teacher of Midwifery, Campbell Medical School, Calcutta, read a paper on Biliary Crithosis of Children. He ventures to think that it is altogether a new disease that has lately appeared among the children of certain classes in Calcutta and other parts of lower Bengal. The treatment pursued generally proves unsuccessful. Current books on the practice of medicine de not mention this ailment. The literature on the subject is still very meagre. The following extract from the address will give some idea of what the disease is to which the writer calls the attention of his brother practitioners:—

"The peculiar features of the disease are that its coset is insidious, that it usually prevails among infants under the age of one year, that it seldom attacks children after they have passed the third year. The attack generally commences on the 7th or the 8th month, chiefly at the period of dentition of the mother's next conception. The children of some parents are particularly liable to the disease. In one family, I have observed fourteen children of the same pairents die one after the other. Cases of attack on the third of fourth month, or even a few days immediately after birth of the child, have also been noted. Children in Calcutta, as well as in the Districts of Bengal, whether indictions or non-malarious, are equally subject to it. It makes no difference between the children of the intemperate, the sober or the rectotaller. It sparts on the rich not poor, though the well-fed children of the wealthy and the middle classes are note liable to it than the in-fed children of the poorer classes. Muhammadan and Emassian children suffer less than the Hindus. Hardly any cases are seen among Europeaus. Children who were never put, or put for a short time only, on the mother's breast, and fed with cow's, goat's or ass's milk, or with different kinds of attificial food, enjoy no immunity from this disease. In those families where the disease prevalled, I noticed a few children escape apparently from being nourished by healthy wet nurses. When the disease was first noticed in Calcutta, more cases were found among male than among female children is but of late the proportion seems to be less, and more female children than formerly now come under the notice of practitions. Still, I shall point this out as a peculiar feature of the disease. Another peculiarity noticed is that the female children mostly attacked are usually the first-boun of the parents and who are necessarily the objects of great care in a family."

The symptomatology of the disease, as also its cliology, as given by Babu Jogendra N ith Ghosh, appears to be very full. Of course there must be something conjectural in its etiology, but that is only one of the principal reasons why the disease should be taken up for immediate study by medical men in Bengal. During the first stage the diagnosis is difficult, but soon the symptoms become unmistakable. A painless enlargement of the liver which then becomes firm and resistant leaves no doubt as to the nature of the disease. The enlargement becomes enormous and then the contraction begins. The disease is capable of being mistaken for amyloid liver, but the latter is very rare in this country and its known causes are, as a rule, absent. The prognosis is extremely unfavourable. The profession is now helpless and Mr. Ghosh appeals to his brethren to take up the disease for careful study. It need not be so fatal as now.

A REMARKABLE woman, remarkable even for England, has passed away in the Dowager Lady Stanley of Alderley. She was born on December 21, 1807, married in 1826 and has just died, leaving her surviving 8 out of 12 children and 80 grand-children and great-grandchildren. Within even a week of her death, she was full of activity. It was not the length of years or the number of her children, grand-children or great-grand-children that in ide her great. She had led an exemplary life. She was not only present at the coronation and the jubilee of Her Majesty the Queen, but she had seen the jubilee of George III For 68 years she maintained an active interest in every political question of her time. She had another striking side of her character, "Brought into contact from her youth with the best intellects of the time, possessed with an active curiosity to extract from any one whatever he could teach, tolerant of everything but dulness, and endowed with a singularly retentive memory, she gathered from her 70 years of active life and study mexicustible in iterrals to feed a naturally very quick intelligence. Her long friendship with Culyle, begun in 1830, lasted unitercuptedly for 50 years until his death, and influenced one side of her character as the teachings of F. D. Manrice did the other. But she was perpetually adding to her knowledge; there was no book of my note on any possible subject that she was not one of the first to order, and the casual visitor found her equally ready to discuss Mr. Conway on the Hundayas, Mr. Krid on Social Evolution, or Professor Ramsay on the new element. Quite recently, after studying the question of the Pantits, she said, 'If I were only ten years younger I would go there myselt and be able to understand it better.' On one of the est visits paid her by Mr. Gladstone, when the ex-Premier endeavoured to turn, the subject, of conversition, from the dangerous one of politics to a recent novel, she is reported to have said, 'Don't let's talk of novels; leave them for your old age as I do?" Such is the compliment paid her by the Times. That can be said of few of even the sterner sex. We tender our sincerest condolences to Lord Stanley of Alderley. He has proved worthy of the mother. His services, besides, to India, though not always patent, have been very great. The death of a mother, at whatever age, is always painful. What must be the intensity of grief when one loses such a mother as the late. Dowager Lidy Stanley of Alderley!

HERE is how they speak of the English translation of the Mahábharata that Pratapa Chandra Roy was issuing and that will be completed by his widow with such assistance as she may be able to get. An Oriental scholar, writing to Pratap, from Hamilton, Canada, says -

Canada, says —

"I recently saw our common friend, Mr. Lames Chailton of Chicago, II.S. He is an excellent man, a devoted lover of general interature, enthusiasta in his attachment to ancient Indian learning, and with great undustry has collected for several years post all the Eighsh translations of Himou writings he could find. It would have done you much good to hear him discourse on the value of your services to the cause of learning, to the Brutsh Ru, and to the people of India.
There is alle says, the possibility of not seeing the forest for trees and you are so near to your own work, that although you doubtless know it is great and serviceable, even your yourself are unconscious of its true value. All this was pleasant to me to hear, and it will help to relieve the monotonous prosair routine of your work."

The number of fascicules already issued or printed having been 44, 6 or 7 more are needed to bring this great task to completion. Pratapa Chandra Roy has left no funds. His whole property consists of the house in which he lived and had his office, and a few copies of the Mahábhácata in original and translation. His widow has applied to the Bengal Government for an additional grant for which she has offerred, as some return, a hundred copies of the Sanskiit Mahábhárata. There are numerous Higher Class English Schools and Colleges and other educational institutions in Bengal. The Mahabharata in original will form a valuable accession to the libraries of these institutions. If the Government be unwilling to pay, even for such a purpose, anything from its own funds, these institutions may be induced to take the copies offered, especially when the price demanded is a trifle.

AMONG the numerous recipients in Europe and America of the English translation of the Mahábhárata, there are some ladies of solid culture. The following expression of opinion was received by Roy a little before his death :-

pourtrays the mind of your people at the present day,—their spiritual as well as their moral character. It is a wonderful undertaking, Mr. Roy, and we owe a great deal to you. To most of us it seems that the Roy Veda asself must yield in practical importance to the Mahabhatata In it ancient work offers glimpses of a society that is no langer existing. The Mahabhatata gives living pictures of Hada society."

Roy's lady-correspondent is perfectly right in her estimate of the

THE Chaudhurs of Burmpur have lost one of their prominent members in Baboo Khetter Mohun. His death is, indeed, a loss to that municipal town. Like Santipore, Barmpur, is not a city of peace Yet the deceased was Vice-Charman of the Manicipality for many years and, overcoming all opposition, was Chairman last year. He may be said to have died in the execution of his duty. On Friday morning he had complained of diarrhosa. In the afternoon a notice of fire having reached him, he hurried to the spot and assisted in extinguishing it On return home, he complained of much uneasiness. Symptoms of cholera developed, and before any medical aid could be obtained from Calcutta, Baboe Khetter Mohan had ceased to breathe

THE following is the text of a Bill introduced by the Hon'ble Mohins Mohan Roy into the Viceroy's Legislative Council -

"No Civil Court shall, in any sort for a simple money debt or a mortgage debt instituted after the commencement of this Act, decree or award interest exceeding in amount, the original principal, or, where or award interest exceeding in amount the original principal, or, where there has been payment in reduction of the principal, exceeding in amount the reduced principal Explanation.—The word 'interest' means the amount of interest due on payable at the date of the soit, exclusive of payments previously made."

Permission to introduce the Bill was readily granted. The Council hailed with satisfaction the proposition to save debtors from unconscionable creditors

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, March 16, 1895

MIXED MARRIAGES:

THE MISERIES CAUSED IN MAHOMEDAN HOMES.

It must have struck even superficial observers that the Mahomedan community, which is admittedly backward in English education, had for sometime been far ahead of other communities in sending young men for education to England. Behar especially took the lead and sent the largest number. It was also remarkable that nearly ninety-five per cent, of the students were sent to study for the bar. It is admitted by experienced and well-informed Mahomedan gentlemen that many of their brethren were sending boys very indiscriminately, without properly considering their qualities and character, or weighing their future prospects. The project of making a barrister of every boy who was unfit here for anything else, continued for at least half a decade. There was some discussion from time to time in the newspapers regarding the advisability or otherwise of sending all classes of disappointed boys to England. Their prospects, on their return to this country, in the bar, the Civil Service, or some independent profession, were not regarded very hopeful. It is not our object to discuss that question in the present article. For some time the wisdom of sending Mahomedan young men to England for purposes of education, has engaged the serious attention of Mahomedan parents and guardians. The reason, perhaps, is not known to the public, although it has spread quite a panic among that community. Parents have begun to change their minds and hesitate to send their boys out. The question arises, why this sudden alteration of attitude? At first, Mahomedans visiting England rarely married English women and brought "I hope the Almighty will in His mercy, restore you to health and enable you to see the completion of your noble task, especially as you are so near to it. Your work gives us a thorough insight into the Hindu mind and customs. Although written so many centuries ago, it well ber of those that married was few, and the matter temporary sensation in limited circles. The spouses brought were of different sorts, good, bad, and indifferent, and we are not prepared to discuss the result of those marriages here. It must be stated, however, that those who took English wives were all bachelors. Notwithstanding, it was a dangerous example to the younger generations of their own community as will be seen from facts stated later on.

To prevent such unions, parents and guardians would avoid sending their boys unmarried. This rule certainly could not be adhered to in all cases, for many bachelors also made their way to England. We believe the proportion of bachelors to the married was large enough. Within the last few years, more than half a dozen Mahomedan barristers in Bengal, Behar and the North-Western Provinces have married English women in England and brought them out. Of these, some belong to good families. It seems that these young and inexperienced gentlemen have married under different circumstances and influences and with different results. Some were tempted to the tie under the belief that it would advance their professional prospects, while others would find in it an introduction to European society. In most cases, however, let us hope, it was no such wordly motive but pure love that joined eastern and western hands and hearts together.

It is very difficult to predict the result in every case. Past experience, and information about some recent unions, show that they cannot be happy in the long run. Both parties shall have to repent their mistake. There is no doubt that in most cases the marriages have been due to the absence of full information about the family circumstances, the financial resources, and the future professional prospects of the benedicts. Otherwise, probably, one would fail to account for the mistakes that have happened. There is a large number of women of marriageable age in England whose prospects in the matrimonial market of their own country are not very bright. Most of them, again, are so ill-provided or friendless as not to be able to live comfortably or decently at home. Every Mahomedan student of whatever parentage and means, arrayed in his embroidered cap and zarr-choga in England, passes among the unknowing for an Indian Nawab. Dazzled by the lustre of gold and silver embroidery, and sometimes forced by sheer necessity, an English girl chooses as her husband an would-be barrister or doctor or engineer. It is difficult to ascertain whether the English girls married by these young men are equal to them in social position, respectability, and income, or to such Indian girls to whom they could have been married on their return to India. It has sometimes been found that not being of good position in their own home, they are not admitted into respectable or high European society in India. Only those who have come in contact with them can, of course, form some idea of the strata of society from which they have been indented. It is not everybody, therefore, who can know the position which these gi is hold in English circles at home.

It is a strict rule with almost all Englishmen that they never marry until they attain a certain age and have sufficient money for comfortably supporting themselves and their wives. We have hardly seen to India freighted with that expensive commodity did not attract much attention beyond causing a called a wife. The unfortunate Englishwoman who takes a fancy to the Indian student believes in her heart that he has the means to maintain her in a style not unlike that of those countrywomen of hers who are mated to Anglo-Indian Civilians, or merchants or planters, or barristers that have not to depend, for at least the first few years of their practice, upon their professional earnings. What pictures of comfort and even grandeur she conjures up before her mind's eye of her future home! If she only knew his real condition, she would never think the game worth the candle. The situation is exactly the game worth the candle. The situation is exactly the reverse of that which Tennyson has described in his Lord of Burleigh. It is not the disappointment of a village maden who, having expected to become the mistress of a neat little cottage, suddenly discerns before her a gateway with armorial bearings stately, and then a mansion more majestic than all she saw before, with many a gallant gay domestic bowing before the landscape-painter of her choice and speaking in gentle murmur when they answer to his call. It would require another Tennyson to paint the destruction that overtakes the castles she had built at the time she had chosen her lord. Generally, a young barrister on his return is himself a burden on his parents and family, and is looked upon as an expensive luxury. For some years he has to be supported by his guardian or relations. In their absence he has to keep his body and soul together by self-exertion. Under such circumstances, he becomes doubly expensive by bringing out an English wife. He soon finds that marriage, instead of making one person of two individuals, obliges him to double every article of necessity, not to say of comfort, Englishwomen that are bent upon such adventurous marriages, commit a great mistake; but the young men who tempt them to that act by neglecting to disabuse them, are more to be blamed. India cannot prove a bed of roses for these women. They, as a rule, are not admitted into the society of individuals of their own nation who are ruling this country. Even when admitted, their husbands are often unable to keep up a style of living equal to that of the Civilians or of those belonging to the wealthy non-official classes of Europeans. The zenana or Ma homedan society is not for them. There are not sufficient Eurasians and Anglicised Baboos and go-ahead Brahmos in mofussil stations with whom they can mix. They cannot preside over a Maho-medan household effectually and exercise a salutary influence over all female relations and sympathise with them in their difficulties and misfortunes. With all their western education and culture, they are of no use in a Mahomedan household. They cannot expect any sympathy from the orthodox Mahomedans,

Our object is to draw the attention of the Mahomedan public in India and of Englishmen at home, to three most painful and heart-rending cases of marriage between Mahomedan barristers and Englishwomen in recent years. These have not only caused great alarm and consternation in the Mahomedan community of Bengal, Behar, and the N.-W Provinces, but have also made the worldly prospects and happiness of three Mahomedan ladies, who, under the custom of their society, have been subjected to enforced widowhood for the rest of their lives, most miserable. In these cases all the three barristers were married men who went to England leaving their wives in India. Forgetting their any young English barrister or Civilian coming out spouses left behind, they wooed and won charming and accomplished Englishwomen. Under the English ---- law they could not have married during the life time of their Indian wives and, therefore, their unfortunate Indian wives had to be divorced. These unhappy ladies are, we believe, sull alive. We cannot say that these gentlemen concealed the fact of their previous marriage when taking new wives. As educated pews s and barristers, they could not have been unaware of the serious results of such a dangerous course. The probability, ix therefore, is that both the Indian husband and the English wife must have agreed to achieve happiness for themselves by a cruel compact, If without having divorced the Indian wife any of these marriages took place, that marriage must be illegal if solemnized under the English law. These gentlemen who with their boasted western civilization and culture have adopted this heartless course and abused the Mahomedan law of divorce simply to get We do English wives, are deserving of censure. not think that any respectable person would admit them into his society. The English women also, that did not take the necessary precaution of ascertaining the antecedents of their foreign husbands, are equally to blame. They who had in all probability made the divorce of their innocent. Indian sisters the condition of their own marriage, must be held to have forfeited all title to respect from every just and impartial Englishman. The mere mention, again, of such conduct would, we are sure, send a thrill of indignation, through every respectable English lady. We think this new class of Indian widows -of ladies, that is, who have been widowed by the action of their living husbands,--would command the sympathy of the whole civilized world. Noble Englishmen and Englishwomen who have done and are doing so much to ameliorate the condition of Indian ladies, cannot close their eyes to the gradual formation of a class whose misery and misfortune it has been our sad duty to bring for the first time to the notice of the public.

It is quite permissible under the Mahomedan law to have one or more wives, up to even four, but it is quite a different thing to divorce a wife simply for getting another. The mischief which has already been done cannot be remedied, but the question for serious consideration is how to stop it in the future. If not stopped, the number of this new class of widows will go on increasing. One such case means ruin to the family to which that unfortunate lady belongs. Generally, the young Indians who become guilty of this outrage have not as yet been able to marry in the better classes of English society. There is practically very little chance of their doing so. If the chance had existed, the Indian girls would have been safe, for no respectable English woman would consent to have a husband on such terms. When these facts are known to the Europeans here and in their home, it may be hoped that such hasty and ill-matched unions will be effectionally prevented. We know how high and noble are the ideas of Englishmen about the rights and privileges of women, and we hope our appeal on behalf of a helpless and miserable class of Indian women will impress them with the necessity of adopting some safeguard for the protection of both parties, We are sure that these untoward facts, by becoming : known to that class of Englishwomen who are anxious to marry Indian princes and zemindars and barristers without waiting to consider the effects of their act, and to their parents and guardians as well, will awaken in them a proper sense of responsibility.

As stated above, this question has engaged the serious and anxious attention of Mahomedan parents and guardians, and they are considering the various phases of these mixed unions and their results, some of which have affected directly their happiness, position, honour and pockets.

MRS ANNIE BESANT AND HINDUISM.

MRS. Annie Besant is in our midst again, and his been lecturing almost every day since her mined. Despite what her admirers think and say, we have never been able to discovar any purbacopay or depth of research in her orations, on this or in they previous occusion, and it does not seem to us that they call for any names on account of any intrinsic ment in them, apart from the characteristic of wordpainting they disclose. In fact, if they were quite humless, and not likely to be productive of very serious evils in the future, the fact that the speaker is a lady and an admirer of our nation and our religion, would disincline us to make my adverse comments. The late Keshay Chandra Son who med to play a somlar game, was allowed by the European nations to compliment the Christian faith without a demotrer. But we cannot show similar courtesy to Mis. Besint, without materially encouriging the growth of those evils which have hitherto retaided the progress of our country in civilisation. Christianity in Europe is an exotic plint utterly unconnected with the surroundings which favoure lats birth. It no doubt tended at one time, in his new home, to develop some of the worst features of other in in worshipping religions. The general good sense, however, of the European nations, has, since the Luther in Reformation, kept it so stunted and dwirfed, that an occasional shower of verbal compliments cannot revive its power for mischief very materially.

The case of Huddism is very different. Huddism is a vigue word which embraces every stage in the development of the theocratic art, from the futh of the run seekers of the early Vedicage to the abomorable doctions and practices of the Bunichairs, Kuta Bligar, Margin and Bauly which represent the utmost extrivagince the craft is capable of Woen in English lidy of decent@ultire pro fesses to be an a timiter of Testra mysticisms and Krishna worship, behaves every well wisher of the country to tell her plainly that sens men do not wont her eloquence for golding what is rotten every kind of political game, spiritual or temporal, the favourable mony of a witness experted to be histile, generally goes a great in determining the judgment of the mab. When a lady who Christian by a groundity in I both says that Huddism as the best gion in the world, nothing more is necessary to confirm the bigotry our unthinking countrymen. At any rate, the utmost users sine he made of such testimmy by such advocates of the Hindu faith as are interested in secular enterprises that can prosper only by the continuouse of the blind etherence of our countrymen to those abominitions which large a disgrace to the community

Hin busin these, no area's , like every other institution to be found in the wind, a good side. It is, however, sheer folly to cutertain as to be ided notions on the subject oused on the copy-book effices of the Extract Critical the so called philosophy of the Uhimshads, Taken separately, in whice a chain. But looked at in their connection with the previous and sussequent development of our theological system, we cannot certualy be very proud of their specificality. In the negimning all primitive cults promise to bring about tangible good, With regard to the Vedic satisfies, M. Buth very correctly

"If we passess only a very imperfect knowledge of the acts of scanice, we know better what he is some at wheel to it. In the grossest sense, Saraher is a mere bar, for ... Man needs things, which the god in asses, such as can, hard, wright, and he day; which the god is bringly and secks off rings from man, there is giving and receiving on both sides.

The littingical formula are it times very clear in this respect, for example, Tat. Subtra 156 = Does he wish to do haim to an enemy? Let nimes in to Sarya Stoke such in one, said offerwids will. I pay thee thy offering. And Sarya desiring to obtain the offering strikes him."

The primitive religious must, in this minner, promise to render tangible good service. The savage can have no idea of immortality, transmigration, Nurvana or saivation. He wants a good harvest and an abundance of milk and honey. To make him appreciate the value of Nirvana, Shradha and Nishkama Dharma, he must be educated to that end. That is the true origin of the Upanishads. However, if the Upanishads have a chaim for Mrs. Besant, she is quite welcome to proclaim her views on the subject. But the Up inishads do not form any part of the religion of the Hindus as it is found in their every day life. In actual practice they are either Sivites or Saktas or Krishna-worshippers. In fact, abomination worship is the main ingredient of modern Hinduism, and we, therefore, ask Mrs. Besant to spedy the subject a little more carefully than she vet appears to have done. If she will follow our advice, she may, provided she is sincere, herself adout sooner or later that the course, she is now pursuing is fraught with mischief. Before she applieds Hinduism in the hearing of unthinking audiences, she should first denne the form of faith which she means by the word. If she is for the worship of Krishna, she should tell her hearers, whence she has formed her idea of that deity. Is it the heroic charioteer of Aijana as painted in the Mahabharata, or is it the Krishna of the Bhagavata and the Bramha Vaivarta Paran?

In an authorised edition of some of the lectures delivered by her at Ady ir, Madras, in December 1893, Mrs. Besant speaks adminingly of even Tantisc symbols. The dogmis propounded by her about these and certain other dark sides of the Hindu faith, seem to say that she goes the whole hog. It is true that she herself has more than once repudiated such a view. But she has never explained definitely what parts of our religion she approves of, and what features of it she condemns.

The sum and substance of her recent harangues may, we think, be enunciated by the following propositions :-

- 1. That we should revive our ancient spirituality.
- 2. That the existence of evil is for the good of mankind.
- 3. That we should learn to subjugate and overcome evils Inot by trying to remove them, as the European" nations are trying to do, "but by striving to get rid of our desires."
 - 4. That we should not pay much attention to politics.
- 5. That we should not try to develop the manufacturing industries of our country, but should devote ourselves chiefly to agriculture, and to intellectual or spiritual pursuits.
- 6. That the Hindu caste system is a very good one, and that the higher classes of the Hindus should be occupied with only study and votion, without a thought about the improvement of the political or rial condition of the country.
 - That we should give up the study of English and Western ce, and devote ourselves exclusively to the cultivation of Sanskrit, king our heads against the stone wall of Panini, or suffering ourtoebe be wildered for ever in the barren and unprofitable speculaf the Nyaya, the Mimansa and the Vedanta, sugh clothed in mystifying garbs, there cannot be the least doubt . t these are the main ideas which Mrs. Besaut, professing to be a friend and admirer of our nation and our religion, seeks to inculcate, If that is $6, her attitude clearly demands a closer circumspection than it has yet received. Her predecessor, Madame Blavarsky, was suspected of having been a Russian spy. A careful study of Mrs. Besam's recent utterances may lead many to the conclusion that she has identified herself with the interests of the cotton spiniters of Munchester. The very hirting of such a suspicion may be regarded by her adminers as something amounting to blasphenry. To them we have nothing to say, We appeal only to the sober judgment of those who have not been carried away by her words of flutery, or the charm of her eloquence. To show that we have not misrepresented her preaching, we give below her ibsissing verba :-

"Land the India was going out of cultivation, and there was a growing poverty among the people. Was not the struggle for the growing hardes than it was fifty years ago? Were not people having to work for its great than it may be to be? And if that was so, the best way to turn the tide would be an give up the Western ideal of luxny and to live in the simple fashing of the East, having enough of wholesome food, sufficient electrical and spritted pursuits; for against the brain of the Western inelectral and spritted pursuits; for against the brain of the Western inelectral and spritted pursuits; for against the brain of the Western the control of the Western inelectral and the spritted, everything food and them in their choice, and by so doing—by following in the foot-steps of the ancient Rubins—they would be giving the Indian people a future among the nations of the earth, and India would again be the mother of nations, and in her greatness the world would rejoice." "Land in India was going out of cultivation, and there was a grow-

The italics are ours and deserve special notice. With this we leave the passage as it is, without a word of comment.

Letter to the Editor.

DR. SAMBHU CHUNDER MOOKERIEE.

SIR, --- Permit me to thank Mr. F. H. Skrine for his highly interesting sketch of the life of Dr. Sambhu C. Mookerjee in the Nation F Magazine and which you it ... trprinted in your paper. Dr. Mookerjee was one of the noblest sons of India. No man was freer from prejudices than he. He strove earnestly to bring about a good understanding between the Hindus and the Mussulmans. It in course of conversation any of his friends or acquaintances indulged in any remark in disparagement of the Mussulmans, Dr. Mookerjee instantly interrupted him and arguing the matter convinced him of his intolerance and prejudice and caused him to withdraw the offending remark. He knew that the dislike manifested by the average Hindu for the Mussulman had ignorance of the Mussulman character at its bottom. Hence, in Reis and Rayret, he always strove to give short accounts of distinguished Mussulmans. I remember the surprise he caused to his readers by publishing an account of Nawab Ikbal-ud-dowlah or "the Wandering Nawab" as he styled him, in the first year of the journal. No body knew anything of this Mussulman nobleman whose name had appeared in the honour's list of the year. Dr. Mookeriee published almost a full account of the Nawab and his travels. That account was so circumstantial that the Nawab himself, when he read it at Bagdad, was surprised at anybody in India knowing him so well. When the Nawab died after some years, his will was especially translated for Reis and Rayyet and published in it. It was a most interesting document and did much to explain the views entertained by Mussulman noblemen of many questions with which we are confronted in this life.

One other feature of Dr. Mookerjee's character was his desire to seek out struggling merit and to encourage it in every way. He believed that we have very few writers among us. Hence, whenever he saw any piece of good writing in the correspondence columns of any of the dailies or weeklies, he made earnest efforts for finding out the writer. In this way he often succeeded in opening a correspondence with young men who were still at College or who had just left College and entered the world. To encourage and advise them, ascertain the books they had read and intended to read, was with him a pleasing task. He took greates delight in corresponding with these young friends of his than with the most famous of publicists or scholars of Europe or America or the most influential officials in India or England. The circumstances under which I first made the acquaintance of Dr. Mookerjee would happily illustrate my observations. I was then a very young man who having left College with a degree was editing the diglot weekly called the Halisabar Patrika. It was exactly of the size of the weekly Hindoo Patriot; four of its formes consisting of articles, paragraphs, and summary of news in Bengali, and two of articles and paragraphs in English. I edited the English portion of the paper and occasionally contributed to the Bengali columns also. Those were the days of Sir George Campbell, when every writer in the native press was obliged to do his best for opposing the many strange innovations of that radical ruler who, on his accession to the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal, resembled very much a bull in a China shop, now knocking against the Board of Revenue and its old practices, now remodelling the Subordinate Executive Service, now falling foul of the very University. I wrote

The Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science.

The Indian care.

210, Bow-Bazar Street, Calculus.

(Session 1894-95.)

Lecture by Babu Svamadus Mukherjee, M. A., on Thursday, the 21st Inst., at 4 P. M., Subject. Invariant Theory of Conics (continued). Admission Fee, Rs. 4 for Physics, and Rs. 4 for Chemistry; Rs. 6 for both Physics and Chemistry; Rs. 4 for Physiology; Rs. 6 for complete course of Physiology and Biology. The charge for a single lecture is 2 Annas.

MAHENDRA LAL SIRCAR, M.D.,

Henerary Secretary.

a few articles that were slightly above the average, showing up this policy of restless and mischievous activity. Dr. Mookerjee, having read those atticles, enquired into their authorship and having traced them to me, asked me, through a common friend, to see him. I was greatly flatteted by the invitation and lost no time in waiting up and him. I had been known to him slightly in my College of For therefore, was not altogether a stranger when I saw him." He received me very kindly and from that day was formed a friendship which lasted till his death. I used to see him almost every week, and the conversations I had with him on the topics of the day enabled me to write out the leaders and paragraphs of my paper with the greatest ease.

Dr. Mookerjee's memory was a veritable store house of information. No man was better read in the history of journalism in England. He knew every writer of eminence in the English Press. His spirit of inquisitiveness may best be illustrated by mentioning that he underwent great trouble for obtaining a sight of the Edinburgh Review, old series, viz., that of 1850, which lived for two or three months only and which was edited by Wedderburne, afterwards Lord Loughborough. No man had a larger stock of anecdotes relating to the literary men of the latter half of the eighteenth and the nineteenth centuries. Jeffrey and his coadjutors of the Edinburgh Review, and the writers of the Quarterly and the Westminster Review, he knew familiarly. His memory was wonderful. I often took the trouble of verifying, after a conversation with him, the facts and incidents he related, by a reference to the books he had mentioned. I never found that he was wrong or incorrect in a single instance. Less than a year before his death, an article appeared in Reis and Rayyet reviewing Sir Alexander Miller's lecture, at the Chaitanya Library, on the origin of the jury in England. Sir Alexander had made some gross errors in speaking of the celebrated trial of the seven Bishops, and had mentioned Hallam and Macaulay as his authorities. Macaulay's account, it was pointed out, was totally different, while Hallam has not more than one sentence on this case and that sentence gives no details. Sir Alexander had the candour to admit his errors although he sought to lessen their effect by saying that his general argument was unaffected by them. The Law Member further said that he had not read Macaulay for the last 40 years; and that at Simla, the summer capital of the empire, he had not a copy of the State Trials to refer to for verifying a statement which Reis and Rayyet had, made. This provoked the writer in Reis and Rayyet to say, in a rejoinder, that if the Law member could not command such an ordinary book as the State Trials which every lawyer must have in his library, what would he do when any international question came up before him, occasioning a reference to Grotius or Puffendorf or Vattel? This remark was seized by a defender of Sir Alexander Miller in the native press who, judging of the conductors of Reis and Rayyet by his own standard, said that for giving an appearance of learning to their writings they very frequently named authors whom they had never tood. I saw Dr. Mookerice at a time when he with a few friends was exceedingly merry on this remark of his critic. Years ago I myself had read both Grotius and Vattel and had several conversions with him on both those authors. Only a few months ago Dr. Mookerjee had referred to his Vattel for testing the correctness of a quotation which a learned counsel had made in a written der ace of his client in a very important case. The quotation, it was found, had been made at secondhand, for Vattel's opinion was quite the reverse of that which was attributed to him by the learn I Counsel. The charge, therefore, of the critic about Mookerjee's never having read Grotius and Puffendorf and Vattel can lus all sincere

In speaking of my deceased friend I can never stop. But stop I must to-day, for I have run out the limits I hal proposed to myself. I beg to close with the suggestion that if a respectable volume containing extracts from Dr. Mookerjee's correspondence, and from a few articles that were slightly above the average, showing up this his writings, both published and unpublished, be brought out, it policy of restless and mischievous activity. Dr. Mookerjee, having cannot fail to be highly interesting. Yours &c.,

Calcutta, March 12, 1895.

BHARGAVA.

THE PILGRIMAGE TO MECCA.

The following letter is published in the Bombay papers.

In the issue of the Times of India of the 22nd ultimo, there appears a report of Mr. Barnest Hart's speech which he recently made in Hyderabad, complaining of neglect on the part of the Turkish authorities to make proper santary arrangements at Kamran, Mecca, and certain other towns of Arabia, and concluding that such neglect, etc., exposed the Hajis to fearful mortality. I visited the holy places in 1892, and my experience being very different, I trust, in the interest of fair play, you will be pleased to give publicity through your widely read paper to the following account:

I reached Kamian with my family of three females and one baby, in the beginning of April. It was the year 1892 or 1309 Hijri. Kamran is a sandy island, high above the sea level, and enjoying a dry and salubrious climite. As soon as our steamer cast anchor a number of large proson were observed to be in motion When they came along side, I learnt, from inquiries of the prowmen and some old Hajio that were on board our steamer, that during the pilgrimage season twenty of such prows are always under the orders of the Turkish authorities, kept in readiness to under the orders of the Turkish authorities, kept in teadiness to land the Hajir, as they come, and their goods. They are in Government pay. So we got into a prom, and came with our goods on shore, and had not a pieto pay. The prowmen might accept bakiib, but I did not see any one paying it. Immediately a number of bimmals or porters seized our goods, and bade us follow. We soon reached our lolgings, i.e., the buildings called ariben, which the Turkish Government has got constructed for our temporary sojourn on the island. There is a large number of these aribes, Each is 50 feet long, 30 feet wide, and the central part of the roof which is tapering a 26 feet from, the ground while of the roof, which is tapering, is 26 feet from the ground, while the walls supporting it are 14 feet high all round. I, who had three females with me, and a haby, got space allotted to me 12 feet long and 6 feet wide, and enclosed it with sheets of cloth and matting. Families live in these arisbes in two parallel rows, leaving a pathway in the middle all along, nowhere less than 6 feet wide. Since I had heard a great deal previously of the miserable accommodation the Turkish Government allowed the pilgrims in Kamran, I measured these distances, and have got prigrims in Alaman, I measured these distances, and have got them noted down in a book. In fact, I kept a diary during my journey to Mecca and back, and mean to give the accounts in the form of a book to the public some day. The aribos are thatched bamboo structures, but withal strong and durable. I was surprised to find that though it was the beginning of April, the mornings were pleasantly cool, evenings a little cooler, while the nights were very cool. It was only at midday that one might find it rather warm, and only outside the arsb. Inside it was pleasant. These arsbes have been so constructed that between every four of them there is an open square, each side of which is tully a hundred feet long. We fellow passengers were about 800 in all; and sixteen of these aribes were given us for residence. One who has seen the place cannot but laugh at those who com-plain in India about want of accommodation in Kamran for the pilgrims. I subsequently learnet that it is a rule to give sixteen as the to the passengers of every steamer. Two servants are attached to each aish, who sweep it, light it, and bring fuel and distribute it among the pilgrims. Camp-light is provided in a sufficient degree, and kerosine oil is used for the purpose. As for fuel, it is always more than enough, and quite a number of us used to sit up till midnight outside out arch, chanting manlad, with a fire blazing of our surplus fuel to keep us warm. There are a number of closets separate for males and females at a reasonable distance from the arsbes, which are cleared daily.

We eat our own food in Kamran. The Turkish authorities do not give any. Everything fresh can be had on the island, though dear. As for water, it is brought on asses, backs from some distant place beyond Kamran, and every individual gets two pots in the morning and two more in the evening, altogether a little more than three Indian sters per head. Besides this the sea is hard by, and one can get any amount from there for bathing and washing purposes. It is to be noted that the aribes have been so erected, that the one I lived in, though it was the farthest arib but one from the sea, the intervening distance was about 135 yards only. Indeed, many pilgrims used to go and bathe in the sea daily. The water of the sea is so clear that if a coin falls to the bottom, one can see it from the surface, for there is no fouling there of the foreshore.

Kamran has one French head Doctor, who comes every evening and asks almost every pilgrim separately if he has any complaint to make against the arch khadine, or about the quality or quantitot water, &c., that he gets. There are besides these a number inspectors or overseers to assist him in the work of general intendence. For every sixteen aribes there is a hospital aby a doctor. Our hospital doctor was also a Frenchman. Ut.

c tarantine rules the pilgrims arriving from India must stay ten days 16 Kamran, and those from Java five days only. The reason is that the Turks, like other Europeans, especially the French, think India to be a hot-bed of cholera and other contagious diseases. During this period, out of about 800 pilgrims that we were, having been fellowpassengers by one and the same steamer, only on baby died of fever and one man got diarrhoza, but recovered. It we currently reported that he had too freely partaken of some driving in that he had brought along with him from home.

The inspectors are some Turks and the others Arabs, while the khadmes are all Arabs. Both the inspectors and khadmes, though the latter served in a humble capacity, were born gentlemen. I believe there are special orders from the authorities to be very gentle to the meek Indian. We never heard any harsh language from them nor had any of us to use such language to them.

The police arrangements are adequate, and the superior officers of the different departments have a number of clerks to assist them.

This is how the fees are collected. A day before the quarantine period should be over, the inspectors come and ask a respectable looking pilgrim in each arib kindly to inquire who can and who cannot pay the fees. The next day such pilgrim goes out with the amount collected, and pays it to the cashier in his office, and also informs him how many cannot pay. The fee is Rs. 10 per head, and not Rs. 15. While almost all the Java pilgrims do pay it, about two-thirds of the Indian pilgrims, it must be acknowledged to our shame, and many of them, in spite of their ability in that behalf, declare themselves mikins or paupers. They are not, however, required, if they cannot pay Rs. 10, to pay what proportion they can. The pauper males are desired to fall in and numbered, while the pauper semales have not to undergo even this formality. No search whatsoever is made to ascertain the truth of their assertions. Respectable Indian pilgrims do pay, and curse their lying brethren. The Bengalees are bad in this respect, and the Sindhis are worse. At the time I am speaking of, out of about a hundred Sindhi pilgrina who had some three hundred rupees each, none paid. The banmali and all are in the pay of Government, and the pilgrina enjoy their services gratis. During the remaining days, it is not to be supposed that the non-paying pilgrims are refused accommodation, or in any manner not treated as well as their neighbours.

In Kamran out of about 800, only one baby died as said above. From Kamran to Jeddah, there was no sickness among us. When we reached the latter place, some large Kafilai had come in from other parts, and so we were about 3,000 persons going together to Mecca. It was reached in Ramazan, and about 100,000 pilgrims had already gathered there. I with my family stayed in Mecca all the time till Haj. The average death rate per diem was no more than three only out of a permanent population of some 80,000 souls, and 100,000 new arrivals. This I can say with confidence, for every dead body before burial is brought into the Haram and numerous persons are there at all times of day and night saying prayers and performing tawaf. By Haj time there was an assemblage of about 600,000 persons. The Shami Kafla, the Misri-Mahmil, and of about 600,000 persons. The Shami-Kafila, the Misri-Mahmil, and the one from Constantinople encamp outside the city. The climate of Mecca is very dry and enervating. I and my family used to enjoy there very good health. The houses in general are lofty, many-storied structures, on sides and summits of hills. The streets, though narrow, are daily swept like those of Bombay, morning and evening, and the rubbish is taken out to a distance and burnt. There is no bad smell, except in some localities inhabited by Bengalis, Bokharis, and the like. The Arabs are very cleanly and live in spacious houses furnished after the European fashion. time even the death-rate did not perceptibly incrase. I was four dass in Medina, and never sawa single corpse. In Mina I staved three days. I did not there see a corpse but heard that about ten persons in all had died during the three days. All pilgrims (600,000) were then necessarily in Mina. After my return from Medina to Mecca I stopped at the latter place for a month more. The death-rate appeared to be about the same as stated above. Then I fleft for India. While returning we had about 700 persons on board the steamer, and by the time we arrived at Bombay, I heard that one person had died and his body thrown into the sea,

At Mina the Badies take away many of the slaughtered animals to their abodes in the desert, and dry and ear the meat. Pilgrims from all countries, excepting India, eat of the fresh meat. The Indian all countries, excepting India, eat of the fresh meat. The Indian pilgrims, as a rule, abstain from it from groundless fear. I did not follow their example. About a fourth part only goes into the trenches that have been made for the purpose. They are very deep, and one cannot from the surface see the slaughtered animals at the bottom. These trenches are on the outskirts of the town. When the sacrifices are over, the trenches are filled up with sand.

In both Mecca and Medina there is plenty of water. Any one can go and fetch it from the stream, or buy it from the water men, called saggest there. One of these may be hired to give water to you at your house and he will give about four Indian manaktr of water daily for a rupee or two per month. In Medina water is still more plentiful. In the vicinity of every halting station there are wells, and pilgrims do not suffer there from want of water. Again, it is absurd to talk of sanitary arrangements at these stations, for they are one and all on sandy plains of vast extent. Moreover a large stream of water runs hard by two of these stations. There are no permanent inhabitants dwelling about them, and pilgrims do not stop at them longer than half-a-day.

y blodie are never left to lie on the road even while cholera is raging.

the posice, are employed to remove and inter them Mr. Hart has prudently abstained from objecting to Zemzem water. All through my stay in Mecca, which was for months, I used, like many others, to drink Zemzem water every morning bellyful, and I affirm that the habit made me stout. The well is within and I affirm that the habit made me stout. The well is within the Haram premises in Mecca, and has been built up from the very bottom to a height not less than five feet above ground with marble. All round the well there is a marble pavement extending to some distance from it, and those who drink the Zemzem water there or bathe with it, do so on the pavement, so that not a drop that falls on the ground can find its way back into the well. The Arabs in general have much veneration for this water, and ascribe to it many medicinal properties, and the people of Mecca and its vicinity have certain men called there Zemzemis in regular pay to supply their families with a quantity of the water daily to be used as a tonic. It was in 1893, i.e., the year after my return to Bombay, that cholera raged in Mecca and carried off many pilgrims. A friend of mine, who had been on a visit to the holy place the same year, brought on his return a quantity of Zemzem water, and gave me a part of it. I drank it for some days, and was none the worse for having done so .--- Yours, &c.,

MAHMOOD ALI BRELVI.

THE GOOD SLEEP OF A BAD MAN-

In a certain prison that we all have heard of, lay a convict upon his narrow from cot. He was to be hanged the next morning. Yet he lay there covered by a rough blanket, sleeping as quietly and soundly as a fired schoolboy. Occasionally the guard in the passage ourside peered between the bars of the cell, only to find his charge breathing deeply and regularly. This man had violated the law prohibiting murder; yet he had not violated the physical laws governing his own body, and Nature rewarded him as if he had been the noblest of his race.

regularly. This man had violated the law prohibiting murder; yet he had not violated the physical laws governing his own body, and Nature rewarded him as if he had been the noblest of his race.

That same night, less than a mile away, a rich man tossed and tumbled upon his luxurious bed. He was a good and useful member of society, yet he could not sieep. And, worse still, this happened to him every night. Sleep—that blessing which the Psalmist says, "God giveth his beloved," was practically a stranger to his man. What alled him? The tortures of conscience? Want of money? The fear of enemies? Nothing of the sort. Then why doubt he sleep as well as the murder? You would like to know? Right, let us look into the matter.

"I got no sleep at night; I would he for hours tossing about. In the morning I was worse tired than when I went to bed."

Thus writes Mrs. Eliza Mathews, of I, North Road, Burnt Oak, Edg. ware, near London, under date of September 22nd, 1892. Just two years before this time she lost her health. A foul taste in the mouth, loss of appetite, and great distress after eating were among the first things she complained of. She craved food at times, and fauced she could eat heartily, yet when the very dishes she had asked for were set before her she turned from them as though they were filth from the gutter. Her skin grew sallow, her eyes yellow, and she had a constant pain at her chest, sides, and between her shoulders. Her bowels were constipated and the least exertion set her heart thumping as if it must jump in into her mouth. At such times it was as much as ever that she could get her breath. She got so thin and weak she was no good for work. She couldn't walk out doors without stopping to rest every few rods almost. The doctor did whit he could for hei, all any doctor could do. Mirst he sand he thought her illness was oning to the smell of the tarmyard. This looked possible. Even the smell of violets has made strong men turn pale and fant dead away. Yet the doctor was woog. If he had been right, she

The point is plain enough. The convict slept soundly because he was a healthy man, although he was a wicked one. Our rich friend rolled about all night because his nerves were unstrung by the state of

Lady Elliott Portrait Memorial Committee.

Allan Arthur Allan Attnur Hon, Justice Beverley Hon, C. E. Buckland W. D. Cruncksnank Baton Gaerter Col. Hailes, 6th B. L. A. Macdonald

W. O. Bell-Irving S. E. J. Clarke H. H. The Maharaja Dabhanga, K.C.L.E. J. Joustain, E. F. Longiey C. Moore, David McLaten Mottes Hon, P. Playfair,

A.F.M. Abdur Rahman A. Sonson, J. O'B Saunders A. H. Wahs

J. O.B.Stunders [A. H. Wolfs
Maharaja Su. J. M. Taguer, K. C. St.
Pressiders F.—Allan Arthur,
HON. TPPASURER—J. O'B. Stunders,
HON SECRETARY—D wid McLuren Morrison,
At the meeting of Committee held at the Chamber of Commerce on the 19th January,
it was decided to have a picture of Lidy Elhott painted, any surplus to go towards a person d present.

All the commerce of the surplus of the surplus

All subscriptions to be sent to the HON TREASURER.

9, Hue Street, Calcutta.

WANTED.

A Sanskiit Pandu for the Hutwah Sanskiit Sahool who must be a passed Acharya in Bya-karan Sahitya and Dharma Shastra. Preference will be given to a Sarjoopari

Apply with copies of testimonials to-

BABU DEVENDRA NATH DUTT, Dewan, Raj Hutwa, Shanker Bhawan, > Pisachmochan, Benaves.

GENUINE HOMGEOPATHY. A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S. Homwopathic Practitioner,

May be consulted by letter or personally duly at his residence, 30 1, Colontolah Street, Calcutta.

Congress Sketches: A Review OF THE

SPEECHES AND THE SPEAKERS

AT THE

Foulth Indian National Congress Held at Allahabad.

Reprinted with additions and alterations from Reis 2 Ravvet

With a portrait of Mr. George Yule, President, Sold by the publisher G. P. Varma, and at the office of the Advocate, at Lucknow for 8 Annas a copy, besides postage

A. MEITREAUX & CO.

. Manufacturers, Repairers and Tuners of HARMONIUMS, ORGANS, &c.

9. UCKOOR DUIT'S LANE, CALCUTIA

We import materials direct from Europe and guarantee, the best workmanship and finish Humoniums, Box 3 octaves 1 stop Rs 30

Do, Lable ., 50 3 stops ,, 65 Do. Do. 4 .. Organs Indian) 1 swell ,, 55

Folding with 3 case complete. "3 stops & 1 swell " 70 Organs, Indian Do. Do.

5 ,, 5 do. do. do., ,,

TEXT BOOKS IN ENGLISH.

BY SARADA PRASAD BANERIEE SPECIMEN PAPERS AND ANSWERS

 $\langle U_R \rangle_{r_i}$ on THE ENGLISH ENTRA"

For 1895
Having the largest side of
ENGLISH PRE ENGLISH PREA COURSE

FOR 2nd & 3rd CLASSES
This book has been approved by the Central Fext Book Committee.

.KY

INDIA READERS, NO. 2

FOR 4th & 5th CLASSES.

INDIA READERS NO. 1

FOR 6th & 7th CLASSES These books are of remarkably simple style

and quite suited to Indian students.

The attention of School authorities in the N.-W. P. and Oudby the Punjab, Madras, Bombry, the Central Provinces, Assam, and Burma, mixited to the above publications of unique ments.

To be had of

S K LAHIRI & Co. College Square, Calcutti

THE WORKS OF DR JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE Rs. As.

Rs. As.
Commentaries on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, Marriage, Adoption,
Wills &c.* Pirce ... 16 o

No student or practitioner should be without a copy of this GREAT Work

Work,

(Sd.) Nana Bhai Haridas,ⁿ

Bengah translation of the Dyabhaga

the Wirakshara, f. Price.....

and the Mitakshara,† Price ... Bengali Translation of the Dittaka-

Bengah Translation of the Dattakachandrikat Price 0 8
The Evidence Act with notes in Bengah, Price ... 1 0
The Civil Procedure Code with notes in Bengah, Price ... 4 0
Principles of Zemindari Minagement and Book-keeping in Bengah of 10
First Lessons in English for Bengah boys, Price ... 0 4
Blood Sasin Prinals* 0 8

Bharat Sasan Pranah* 8

Bharat Sasan Pranalis
IN THE PRESS
The Philosophy of Religion from the point of Common Sense Price Rs. 5.

The Philosophy of Religion from the point of view of Common Sense Price Rs. 5.

CONFENES.

I Distorical Analysis of the evolution of religious systems.

2 Definition of the term "religion"

The problems of the philosophy of re-ligion and their solutions, old and new (a) Why do Hindus believe in ten Ave-tars or incarnations including in that series there that are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a tor-

(b) Why is it that all ancient systems recommend the specifice of animals,

The art of becoming a prophet.
The cumulative effect of hardswearing

for ages. Specimens of Pinanised history

Brihmmical and Christian priesteraft compared. The artificial miseries of men caused by religion.

Tyranny and taxation of religion.

The good man's adversity is the sharp man's opportunity.

Swindling as a fine art. New Superstitions that may be suggest-ed for the benefit of the priests.

The great prophets of the world and then doings. Probable origin of the Saiva religion. Tautric mysticism and abominations.

* To be had of Messis Thacker Spink &

Co., only.

† To be had of Messis. Thacker Spink & Co., and also at the Suradham Agency, No. 11, Raji Nabakrishna's Street, Calcutta.

A Wonderful Medicine.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

a Guinea a box, for Bilious and Nervous mutted to be worth Disorders, such as wind and Pinn in the Sto-mach, Sick, Heidiche, Greamess, Lumess, Swelling after Meals, Dizzness and Drow-sness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss

Scurvy, and Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams and all Nervous and Trembling Sensation, &c. The first dose will give relief in twenty minutes.

Every sufference cannestly invited to try one how of these Pills, and they will be a showledged to be.

knowledged to be

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

WOITH A GUINEA A BOA.

For females of all ages these Pills are instability, as a few doses of them carry off all humours, and bring about all that is required No female should be without them. There is no medicine to be found equal to Beecham's Pills for removing any obstruction or rregularity of the system. If taken according to the ducctions given with each box, they will smort restore females of all ages to sound and robust health. This has been proved by thou sands who have tried them, and found the benefits which are ensured by their use. For a Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, and all Disonders of the Liver, they act like magic, a few doses will be found to work wonders on the most important organs in the limits i machine.

wonders on the most important organs in the human machine.

The Natives of India will find Beecham's Pulls the finest medicine ever introduced to their notice; the European residents also will find them of great value for cooling the blood For throwing of fevers and presenting influm-nations in hos climates, they stand without agalest. "Space are Facts testified continually by members of dl. Classes of society, and one of the liest with trees to the Nervous and Debi-litated with BECHAM'S PILLS have the Largest Sole of any Patent Medicine in the Beecha : Magic Cough Pills.

As a remedy for Coughs in general, Asthma, nons, Hourseness, Shortness mess and Oppression of the i_k $\lambda(\epsilon)$, these Pills stand uniperson give Beecham's Cough if the most violefit Cough will be removed. of Breith, Li Chest, Wher Pills a trial, in a short time

Bec: am's Tooth Paste

Will recorded itself being efficacions and economic it is packed in near antight and economicollapsible T

NOTICE Atherton & Co will forward Atherion & Co will forward or effer, samples at the following at 8 annas per box, 1.1½d soci box, 25 gd size 2 inpres per 1 ste 12 annas per Tube, these a fide the cost of postage which on receipt of $170 12 ann is box; Tooth I will be added the amount.

Sole Wl lesale Agents ' India, BU 'MAH & CEYLON. G. ATHERTON & CO.,

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF

	MEMORIAL FUND.
1	Ris. His Highness. The Maharaja of Durbhanga K.C.I.E., 2,000 His Highness Une Maharaja of Vizi-
2,	Anagram, G.C.L.E., 1, 1,000 His Highness the Nawab Bahadur of
3	Moorshedabad, Amrul Oura, G.C.L.E. 800
4.	His Highness the Nawah of Junagadh, 500
5.	His Highness the Maharaja Bahadur
6.	of Cooch Behar, G.C.L.E 500 Nawab Bahadur Sir K. Abdul Ghang
	K.C.S.I., and Nawab Bahadur K. Ashan Ulla, C.I.B. 500 Nawab Imad Jung Bahadur 500 Nawab Azum Yar Jung Bahadur 500 Shams-ul Ulama Syed Ali Belgrami 500
7 8.	Nawab Imad Jung Bahadur 500
9.	Nawab Azun Yar Jung Bahadur 500 Shanis-ul Ulama Syed Ali Belgrami 500
10.	Vizier to the Nawab of Junagadh 300
11.	Mahagaia Rahadag Sig Laundga Ma-
12.	Baku Iodu I at Mathele
13. 14.	Prince Wala Kadr Sved Husem Ab
15.	Mirza Bahadur 150 Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Nawab
٠,٠	Syed Zamui Aodin Khan pidadui
16.	Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee, C.S.I. 100
17.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chandra
18.	Prince Mirza Sir Jahan Kadar Baha-
19.	dur, K.C.I.E., 100
20. 21.	Haji Kasim Ariff 100 Lieutenant-General the Hon'ble Sir
	H. Brackenbury, K.C.B., 100
22. 23.	Babu Jai Gobind Law 100 The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Guru Das
24.	Banerjee 50 The Honble Dr. Rash Behary Ghose 51
25. 26.	Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt 50 Shahibzada Mahomed Obidulla Khan
	Bahadur, C.S.I co
27. 28.	Maharajkumar Bennya Krishna 50 The Houble Mr. Justice E. J. Treve-
29.	lyan 50 The Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jaubar
	Khan Bahadur so
50 .	Calcutta
31. 2 2.	Maharaja Durga Charau Law, C.I.E., S
733. 34-	The Hamble W. C. Bannarian 50
35.	Nawab Syed Ameer Husein Ro
36. 37.	Syed Nurul Huda, Esq., C.S., Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan 50
38. 39.	J. G. Ritchie, Esq. C.S.,
40.	F. J. Rowe, Esq de
41.	hadur, 25
42. 43	Kumar Radna Prosad Roy (25
44	Bubu Pashupatty Nath Bose 10. 25
45. 46.	Rumar Doulat Chandrak Roy 5 45 Babu Guru Prosonno Gnose 25
. 4 7·	C.I.R 27
48. 49	Raya Jotindia Nith Chowdhury 25
50	Raja Sreenath Roy 25
51. 52.	R Belchambers Esq.
53. 54.	Raja Surja K inta Acharjee Chowdhury 25
55.	Babu Gopal Lal Seal 25
56. 57.	Mount Stan Abous Salam . •
58. 59.	Lord William Beresford K C L P
60. 61.	Munshi Gholam Risool 25
62.	Munshi Gholam Rasool 25 F. H. Skrine, Esq. Cs., 25 The Huible H. J. S. Cutton Cs., C.S.L. 20 Prince Mahomed Bakhiyar Shah., A., Baboo Surgudra Nath Pal Chowdry 20
63. 64.	Baboo Surendra Nath Pal Chowdry
65. 66.	Moulyi Imadd. Ali
67.	Rat Shib Chunder Nundy Bahadar 20
68. 69.	D. Panioty, Esq 20 Chowdry Mahomed Arjamand Khan H. E. A. Cotton, Esq. Barrister-at-law 20
70. 71.	Moulyi Sved Ashruffudding Ahmad '
7a.	T toolin Too on
/u. 	1. Ingus, Esq. C.S 16

3.	A. H. Black E. M.	· (16
ă.,	P. F. Handison, CA.	*	16
5.	The Charles Siraju	i islam
۶.	Khua Maria		16
۰6 .	Montei Maralandeen		15
		•••
79 '	E 104 Habitt, Esq., 2 1	·	15
۲.	Babon D. Phillicand, Ca.	•••	10
7°.	N. T. T. C. M. T. W. W. T. W. W. T. W. W. T. W. W. T. W. W. T. W. W. T. W. W. T. W. W. T. W. W. T. W. W. T. W. W. T. W. T. W. T. W. T. W. T. W. W. W. T. W. W. W. T. W. W. W. T. W. W. W. W. W. T. W.		10
6	A NAME SOME OF A NAME OF THE PARTY OF THE PA		IO
3١,	in home. Brue		10
2.	Aral wh Worth Bose		10
3.	" Janai Lai Mhan	•••	10
	Moulvi Syud Akrani Hossain	•••	10
4.		•••
5. 6.	Moulei Azir Ahmud	•••	10
	Rai Kanysiai Dey Bahadoor	•••	10
37.	H. Haimwood, Esq		10
88.	Babu Harry Mohan Chunder		10
lg.	Baboo Chakkanial Roy	• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •	5
io.	Saradapressed Chose	••••	ź ubscriptions will be thankfully
	Honorary Islat Servereries	received	υy

the Honorary Phila Secretaries,
RAI RAJ KUNAN SARVADHICARI BAHADUR,
A. Beitist Indian Street, Calcutta, and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMAN, ESQ., Harrister--at Law,

R. 6" UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Guaranteed three Years.

Strang, accurate, pretty, small, open faced, nickel silvern, keyless, short winding, patent, "UNDAUNTED" watch, with hand setting mechasism, secondhand for Doctors, ornespale boild dish for R. 6 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years! guarantee. Warranted to stand the roughest sae. Runs: more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily repairable. Others sell at double our rates. One one winding. Will last a life time. Easily repairable. Others sell at dauble our rates. One watch free for the burchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Ino. Dickson of Haputal-Railway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps splendid tims and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jerks, x Dr. H. Moore of Royal Artillery from Ponnamallee says:—I sold it for Rs. 16, x Pfe. W. Hopkins of Sussey Regt. from Dundum says:—I have sold it for Rs. 20, x Mr. T. B. Scott of Patna Opium Department says:—The watch you sent me some

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real

CATARRH.

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness. A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contaginate or that these diseases are contaginate or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining menforancy of the nose and custachian tules. Sicroscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been semulated whereby these distressing diseases are registed and permanent; cured by a fact simple applications made at house by the parient nuce in two weeks. A paraphlet explicitions where the treatment is sent on receipt of 3td mamp by A. Hurron Dixon, as the Boor St. TORONTO, Cannita. "IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer and sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering: while in ASTHMA; BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most chronic form.

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the tortures of TOOTHACHE? A single application will relieve you.

In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend.

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the result speak for itself.

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Physicians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of homes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar pre-paration has ever before attained

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throughout the world.

Agents in Calcutta: Smith Stanistreet & Co. Scott Thompson & Co. and Batngate & R. Scott Co. Limited.

REIS & RAYPET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT)

WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER AND

Review of Politics, Literature, and Sonety RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION. If paid in advance,

Yearly			k,	12
· Hali-yearry	•••	•••		7
Quarterly				Á
Monthly	•••		√Ke.	ī-8
Single or sample	Сору	•••	£118,	0-8
· If no	t paid in a	dvance.	Ç., 🐪	•
Yearly		,	Rs.	18
Haif-yearly	•••			10.8
Quartert			"	6-0
Monthly	• • •		"	2-4
Single or sample	Copy		Aus.	0-1:
No additional	cnarge for	postage	or pe	or.

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT

Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inciré bach insertion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5.

Baginess "Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphies (Carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis Arays."

Wellington OFFICE: I. Ucksor Dutes Lane. Street, Calcutta.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

REVIEW OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, MARCH 23, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 667.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

-vesmor MIDNIGHT MUSIC.

SILENCE and darkness rested o'er the town ; The midnight clock had tolled its solemn numbers, When, like some blissful strain from heaven sent down, Broke music on the quiet of our slumbers.

Scarcely yet conscious, did the drowsy ear, Drinking in tones secaphic in their seeming, Convey them to the soul entranced to hear, And wove them in the fabric of its dreaming Forgotten were the shadows of the night, And music shed a glory o'er the hour, And sombre darkness grew with joy bedight, Beneath the influence of its magic power.

The infant, slumbering by its mother's breast, Waked at the sound, and waking smiled a blessing, Then sank again secenely to its rest, Its tiny hands its mother's face caressing.

The sickness-bowed, to whom the weary time Lagged dreary on, replete with bitter sadness, I' and the sweet note that filled the air, sublime, And felt a thrill run through his frame of gladuess.

The fevered pulse a healthy tone assumed, Harmonious throbbing to the music's measure And the glazed eve 'came momently illumed With radiant tokens of a present pleasure.

The widow's tears a moment ceased to flow; She hailed the blessed melody a token Of promise to her hopes, a mental bow, A note from spheres where unions are unbroken.

Bidding her heart its bitter strife to cease And from the tuture joyful hope to borrow; Quelling the raging waves of grief to peace, And soothing, like a chaim, the preying sorrow.

To the close-curtained chamber of the bride The music notes on airy wing ascended, Blessed the fond pair harmoniously allied, And with their aspirations sweetly blended.

But, all too soon did flee that 'witching strain-Fled 'mid the darkness thus made doubly dreary ; And the still solemn hours rolled on again Their sluggish wave more tedious and weary.

WEEKLYANA.

INDIA is not to be weighted with any portion of the cost of the Royal Commission on Opium. It was at first decided to distribute it equally between the Indian and the Home Revenues. But wiser and juster counsels prevailing, India has been set free of the burden. The last decision, the Standard says, is generally approved in the House of Commons. A number of members on the Opposition Benches intend, however, to draw attention on the Supplementary Estimates to the waste of money involved in the inquiry.

THE ever-watchful eye on India of Lord Stanley of Alderley could not blink at the injustice of the excise duty on cotton. We read in the papers by the mail:

"As a corollary to the recent discussion in the House of Commons "As a corollary to the recent discussion in the House of Commons on the Indian import duties, Lord Stanley of Alderley intends on an early day to ask the representatives of the Government in the Upper House, how they justify the protection given to Manchester cotton goods by the imposition of 5 per cent, excise duty on cloths woven in India from Manchester yains above 20 counts, which will have paid 5 per cent, import duty, and how much net revenue is expected from tins excise duty; also whether, this step having been taken on behalf of cotton, the Government will take a similar step on behalf of the silk industry, by placing duties on foreign silk stuffs imported into England."

FROM time to time, the costliness of the India Office is brought into prominence, but those in immediate charge never admit it. On February 22, in the House of Commons,

February 22, in the House of Commons,

"Mr. Hanbury asked the Secretary of State for India. Whether it is the fact that, while the Colonial Office costs British taxpayers about 40,0001, the Foreign Office about 67,0001, and the Treasury about 60,0001, annually, the India Office about 67,0001, and the Treasury about 60,0001, annually, the India Office about 67,0001, and the Treasury about 60,0001, annually, the India Office about 67,0001, a year to the India Exchequer; to whom are the detailed accounts of the India Office presented; and whether he will lay upon the table an estimate of the annual expenses, salaries, &c., of the India Office similar to those showing the cost of the other departments of the State.

Mr. Fowler; I cannot admit that there is any analogy between the expenses of the India Office, which include the Civil and Military, Financial, Political, Judicial, and Public Works Departments of the whole Indian empire. The accounts are presented to and are andred by the auditor of Indian Home Accounts, and when andited are laid before Parliament. An estimate of the cost of the India Office is annually laid on the table of the House."

THEY are for a railway to the top of Mont Blanc. Commencing at the Miage Ravine, above, Saint Gervais, it is proposed to carry the line through a tunnel 7.400 mètres in length. From this point a vertical shaft, 2,800 mètres in height, will bring the traveller up to the summit. The period of construction is calculated at ten years, and the expenditure at 9,000,000 fis.

.*. A. M. ANDREE proposes to attempt the North Pole in a balloon, to be constructed in Paris, at a cost of 80,000 fis.

THE Brazilian Government has consented to pay to France 500,000 frs. as an indemnity to the families of M. Buette and other French subjects shot during the revolution, Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, if possible, as the safest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

IT is reported:

"Porous glass has been introduced into Paus. It admits air by fine holes which do not cause a draught and is quite transparent to light, so that its hygienic advantage over ordinary glass is considerable. A French doctor has also brought out a double pane by which the fresh air entering from below passes up between the two sheets of glass and out at the top into the room near the ceiling."

We remember to have read the discovery before. When will the new glass be imported into India? If it can keep out dust, it will be a boon, indeed!

AGAIN: -

"At Olympia,' in Paris, two American fire-enters are attracting the attention of French scientific men. Long flumes issue from their mouth and from the tips of their fingers without burning them. The secret of the fire would be useful to players of Mephistophicles, but the Americans guard it, and will not say whether it is some electrical or chemical effect. It is possible that they have found a volatile essence which blazes without burning them, or again they may employ the electric glows of Tesla."

Such feats have been exhibited in this country. It is many years, in our younger days, we remember to have seen a person stuffing his mouth with chargoal blow out flunes and, on another occasion, a boy carry boiling oil on his hairless scap in an iron vessel. In the latter case, the metal was not in direct contact with the head. A thin bony substance separated it from the vessel. The Bhanumati jugglers who played several such tricks seem to have died out, for we see them not now, at least in this part of the country.

A HUSBAND obtained through the French courts a divorce of his wife. He widely circulated the proceedings to his relatives and friends. The divorced wife has sued the husband for libel assessing her damages at 2,000frs.

MRS. Betty Webster, of Aysgarth, North Yorkshire, long a widow, was 105 years old in February last, having been born on Feb. 25, 1790. She is in possession of all her faculties, and enjoys splendid health She is an out-pensioner of an almshouse.

An old peasant woman named Irma Andrejewna Fedosova, haling from Olonez, who is seventy years of age, exhibits marvellous power of memory. She can neither read nor write, but can recite by heart 19,000 folk-songs and poems. She was brought to the capital by a Russian littérateur, who, with the help of a colleague, has written down a large quantity of her treasure, and is preparing his rich find for the Press.

WE read . -

"M. Mer has observed that the weather affects the growth of trees as it does that of vegetables. To the dry summer of 1893 the firs of the Vosges grew less than usual both in height and diameter. A similar effect was produced by the exceptionally cold wet similer of 1888. The dry spring of 1892 only diminished the growth in length, and the dry autumn of 1887 only checked the growth in thickness, In short, there are good, bad, and middling years of growth, and M. Mer considers that foresters ought to study the matter in order to discover the Conditions of weather which produce them."

THE Finance Minister presented his Budget for the next official year to the Supreme Legislative Council on Thursday last. It will be discussed next week. It takes into account the new taxes imposed early in the session, and there is no proposition to remit any. On the contrary, a special Fund is utilized in other ways. Here is the official summary of the Financial Statement, the figures being in thousands of Rx:-

"The accounts for 1893-94 have closed with a deficit of 1.547 being 246 better than anticipated last year. The accounts were in ide up at 14.55 pence exchange, and include 1,061 charged for Rulway Construction under Famine Insurance. tion under Famine Insurance.

The statement then reviews the fluctuations of exchange during

The statement then reviews the fluctuations of exchange during 1894-95, during which about seventrem inflions sterling of remittance has been made at an average of 1300 pence exchange. This rate is adopted in making up the Revised Estimates for 1894-95, and also for the Budget Estimates for 1895-96.

The Budget Estimates for 1895-95 showed a deficit of 302, but if the sterling expenditure had been brought to account at this lower rate, the deficit would have been 2166. The Revised Estimates show a surplus of 990, giving an improvement, apart from exchange, of 3,156. Of this amount, Opium Revenue gives 931, due to higher prices, and the Opium expenditure is 610 short of estimate, owing to failure of crop. Customs duries give 930, of which 359 is due to the Cotton duties imposed in December, and the rest to moderation of original estimates, the import of silver especially having exceeded all auticipations. Improved Railway earnings give 351, and Excise 150. These items aggregate 2.972 but against them must be taken 304, interest paid in anticipation during four conversion. The expenditure throughout is well within the estimates, and under Army the savings due to low prices have been more than enough to meet excess charges, 393 for Bruish soldiers' pay, which is fixed at a sterling rate, and therefore increases as exchange falls, and 195 for Wazin Expedition. This last will cost a further sum of 90 in 1955-96.

The statement then reviews the Customs legislation of 1894, showing that the total increase obtained is 3,083, namely, 1,628 by the Tariff of March 1894, and 1,455 by Cotton duries.

In preparing the Budget Estimates of 1895-96, the Government had to face the following position as compared with those of 1894-95. Increases of expenditure dependent on exchange, 2,504, cessation of temporary relief obtained last year by Provincia Contributions and by reducing Civil and Miditary Works, 685, increased opium payments arising from necessity of enhancing the price paid to cultivators, 460. These added to last year's deficit give an amount of 3,951 to be made up. The Government get by diministron of interest payments due to conversion operation, 525, by better Customs Revenue, including Cotton Duties, 1,883, better Railway Revenue, 788, better Land Revenue, due partly to postipiements from last year, 403 better Opium Revenue, 405, better Stamps and Excise Revenue, 192; numerous other differences, net, 69, These improvements produce a surplus of 376. A general increase is announced in the scale of sepoys' pry, to take effect on July 1st. For a hundred and ten thousand men this will cost 260 a year, and the charge adds 180 to new year's estimates. The charge is accepted as long foreseen, and now urgent. A sum of 150 is provided for military preparitions due to disturbances in Chital. These charges of 180 and 150 reduce the surplus of 376 to 46, which is the declared surplus in the Budget.

Under these circumstances the Famme Insurance Grant remains in abeyance in the same wa ishment. For capital expenditure by the State on Railways and Irigation Works 4,400 are provided, and it is announced, with the usual reserve, that seventeen million sterling Council Bills will be drawn, being the same mount as in the current year, and that there will be no borrowing, except for the replacement of two million sterling temporary debt falldue in May.

ing due in May.

In conclusion, the Government, while claiming to have made a full year's progress towards the restoration of the financial position, express their sense of the difficulties and anxieties which still surround it."

THE Municipal elections last Saturday passed off quietly. There was no unusual stir except in two or three polling stations. As many as eleven out of eighteen Wards in the town proper were uncontested In all the seven suburban Wards, there were more than two candidates for the honour of the Commissionership of Calcutta, The polling was concluded the same day, except in one Ward, but on the second day, the candidate who had the lowest number of votes retired, leaving those above him undisputed winners. We give below the names of the gentlemen who have been returned, as also of those who competed. The feature of the present election is that there have been several applications to Courts to disqualify candidates, both before and after the election. In Ward 25, Biboos Monilal Banerjee and Satis Chunder Ghose tried to disqualify each other. In Ward 18, attempts are being made to unseat one of the elected. The defeated candidate has obtained a rule on him and the Corporation to show cause why the Chanman should not be directed to strike out the name of Mr. Corkhill and substitute for it, that of Baboo R. N. Chatteriee It is to be remarked that, as in previous years, the returned are chiefly men of law. There are 14 new comers. Old members are being replaced by new. Of those who were elected when the present elective system was granted in 1876, that is in the Town proper excluding the added area, only seven continue to be on the Board.

WARD No. 1.

Babu Bhupendro Nath Bose. Babu Pashuputty Nath Bose. WARD No. 5.

Kumai Dinendro Narain Roy. Babn Ld Behary Bysack. WARD No. 6.

Babu Radha Chuin Pal. Dr. Buban Mohun Sucar

WARD No. 7.

WA Babu Huriyram Goenka, Babu Juggernath Khuonah,

WARD No. 8.

Moulvi Budruddin Hyder. Babu Smath Duit.

WARD No. 9.

Babu Norendro Nath Sen. Dr. Zibuuddin Ahmed.

WARD No. 12.

Mr. Patrick McGuire. Babu Nobin Chand Boral.

...

• • • • 112

... 92 98

...

• • • •

... 235

164

306 290

198

680 ...

606

471 • • •

111

53

The Hon'ble Surendro Nath Bannerji. The Hon'ble Surendro Natu Banacij. Moulvi Ahmed, Khan Bahadur, WARD No. 15. Dr. Laurence Fernandez. Dr. Laurence rernangez.
The Hou'ble Seraj-ul-Islam Khan Bahadur.
WARD No. 16. Mr. J. G. Apcar. Mr. W. H. Ryland. WARD No. 23. Babu Ramtarun Bannerji.
Babu Amulya Dhone Audy.
The following is the result of the voting in the different contested. WARD No. 2. Mr. N. N. Ghose ... Babu Chandi Lali Sing Dr. U. K. Dutt ... ••• ... 1084 WARD No. 3. Babu Kally Nath Mitter Babu Kally Nath Mitter
,, Akhoy Chunder Bose
Kumar Shushil Krishna Deb
WARD No. 4. ... 663 ... 609 ... 850 736 Mr. D. E. Cianenburgh
Babu Rash Behary Dass
,, R. J. Chunder Chunder
,, Surendro Nath Dass
, WARD No. 11. 259 311 ٠., • • • • 447 433 Bibn Ashutosh Dey Di. Jogendro Nath Ghose ... Bibu Deva Prosad Sarvadhikari ... ••• 251 603 563 ... • • • WARD No. 13. Babu Mohini Mohun Chatterji ... Benodebehary Bannerjee ... Moulvi Fazlul Rahman Khan ... WARD No. 17. 610 ••• 542 484 ... Mr. G. T. Doucet Mr. J. Ghosal Mr. G. C. Farr ••• ... 213 WARD No. 18. 85 M. C. F. Deefoldts Mr W Corkhill Dabu R. N. Chattern WARD No. 19 • • • • ... Babu Amrita Lal Ghose ... Moulvi Ag i Mahomed Musa 235 Moulvi Abdul Jawad ...
Moulvi Saved Yusuf Ali ...
Mi, Anz Alimed ...
Babu Ram Chore 195

WARD No. 14.

HALF of the encumbered estate of Pandra, in the District of Manbhum, which half was, in November 1878, brought under the operation of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act, VI of 1876, as amended by Act V of 1884, has now been made over to the present holders Babus Shib Natain and Jagat Narain, sons of the late Babu Ananta Narain Sinch.

M1, A212 Ahmed ... Babu Ram Churn Bose ... WARD No. 21.

Babu Kanti Chunder Bannerji ...

Babu Preonath Mullick
Bubu Jogendro Chunder Ghose ...
Mr. C. R. Dass ...

Rumar Suttyabadi Ghosal ... Prince Muza Mahomed (withdrew)

Babu Satish Chunder Ghose Rai Okhil Chunder Mukerji, Bahadur

Mr. Brunfeld
Babu Surendra Nath Roy
"Suttya Mohun Ghosal
Moulvi Zahid Rahim ...
Kumat Suttyabadi Ghosal

Babu Moni Lai Bannerji

•••

... WARD No. 22

WARD No. 24

...

WARD No. 25.

...

•••

. .

Dr. Sheik Bechu Mr. D. Swinhoe

٠

Mr. Brannfeld

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all kinds. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Street, Westminster, London, S. W.

NOTES & LEADERETTES,

OUR OWN NEWS,

THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

COUNT Ito, Prime Minister, and Viscount Mutsui, Foreign Minister, proceeded to Simonseki to meet the Chinese peace plenipotentiaries. Mr. Foster, the American ex-Secretary of State, is there with the Viceroy Li-Hung Chang, who was received with all the honours due to his rank. Negotiations for peace have been opened. But a successful issue is much doubted at Yokoham's owing to the military party being predominant in Japan. Notice has been given of a resolution in the Japanese Diet that the time for the conclusion of peace with China has not yet arrived. The other particulars about the war are :-- China has asked for the intervention of Russia and Germany to protect the integrity of her continental territory against the demands of lapan.

The Japanese captured off Newchang a Chinese gunboat with large , quantities of war materials on board.

The Times' correspondent at St. Petersburg telegraphs that it is stated in that capital that the whole Russian Mediterranean Squadion has been ordered to the Pacific to be in readiness for any eventualities.

Prince Komatsu has been ordered to the front as Commander of the expeditionary army against China

The Emperor of China has written to King Humbert asking for the good offices of Italy to assist in the restoration of Peace with Japan

Arrangements are already in progress in London for raising a new Chinese gold loan in anticipation of the wir indemnity to be paid to Japan.

Four Japanese warships are cruising off Take stopping and searching all vessels for contraband of war.

Information has been received in London that the Japanese are blockading Tamsin, a Treaty port in North Formosa.

QUEEN Victoria arrived at Nice on the 15th, and was cordially welcomed by the French officials and the heads of the Municipality. The streets were gaily decorated and the citizens heartily cheered as she drove in an open carriage escorted by the military to the hotel at Cuniez. .

ALTHOUGH Lord Rosebery was able to attend the Cabinet Council held on the 19th to settle the question of new Speaker, he has not yet recovered. He still suffers from persistent insomnia which greatly retards his convalence and prevents him from attending any but most argen; business. At the meeting it was settled that Mr. Campbell-Bannerman could not be spared for the post. The question of a successor to the Mr Arthur Peel is still maseitled

It has been officially announced that the alarmest rumours concerning the health of Lord Rosebery and the necessity for his retirement based upon recent bulletins, are unfounded

MR. Fowler progresses favourably towards recovery, but is still confined to his bed.

ALTHOUGH the Amit's visit to England is uncertain, preparations for his reception have already begun. The Amir, however, does not go. One of his sons is preparing for the parmey.

THE Secretary of War, in submitting the Army Estimates to the House of Commons, said that the army auxiliaries were steadily advancing in efficiency, and that (the war in the Fir Eist proved that Great Britain was working in the right direction with regard to organization and armament,

Mr. Campbell Bannerman also said it was proposed to increase the strength of the artillery by one horse and seven field butteries.

In the House of Commons, on the 19th, the discussion of the question of the retention of Cyprus under British administration was renewed. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, replying to the suggestions of some of the speakers, refused to burthen the British taxpayer by raising a loan for the purpose of buying the island outright. Sir W. Harcourt declared it had never been proposed to hand back Cyprus to Turkey, and that he would be sorry to hand anyone over to the control of Turkey.

SIR Edward Grey, Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, replying to Mr. Snape who suggested the enhancing of the Indian excise duty on proof spirits with a view of relieving the Budget, said that a sudden large increase in this form of taxation was not considered expedient.

ADVICES from Moosh, where the Armenian Commission on the alleged Sassoni atrocities is still sitting, stare that the Turkish authorities are throwing every possible difficulty in the way of the Commissioners, and seeking to stiffe the enquiry. Yielding to the strong pressure by interested Powers, the Porte has agreed to send an Armenian diagonian to assist the foreign delegates on the Commission.

THE Spanish Cabinet, under Senor Sugasta, has resigned owing to the Minister of War and the high inditary officials supporting certain subalterns who wiceked the offices of two Madrid newspapers and thrashed the Editors for reflections on the unreadness of Spanish Officers to serve in Cuba.

THE Spanish troops in the Philippines have routed the Malay Mussulmans in the Island of Mindanas, killing one hundred, including the Sultan and his son. The Spanish loss was seventeen killed and a hundred and ninety wounded.

In connection with the investigations that are being held regarding the bribery and blackmailing scandals, twenty-five of the highest police officials of New York have been indicted for corruption

THE British Representative has presented an ultimatum to the Nicaraguan Government demanding the indemnity of £15,000 and the appointment of a Commission to arbitrate on the question of damages sustained by the British subjects who were expelled from the Mosquito Coast. Seven weeks are allowed by the ultimatum for the compliance of the British demands, to date from February 25

THE Standard publishes an article reviewing the Indian Budget. It says that a general impression will be felt that the financial position is neither depressing nor altogether reassuring.

THE official Turkestan Gazette publishes an article saying that the concessions made by Russia, in the Painir region, prove the reality of her pacific sentiments and her firm desire to live at peace with Great Britain. The article refers to the strong movement noticeable in Tashkend for acquiring the English language and English literature, and the Grestle regards this as fresh evidence of popular sympthy with England, due to the cementing of the friendship between the two countries on the accasion of the death of the Cai

LAST week Sit Comer Petheram, entertuned. Lord and Lady Elgin to dinner. Lady Eazabeth Erice, could not be present, on account of an attack of measles, which has invaded many homes in Calcutta.

SMALL-POX continues gathering its victims. It is reported "Mme Koenig has unfortunately become a victim to it, having succumbed the very day after her performance at the 1st Stunday Club Concert. She had been vaccinated on the previous Wednesday." It has been remarked that vaccination has proved no prevention, if it is any, in the present epidemic. We have reports of other cases where vaccination, rastead of keeping it away, has brought on the disease. Those believing in its elicitor, in the absence of any true remedy or preventive, are consoled by the thought, that but for it the attack would be were welfare.

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Suging in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free.—Arthreal Ear-drums and similar appliances entirely superseded. Audiess THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLEORN, LONDON.

THE Evening Party in honour of the Hon'ble Mi. P. M. Mehta, has been fixed for Thursday next, at the Town Hall, at 9-30 P. M. Those desiring to attend, who have not been invited, will, according to the advertisement in another column, please write to the Secretary, Mi. H. C. Mailik, to the Entertainment Committee, at 12, Wellington Square

A number of gentlemen also entertain Mr. Mehta to a dinner at the Town Hall, on Tuesday next.

AFTER an amount of haggling, the Government of Bengal has accepted a part of an offer of Rs. 50,000 for two charable institutions, from Babu Kailash Chandra Mookerjee, late of the Subordonar Judicial Service, whose retirement was bastened by the death of his only infant son. The Government gazettes its thanks to the Babu for his offer of Rs. 28,000 for a dispensary in his native village of Belgoria, in the Nadia District.

VOLTAIRE speaks, in Candide, of a dinner, in a public Restaurant of very little pretensions to respectability, in which chance had assembled half a dozen kings who, having lost their kingdoms, had been reducted to the lowest depth of poverty. The prince of mockers might have drawn upon his lively in ignation for the account of that meeting of ex-kings and their conversation. But ex-kings, in the actual history or the world, are not that rare commodity which some may suppose. Here, at any rate, is an account to match. It is that of an ex-inlet who, having been thrown into the debtors' gool, at last came out of it, renouncing his lost kingdom for the benefit of his creditors.

"In the old churchyard of St. Anne, in Dean Street, Soho, there is buried one who struited his brief hour a King and yet died a pauper.—Theodore of Corsica. The children of the district meet for play and pastime in the churchyard which has been thoughtfully laid out for their benefit. In striking contrast to their democratic much, the church wall displays a tablet telling of Royal misfortune. It has a crown at the top, and beneath it an inscription written by Horace Walpole.—

Near this place is interied
THEODORE, KING OF CORSICA,
Who died in this parish Dec. 11, 1756,
Immediately after leaving the King's Bench Prison by the benefit of the Act of Tusolvency, in consequence of which he registered his Kingdom of Corsica for the use of his creditors.

The grave, great teacher, to a level brings Heroes and beggars, galley slaves and kings; But Theodore this moral learn'd ere dead— Fate poured its lessons on his living head, Bestowed a kingdom and deny'd him bread.

Fate poured its lessons on his living head, Bestowed a kingdom and denyld him bread.

The monarch who is thus commemorated was the son of a West phalian, Buron de Newhoff and Stein, who had made a mesaltimic and had been disowned by his family. The dole wis born in Paris in 1696, and, left an orphan, entered the household of the Duke of Orleans. Still young, he was attracted by the fame of Charles XII, of Sweden, and in his service saw a good deal of fighting. After a most adventious career in moy lands, he entered the service of the Emperor of Austria. It was here that his Corsican career opened the Corsican shad been vissils of the Genoese, but had been so tyrannically treated that they had risen in revolt, which had been partified by the mediation of one Emperor. Theo lone de Newhorf was instructed by the Emperor to impure into the grievances of the Corsicans, with the result that, each inted by his manners, they invited him to become their king. This, with the aid of the Sultan of Turkey he was able to accept. His regul listed only six months, but in this time he displayed much activity staising an army, drawing up a code of laws, remitting taxation, and coming money with his own head on it. He granted patents of nobility, and instituted a new order of kinghithood, the Order of Deliverance. The fishe Corsicans were soon stirred up against him by the priests, the Genoese collected at army, and Theodone hid to fly from one European capital to mother In 1748 he came to unersmish. There were certain debts which the examonatch had royally contracted, and far wint of a trifling $400 he was sent to the King's Bench prison, where he lay dependent on the charitable subscriptions of Horace Walpole and others. In Jun-1755 Theodone took advantage of the new Act of Insolvency, and liverally renounced at the Guildhall his Kingdom of Corsica for the benefit of his creditors, who, it is to be feared, never got much out of hat pair uplan active to the kings's Bench prison, where he lay dependent on the charitable subscripti

The assets placed by this royal debtor in the hands of the court, were such that the like of them have never fallen to the lot of any Insolvent Court to administer. Was any attempt made by the court to bring under its control what was offered so right royally, or was discretion regarded as the better part of valour and Coisica left unmolested?

THE Positivist-Nachurs has won his day. It is now the hour of the pure Positivist.

THE opening page of the Calcutta Gazette of last week, was dated the 6th March, 1895. It was in keeping with the orders commencing the next page, Maulyi Mahomed Abdul Kadir, Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector, Howrah, is transferred to the head-quarters station of the 24-Parganas district; Moulvi Abdus Salam, Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector, on leave, is posted to the head-quarters station of the Howrah district; Babu Keder Nath Dutt, Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector, on furlough, is posted to the head-quarters station of the 24 Parganas district; and the Hon'ble Mouivi Abdul Jubber, Khan Bahadur, Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector, 24-Parganas, is allowed leave, under articles 370 and 377 of the Civil Service Regulations, from the 21st March 1895, or such subsequent date as he may avail himself of it, up to the 30th July 1895. The orders mean more than meets the eye or the ear. Later in the day, the date was corrected into the 13th, but the orders remain the same.

BABU Kedarnath, we believe, replaces Khan Bahadur Abdul Jubbar, who is not allowed the satisfaction of retiring as Inspector General of Registration which he had rightly deserved. Moulvi Abdul Kadir comes in place of Khan Bahadar Dilwar Hossein Ahmed, who has the offer of the Inspector-Generalship. A physically unfit Deputy on sick leave, is gazetted for Howrah, while those with much higher claims and having the promise of transfers to Calcutta, are entirely thrown overboard.

OUR Monghyi correspondent writes :-

"An incident, rather of an uncommon nature, happened in the Deputy Magistrate's Court at Monghyi. The officer, a Bengalee Baboo, sentenced a prisoner to two and half years' imprisonment. The culpin all of a sudden became desperate and assaulted the Deputy Baboo with a stick which he had secreted on his person. The blow was not slight. He was instantaneously arrested and after being well beaten by the spectators, was handed over to the Police. But the Magistrate took the assault coolly. He remarked that the man was not in his senses, considering the place where he was going. The man, after being tried by the District Magistrate, was sentenced to another eighteen months' imprisonment."

Was there a medical examination before the second trial? Were the antecedents of the infortunate man carefully enquired into? If it was not a case of at least temporary insanity, and if the main is not a notable budinosh, we fear, it was the injustice of the sentence that moved him powerfully. The fact of the secreting of a club on his person is a circumstance that goes against the theory of insanity. The Deputy Magistrate must be held to have acted with true judicial calminess.

Ar the last meeting of the Faculty of Arts, the following five Senators were elected to represent the Faculty on the Syndicate for the year 1805-06:—

Dr. Mahendialal Sucar, Dr. Ashutosh Mukerji, Mr. A. M. Bose, Mr. A. F. M. Abdui Rahman and Babu Kali Churn Banerjee.

DEATH has claimed Babi Ashutosh Mookerjee, Senior, M. A., B. L., Preinchand Roychand scholar. He expired of anæmia, on the 22nd instant, in his temporary residence in Madan Mitter's Lane, Calcutta. Possessed of true Braman intelligence, Babi Ashutosh

The Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science. 210, Bow-Bazar Street, Calcutta.

(Session 1894-95.)

Lecture by Babu Syamadas Mukherjee, M. A., on Thursday, the 28th Iust., at 4 P. M., Subject. Invariant Theory of Conics (continued). Admission Fee, Rs. 4 for Physics, and Rs. 4 for Chemistry; Rs. 6 for both Physics and Chemistry; Rs. 4 for Physiology; Rs. 4 for General Biology; Rs. 6 for complete course of Physiology and Biology. The charge for a single lecture is 2 Annas.

MAHENDRA LAL SIRCAR, M.D.,

March 23, 1895.

Honorary Secretary.

distinguished himself in the examinations of the Culcutta University. Passing what is called the Studentship Examination, he won the Premchand Roychand scholarship in the first year of its foundation, beating such competitors as Justice Garadas Bunneijee and Babu Kali Churn Banerjee. Although he joined the High Court bar and gave ample promise of success, yet his attendance was very irregular and in a manner he gave up the law. He was a distinguished writer, and his articles in Mookerjee's Magazine and the Calcutta Review were much applauded. His review of Mr. Justice Markby's Elements of Law in the former periodical at once brought him to the fore front of Indian writers in English, and his celebrated article, in the latter, on the Rent Law of Bengal, made the Englishman speak of him as "a tower of strength" to the zimindari cluse. Speaking of this article, Mr. C. H. Tawney said that it deserved all the praise that the Englishman had bestowed on it, and referring to the fact of Babu Ashutosh's having sat at his feet concluded with the observation-"The acoin I am supposed to have sown has expanded into a goodly oak." It will not do to conceal the fact that the deceased, after leaving college, led a very irregular life which soon told on his health. He suffered his splendid abilities to waste in consequence of his persistent worship of Bacchus. His intellectual efforts were spasmodic, as he was thoroughly unfitted for sustained work of any kind. For the three or four last years of his life, having given up the law entirely, he was a Professor in the Metropolitan Institution. He gave up his deity when he was physically unable to approach his altar, The example of his wasted life should operate as a beacon to those countrymen of his who prize the mere culture of the intellect to the neglect of that healthy conduct without which one cannot discharge the duties of life and command the esteem of fellow men.

LORD Eignu's reign is alreally an eventful one. The import duties have been re-imposed. Cotton yards and goods left untouched at first have been declared hable to duty with an excise impost. Government by "mandate" has been openly avowed. A Dutbar of Native Chiefs has been held at Lithore and a Chapter at Calcutta. Before the troubles in Waznistan were over, he has another coal in the fire of frontier war. Umta Khan, Chief of Jandol, has been called upon to leave Cantral; a proclamation has been addressed to the people of Bajour. Nepal has been made a buffer state, and now a protected native Prince has been quietly sent out of his dominions. The Proncer writes:—

"The Maharaja of Bhurtpui, who has shown himself absolutely incapable of ruling his State, as his father prophested would be the case, has been deprived of all powers for the time being. He has gone for the moment on a visit to Meerut, and Colonel Frast, the Resident, will administer the State pending further arrangements."

Maharaja Jaswant Sing was a capable ruler and could hold his own, He died on the 12th December, 1893, at the age of 42 Shortly before his death, he had wished that his eldest son who had not given any evidence of capacity might be passed over and his minor son put on his guildee. But this was not to be. Through the intrigues of a Cashinett Brahman, who, after the death of the late Maharaja, came into prominence and authority, Kunwarjee R im Sing Bahadur was made Maharaja with hardly any power. He was nominally the Chief of Bhurtpore and President of its Council which ruled the State. He had only one vote and even the casting vote was not allowed him. The real power tested with one of the Councillors, the Cashmen, who had the ear of Colonel Martelli, the Political Agent for the Eistern States of Raiputana. Ram Sing, who has not passed what is called the assimine age of twenty-five, was under the belief that the Cashineri had procuted for him the guddee which the late Maharaja would not give him. To keep the Pandit in countenance, in order that he himself might retain the guddee, he allowed the Brahman his own way and was himself led to many excesses. In twelve months, the Maharaja repented of his folly and was auxious to rid the State of the Cashmeri and his many relations and dependents who occupied most of the principal offices. In November last, he addressed the Viceroy a letter to that effect. With that letter seems to have commenced his present troubles which may turn to advantage. Two months after, Colonel Martelli was transferred to Jodhpur, and Colonel Fraser from Ulwar was put in charge of the Agency. Soon after the Cashmeri resigned. His resignation has not been accepted and some of his men have been removed from their offices. The Maharaja has removed himself to Muttra and not Meerut, and the new Political Agent is, we believe, clearing the Augean stable. The Maharaja expiates in a holy city his sins of omission and commission. How fares his Pandu? Will he not be

THOSE who admire the genius and goodness of heart of the late Dr. Sambhu C. Mookerjee, will be glad to learn that Mr. F. H. Skrine, I.C S., who has just finished a memoir of the Doctor in the National Magazine, is engaged on a larger and more permanent work of the same nature. Uniform with Dr. Mookerjee's Travels and Voyages in Bengal, the forthcoming volume will contain a portrait of the doctor, a biography illustrated by copious notes and ana, a selection of his correspondence, extracts from his published writings and about 225 pages of original essays from his brilliant pen-For subscribers paying in advance the price will be Rs. 5. The friends of the deceased publicist, as well as those who are proud of the lustre shed on their country by so great a personality, may send their names to Babu Kisarimohan Ganguli, B. L., 12, Ashutosh Dey's Lane, Calcutta, who will acknowledge all remittances and communicate with the subscribers to the Essays by a Brahman which was announced to this journal but which Dr. Mookerjee did not live to complete. The profits of the publication will be wholly at the disposal of the family of the deceased.

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, March 23, 1895.

THE PROSPECTS OF TEA IN INDIA.

RECENTLY there appeared some interesting and instructive articles on the greater consumption of tea in Great Britain and other countries and the great future of Indian Tea to the supersession of the China leaf in those markets. That is a cheering prospect. Let us take a survey of tea-drinking in this Province. What was the position of tea among the drinkable articles in native society thirty years back? What classes of men drank the cup that cheers but not inebriates, what kinds of tea they used, how they prepared it? What improvements have taken place in tea-drinking since, and what is the extent of its popularity among the natives? Thirty years back, the use of tea was confined to large and old cities where the Mahomedan population was predominant, and where an important section of the better classes of Mahomedans generally consisted of Persians (Moghuls) and Cashmeri Mahomedans. Except these two classes, whose national drink it is, other respectable Mahomedans seldom used tea. With these, tea was a luxury. They took it rarely, reserving it for ceremonial occasions, or using it as a medicine under medical advice, to ward off a cold, for instance. Its efficacy in cold is still admitted by the natives. Other Mahomedans gradually took to tea as a mark of respectability. After the mutinies, tea was in fashion in all big and old houses to some extent and in some form. It was considered bad manners not to offer a cup of tea to respectable guests and friends. Those who themselves did not drink tea would still offer it to such of their friends as liked it or as were habituated to it. Among the Cashmeri Mahomedans and such families in which they married, ladies also drank tea. The Moghuls (Persians) generally used best China tea (green or other kind,) available in the market. They very rarely mixed milk with it, but never abstained from putting sugar in their cup. This is called "chaisuda", or tea without milk. Cashmeri tea is a peculiar preparation—a thick and strong mixture, a decoction of tea mixed with several other ingredients, such as milk, soda, milk-cream, sugar, &c. This is, again, of two kinds, sweet and saline, (sheerin and nemakiri). In the saline (nemakiri), instead of sugar, salt is used, and cheese is sometimes added. It takes a long time to prepare it, and it is not easy to prepare it well. None can do it better than the Cashmeris themselves. Both the Moghuls and Cashmeris and their imitators are in the habit of drinking very hot tea. Indeed, it is so hot that it is impossible for one not accustomed to it to drink it at all. The Cashmeris use green and Lassah tea which they call "Parka ki chayi." Their decoction cannot be well prepared from any other tea. The two classes still stick to that kind off tea and the manner of preparing and drinking it. "Akhpar", or first class China tea, is much appreciated and used by Persian gentlemen of good position and taste. Those who cannot afford to have "Akhpar", drink Indian teas of the best quality.

Gradually a taste for tea-drinking spread among the respectable and polished Mahomedans, and they generally adopted the English system of preparing and drinking tea. Up to the last twelve years, tea was not a favourite with Mahomedan gentlemen in general. Its use was confined to the two classes specified above. Since, however, the last ten or twelve years, it has established itself as an important drink among the Mahomedans. As far as the present writer can judge from his own observations and the information at his disposal, tea is used by nearly 75 per cent. of the higher classes of Mahomedans in Bengal, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and by nearly 50 per cent. of the middle classes. Comparatively speak-ing, few Hindus as yet have taken to it. The number of Hindu tea-drinkers, however, is slowly increasing. There still exists some prejudice against tea among conservative Mahomedans who look upon it as very heating. It has become so popular a drink with the Indian Mahomedans that, at the present day, one can hardly visit a respectable and educated gentleman who will not offer one a cup of tea with Pan (beetel leaf) and the Hooka. From the Deputy Magistrate down to the Head Constable of a Police Station, and from the native Inspector-General of Registration down tothe rural Sub-Registrar and Marriage Registrar even in the remotest corner of Chittagong and Noakhali, the spread of tea-drinking has been marvellous in this Province. There is hardly a Bazar or a decent shop even in the interior, where tea is not to The preparation of tea in Bengal is based be had. on the English method, viz., after keeping it in hot water for five minutes or more, the coloured decoction is mixed with milk and sugar, and sipped gradually while it is hot, without allowing it to cool down. The tea generally in use is the Indian leaf of inferior varieties, Assam, Chittagong, Darjeeling, Kangra, Cachar, &c. The higher classes, with superior tastes, use the best China, and the rest get their teas from the Great Eastern Hotel and Kellner. Some have adopted Lipton's, but its use is very limited. Generally, tea-drinkers do not know the difference between good and bad tea, and they do not, as they cannot, properly prepare it. Most of them, therefore, spoil the tea and drink a stuff which is injurious to health. The general idea is to use tea as a stimulant, and when that object is gained they do not care for taste or the beneficial effect on the human system. As a rule, most natives mix a large quantity of sugar with their tea which spoils its taste. They do not know how even to boil the water with which to make their tea. Seventy-five per cent. of those that use it drink bad tea and make it worse by the ignorance of servants. Masters show as lamentable to argue his right. The Chairman was firm, and a want of knowledge in this matter as their servants. Even gentlemen that had been to Europe and are expected to lead their ignorant countrymen, have been known to drink a dusty-coloured and nauseating mixture, which is a poor apology for tea, and may even be taken as a great libel on it.

The times are changed. What was formerly a luxury is now a necessity. Now on almost all ceremonial occasions, religious or temporal, tea is served in all well-to-do and respectable Mahomedan houses, and it is prepared according to the two methods above specified, viz., Cashmeri and English. Prepared tea is not only sold in large towns in shops, but is hawked about in the streets. Even the khansaman and the khitmatgar refresh themselves with cheering cups of tea.

The above remarks chiefly relate to Mahomedans. In the early period referred to in the present review, there were hardly half-dozen Hindu fami-lies drinking tea habitually in towns. In the country, such families were unknown. There might have been some in Calcutta where facilities are great for imitating European ways of life. Within the last fifteen years, however, the taste for tea has sprung up among the Hindus and it is daily growing. All travelled Hindus, as a rule, drink tea like Europeans. Those who have adopted English habits and have no prejudice, drink tea to nearly the same extent. Some old class Hindus, who though educated are yet very conservative, drink tea in their own way. Among a certain section, the practice with individuals of both sexes, is general.

It is time that the people of India took to tea-growing and tea-trade in general. There are some native tea-planters as native indigo planters, but, we are afraid, the few who have taken to teagrowing have no special knowledge of the industry. They are mere proprietors, who find the money to work the concerns. Tea is, indeed, sold in Hindu shops, but there is no Hindu place where you could get a ready cup of tea. There was at least one respectable shopkeeper who enjoyed tea with his friends in his shop, but never had any for his paying customers. In the Railway station at Howrah, a young Brahman has opened a stall for selling prepared cups of tea and coffee, and we hear that his business is thriving. Tea, as has already been said, is growing in fashion among Hindus and has a wide field before it. If it can replace alcohol, it will have done a mighty good.

LAW VERSUS LAWYERS.

ELSEWHERE we give the judgments in full of the two Magistrates who fined Mr. T. Palit for contempt of Court. The matter has been carried up to the High Two rules have been issued, one on the application of Mr. Palit and another on that of Mr. Cranenburgh, the two opposing advocates in the case of Ord against Herbert out of which the matter arose. Mr. Cranenburgh was the pleader for the prosecution, while Mr. Palit, instructed by Mr. Hume, the Government Prosecutor in the Police Court, appeared, on the second day of hearing, for the defence. Mr. Palit commenced by addressing the Court instead of calling his witnesses, when the Chairman of the Bench, Mr. N. Mitter, barristerat-law, reminded him that he could address the Court jackson quoted a High Court ruling from the only once, either before or after examination of his witnesses. Mr. Palit, after his manner, wanted told the advocate that as that was the practice of the Court, he would follow it and could not allow a departure. Mr. Palit wanted to know who had laid down the practice and what law sanctioned it. He wanted to set it right. There was warm discussion between the Chairman and the advocate. It was towards the close, after an hour, that Mr. Palit is alleged to have used the insulting words for which he has been fined. The Court, while resenting the contempt, was in no hurry to punish it. Mr. Palit was asked to withdraw the offensive expression and to apologise. He, however, did not remember having used the words to which exception had been taken, and went on arguing his right to address twice on behalf of his client. But both the Magistrates, as they said, had heard the contemptuous observation uttered by Mr. Palit, and they informed him that unless he withdrew it and apologized, they would be obliged to proceed against him. It was then that Mr. Palit expressed his regret that the Magistrates had heard him say what they wanted him to withdraw. He added that if he had used the expression he was sorry for it. The patience of the Court was now exhausted. This hypothetical regret of the advocate, if expressed at an earlier stage, might or might not have satisfied the court, but it was too late to be accepted. Mr. Palit was, therefore, asked to express himself in writing, but he would not. There being no proper withdrawal and no apology, the Court commenced proceedings for contempt. Then there was a run to the High Court to bring down a senior barrister to defend Mr. Palit. Neither Mr. W. C. Bonnerjee nor Mr. Hill was available. But Mr. Jackson appeared on the scene. He asked for time to receive instructions. The Court then adjourned. When it sat again, at 3-30 P.M., it was intimated that, having other engagements and the hour being late, it would not proceed with the matter further that day. Mr. Jackson informed the Court there was no necessity for any adjournment as Mr. Palit was ready to apologize, though he still remembered not to have used the words. The Court wanted to know if he pleaded guilty though; if he did, it was prepared to take a lenient view, as the apology had been too late. Mr. Palit, probably thinking that he had made a sufficient advance towards appearing the Bench by the verbal apology through Counsel, would not plead guilty. The Court then adjourned for one week to Tuesday, the 26th February.

On that day, Messrs. Jackson, Hill, and Bonnerjee, senior, appeared successively for Mr. Palit. The Court sat from 12 noon to 7-30 P. M. It was crowded with spectators and other barristers. Proceedings commenced with Mr. Jackson addressing the Court. He raised the question of jurisdiction, contended that the Court had no power, under section 480 of the Criminal Procedure Code to try his client. That section empowers any Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court, to order detention, in custody, of any person committing the offence of intentionally offering any insult to any public servant while sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding, and "at any time before the rising of the Court on the same day, if it thinks jurisdiction, that the essence of the section quoted was that cognizance of the offence should be taken the same day and it was not incompetent to make the order afterwards, which in fact would be more proper, for it could then decide coolly, without the heat of the day of offence. Even if Mr. Jackson were right, the Court thought that it might proceed against Mr. Palit under section 228 of the Indian Penal Code, under which it convicted him, and that section 487 of the Criminal Procedure Code gave it the power to try, independent of section 480. Another objection taken by Mr. Jackson was, that being personally interested, the Magistrates forming the Bench could not, under section 525. Criminal Procedure Code, try the case. If there was any show of reason in the previous argument, there was none in this, the Magistrates evidently thought for the Code distinctly authorizes Presidency Magistrates to punish persons committing contempt in their presence. It is needless to say, the Court overruled the objection. Having thus exhausted his quiver, Mr. Jackson again offered the same qualified apology for his client. Seeing that it was not accepted, he left the Court at 1 P. M., after an hour's struggle, in a huff. Mr. Palit, now left to his own resources, asked for an adjournment. The Court then remarked that parties have sometimes to suffer for their lawyers and that it was no fault of the Magistrates that Mr. Jackson had gone away. Mr. Lal Mohun Ghose then appeared and took time to go through the proceedings. When the Court sat again, Mr. Hill appeared instead of Mr. Ghose, and, repeating the objections made by Mr. Jackson, cross-examined the Bench clerk who had deposed that Mr. Palit had used the words charged against him. After the cross-examination had closed, the Court enquired of Mr. Hill:-

"Does Mr. Palit wish to make any statement? Of course, the other day we enquired if he would plead guilty, but he did not plead statement of filing a written statement if he chooses to do so, or if he is so advised, he can call witnesses."

Mr. Hill then proceeded to prove that Mr. Palit had not committed any offence. The words imputed to him were not meant to convey any disrespect to the Court but were used to point out the unfortunate position in which he was placed. Mr, Cranenburgh who was opposed to Mr. Palit in the original case, who had hitherto remained an unconcerned spectator of the varied scenes in Court, and who, if he could make up his mind earlier, would probably have ended the struggle for supremacy between the Court and Counsel to the satisfaction of all parties, now came forward to the rescue of Mr. Palit. He was examined as a witness for the defence. He was stronger than Mr. Palit in memory. If the Counsel could not remember whether he had used the words-"it is unfortunate that you are a Court at all," the Pleader distinctly recollected that Mr. Palit had said-"it is a misfortune that you as a Court would not hear me or listen to me at all" and that he did not hear Mr. Palit say what the court imputed to him. After this examination of the witness, Mr. Hill closed his case, tendered the same qualified verbal apology, offered to submit a written one if that would satisfy the Court, and pleaded not guilty. It was now 6-30 P. M., when the Court adjourned to consider the order. At this time a rumour spread that the Court would sentence the accused to imprisonment and that orders had been issued to detain the van. An hour after, the Magistrates resumed their seats, when Mr. | consequences.

Bonnerjee, with due honour, asked the Court to defer passing judgment till the next morning. The Chairman replied,-" Mr. Bonnerjee, do you really think that I shall send Mr. Palit to jail? I shall not, though I have the power." Mr. Bonnerjee bowed, and the Magistrates delivered their judgments.

On the application of the defendant, the case of Ord vs. Herbert was, on the day Mr. Palit had appeared, adjourned to the 6th March, to enable him to apply to the High Court to have it transferred to some other Magistrate. On the day fixed, the Magistrates met. There had been no application to the High Court and the charge against Herbert was dismissed. But before they entered into that case, the Magistrates recorded the following proceeding :-

"Since the 26th Pebruary last, we have not taken our seats on the Bench. On the last day of our sitting it became very late in the evening, when we delivered judgment in the contempt case. On that day we decidedly thought that Mr. Cranenburgh who was examined on behalf of Mr. Palit in the contempt case had comexamined on benall or Wir. Fallt in the contempt case had committed gross perjury, but it being very late and we thoroughly tired after a hard day's work, we could not order that Mr. Cranenburgh should be prosecuted for perjury. I call upon Mr. Cranenburgh to show cause why he should not be prosecuted for perjury and why sanction should not be accorded against him under section 195, C. P. C.?

The charge against Mr. Cranenburgh is that in the above case on oath he said, in the matter of Mr. T. Palit, the following which are false and which he knew to be false at the time when he used - them.

 1. 'That it is a missortune that you as a Court would not hear me or listen to me at all.'

 2. 'The word was hear or listen, I do not exactly remember.'

 3. This question was put to Mr. Cranenburgh...Did my colleague say Mr. Palit had made use of that expression? Answer...

 'Yes after consulting the president.'
- 'Yes, after consulting the president.'

 4. 'I did not hear Mr. Palit say it is n misfortune that you are a court at all.'

Let a rule be issued against Mr. Cranenburgh in the above terms. This will be returnable on the 25th March.

DILAR JUNG, 6th March 1895.

I agree with my learned colleague and senior that a rule should be issued in the terms stated by him.

N. N. MITRA, 6th March 1895."

On account of the absence of one of the Magistrates in the country, the rule ordered could not be signed and, as a matter of fact, no process has been served on Mr. Cranenburgh.

Mr. Palit seemed to have taken the order on himself quietly. For he moved not the High Court, for more than two weeks, although the Criminal Bench was sitting and one Bench had given place to another.

Mr. Cranenburgh was of a different frame of mind, Smarting under the indignity of the proceeding recorded against him in the Police Court, where he is a prominent Pleader, he, on the 12th March, moved the High Court, through Mr. Jackson, and obtained a rule why the order made by the Magistrates should not be set aside. Two days after, following Mr. Cranenburgh, Mr. Palit also, through the same Counsel, obtained another order calling for the records in view of quashing the order made on him.

We leave the Magistrates to justify their conduct. What strikes us is that they had no assistance from the Government Prosecutor or any one representing Government. If Mr. Hume, who was instructing Mr. Palit, could not appear, some one else might have been told off for that particular duty. He could have set the Magistrates right, if they went wrong. This desertion of the Honorary Magistrates looks ominous, and may lead to unlooked for

PANDIT PRANNATH SARASWATI.*

Pandit Prannath Saraswati was a scholar and patriot. The eldest son of Justice Shumbhu Nath Pundit, the first Indian Judge of the Calcutta High Court, Pundit Prannath began life under favourable auspices. He was a boy of 12 years when he lost his father in 1867. Pundit Prannath's devotion to knowledge was carnest. Taking his degree of Master of Arts in Sanskrit from the Sanskrit College in 1874, he passed his B. L. examination from the Prestdency College in 1876, and immediately after joined the bar of the Calcutta High Court where his career was certainly successful. If his life had been spared, he would have achieved the fame of the brightest ornaments of the native bar. But he was cut off in the prime of life, without any of its prizes having been his. Fond of books and devoting his spare time to them, he had a larger stock of miscellaneous learning than any of his compeers in the bar. At the High Court itself, with many able seniors before him, he had no opportunity, but in the distant Kol country, in the great Pandra case, he had floored his father's friend and colleague at the old Suddar bar, the veteran Babu Ashutosh Dhur, the attorney, who had pleaded his own cause. That was a victory worthy of the greatest advocate of any Indian bar.

The book before us is of very meagre dimensions. The life is done within a compass of 12 octavo pages, demy, with an appendix of as many pages. A supplementary volume should be issued, containing the miscellaneous writings of Pandit Prannath. We have no doubt that the memorials alone which he addressed to Government on the various public questions of the day would form a highly interesting volume. The reviews also from his pen and his speeches deserve to be rescued from the columns of the dailies and the weeklies in which they first appeared or were reported. The ringe of Pandit Prannath's intellect wis wide. Indeed, it was wider than what is ordinarily vouchsafed to one who betakes to the law as a profession. His knowledge of Sanskrit was much greater than that of Dr. Rajendralala Mitta. In the Asiatic Society he ven tured to give a fresh reading of a mutilated copper plate inscrip tion which is one of the few authentic foundations of the history of Bengal. This incident was hinted at in our issue of October 29, 1892, in these terms .-- The wise men of the Classic Hall in Park Street must have been struck at the phenomenon of their meek juvenile colleague with leaden eves that seemed to fear to meet the gaze of his seniors, boldly challenging the reading of the great. Colebrooke and the mighty Mitra. It is notewathy that the nascible and pugnacious Rajendralala Mitta took the young knight's victous thrust quietly."

With all his culture, he remained the Kashmeri Brahman that he was and could not rise above the prejudices of his sect and the hour. The polish and chaintableness of the fither was not the son's. But for the early death of the father, the son would, per haps, have been a much superior min. Prannath lost his head over the Age of Consent Bill. It should be stated, however, to his credit, that he was the intellectual soul of the agitation,—the chief the movement. The Graduates' claborate protest was his composition, and he wrote many other arguments for the rotten cause. It was a prostitution of ability, but the ability was unquestionable.

As a friendly biographer, Babu Sreenath Banerjee males an gue, over-estimate of the Pandu's connection with this journal. He writes. "When Dr. Sambhu Chunder Mookerjee started the most brilliant and elegantly edited native weekly, the Review all, and Rayyet, the first number of it was almost wholly written by this jourge man. For a long time he continued to contribute pose liberally to this newspaper at immense sacrifice of his own time and labour, and was thus instrumental in imparting to it that status and hold in the fashionable public which it still enjoys as a paper of sparkling wit and tack style. This tack or Rest style was Di Mookerjee's secret of success, and hardly any one else than the Pandit could imitate him without detection." This is not wholk correct. For the first few months after the establishment of the journal, Pan lit Prannath wrote for it. Subsequently, his con tributions were very few and far between. Dr. Mookerjee, again, never admitted anybody's writings without verbal alterations and additions. Pandit Prannath's wis, indeed, a vigorous and agreeable style, highly polished and thoroughly idiomatic But it would not be correct to say that he alone could successfully imitate Dr. Mookerjee. Those few, very few, friends of his who assisted Dr. Mookerjee in the conduct of the paper and whose assistance was much more liberal, cultivated journali-tic composition with as much success.

In taking leave of this pamphlet we repeat our suggestion. An effort should be made to collect the miscellaneous writings of Pandit Prannath. They will make a goodly volume, full of interest, and will constitute the best memorial of his gentus. Their historical value also can scarcely be over-estimated.

CONTEMPT OF COURT

Police Court .- February 26.

IN THE MATTER OF MR. T. N. PALIT.

Judgment of Mr. N. N. Mitter.

Mr. N. N. Metter --- On the 20th of February last, we took our seat in court and in the usual course the part-heard case of Ord against Herbert was called on, in which Mr. Palit, for the first time, ap Mr Palit said that the peared on behalf of the accused. on record did not disclose any offence at all, and he wished to all diese the court on that point. I told him that he was quite at liber ty to do 50, but I could allow only one address, either calling his evidence, and it was for him to decide whether he would address the court then or afterwards. Upon this Mr. Palit becam very excited and said in a loud-voice that he had a right to address the court twice. I informed him that according to the practice of the court, he could address us only one; either before or after call ing his evidence. Mr. Palit's excitement thereupon grew more in tense. He insisted on his right (is he alleged) to address the court twice. I repeatedly told him that, according to the practice of the court, he could not address the court twice, but Mr. Palit paid no heed to my ruling. I told him that if Mr. Palit was dissuisfied with our ruling. Food-limove the High Court and that we are bound to follow the practice of the court. But Mr. Palit stid, "I may safely say that no one here in this foom, knows, better than I do the existence of the High Court." Lagun reminded him that he should not discuss the matter any further. We had decided in matter against him, and, if he chose he could move the High Court Palit dil not drop the discussion on the point and continued the discussion for a long time in an involting tone. Mr. Pelic in an insulting tone conquired "who lid down this practice?" 4 Palit used those words in a most offensive manner and again requested not to discuss the matter any further. Mr. Palit, however, did not listen to us, but sail, if I would not hear him, he would address the other member of the Bench, (meaning my colleague, Niwah Syed Ashgar Ali Dilir Jung Bahadur) My said that he agreed with me on all the points, and we could not heat him. Then I asked Mr. Palit to withdraw the expression mide us of by him, 1922, that it was a meloritune that we with a court at all. Mr. Palit did not withdraw, not did he say whether he would withdraw it or not, but went on discussing his right to address We repeatedly asked him to withdraw the expression, but to no pur-pose. At last Mr. Pahi said that he did not remember having us of such an expression. Both of us assured him that he had expression. He then said, "If you both say that you heard it then". I express my regret that you should have heard it." He also said that if he used that expression he was very sorry. From the above state ment, it will appear that Mr. Palit never withdrew the expression Therefore I asked him to note down his withdrawal in writing which he did not do. Mr. Palit was talking very loud at the time he used the expression, not in his ordinary tone. We expected that after the lapse of some little time, that is, upon proper consideration of what he had said he would, in his cooler moments, withdraw unreservedly what he had said; but we were very much disappointed. Instead of making any apology he further insulted us by saying that he would set us right.

^{*} A brief sketch of the Life of Pandit Prannath Sanawati, M. A., B. L., vakil, High Court, Calcutta; Fellow of the Calcutta University, Municipal Commissioner, Honorary Magistrate, Member of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, &c., by Baboo Sreenath Bannerjee, Calcutta: Published by R. Cambray & Co., Law-book-sellets, Bow Bazar, 1894.

I believe Mr. Palit knew very well that he used that expression when he said that he did not remember using it, otherwise he would not have said, as he did, that he was very sorry that we heard it at not have said, as ne did, that he was very sorry that we meate it at all. Mr. Palit is a senior member of the Bar and as such should have known how to conduct himself in court. As a matter of fact, we hold that Mr. Palit, up to the closing of the case, has made no suitable apology at all. I find that Mr. Palit is not even now sorry for what he has done. He insulted the court for no reason whatsoever and I shall be failing in my duty as the chairman of the Reach mules I took serious notice of his conduct. The disprise of Bench, unless I took serious notice of his conduct. The dignity of the Bench must be maintained, otherwise it is no court at all.

Mr. Cranenburgh's evidence is not satisfactory. He does not remember all the expressions used by me and Mr. Palit. He remembers few stray words of the discussion. As for myself, I reject the evidence of Mr. Cranenburgh as unreliable. My memory is quite clear, and I have distinct recollection of Mr. Palit having used the expression.

I convict Mr. Palit under section 228, I. P. Code, and sentence him to pay a fine of Rs. 20 (twenty), in default one week's simple imprisonment.

Judgment of Nawah Dilwar Jung.

Nawab Dilwar Jung .-- I agree with my colleague in every word of what he has said in the judgment. I desire to add that I distinctly remember Mr. Palit using the words "It is a misfortune that ou (alluding to me and my colleague) are a court at all." but characterise the evidence of Mr. Craneuburgh as wholly untrue and therefore unreliable. I agree in the conviction and Official Paper.

ELECTION OF FELLOWS.

From---J. P. Hewett, Esq., C. I. E., Offg. Secretary to the Goverament of India.

To---The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, General (Education) Department.

Calcutta, February, 1895 Sir,--With your letter No. 225 T. G. dated the 25th September, 1894, was forwarded a memorial from a number of Graduates of the Calcutta University praying,--
(1) that Bachelors of Arts of the Calcutta University of 25 years' standing might be empowered to vote for, and be eligible for nomination as, Fellows, or

(2) that, if it was considered undesirable to extend the qualifications of electors, graduates of 25 years' standing might be declared eligible for election to Fellowships.

An intermediate reply was sent to this memorial in Home Department letter No. 317, dated the 29th October 1894, in which the Governor-General in Council requested that the memorialists might be informed that His Excellency in Council had decided to postpone further consideration of the matter till the Government of India were located in Calcutta, and invited the opinion of the Bengal Government on the prayers contained in the memorial. The opinion of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor was communicated in your letter No. 4312 of the 24th December 1894, and I am now directed to convey the following orders of the Government of India on the subject.

The memorialists have represented that "the number of B. A'swho have taken then degree before 1867 must grow less and less every year, and in course of time this part of the constituency will altogether disappear." This point has been dealt with in paragraph 2 of the Home Department letter of the 29th October 1894 in which it was explained that the object of the rule made in 1892. conferring upon Bachelors of Arts who graduated prior to 1867 the right to vote for, and to be nominated as, Fellows, was not to give these rights to all Bachelors of a certain number of years' standing, but to ensure that those who had graduated in the days when the number of M.A's, was comparatively small should be adequately represented on the electoral body. The Governor-General in Council had never any intention of introducing B. A's, as a permanent element into the electorate, but made the concession in order to meet a temporary condition of things, which was certain to pass away in course of time. The body of Masters of Arts constitutes a copu d'eire, representing the highest results of University training, and those who are chosen to represent the University in the Senate should, the Governor-General in Council considers, continue to belong to this body, being regarded as eligible for the honour on the ground of academical distinction alone, and not by reason of seniori-ty or on any other ground. It will still be possible for the Govern-or-General in Council to appoint as Fellows persons who, though they have been content not to proceed beyond the degree of Bachelor have in other ways justified their advancement to this honour.

Similar considerations apply, in the opinion of His Excellency in Council, to the body of electors. In the election of Fellowships it is desirable to obtain the best academical opinion. The proportion of B. A. to M. A. graduates every year is about five to one (300 to 60), and even if the franchise were restricted to B. A. one (300 to 60), and even if the Iranchise were restricted to B. A. graduates of 25 years' standing, it is clear that, unless the relative proportion of M. A's, greatly increased, the M. A. voters would in time be quite swamped by the B. A's, and the elections would no longer reflect the best cacdemical opinion. The case of the Madras University (cited by the memorialists) where B. A's, of 20 years' standing are allowed to vote and to stand as candidates for election, affords no parallel to that of the Calcutta University. The number of M. A's, at Madras is only 70—too small a body for the exercise of this function—while the number of M. A's, of the Calcutta University is over 1,000.
4. The Governor-General in Council could not agree to the proposal that B. A. graduates of 25 years' standing, even if they be not declared qualified as electors, should be considered eligible as candidates for election. This would, in the opinion of His Excellency in Council, be to invert the right order of things, which requires that the qualifications of candidates for election should be higher rather than lower than those of electors, and would infringe the principle that elected Fellows should represent the best academical opinion available.

5. For these reasons the Governor-General in Council regrets that he is unable to accede to the prayers of the memorialists. am to request that they may be informed accordingly.

"KISS ME, JACK, AND LET ME GO."

"KISS ME, JACK, AND LET ME GO."

ONCE, long ago, I was witness to a duel in California. The two men had been bosom friends, but had quarelled about (of course) a woman. Splendid follows both—young, brainy, and ambitions. As they stood in a clear space among the pine trees near Sciamento, pale as lines, steady as rocks, weapons in hand waiting for the word, the rising sun shining athwart the line of vision, they presented a picture too often seen in 1856. The pistols cracked almost simultaneously. One man stood ercct, evidently untoucned; the other fell upon his back and lay straight and still. Seconds, surgeons, and spectators jushed to his side. He was "all there," mind as well as body. "No, don't disturb me," he said coully to the doctor, "I'm shot fatally and shall die in five sinde could with the court of the course of the doctor, "I'm shot fatally and shall die in five sind coully to the doctor, "I'm shot fatally and shall die in five sind coully to the doctor, "I'm shot fatally and shall die in five suntense; the dying man alone was calin. "Jack my daring old boy," he said, "torgive me and forgive her. Kiss me and let me go." A minute more and he was dead, with Jack lying across his body, crying like a baby.

A minute more and he was dead, with Jack lying across his body, ciying like a baby.

After I have told you another and very different story, I'll show wherein they teach the same lesson.

There is no tragedy in this one; nevertheless it is of wider human interest than the other. A woman had been ill more or less all her life. The details are commonplace enough, and yet they will appeal to millions who care nothing for the jealousies of young men of love. "At times," she says, I suffered from pains at the bick of the head, and a sense of weight, and felt tired and weary, yet it was not from work only. I had, a strange feeling, too, of something hanging over me, as of some evil or danger that I could not explain or define.

My appetite was variable; sometimes I could eat anything and again I could not touch any food at all. But I was never land up as it were."

Please note the last sentence. It may seem like the weakest but really is the strongest point in this lady's statement. We will tell you why in a moment. in a moment,

She goes on: "Still I was often in misery, but got along fairly well until August, 1890, when I had a severe attack of theumatism. First the great toe of my right foot and the thumb of my right hand grew hot and painful. After a time the trouble extended to my back and hips. and painth. After a time the frounde extension to my dack and high. I could not straighten myself; I was almost bent double. Month after month I was like this, getting little or no sleep at hight. Medical treatment proved of no benefit to me. In December, 1801, the pain almost dove me mad. My face was swollen to nearly twice its natural size, and my eyes were so covered by the enlarged hids that I could scarcely see. There was a constant ringing in my ears, and the doctors and I had envisibles.

said I had erysipelas.

"For days and days I could not walk across the floor, and for some "For days and days I could not walk across the floor, and for some time I was able to move about only by taking hold of the furniture or other objects. When all other means had been trued and had failed, Mother Seigel's Curative Syrnp was recommended to me. A single bottle did me a deal of good. I kept on with it, and soon was stronger and in better health than for forty years previously. I still take an occasional dose and continue in good health notwithstanding my age (48), and the 'change of life.' I tell everyone what the Syrup has done for me, and give you permission to publish what I have said. Yours truly (Signed), (Mrs.) MARY JANE MILNES, 18, Walker's Buildings, Brewery Lane, Thornhill Lees, near Dewsbury, Yorkshire, October 12th, 1892."

Now for the lesson of both these incidents; what is it? This; that it is not people in desperate extremities who suffer most. Pain is in proportion to the resistance to disease. Those who surrender, who are in despair, who give up, have present punishment largely remitted. Dying persons are the most confortable of all. Hopelessness and dissolution administer their own anodynes. Those who are not laid up, who are ill, and yet work and struggle, need pity and help. This lady was one, and to such Mother Seigel always proves a friend.

Lady Eliott Po trait Memorial Committee

Allan Arthur Hon, Justice Beverley Hon, C. E. Buckland W. D. Crincksnauk Baion Gaerter

I W. O. Bell-Irving S. E. J. Cluke H. H. The Maharda Dubhanga, K.C.L. J. Jonslam,
E. F. Longley,
C. Moore. Col. Hailes, 6th B. I.
A Macdonald
David McLaten Morris

J. Jonston,
E. F. Longley,
C. Moore,
Hon, P. Playfair,

A F M. Abdur Rahman | A. Sunson, J. O'B Saunders | A. H. Wailis, Mahajaji Sir J. M. Tagore, K.C. S. I.

PRESIDENT—Allan Aithur.

HON. TREASURER—J. O'B. Sunders.

HON. SECRETARY—David McLaien Morison.

At the inerting of Committee held at the Chamber of Commerce on the 19th January, in was decided to have a picture of Lady Elhott painted, any surplus to go towards a personal nuescut. personal present.

All subscriptions to be sent to the HON. TREASURER, 9, Hue Stiert,

Calcutta.

TEXT BOOKS IN ENGLISH.

BY SARADA PRASAD BANERIEE.

SPECIMEN PAPERS AND ANSWERS

on

THE ENGLISH ENTRANCE COURSE For 1895.

Having the largest sale of all similar works,

ENGLISH PREPARATORY COURSE

FOR 2nd & 3rd CLASSES This book has been approved by the Central Text Book Committee

INDIA READERS NO. 2 FOR 1th & 5th CLASSES

INDIA READERS NO. 1

FOR 6th & 7th CLASSES.

These books are of remarkably simple style and quite suited to Indian students.

The attention of School authorities in the N.-W. P. and Oudb, the Punjab, Madras, Bombay, the Central Provinces, Assam, and Burma, invited to the above publications of unique ments.

To be had of

S. K. LAHIRI & Co.

College Square, Calcutta.

WANTED.

A Sanskiit Pandit for the Hutwah Sinskiit School who must be a passed Acharya in Byakaran Sabitya and Dharma Shasira.

Preference will be given to a Sarjoopari Brabman.

Apply with copies of testimonials to-

BABU DEVENDRA NATH DUIT, Dewan, Raj Hutwa, Shanker Bhawan, Pisachmochan, Benares.

GENUINE HOMCEOPATHY. A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S. Homwopathic Practitioner,

May be consulted by letter or personally daily at his residence, 30-1, Colootolah Street, Calcutta.

THE MEHTA ENTERTAINMENT.

Gentlemen desirons of being present at the Evening Party in honour of the Hon'ble P. M. Mehti, at the Town Hall, on Thursday, the 28th inst ani, at 930 PM, will please apply for circle to the Secretary to the Entertainment Committee, at No. 12, Wellington Square,

W. C. BONNERJEE,

The Mehta Entertainment Committee. C deutra ; 22nd March, 1895 }

THE WORKS OF DR. JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE. Rs. As.

Commentaries on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, Marriage, Adoption, Wills &c.* Price "No student or practitioner should

without a copy of this GREAT Work.
(Sd.) Nana Bhai Haridas."

Bengah translation of the Dyabhaga and the Mitakshara,† Pice ... Bengali Translation of the Dittaka-

1 0 4

First Lessons in English for Ben-gali boys. Price Bharat Sasan Pranali* ...

IN THE PRESS
The Philosophy of Religion from the point view of Common Sense. Price Rs. 5. of view of Common Sense. Price Rs 5.

CONTENTS

1 Historical Analysis of the evolution of Historical Analysis of the evolution of religious systems.

Definition of the term "religious."

The problems of the philosophy of religion and then solutions, old and new.

(a) Why do Hindus believe in ten Avatars or incarnations including in the series three that are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a tortors, and a boar.

(b) Why is it that all ancient systems

(b) Why is it that all ancient systems recommend the sacrifice of animals, and the burning of ghee or incense.

&c. &c. &c &c &c
The weapons offensive and defensive of religious teachers.

The power of fine words.

The art of becoming a prophet.
The cumulative effect of hardswearing

for ages. Specimens of Puranised history

Brahminical and Christian priesteraft compared

The artificial miseries of men caused by religion. Tyranny and taxation of religion

The good mans adversity is the sharp man's opportunity.

Swinding as a fine art.

New Superstitions that may be suggested for the benefit of the pirests.

The great prophets of the world and their doings.

Probable origin of the Saiva religion Tautric mysticism and abominations

Congress Sketches: A Review

OF THE

SPEECHES AND THE SPEAKERS AT THE

Fourth Indian National Congress

Held at Allahabad. Reprinted with additions and alterations from

Reprinted with adaptions and alternations from Reas & Rayyet
With a portrait of Mr. George Yule, President, Sold by the publisher G. P. Varma, and at the office of the Advacate, at Lucknow for 8 Annas a copy, besides postage.

* To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink &

Co., only.
† To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink &
Co., and also at the Smadhan Agency,
No. 11, Raja Nabakushua's Street, Calcutta.

CAUTION!

It having been notified to the Proprietor o Beecham's Pills that certain unscrupulous dealers have recently been perpetrating a fraud in connection with the 4 anna box lately introduced, the public are requested to see that the retail prices, (vir., 4 annas, 8 annas or 912d, 12 annas or 15, 112d, and Rs, 2 or 2) od) are clearly printed on the lid of each box. The fraud to which attention is drawn is that in the case of the two smaller sizes, the prices have been obliterated and the boxes represented to be of higher value than they really

Sole Wholesale Agents for India, Burma and Cevlon

G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3, NEW CHINA BAZAAR STREET CALCUTTA.

NOTICE-Should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining supplies, the Agents will be happy to forward sample boxes at above Rupee rates plus V P P Charges and Postages

> *In Pamphlet, Price 4 annas or o copies for a Rupee

A Cheap Reserve for the Army.

By Capt ANDREW HEARSEY, Late Her Majesty's Service.

Apply to Reis & Rayyel Office, Calcutta

A. MEITREAUX & CO.

Manufacturers, Repairers and Tuners of HARMONIUMS, ORGANS, &c

9, UCKOOR DUIT'S LANE, CALCUITA We import materials direct from Europe and guarantee, the best workmanship and fir ish Rs 30 Harmoniums, Box 3 octaves 1 stop ,, 50 Table Do.

,, 65 Do. 4 " Do. 3 stops Organs Indian Folding with case complete. 4 "3 stops & 1 swell " 70 Organs, Indian

"5 do. do. do. " 90 Do. Do. Trial solicited.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF MEMORIAL FUND. . 1. His Highness The Maharaja of Dur-G C.S.I. ... 500 His Highness the Maharaja Bahadur His Highness the Maharaja Banadur of Cooch Behar, G.C. E. ... 500 Nawab Bahadur Bir K Abdul Ghan, K.C.S.I., and Nawab Bahadur K Ashan Ulla, C.I.E. 500 Nawab Inad Jung Bahadur ... 500 Nawab Azun Yar Jung Bahadur ... 500 Shams-ul Ulama Syed Ah Belgrami 500 Ki m Bahadar BhauBahanddin, C.I.E., Verse to the Niwab of Junayadh ... 200 Ki m Bahadar BhaiBahauddin, C.I.E., Vizier to the N wab of Junagadh ... 30.5 Mahadaj i Bahadur Sir Jotindra Mohan Tagore, K C.S.I. 550 Babu Jodu Lai Mullick 250 Messis, Mackinnon Mackeozie & Co. 200 Prince Wala Kadr Syed Hosein Ali Mitza Bahadur 150 Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Nawah Syed Zainul Abdin Khan Bahadur Feraz Jung 140 14. 15. Syed Zamul Abum Khan Dunasin. Feraz Jung 140 Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee, C.S.I. 100 The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chandra Midhab Ghose 100 Pinice Muza Sir Jahan Kadar Baha-18. dui, K.C.I.E., ... The Hon'ble P. Playfair... How the Francisch Control of the Hon'ble Str. H. Brackenbury, K.C.B., 100 Babu Jai Gobind Law ... 100 The Hon'ble Mt. Justice Guru Das 23. Baneijee The Hon'ble Dr. Rash Behary Ghose Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt. ... Shahibzada M thomed Obidulla Khan Bahadur, C.S.I. ... Maharajkun ir Benoya Kiishna ... The Hou'ble Mr. Justice E. J. Trevelyan The Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jabbar 50 50 50 F. J. Rowe, Esq. Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi Khan Ba-39. 40. 41. 32 25 25 25 45. 49. 47. 48. Rai Budicedas Mukin Bahadur Bahu Gopal Lul Seal ... Moulvi Syad Abdus Salam A. T. Apcar, Esq. ... H. Lutruan Johnson, Esq. CS. Lord William Beresford, K.C.I.E., 59. 60. 61. Lord Wilham Beresford, K.C.I.E., Munshi Gholam Rasool ... F. H. Skrine, Esq. c.s., ... The Hon'ble H. J. S.Cotton C.S., c.S.I. Prince Mahomed Bukhtyar Shah ... Baboo Sutendra Nath Pal Chowdry... , Aukhoy Kumar Ghose Moulvi Inadd Ah ... Rai Shib Chunder Nundy Bahadar ... Denigut Fen. 62. Rai Samo Cumuer Nundy Banadar ... D. Panioty, Esq. ... Chowdry Mahomed Arjamand Khan H. E. A. Cotton, Esq., Barrister-at-law touly Syed Ashruffuddin Ahmed, Khan Bahadur ... 17-8

72. T. Inglis, Esq., C S.

73-	A. H. Giles, Esq		16
	F. F. Handley, Esq , C.S.		16
74.
75.	The Hon'ble Moules Sirajul		16
	Khan	•••
76	Moulvi Serajuddeen	•••	15
77.	Abul Hasan, Esq.,	•••	15
78.	H. A. D. Phillips, Esq., C.S.		10
7 9.	Baboo Kiran Chunder Roy		10
8ó.	E. N Baker, Esq	•••	10
81.	Baboo Doyal Chand Bose	•••	10
82	" Madan Mohun Bose	•••	10
83.	" Kanai Lal Khan	•••	10	ı
84.	Moulvi Syud Akram Hossam	•••	10
85	Moulvi Aziz Ahmud	• • • •	10
86.	R ii K inyelal Dey Bahadoor		10
87.	H Holmwood, Esq	• • • •	10
88	Bibu Hurry Mohan Chunder		10
80	Baboo Chakkanlal Roy		5
gź.	" Suodaprasad Ghose		5
Su	bscriptions will be thankfully	received	bу
	Ionorary Joint Secretaries,
RAL	RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI	BAHADU	JR.	į
	4, Brush Indian Street,	Carrotta	. ' '
	4, mittel though officed	77	,

Rs. 6 "UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Guaranteed three Years.

and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMAN, ESQ.,

Barrister -- at Law,

16, Taltolla, Calcutta.

Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, smill, open ficed, nickel silvern, keyress, short winding, patent, "UNDAUNTED" watch, with hand setting mechanism, secondhand for Doctors, ornamental bold dial, for Rs. 6 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' guarantee. Warranted to stand the roughest use. Runs more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily reparable. Others sell at double our rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Jno. Dickson of Haputal Railway, from Ceylon says:—I keeps solendid time and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jerks. × Dr. H. Moore of Royal Artillery from Poonamallee says:—I sold it for Rs. 16. × Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Reg. from Dumdum says:—I have sold it for Re. 20. × Mr. T. B. Scott of Patna Opium Department says:—The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time.

Jewelled King Re. 1-8-0. Real

Jewelled king Re. 1-8-0. Real Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24

Pretty Canadian gold chain Re. 1-8-o.Fash-ionable Canadian Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, at Re. 1-8-o. Mr. G. Smith, Salt Inspector from Sanikura, says: G. Smith, Salt Inspector from Sankutia, says: "A German valued the diamond ring at Rs. 50 and tuby at Rs. 30." Key winding, Government stamped, solid silver hunting case, Royal watch with extuas and full three years' guarantee, for Rs. 13. Pre G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light Infantry from Pur udhat says:—For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Sergeant for Rs. 28 × Pre, H. C. Bishop of L. F. L. Regt from Kamptee says:—A Corporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch. Gentlemen's open fixed, keyless real solid gold watch Rs. 30; Indies' Rs. 24; both with extras and men's open tread, keyless real solid gold watch Rs 30; Inbes' Rs. 24; both with extras and guar inteed for 3 years. Mind they are guranteel to be of real soud gold. No agents kept, all goods sent only by us from Bombay per V. P. P.

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO., BOMBAY.

CATARRH.

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness.

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these districts ing diseases are rapidly and permanently cured by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphile explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½ d stamp by A. HUTTON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORONTO, Canada. Scientific American

"IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer find sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant:

It has driven out from the system.

Acute Rheumatism and RheumaticGout*

after years of semi-belulessness and suffering; while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most caronic torm.

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the

Are you subject to HEADACHES and the tortures of TOOTHACHE? A single application will relieve you.

In Soie-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the result speak for itself.

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Physicians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of homes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar preputation has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throughout the world.

Agents in Calcutta: Smith Stanisticet & Co R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Batagate & Co. Limited.

REIS & RAYYET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT)

WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

AND

Review of Politics, Literature, and Society RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION. If paid in advance,

Yearly	٠ ،	• • •	•••	K٩	12
Half-yearly	y	•••	•••	••	7
Quarterly.	••	•••	•••	,.	4
Montary .	••	•••		Кe	1-8
Single or s	ample	е Сору		Ans	0-8
	If n	ot paid in adv	ance.
Yearly		• •••		Rs.	18
Half-yearl	y	•••			10-8
Quarterly	•••	•••		,,	6-0
Monthly	•••	•••	•••	1)	2-4
Single or s	antpl	e Copy		Ans.	0-12
No addi	tiona	I charge for p	ostave	or p	eor.

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insertion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5.

Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphlets (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayyet."

OFFICE: I, Uckoor Dutt's Lane, Wellington, Street, Calcutta.

DROIT ET AVANT

(PRINCE & PEASANT)

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

AND

REVIEW OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

VQL. XIV.

٦,٤

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, MARCH 30, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 668.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

-remer-

A CHORAL ODE.

Translated from the Medea of Euripides.

Argument.

EURIPIDES, in a charming episode, congratulates the Athenians upon their divine origin, and the excellence of their climate. Attica, the land of the brave, is characterized by the poet as the nurse of Freedom, and patroness of the liberal arts and sciences, the birth-place of the Muses, the retreat of Venus, and the land in which were cherished all the finer feelings of the human soul. Thence the poet infers the impossibility of an asylum for Medea in the metropolis of such a sacred and delightful country, if her desire of revenging Jason's perfidy should instigate her to murder her own children. The poet endeavours to divert Medea from her horrid purpose, by making an appeal to her maternal affection, calculated to mave both her pity and ter terror.

Chorus-Strophe.

ATHENIANS! renown'd in the annals of glory, Indulging in sweets of a genial clime; And heroes illustrious in primitive story, Descended of gods in the earliest of time . How fruitful thy soil, how comantic thy mountains ! Of freedom and science thy lamels e'er bloom : How sacred thy streams and perennial fountains, And groves which exhale a delicious perfume ! Through regions of beauty, and flow'rs ever ambling, Inhaling the balm of the purest of skies; In pleasure and muth o'er the green hillocks "gamb'ling, In Greece where the brightest of prospects arise. Where muses, chaste Pierian Nine, Infus'd sweet harmony divine ; And taught seraphic notes to swell In song, as hoary legends tell.

Antistrophe.

Where crystal streamlets of Cephisus glide, And, murmuring softly, pour a golden tide. Panting in the sultry beam,
Venus sought the cooling stream,
In beauty lavishing her pow'rs
On beds of ever-blooming flow'rs,
Breath'd through these regions of perfume,
Where laurels and sweet myriles bloom;
Before her breathing vernal zephyrs fly,
Soft breezes float along the lucid sky.
Twining wreaths of sweetest roses,
In ringlets of her golden hair,
With a thousand fragrant posies,
Waying through the ambient air;
Before her face, in beauty smil'd,

Cupid, fair and lovely child,
To teach the sages of the land
To feel as well as understand,
To render beauty in the fair
Serenely sweet as vernal air,
To every virtue grace impart,
And sovereign comfort to the bleeding heait.

Strobhe.

Shall Athens, wash'd by sacred streams, Which far reflect their golden gleams, Or realm of friends, with open arms, Receive you from a foreign strand Into the bosom of your native land-'A wandering exile doom'd to roam. Still cherishing the thoughts of home, By day, affrighted with alaims, By night, with horrid dreams? Along with many others weeping, View'thy sons, in life's fair bloom, Survey their wounds, behold them sleeping Sound in death's eternal gloom. By all the gods, we thee implore, To think of horrid deeds no more Nor thirsting for thy children's blood Imbue thy fingers in the purple flood.

Antistrophe. How shall you seize the smiling creatures

While round your knees they fondly cling, Or mar those sweet and lovely features, Fresh blooming like the flow'rs in spring Or how to them so cruel-hearted As rob them of their vernal joys? Has all maternal love departed For thy pleasing, lovely boys? Or look upon them flush'd with beauty, In innocence, without disguise, Alive to every filial duty, Affection beaming in their eyes-To-day, fair flow'rs, in loveliest bloom, But cold and lifeless on the morrow, Slumbering in the silent tomb, Without the pangs of deepest sorrow /Settling in perpetual gloom? Thy little suppliants loudly screaming, Fearful of impending woe, And floods of tears profusely streaming To avert the fatal blow, Will drown thy bleeding heart in anguish, While thirsting for thy children's blood-Will force thy frantic thoughts to languish, And turn, with horror, from the purple flood

Q. S.

WEEKLYANA.

M. PROMPT has found in his laboratory that pure water does not expand in freezing. The French Academy of Sciences has named a commission to verify his experiments.

At Chamounix, they have constructed a villa with a constant temperature all the year round. The framework of the house is a system of pipes in which water, cool or hot, as required, is kept circulating. When will they have

A happy rural seat of various view; Groves whose rich trees wept odorous gums and balm : Others, whose fruit burnished with golden rind Hung amiable, Hesperian fables true, If true, here only, and of delicious taste. Betwixt them lawns, or level downs, and flocks Grazing the tender herb, were interposed: Or palmy hillock, or the flowery lap Of some irriguous valley spread her store, Flowers of all hue, and without thorn the rose : Another side, umbrageous grots, and caves Of cool recess, o'er which the mantling vine Lays forth her purple grape, and gently creeps Luxuriant : meanwhile murmuring waters fall Down the slope hills, dispersed, or in a lake, That to the fringed bank with myrtle crown'd Her crystal mirror holds, unite their streams. The birds their quire apply : airs, vernal airs, Breathing the smell of field and grove, attune The trembling leaves, while universal Pan, Knit with the Graces, and the Hours, in dance Led on the eternal spring?

SEVEN cuies contend for Homer dead. Two houses in the narrow Market-street of Coventry claim to be the place where the living actress Miss Ellen Terry first saw the light. A brass-plate on one side of the road reads, "The birthplace of Miss Ellen Terry"; and that over the way is marked, "This is the original birthplace of Miss Ellen Terry."

WE read :--

"Mr. Justice Grantham told the Grand Jury at Hereford recently the heard for some time that so far as that county was concerned, it owed its comparative immunity from physical disorders to the fact that Herefordshire was a great cider-drinking county. He had come to the conclusion that cider had the same effect on the moral as on the physical man, and that they owed their great freedom from clime, if he might say so, to the fact that Herefordshire people drank cider. If that was the case, he hoped other counties would follow the example."

If he were aware of the Indian Hemp Drugs Commission, Mr. Justice Grantham would certainly have recommended bhang, if not ganja and charas.

THE Glasgow Theatre Royal has been destroyed by fire.

WE take the following from a contemporary :-

"Mir Sultan, a grandson of the late King of Delhi, is now a head clerk in the office of the District Superintendent of Police, Vemethen." The late King of Delhi was, of course, the unfortunate Bahadin Shah, who was deported to Burmi, after the suppression of the Mutinies. As to Mir Sultan, whose son is he? Was his father one of those unfortunate princes who was shot, after they had surrendered, by Hodson? Probably, Mir is no legitimate descendant of Bahadur Shah. But legitimate or otherwise, this youngman may have Bahadur Shah's, and, therefore, Akbar's blood in his veins. Who is there that will not honour him for earning his bread by industry instead of nursing any sentiment about his birth and taking advantage of the generosity of some Mussulman nobleman whose ancestors had served the house of Delhi?

ARRANGEMENTS were made for an assembly of at least seven lakhs of pilgrims at Hurdwar,

A FIRE broke out last week in a godown of the Bally Paper Mills. Not much damage was done.

TIGERS have made their appearance in the neighbourhood of Mugra, on the East Indian Railway.

WE are glad to find Baboo Gopal Lal Seal turning a new leaf. He his obtained the thanks of the Lieutenant-Governor for his liberality and public spirit by paying up the balance of the contribution of Rs. 30,000 towards the construction of the Elliott bridge across the Bhurpara khal near the Civil Engineering College, Sibpur. The new turn to the Baboo's liberality is indeed welcome to the friends of his family.

Mr. J. Penton, District Superintendent of Police, Shikarpur, is said to have become a Mahomedan and visited the Shrine of Lal Shahbas, in Sehwan. It is also stated that a number of Pathan orderlies brought about the conversion.

THREE respectable Hindoos, charged with throwing a corrosive substance, namely, nitric acid, into the face of a Europe liquor shop-keeper, Rungiah Chetty, and thereby blinding him, have been sentenced, by Major Ravenshaw, the Sessions Judge, Bangalore, to ten, eight, and six years' rigorous imprisonment, with fines of Rs. 500, Rs. 500, and Rs. 100, respectively. One thousand rupees of the fines has been awarded as compensation to the injured man.

KUMAR Gopendra Krishna, Inspector-General of Registration, has been Grzetted District and Sessions Judge of Dacca, Mr. Ahsanuddin Ahmad, Joint-Magistrate and Deputy Collector, Monghyr, District and Sessions Judge of Nadia, and Moulvi Delawar Hosaen Ahmed, Khan Bahadur, Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector, 24-Parganas, Inspector-General of Registration. While two Statutory Civilians are thus made District Judges, a Covenanted Native Civilian has to vacate his seat as Commissioner of a Division and to shrink into a District Magistrate in the same Division. Mr. H. H. Risley, having returned to India, resumes his place in the Bengal Secretariat, the Hou'ble Mr. J. A. Bourdillon, officiating for him, takes up the Commissionership of the Burdwan Division, and the Hou'ble Mr. Romesh Chunder. Dutt becomes Magistrate and Collector of Burdwan.

THE new commercial Member of the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is Mr. Charles Edward Symth, in place of Mr. J. N. Stuart, resigned, and the new official Member is Mr. T. D. Benghton officiating Superintendent and Remembrance of Legal Affairs, vice Mr. C. A. Wilkins. There are also two vacancies, caused by the resignation of two official Members, namely, the Hon'ble Moulvi Abul Jubbar, Khan Bahadur, and the Hon'ble F. R. S. Colher.

THE correspondence on the proposed repeal of the Bengal Patwari Regulation XII. of 1817, is published for general information in the Calcutta Gazette of the week.

SANCTION has been given for the Howrah-Amta and the Howrah-Sheakhalla Tramways. The promoters are Messrs. Martin and Co., Successors to Messis. Walsh, Lovett & Co., of Calcutta, on behalf of a company to be formed and called the Bengal District Road Tramways Company, Limited. They are bound to substantially commence the construction of the tramways within nine calendar months and to complete and equip the same in every respect for opening and working for trafic within two years from the 26th March 1895. The Amta Line will start at or near to Telkut Ghat, and will pass along and on one side of the road, skirting the Howiah maidan, and thence along the Panchanantolla Road or to the Bantra Road, where it will effect a junction with the conservancy line of the Howiah Municipality, over which line running powers have been arranged. Leaving the conservancy line at a point a little to the south of the place known as Kadamtola (the first stopping place), the line will proceed in a westerly direction along the Makuida Road to Baltikri (four miles from Howrah), the next stopping place. From Baltikri the line goes (1 mile) on to Bankra, thence (1 mile) to Solap, thence (11/2 miles) to Makurda, thence (21/2 miles) to Doomjore, where a diversion of 46 chains will be made to carry the line over a bridge to be constructed at a lower level than the existing road bridge. From Doomjore the line proceeds (11/2 miles) to Rajapur, and thence (31/2 miles) to Borgachia. This last stretch of 31/2 miles crosses the Rajapur Jheel. The district road thence goes in a north-west direction to Jagathalabpur, and thence due south towards Amta, forming thereby two sides of a triangle. Jagatbalabpur (11/2 miles) will be served with a branch line, and the main Ime will proceed from Borgachia to Nycoolee (4 miles) partly across land to be acquired. From Nycoolee the line proceeds (to miles) to Amta vid Narendrapur, Dipa, and Moonshee Hat. The Howrah-Sheakhalla Tramway commences where the other line begins and runs over the same line up to and over the conservancy line of the Howrah municipality. Leaving the conservancy line, where it crosses the old Benares road (2 miles), the line proceeds to a westerly direction along the old Benares road to Kona (1 % miles), from there the line goes to Kooledanga (1/2 mile), thence (1 mile) to Deburpara, thence (1 1/2 miles) to Kristopur, thence (1 1/2 miles) to Booita, thence (1 mile) to Beladanga, thence (1 mile) to Chanditolla. From Chanditolla the line proceeds to Kolachora (t mile), where a diversion of 26 chains will be made to carry the line to Jonai (t mile). From Jonai the line again proceeds along the old Benares road to Jonardunpur (11/2 miles), thence (1 mile) to Dipa, thence (1 mile) to Junglepara, thence (11/2 miles) to Mokoondpur, thence (1/2 mile) to Modhopur, thence (1/2 mile) to Roghoonathpur, thence (1/2 mile) to Debee battee, theuce

We congratulate Pandit M. C. Nayaratna and Baboo Anurup Chunder Mookerjee on the fruiton of their long labours for carrying steam Tramways to their native towns.

NOTES & LEADERETTES,

OUR OWN NEWS,

&

THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

-4744666-

AT Simonosaki, the Chinese Viceroy Li-Hung-Chang, while returning to his lodgings from attending the sitting of the Peace Conference, was shot at with a pistol and wounded in the face. The would-be assassian is a young Japanese, named Koyama, aged twenty-one. He is descubed as a political bravo. A considerable number of speciators had collected in the street through which the Chinese envoys had to pass. Kovama, suddenly emerging from the crowd, stopped the palanquin and fired almost point-blank at Li-Hung-Chang. The Mikado and the Japanese Ministers expressed their profound regrets at the outrage, and the Mikado sent his own physician to attend the wounded Ambassador. It is expected that the Viceroy Li-Hung-Chang will be sufficiently recovered from his wound to be able in a few days to resume the negotiations for peace. In the meantime, the war continues. A detachment of sailors and marines from the Japanese warships attempted a landing at the Pescadores, but were repulsed with slight loss. Another attempt to land a force at Making also proved unsuccessful. But ultimately they effected a landing and the chief places are in possession of the Japanese troops. The plague has broken out among the Chinese population of Kowloon. Cholera is attacking the Japanese troops garrisoning Port Arthur. Many fatalities have occurred, but the Japanese are taking great preclutions to stamp out the disease. According to an official return the loss on the Japanese side from fighting and sickness since the middle of September amounts to sixteen handred men.

A TERRIFIC gale raged over Great Britain on the night of the 23rd, and the next day a number of shipwiecks were reported, accompanied by serious loss of life. Several persons have also been killed in London and the provinces owing to falling walls.

LORD Rosebery and Mr. Fowler both continue to make slow progress towards recovery. Mr. Gladstone has returned from Cannes in excellent health.

THE Reichstag by a majority of seventeen votes and after an excited debate, refused to felicitate Prince Bismarck on the occasion of his eightieth birthday. The majority comprised the centre with the Radical Socialist Deputies who accounted a hostile vote. The President and Vice-President of the Reichstag announced their intention of resigning forthwith. Emperor William sent a telegram to Prince Bismarck expressing himself profoundly indignant at the vote which is absolutely contrary to the feelings of every Germ in. Immense preparations are being made throughout Germany to adequately celebrate Prince Bismarck's birthday. Reviewing the refusal of the Reichstag to compliment Prince Bismarck on his eightieth birthday, the German press dwells on the constitutional importance of the Emperor William's despatch as openly contesting the Reichstag's representation of the views of the country. Four hundred members of the Prussian Diet and Reichstag started for Friedrichsruh to congratulate Prince Bismarck on his birthday. The Emperor followed the next day. A grand review was ordered, in which all branches of the army were represented in front of the assembled troops. His Majesty thanked the ex-Chancellor for his services. At the luncheon, which was afterwards given in the castle, the toast of Prince Bismarck was proposed by the Emperor, followed by a salute of twenty-one guns.

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all kinds. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Street, Westminster, London, S. W.

THE House of Commons has adopted, by a majority of 18, a resolution, by Mr. Allen, for the payment of its members.

MR. Russel, replying on behalf of the Secretary of State for India, said that the question of the abolition of flogging in the Native Army was still the subject of consultations. No change was possible until the Bill was passed in the Indian Legislative Council.

A FINAL agreement has been arranged between Government and the East Africa Company, by which the latter surrenders the Charter for £55,000, and the Zuzibar concession for £150,000

Two French expeditions have appeared in the territory under the protection of the Royal Niger Company, and are concluding treaties with the petty Native Chiefs. This eacroachment on the part of the French will, it is feared, lead to trouble in the district. Sir Edward Grey, Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, made an important statement in the House of Commons regarding the relations between Great Britain and France. Considering that the British and Eggptian spheres of influence cover the whole valley of the Nile, he was unable to believe that France had sent an expedition to the Upper Nile, because the French Government must know that such a step would be regarded by Great Britain as an unfriendly act. He considered the news of the appearance of French missions in the Royal Niger Company's protectorate was most serious, but refrained from commenting thereon until the French Government had replied to the communication on the subject. The events of the last two years in Siam and Africa, have created much uneasiness. Sir E living Grey concluded by saying that Great Britain had striven, and would continue to strive, to maintain her good relations with France. The speech made a deep impression, and has been greatly commended.

ACTIVE preparations are being made by the Spanish Government for the suppression of the insurrection in Cuba. Seven thousand troops are to be despatched immediately to the island, and Marshall Campes has been appointed to the supreme command of the operations for quelling the revolt.

THE Belgium Government has called out seven thousand men of the reserve, owing to the ominous character of the agitation that is being carried on, fanned by the Socialists in the industrial centres.

THE Times publishes a leading article on the present situation of Chitral, and considers that the reverse in which Ciptain Ross' detachment of Sikhs were killed, is unimportant, except in so far as it may injure British prestige with the tubesinen until the loss is avenged. The Daily News regrets that the over-confidence displayed may serve to convert the Robertson's rehef into a punitive expedition. At a meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, Captain Younghusband gave a lecture on Chitral. In the discussion that followed Lord Roberts deploted the necessity for the forthcoming expedition, but trusted that the result would be the means of opening a direct route to Chitral, which would prove of great strategic advantage. Mr. Curzon has written a long letter to the Times, in which he condemns the policy of recognizing de facto rulers of Native States regardless of their character or the probable results, and urges that Government Chitral in future.

ON account of the Chitral imbroglio, it was said that the Viceroy would go to Simla direct. That would have been a great disappointment to the good people of Bankipore who have subscribed and voted sums for his reception and to perpetuate his visit. The Viceroy, however, completes his programme. Lord Elgin started on his tour yesterday. After visiting Gaya, Bankipore and Umballa Cantonment, he will arrive at Simla next Saturday.

REGARDING the visit, a correspondent writes from Bankipore under Preparations are making on a grand scale to give a befitting reception to the Viceroy on his approaching visit to the capital of Bihar. With this object a joint meeting of the Municipality and the District Board was held week before last in the District Board Office. It was decided to present a joint address to the Viceroy and to raise subscriptions. The District Board and the Municipality each has voted a sum of Rs. 1,500 for the reception. They also propose to give Rs. 10,000 each for building a town hall. It has not yet been decided as to the form in which the Viceroy's visit will be commemorated. Two public meetings were held last week, on the 18th and 19th, at Chhajoobagh and at Nawab Syed Welayet Ab Khan's house in Bankipore and Patna respectively. The first was presided over by Roy Radha Kishna, a leading Banker and Zimindar of this city, and the second by the above named Nawab. Both the meetings were attended by the representatives and leading men of all classes, and subscriptions are being collected. The Maharajah of Darbhunga has subscribed Rs. 500. His Excellency will be received at the station by the officials and probably the Rajas, Nawabs and Maharajas. From the station he will drive to the Chhajoobagh house of the Maharajah of Durbhunga, where two addresses of welcome, one from the general public and another from the Behar Landholders, will be presented. The Commissioner's house is being thoroughly repaired and prepared for the august guest

In the afternoon, it is reported, the Viceroy will drive through the city to the Opium Factory at Gulzarbagh, visiting en route the college, the hospital, and other public institutions. Lady Elgin will visit the Lady Dufferin Zenana Hospital which is being put in very good order. Many people have commenced to whitewash and decorate their houses in the line of the Viceregal drive and in other streets also. There will be illumination also in a spontaneous manner and the Reises will put their gates in splendid order with decorations, On the 2nd April, the Commissioner gives an Evening Party at his house. Triumphal arches are in course of construction on the toads. The Maharaji of Hutwa and many other Rajas, some 20 in number, will come here to receive the Viceroy. Durbhunga may also come if his medical adviser permits him to do so.

SIR Charles Paul goes on furlough for eight months from the 8th April. The Bar is hotly discussing the officiating appointment. Last time, Mr. Phillips, the Standing Counsel, being absent, Mr. Woodroffe, had acted as Advocate-General. Semonty being the rule with Barristers, the appointment is Mr. Philips' due. But Su Griffith Evans has been elected and Mr. Phillips has resigned his place. To prevent the catastrophe, Sir Charles Paul had offered to cancel his leave, but the offer came too late, for the Government of India had made up its mind. Mr. Pugh, we believe, will be appointed Standing Counsel

In Calcutta, in the town proper, deaths from small-pox have swelled to 138 a week. In the week, ended the 16th of March they were 35 more than in the previous seven days. The general death rate of the week was 54.2 per mille per annum, against 29.3, the mean of the last five years. Cholera is also increasing. There were 27 deaths against II and II in the two preceding weeks.

The Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science. 210, Bow-Bazar Street, Calcutta.

(Session 1894-95.) Lecture by D. N. Chatterjee, B. A., M. B., C. M., on Wednesday, the 3rd April, at 5-30 P. M. Subject: "Circulation"

Lecture by Dr. Nilratan Sarkar, M. A., M. D., on Thursday, the 4th April, at 5-30 P, M. Subject: Histology "Endothelium."

MAHENDRA LAL SIRCAR, M.D.,
Honorary Secretary.

March 30, 1895

should maintain a Political Officer with an adequate garrison in The Chairman of the Calcutta Corporation has declared in the Gazette the result of the Elections of the Municipal Commissioners. Only one election, that of Captain Corkhill, in Ward 18, is subject to the issue of a suit pending in the High Court in which Babu Rajoni Mohan Chatterjee contests the validity of the votes recorded in favour of the Captain. The new Corporation meets to-day to fix the rates.

> THE following extract from a letter received by Dr. Sambhu Chunder Mookerjee, some time before his death, from the veteran editor of one of the metropolitan dailies, will, we are sure, be read with interest by

> " * * * As you say, proof-reading is sometimes a fearful trial one's notions being so confused that it is not always easy to see or to know what is the meaning. Mr. Knight once asked me how I got over the daily martyrdom of seeing the errors in the morning's paper. I told him that they used to bother me at one time but I had learnt better. I said that if the reader was a sensible man, he would see there was some mistake; and if he were a fool, it would not matter. He said that was at least a philosophical view and commended it."

Yes, it is a martyrdom and no mistake to find so many imperfections in one's writings when one comes to read them in print. For the editors of daily papers, the marty rdom has to be undergone daily, as in the case of ourselves, it has to be borne weekly. The above philosophical view, however, is not always possible. are errors and errors. When the error is gross and palpable, one may summon one's purlosophical indifference to stand it. There are, however, errors which apparently yield some meaning. It is these that cause real misery, for however sensible the reader, he forms a very poor idea of the writer's capacity to express hunself. It is for this latter kind of errors that the martyrdom becomes complete. In one of his letters to Murray, while Childe Harold was passing through the press, Lord Byron said,-" You have looked at it? to much purpose, to allow so stupid a blunder to stand; it is not 'courage,' but 'carnage,' and if you don't want to see me cut my own throat, see it altered." Lord Byron, however, was a strange medley of inconsistencies, for in a later epistle he wrote to his publisher, saying,-" If every syllable were a rattle-snake, or every letter a pestilence, they should not be expunged." This was in one of his philosophic moods, but soon after be showed his mability to stand an error of much less consequence, viz., the perversion, by Murray's shopman, of the name of his great poem. "For G-'s sake," he writes, "instruct your shopman not to call the work 'Child of Harrow's Pilgrimage !!!' as he has done to some of my astonished friends, who wrote to enquire after my samty on the occasion, as well they might." Everybody knows what misery was felt by Macaulay when in a paragraph, since suppressed, at the outset of his celebrated article on Warren Hastings, he was made to say that Goldsmith's Vicar of IVakefield is a worthless production. His reputation as a critic of English literature, he thought, would suffer by the blunder. Nothing could be done till the next number of the blue and yellow. Till then, for the space of three mortal months, the brilliant reviewer and critic was really very unhappy. It was a slip of the pen for Goldsmith's History of Greece. Yet the slip was such that no amount of philosophy could reconcile the writer to it. He twice wrote to Napier about it and wished the correction to be made "a little more prominent than usual, and introduced with two or three words of preface." After such examples, it is scarcely necessary to refer to our own martyrdom in consequence of the errors of the press that sometimes disfigure our columns here and there, in this or that issue. Printing in India is peculiarly liable to errors of every kind, and we are for following the general practice of withholding errata. In our issue of the 16th March, however, two material errors were committed which we desire to correct. In the leader on "Mixed Marriages," p. 126, col. 2, line 8 from bottom, for "happiness" read "condition." In the letter als v of "Bhargava," p. 129, col. 1, line 19, for "months" read "numbers." The Edinburgh Review, original series, as edited by Wedderburne, afterwards Lord Loughborough, lived for two or three numbers and not months. It was started as a quarterly publication. Want of adequate support, however, led the conductors to abandon

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free.—Arthicial Earderiums and similar appliances entirely superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

THE entertainments to the Honourable Mr. Phirozesha M. Mehta went off satisfactorily. Both the Dinner and the Evening Party were held at the Town Hall, and well attended. On the first occasion, there were as many as eighty persons present. The Mahararaja of Durbhanga who could not come had sent in his apologies. The Hon'ble Gangadhar Madhay Chitnavis joined in the after dinner speeches. Mr. Monmohun Ghose, as Chairman, after the loyal toasts, proposed, in a speech characterized by moderation, the health of the guest of the evening. Mr. Mehta made a feeling and modest reply. Referring to the Civil and Military Gazette which had called him Babu Mehta, he said that nothing gave him greater satisfaction, than to be called a Bengah in Bengal, a Madrasee in Madras, and a Sikh in the Punjab. He might have remembered that Parisis in Bengal were always addressed as Babus, and that there is still a Parsee House in Calcutta in which the heads are called BuraBabu and Chhota Babu. At the Evening Party, all classes were represented. The Hall was tastefully decorated. There was both vocal and instrumental music and light refreshments. An illuminated address in a silver casket was presented to Mr. Mehta, the signatories being headed by the Maharaja of Durbhanga. The whole creat of the movement, from inception to successful eading, is due to Mr. H.C. Malik, the Secretary to the Entertainment Committee.

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, March 30, 1895

THE TWO LECTURES ON INDIA.

Mr. S. E. J. Clarke is better known in Bengal as a man of business, than as a lecturer or pamphleteer. He is not only Secretary to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, but is intimately connected with the managing boards of many a large number of commercial concerns. His daily work, therefore, is not likely to leave him much time to devote to literary pursuits. He is, however, a writer of great powers, and at one time held the editorial charge of one of the leading dailies of this town. It is believed, moreover, that amidst all his graver avocations, he has never completely given up his connection with the press, and that his contributions to the organs of Anglo-Indian opinion are frequent. The anonymous character of such writings has necessarily kept his name in the background, and the public have never had any opportunity of knowing what his individual opinions are regarding some of the most important questions of Indian politics or sociology. Fortunately, he was, of late, allowed a year's furlough, and the commercial statistics which he has to study, and the weary round of meetings, ordinary and extraordinary, which he has to attend in his official capacity, ceasing to oppress him during the time, he was enabled to compose for the benefit of his countrymen at home, two lectures which have since been reprinted in a more permanent form. The first of these has for its subject India and its People, and was delivered by the writer himself. The second, which gives an account of the condition of Indian women, was read at a meeting of the Society of Arts, London, by Sir Alexander Wilson, whose name, as one of the leading merchants of this town, is well known in India. In these two lectures Mr. Clarke deals with a very large number of topics. We cannot possibly refer to all of them in one article. We reproduce some of the remarks that he makes as to the "Want of India." He says:—
"You may ask me what is the special want of India? and I, or inded any honest man, can only answer, Industries, and to be let alone to develope them according to her requirements and needs. If this can be brought about, then there will be no better field for the employment of British capital than India. If, however, the Government at home is to force measures of industrial repression on Andia, then every penny of British money now invested in that investments in Indian cotton mills and iron foundries, country is in peril, and it would be the very flower of folly to invest more. Indian industries are very few, and even these, except tea, are in their infancy, yet she possesses coal and iron beyond the powers of computation, copper, tin, gold, precious stones, marble, everything in fact necessary; but she does not possess active capital or capable guidance."

Mr. Clarke is not one of our "professional philanthropists" and he is not in favour of the fads of the hour. An honest Briton of strong common seuse, he hits the right nail on the head with very little ceremony. He gives the best advice that he can, both to his own countrymen and to us. He does not, like Mrs. Annie Besant, tell us to remain satisfied with the material condition in which we are at present, and to make no efforts to improve it. He advises his own countrymen to devote their capital and enterprise to the improvement of the manufacturing industries of this country. That advice, if acted upon, is sure to be beneficial to both England and India.

The idea that India does not possess the necessary capital may not be accepted as a fact, except in a qualified sense. The truth certainly is that India produces an abundance of capital every year which is very nearly beyond the resources of any other country in the world. Looking at the subject with the light thrown upon it by political economy, capital means food. It is the materials for feeding labourers that are the sine qua non for the product any kind of goods. The popular idea is that is the only shape in which capital can eat that is a proposition which is quite as fall the ancient belief that the wealth of a co pended upon the stock of bullion or coin that it possessed. India produces a m quantity of food grains than her labouring tion is able, or allowed, to consume. But the surplus, and even part of what is necessary to it, is appropriated by our rulers, and sold at ruinous prices to meet what are called our Home Charges. That is the reason why India is poor, and England is rich. That is the reason why our Railways, Canals, Tea and Coffee gardens, and Jute Mills have to derive their main support from British capitalists. Nevertheless, it is not to be supposed that English capital has ever been brought to this country, or that there is the slightest necessity of its being brought here. For the construction of our Railways and the development of our manufacturing industries, we have certainly never been able to do without borrowing from English capitalists. But we have never borrowed a single farthing from England that we have not repair. On the contrary, we have, during the last hundred years, given to England more than one thousand millions sterling, in excess of what she has given to us in the shape of her imports into this country during the period. The balance of trade has every year been to the advantage of England, and never to that of India. The fact is, while England has been taking away, without giving any tangible equivalent, several millions every year in the shape of cotton, wheat, tea, indigo, jute, &c., our liability to her capitalists has been increasing with the most alarming rapidity. The reason is that a part of the savings of English officials in this country is invested by them or their bankers in Indian enterprises. They alone possess sufficient money for financing such undertakings, and unable to do without English capital. The state of things in India being such, the wisest course for British capitalists would be to seek for it is in this sense only that India can be said to be instead of struggling to prop up only those of Manchester and Birmingham which are already doomed. America and India are the two great cotton producing countries in the world. The former possesses capital and enterprise, but is handicapped by paucity of labourers. India has every advantage both for the production and consemption of cotton piece-goods. She has not only the raw material and highly skilled labour in abundance, but also a home market whose demand for cotton cloths is practically unlimited. In another century, the population of America will, in all probability, increase to such an extent as to enable her to become one of the foremost of the manufacturing countries in the world. If, in the meantime, the Indian cotton industry were set on a firm footing, America might find it very difficult to drive from our market our home-made goods. But it would be simply impossible for Manchester, under those circumstances, to hold its ground against the United States. The only sound and wise policy for the British Government would be to encourage the Indian industries and not to repress them so as to enable foreign nations to profit by the short-sighted policy. We have no doubt that our rulers perceive all this as clearly as we do. But under the pressure that is brought to bear upon them by the unwise selfishness of the English manu-

the cannot but have, before cannot but have, before the control of the control absolutely wasted in feeding idlers and drones, and in useless shows and ceremonies, under the name of religion. In spite of the drain of what are called the Home Charges, there would be capital enough if we could, like the English under Henry VIII., disestablish some of those monastries and shrines which are well-known to be the hot-beds of immorality. That is wellnigh impossible so long at least as the present revival of Hinduism is in full swing. In this state of things, British capitalists have a splendid opportunity. But while they are sadly neglecting it, the British Government of India has been still more unwisely doing its utmost to scare them away, instead of holding out every possible attraction to them.

With regard to the condition of Hindu women, the views expressed in Mr. Clarke's second lecture, are likely to give his countrymen far more correct ideas on the subject than they are generally found to possess. The average Englishman labours under the impression that our women are, throug' our jealousy or pride, "reduced to a condition where it would be happier if they actually were slaves." The condition of our widows is in some respects very miserable, indeed. But the supposition that we treat our women with contumely, or that their condition is that of virtual prisoners, is utterly without foundation. In no other country in the world, are the mothers and wives so much respected as among the Hindus. The mother is actually worshipped by many a Hindu, and the wife is looked upon as an incarnation of Lakhsmi, the goddess of prosperity. It is true that our ancient Shastras, like the Common Law of England, sanction favour of the goddess of wealth, and the odium of cowardice which is incurred by such cruelty, have in India made the injunction a dead letter. feminine doggerels meant to shame the wife-beater have also served to bring about the same result. We may give the translation of one of these here. It is as follows :-

"The man who cannot command the respect of his countrymen at public assemblies, comes home and displays his bravery by beating

The fact that the higher classes of Hindu ladies are not generally allowed to appear in public, is considered by many Englishmen a great hardship. But, as shown by Mr. Clarke, and as is well known to every one conversant with Hindu family life, the seclusion of Hindu ladies in the zenana is not quite so strict as is ordinarily supposed. The lower classes of Hindu women have generally as much liberty as those of any other country. And if there are restrictions on the movements of Hindu ladies of the higher classes, those are the inevitable concomitants of aristocratic life. Those who pity our Pardanashin ladies might as well pity the Viceroy, because he cannot, even if he felt inclined to do so, come out into the streets to sing and dance with the Army of General Booth.

We have already referred to the condition of our widows as a miserable one in many respects. So far as food is concerned, we might, we think, allow them to live more like mortals, than goddesses. The Ekadasi fasting is a gratuitous cruelty which the Shastras do not declare as obligatory, and which is enforced on the widows of Bengal by a far-fetched interpretation of the Shastras that is not approved or upheld by the Pandits of any other part of India. Even the re-marriage of widows is sanctioned by our holy codes of law, and the fact that it does not take place in practice, is due chiefly to the law and social etiquette requiring the marriages of Hindu boys and girls to be arranged by their parents, and to the circumstance that the Shastras have made no provision for the arrangement of the marriage of a widow. The moral tyranny that prevents widows from remarrying cannot be certainly justified. But if the remarriage of widows be freely allowed, the condition of not only the male sex, but of the married women and matrons would, be very different from what it is, The confidence and love which characterize Hindu marital life, must greatly diminish with the prevalence of the remarriage of widows. We must then, to a much greater extent than now, be prepared to keep our money in banks, to dine in hotels, and die in hospitals. That sacrifice of domestic happiness we might reasonably be called upon to make. There are other considerations, however, which ought to make us hesitate in advocating the remarriage of widows. We all know how miserable the children feel if their father, surviving their mother, marries again. To see a mother remarried after the death of the father, would drive any Hindu youth to a far more aggravated form of madness than that of even Hamler. Such instances have already occurred, and, considering the misery brought about by such marriages, it might seem desirable that the remarriage of even widowers was declared illegal. If it were laid down that only those widows and widowers who have children shall not be allowed to remarry, the case of the children would be even worse. The fact is, the gentle correction of a wife when she proves disobedient or perverse. But the belief, very general in the capable of a satisfactory solution. Hindu Society now country, that the man who beats his wife, loses the allows the widows of the lower classes to marry by espousing the Chaitanyaite faith. However disagreeable that may be to her relatives, that is the only course which seems to be practically open.

In the discussion which arose at the conclusion of the lecture on Indian women, Sir George Birdwood, with his usual large-heartedness, franky admitted that Europe was indebted to India for the whole idea of the divinity of motherhood. To prove his view he quoted the following text of Vashista:-

The teacher is to be revered ten times more than the tutor, the father a hundred times more than a teacher, and the mother a thousand times more than the father." Vashishta, XIII, 48.

The teachings of almost all the other Hindu sages are to the same effect. See Manu, II, 145.

And not only the mother, but a great many of the other female relatives are required to be, and are in practice, similarly honoured by the Hindus. The general rule of the Shastras is that no one should, for the purpose of salutation, fall prostrate at the feet of one who is younger in age. But some female relatives, as for instance, the elder brother's wife, are declared entitled to that honour which is denied even to the father's younger brother. It is laid down by one of the sages,-

"Even the father's younger brother and the mother's younger brother should not be saluted by the nephew who is older in age. brother's wife and his preceptor's wife though younger in age."

Manu lays down very similar rules. He says :-

"The sister of his mother, the wife of his maternal uncle, his wife's mother and the sister of his father must be saluted like the wife of his father or preceptor: they are equal to his father's or preceptor's wife.

The wife of his brother, if she be of the same class, must be saluted every day in the same way, but his paternal and maternal kinswomen need only be saluted on his return from a journey."

kinswomen need only --- Manu, II, 131, 132.

Such being the precepts of the Shastras, if Hindu takes a young wife in old age, not only his sons by previous marriages, but his younger brothers though considerably older than she, have to fall prostrate before her feet in order to honour her duly. Such practice based upon the precepts referred to above cannot be said to imply an attitude of contempt for the softer sex. In fact, we show our respect for mothers and wives in more substantial ways. Considering the rights of inheritance, maintenance, &c., given to women by the ancient codes of law, their condition cannot but be regarded as far superior to that of their sisters in other countries. The only drawback in the condition of our married women is that they have no opportunity to be properly educated and to be qualified for an independent career. Considering, however, the smallness of the good that has been done to the male population of our country by English education, we do not feel much inclined to agree with Mr. Bhownagree in deploring the exclusion of our women from the privilege. We cannot affect much surprise at the fact that the study of Western science has not yet led to any original investigations or discoveries by our countrymen. The necessary groundwork is being now prepared and some important results may be hoped for in time. But the study of English history has clearly failed to save our countymen from Keshav worship, Ran worship, Blavatsky worship and Besant worship. That is what makes us despondent. For ordinary men, the only kind of education which in our estimation has any value is that which might enable them to avoid being duped by those who make their position and earn their living, by mere sharp practice. But if our men are so weak that it is quite impossible to rescue them from the sinister the power of instructing the crown lawyers. That power is vested influences that lead them to ruin, what hope can there be that our women, if properly educated, would prove wiser? And if they are born to be led "like the dumb driven cattle," it is better that they should be led by the representatives of our own ancient priesthood, instead of by foreigners who, in their ignorance, might upset everything, without being able to do any good.

ADVOCATES US. MAGISTRATES.

THE rules taken out by Mr. Cranenburgh and Mr. Palit against the Bench of Magistrates were heard on Wednesday. Mr. Jackson appeared for both the Pleader and the Barrister, but no body represented the Magistrates. Mr. Jackson therefore had his own way. He criticized the conduct of the Magistrates, especially that of Mr. Mitra, very sharply, without any check or hindrance. He threw the whole blame of passing orders against his clients on the Chairman of the Bench. Nawab Diler Jung has, however, taken upon himself the responsibility of initiating the proceedings against Mr. Cranenburgh. He has given his explanation in the matter of Mr. Cranen burgh. If he is silent in the matter of Mr. Palit, it is because the order of the High Court and the affiliavits had not reached him and he had to go away on a sea voyage. He distinctly left the matter entirely to Mr. Mitra. The omission cannot therefore be construed to mean that he declined to put his signature to Mr. Mitra's explanation or have anything to do with it at all. Mr. Jackson's arguments are already known. We give the argument on the other side,--namely, the explanations of the Magistrates. The High Court will make the orders on Monday next.

The case cited by the Magistrates is that of Queen-Empress v. Paiambar Bakhsh, a mooktear, who was convicted by the Deputy Magistrate of Allahabad of contempt of court under Section 480, Criminal Procedure Court, and sentenced to a fine of Rs 50. The Sessions Judge on appeal confirmed the conviction and sentence. The objection taken in the High Court was that the Magistrate not having elected to follow the procedure of section 480, the conviction was bad. Mr. Justice Straight held that, although it had some force and deserved consideration, the objection could not prevail. The provisions of the section are indeed to be applied then and there, at any rate, before the rising of the Court. "But" he says, "while, it may be, the Deputy Magistrate's procedure was irregular, to pronounce it illegal is quite another thing, and knowing as I do the difficulty native magisterial officers must necessarily at times be placed in to preserve order in their Courts, I should not be disposed to take that view unless coerced to do so by the terms of the statute. It is perfectly clear that the postponement of his final orders in the matter was adopted by the Deputy Magistrate for the purpose of affording the petitioner an opportunity of shewing cause why such order should not be made, though I doubt if, under the circumstances disclosed, there was any necessity for the Deputy Magistrate to take that course. Anyhow, I cannot hold that the petitioner in any way was prejudiced by the Deputy Magistrate's action, and, as I think at most it amounted to no more than an irregularity of procedure, I think it was cured by section 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code." Ultimately, the Judge reduced the fine to Rs. 20.

We understand that both the Honorary Magistrates had asked the Chief Magistrate to engage a counsel to shew cause against the rules. In fact, in the contempt proceedings in the Police Court he was appealed to to instruct the Government Solicitor to appear on behalf of the Crown. The Solicitor is represented in the Police Court by Mr. Hume, who was instructing Mr. Palit in the case in which Mr. Palit was charged with contempt of Court. The Government Solicitor thought that the Magistrates were not proceeding rightly and that the legal advisers of Government ought not to be instructed. The Chief Magistrate does not seem to posses in the Commissioner of Police. Unless, therefore, the Police is concerned in any matter, or unless it pleases the Police Commissioner, that power is not to be exercised. The Magistrates were, therefore, left to their own resources to maintain the dignity of the Court, as best they could, according to their own lights. They might, if they chose, employ any counsel to explain to the High Court their course of action.

THE EXPLANATION OF THE NAWAB. Empress vs. D. E. Cranenburgh.

I most respectfully beg to submit the following explanation under Section 441, Crimmal Procedure Code, in the matter of Mr. D. E. Cranenburgh.

The whole tenor of the petition shows that my colleague (Mr. The whole tenor of the petition shows that my colleague (Wir. N. N. Mitra) initiated the proceedings against the petitioner for perjury. But I beg to state to your Lordships that the proceedings for perjury were first written by me. I stated in my judgment the contempt case dated the 26th February 1895 (which happened long before the needent which appeared in the Englubman), and cannot but characterise the evidence of Mr. Cranenburgh as wholly untrue and therefore unreliable."

I was shocked to hear Mr. Palit insulted us in the court and interrupted us in the discharge of our duties. I was still more shocked to hear Mr. Cranenburgh on oath say before us that Mr. Palit said "it is a misfortune that you as a court would not listen to or hear me at all," &c., &c.

In my opinion he perjured himself and I thought that an opportunity should be given to him to show cause why he should not be prosecuted for perjury. The application by the petitioner is premature as he was not served with the rule, therefore the petitioner has no locus stands.

I consider I shall be failing in my duty if I overlook any offence committed against public justice and before us.

I am ready to hear Mr. Cranenburgh and shall consider what he has to say in self-defence.

The alleged passage-at-arms between Mr. Cranenburgh and Mr. Mitra had nothing to do with me and I was by no means influenced by it in making the order. I had no talk with Mr. Mitra about it.

I shall be going on a sea voyage on the 15th March for my health and shall not be back to town till the end of April. The Registrar of the High Court has not yet sent us (to the Police Court) a copy of the affidavit mentioned in his letter No. 685 dated 13th March, therefore I am not in a position to remark on it.

I hope my colleague will submit a full explanation of all the points raised by the petitioner. (Sd.) DILER JUNG.

14th March, 1895.

THE EXPLANATION OF MR. MITRA.

In the matter of Mr. D. E. Cranenburgh and Mr. T. Palit.

In accordance with the provisions of section 441 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, I beg most respectfully to submit the following remarks for the consideration of their Lordships the honourable Judges of the High Court.

It appears that in the affidavit made by Mr. Cranenburgh before the High Court, certain personal matters have been introduced with the object, no doubt, to show that it was I who was chiefly instrumental in directing the issue of a rule nisi on him. I have advisedly used the words "directing the issue of a rule," since, as a matter of fact, no rule of the kind at the instance of my colleague and miself has up to this time been served on Mr. Cranenburgh. The matter contained in paragraphs 8 and 9 of the affidavit would be irrelevant to the subject before your lordships, but for the institution which it covers that I was led to issue the rule by reasons partly of professional jealousy and partly of the provocation which might have been caused to me by Mr. Cranenburgh in a case wherein we were opposed to each other, before Nawab Amir Hossein, the Northern Division Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta. In the first place, it is wholly false in the sense which the expression is intended to convey that I now ordinarily practise in the Police Court. It is no doubt true that I ordinarily practise my profession as an advocate, but if I practise in the Police Court which I occasionally do, it is equally true that I practise my profession more ordinarily in other Courts than the Police Court; in the next place, the report of the incident which appeared in the columns of the Englishman to which my attention was subsequently drawn, is to the best of my recollection, by no means an absolutely accurate account of what transpired before Nawab Amir Hossein on the 4th day of March 1895; but if it is, as Mr. Cranenburgh swears that it is, a correct report of the incident, even a cursory perusal of the report is apt to strike the reader that a great deal too much was made of an affair which bore little public interest and had scarcely anything to do even with the interest of the litigating parties before that Magistrate, that the only person who is likely to be interested in the report was Mr. Cranenburgh himself, and both the language and the manner which the report attributes to Mr. Cranenburgh are neither very becoming nor calculated to raise his position as a Pleader of the Police Court. Mr. Cranenburgh was evidently offended by what took place in the contempt case of Mr. Palit, and the incident which actually occured before Nawab Amir Hossein was a mere sequel of our Judgment in Mr. Palit's case, in which my colleague Nawab Ashgar Ali characterised Mr. Cranenburgh's evidence as "wholly untrue." Personally I was inclined to take a moderate view of Mr. Cranenburgh's evidence, but yielding to the opinion of my learned colleague, a gentleman of high social position, of wide experience and a Barrister of many more years' standing than Mr. Palit, that Mr. Cranenburgh had deliberately given a distorted version of what Mr. Palit had really said, I consented to direct the tributes to Mr. Cranenburgh are neither very becoming nor calversion of what Mr. Palit had really said, I consented to direct the version of what Mr. Palit had really said, I consented to direct the issue of a rule on Mr. Cranenburgh and at least call upon him to explain his conduct. The paragraph 6 of the athidavit has now rendered it clear that my colleague was at all events justified in directing the issue of a rule niii. In that paragraph Mr. Cranenburgh says that he deposed in effect that he said Mr. Palit had not used the words "it is a misfortune you are a Court at all," had not used the words "it is a mislortune you are a Court at all," which he was charged with having said, but had said----it is a misfortune that you as a Court would not hear me at all," On referring to Mr. Palit's petition before your Lordships, it appears that Mr. Palit himself does not remember having used either of the expressions (see paragraph 6 of Mr. Palit's petition), and while my colleague, myself and the Bench clerk Babu Keshub Chandra Basu, who were seriously and attentively occupied in the matter in which the offensive words were used, remember having distinctly and positively heard Mr. Palit make use of the words "it is a misfortune you are a Court at all," Mr. Cranenburgh, who "it is a misfortune you are a Court at all," Mr. Cranenburgh, who was neither personally nor professionally interested in the controversy, which was one entirely between the Court and the advocate, is able to pledge his oath not merely that he heard Mr. Palit use the words "it is a misfortune that you as a Court would not hear me at all," but that Mr. Palit did not use the words "it is a misfortune you are a Court at all." On the other hand, conceding to Mr. Cranenburgh the advantage of an unconcerned appearance of what passed before him on that occasion it is a miscontent of what passed before him on that occasion it is a miscontent of what passed before him on that occasion it is a miscontent of what passed before him on that occasion it is a miscontent of what passed before him on that occasion it is a miscontent of what passed before him on that occasion it is a miscontent of the passed before him on that occasion it is a miscontent of the other hand, spectator of what passed before him on that occasion, it is a matter of no less regret than astonishment that Mr. Cranenburgh should not have availed himself of the advantage to apprise either Mr. Palit or the Court that the words used by Mr. Palit were different from what the Court said it had heard Mr. Palit utter, but content himself with maintaining an omnous silence.

I must here once for all disclaim any personal interest in the matter; whatever personal interest we have taken in it is by virtue of our being Magistrates and not in our individual capacities.

The other question is whether we as a Bench of Magistrates have The other question is whether we as a Bench of Magistrates have any jurisdiction to issue a rule on Mr. Cranenburgh. The answer to that question would depend upon the answer which can be made to the question whether we had jurisdiction to try Mr. Paht on the day to which we had adjourned his trial. I submit we did have jurisdiction on the day in question of which the grounds will be stated later on, and therefore, apart from the merits of the case, it was, I submit, within our jurisdiction to issue the rule upon Mr. Cranenburgh.

I shall now proceed to Mr. Palit's case. The facts and reasons of our decision are fully disclosed in our separate judgments, and I beg leave only to add a few words. My colleague having left Calcutta on the 15th instant, I regret I have not had the advantage of a turther consultation with him. It is not true that I dictated to Babu Keshub Chunder Bose what he had to say. The plain and simple question was whether Mr. Palit had used certain words. and simple question was whether Mr. Palit had used certain words. Amongst other things, I asked Babu Keshub Chunder Bose, while he was in the witness box..." What did Mr. Palit say?" The answer which Babu Keshub Chunder Bose gave was "It is a misfortune you are a Court at all."

Mr. Palit was put upon his trial for the commission of an offence as defined in section 228 of the Indian Penal Code. Two offence as defined in section 228 of the Indian Penal Code. Two courses were open to us, either to proceed under section 480, C. P. C., or under section 482 read with section 487 paragraph 2. After consideration we preferred to proceed under the latter section. Our object in doing so was that we should thereby give Mr. Palit time to reflect upon his conduct in the expectation that he would perhaps be inclined, after due deliberation to tender an unreserved apology for what he had said; and if he did so we would allow the matter to drop. I bmit that under section 482 read by the light of section 487 paragraph 2, we as Presidency Magistrates had jurisdiction to try the case ourselves (see Schedule 2 Criminal Procedure Code, tabular statements of offences under 2 Criminal Procedure Code, tabular statements of offences under section 228 column 8 "by what Court triable." "The Court in which the offence is committed.")

Section 555, Criminal Procedue Code, has no application. If that section does not apply to the procedure prescribed in section 480, no more can it apply to section 482.

I think I ought to state on behalf of my colleague as well as for myself, that nothing could be further from our intention to prejudice Mr. Palit in the least degree in the trial. His conduct in the case of Ord against Herbert was most obstructive and calculated to set an example to others which, if followed, would lead to the cessation of all order and decorum in a Court of Justice. It may be easy for Mr. Palit to deny all recollection of what he said on that occasion, but it is not quite so easy to believe that a successful Barrister of his experience could say or do a thing in Court without forethought or without some object in view. Mr. Palit is too old a Barrister to act thoughtlessly upon the mere impulse of the moment, It is unlikely that he did not say what he said designedly with the determination of producing a certain effect upon the mind of the Court in order to induce it to allow him to address the Court twice.

Mr. Palit has no doubt repudiated from the beginning all recollection of having used the words for which he has had to undergo his trial, thereby implying not only that it was not impossible for him to have used those words, but that he an experienced Barrister of many years' standing was in such a state of excitement as, he unfortunately fails to see, would do discredit even to a youthful and impetuous advocate. We are unable to see where was the reason of such extraordinary excitement on the part of Mr. Palit, as it was he who was insolent to the Court almost from the very commencement of the discussion, and my colleague and myself never for a single moment allowed one unpleasant remark to escape our lips, although we could not but feel that our forbearance emboldened him to assume the defiant artitude towards us. We treated him with the utmost consideration throughout the discussion and during the trial. We repeatedly requested him to withdraw the offensive expression, but we were as repeatedly met with nothing but evasive answers. It was open to him to make any statements, or all or written, if so advised (See our proceedings pages 37 and 38.)

We gave him every opportunity to defend himself and in the end inflicted on him a nominal fine as a warning to himself and others who like himself might be tempted to overstep the bounds of propriety in conducting their cases before Courts composed for the most part of gentlemen who happen to be natives of the country (see remarks of Straight J., in I. L. R., 11, Allahabad, 361).

CHITRAL.

The Pioneer's correspondent, writing from Camp Chitral on the 8th February, gives the following particulars regarding the situation in Chitral.

News of the murder of Nizum-ul-Mulk, the Mehtar of Chitral, by his half-brother, Amir-ul-Mulk, on the 1st of January, 1895, reached Fort. Gupis in Yasin on the 5th. January, and was sent on immediately by estatette to the British Agent at Gilgit. Chitral is fourteen marches. from Gupis, and from the latter post to Gilgit is five marches.

The details of the murder are as follows For some time past it seems beyond doubt that Amir-ul-Mulk had made up his mind to murder Nizam on the first opportunity. Nearly Rs. 40,000 subsidy from the Government of India and from Cashmere, including Rs. 10,000 due of subsidy from the year before, reached Nizam ul-Mulk at Chitral about the 17th December; and at the end of December, about five days before the murder, Nizam had dismissed his guard as being no longer necessary. On the 1st January Nizam-ul-Mulk went out hawking at Broz, about ten miles from Chitral, taking some followers and his half-brother, Amir-ul-Mulk, with him. They were going away after the hawking to feed at the house of Shahzida Khanat Bigz, and Nizam got on his horse when his pagri fell off, and he bent down to let an attendant to it ap: at this moment Amir-ul-Mulk signed to a man who ran up with a Suider carbine under his chaga and shot Nizam-ul-Mulk in the back at about six yards distance. Nizam fell to the ground---he tried to pull out his revolver and called out to his attendants to kill Amir-ul-Mulk --but no one moved to aid him, and all the atten lants turned round to the new Mehrar with the facility of a weatherensk, firing their gons in the air. Nizam died in about half an hour---Amir-ul-Mulk galloping off to get possession of the Chitral fort.

On the 28th a letter was received from Lieutenant Gurdon at

On the 28th a letter was received from Lieutenaut Gurdon at Chitral, giving the news that Umra Khan had defeated the Chitralis in front of Drosh. On this date we halted at Bunt. On the 29th we marched from Buni to Barnas, a distance of 20 miles, over very bad roads indeed. The advanced guard marched from Buni about 8 a.m. and we got into Barnas village about 8 p.m. at night. It was quite dark when the advanced guard commenced to move along a very bad cliff up a tremendous height above the river. In several places a slip would have meant that the man would not be seen again; on descending the other side I found men lighting fires to show us the road, as we had sent on word to have fires lit along the path, in view of being overtaken by the darkness. When we got in the men were very tired, but no one fell out, and as soon as the inlying piequet was told off, the sentries posted, the alarm post fixed, and the men told off to their houses, we were at liberty to get something to eat. We "dined out" with the British Agent that night, on roasted fowls, eaten with one's fingers; and though I have no doubt one would have preferred soup, fish and a bird at one's club with a glass of that old brandy afterwards, still the roasted fowls were

We marched from Barnas to Koghazi on the 30th, a distance of 13 miles---the roads very bad---and on the 31st we marched to Chitral, about the same distance. One gets a very good view as one debouches into the Chittal Valley proper, about 9 miles after leaving Koghazi. The valley broadens out, one sees much cultivation, the fields being laid out very neatly; the hills are covered with deodars. At 11 miles about one passes the village of Danil and about a mile further on one crosses by the Chittal bridge, with its double bridgehead, to the right bank of the Chittal river. This bridge is very old, about 40 yards long and 4 feet broad; on the right bank is a rocky precipice with two towers on it forming the bridgehead on the right bank. However, the necessity of attacking this bridgehead could be avoided by crossing the river at Koghazi, and by crowing the hills on the right bank one could come down on Chittal itself. The fort of Chittal is seen among the chema tices, half a mile below the bridge on the right bank. Lieutenant Gurdon, the Political Oflicer, was very glad to see us, as we were to see him; he had had a very anxious time. His house is situated a nullah, in an excellent position for defence, its only drawback being the mustid close by and a considerable village. The house itself is well suited for defence against musketty; a flat root and an inner courtyard.

There were several Chitralis wounded in the hospital at Chitral, who had been brought back from Drosh, where the fight with Umra Khan had taken place. All the wounds were from Mattins, with now and then a tulwar slash which hid evidently been done as the wounded man lay on the ground—about eleven Chitralis were killed and the same number wounded. Anni al Mulk we heard was now holding the darband at Gairat (16 miles below Chitral on the road to Kila Drosh) with all the Chitralis; Umra Khan had invested Kila Drosh with 3,000 or 4,000 men, and was trying to cut off the water-supply from the garrison of the fort. Drosh fort is garrisoned with 300 Chitralis under Kokan Beg,of whom 200 are atmed with Sinder carbines, but very little ammunition.

There seems no doubt that Umra Khan received a letter from Amir-ul-Mulk asking him for help, directly he murdered Nizam-inl-Mulk asking him for help, directly he murdered Nizam-inl-Mulk and Umra Khan, the redoubtable Chief of Jandoul, a man with apparently natural genius for desperate incasures, immediately concentrated 3,000 to 4,000 men and crossed the Lawari Pass at once, his advanced guard being commanded by his cousin, Majid Khan of Shinar, and occupied Ashreth. The result of a hundred skirmishes and the united testimony of the tribes of this forniter, gives Umra Khan the first place on the N. W. border as an expert and enterprising soldier; moreover, he seems to possess that intuitive sagacity which reads passing events aright and which is so essential to all great leaders. Witness his taking the fort of Narsat from the Chitralis by a coup de man at the end of 1892, when the Chitrals were engaged in internal strife. He lost several men terossing the Lawari Pass, and many were badly frostbitten; he pushed on for Kila Drosh and found the Chitralis in position in front of Drosh on a high spur about 1½ miles from the fort. The Chitralis were posted in groups, the Mastuj men being the lowest down by the road—the terrain is dotted with deodars.

Umra Khan attacked in the afternoon, Majid Khan of Shinar leading the attack, and after a lively fire-fight, the Chitralis were in full retreat. Umra Khan took few prisoners, as the Chitralis are endowed by nature with strong kines. Umra Khan invested Drosh fort and he is still engaged in this at the present time. The Chitralis are at Jairat in a new position, about 6 miles from Drosh, and Amir-ul-Mulk is with them. Every day we hear that a great right is to take place to marrow, in the same way one always hears an Arab say "Bocara"—and "never do to-day what you can put of until to-morrow" is not only the favourite motto of Spain, but also of Chural.

Umta Khin existantly believes in the Roman maxim that "war should support war," for he is looting grain from the vatious villages in his vicinity. He is said to have 2.0 Mirtuis and 300 Sui letistic test in titablockinen, and his force is composed of Painlar Khels, Sultan Khels, Bachkaris, in a ldition to the Dir, Jandol, and Birol men; he boasts also of a bugler trained at Pichaeon. Reports differ as to the amount of ammunition he has; some say plenty, after others say he is hird up for cartindees. The Chitralis as yet make no effort to relieve the investment of Drosh fort notwithstanding the supplications of the garison. They have adopted the Fabian system of factics, hovering in the mountains and refusing battle; they quarrel amongst themselves while the battering rain is at the gite, and their only hope is that on it debrevillera. We expect to hear every divithat Umia Khan has taken Drosh fort, though a rumour arrived last night to say that Majid Khan of Shinar had been shot dead, trying to cut off the water at Drosh fort, and that 1,000 men had in consequence left Umra Khan to go back to their homes. Two British officers were sent on the 3rd February by the Bruish Agent to examine the Chitrali position at the Darband at Zaritts it was found the position was turnable. Amir-ul-Mulk received them with these and tom-toms, and was very phite—he appeared dresse of a dove coloured silk suit, with gold embroid ry—a suit of his murdered botther's; on the way out to Zariat we passed the spot where Nizam-ul-Mulk was murdered. Amir-ul-Mulk is a stupid, dull looking youth of 17 or 18 years of age, he cannot look one in the face, and struck me more as looking like a sulky schoolboy. One cannot understand how he did not give orders to murder Lieutenant Gurdon as soon as Nizam-ul-Mulk was killed, except that perhaps he was afraid to do it. That officer, with only 8 Sikhs as escort, had a very auxious time all alone in Chitral as one can imagine—he sent off to the O. C. Mastuj, asking him to send off 50 men as a reinforcement for his personal escort, but he did not know whether his messenger would reach Mastuj, or that the 50 Sikhs would not be stopped easily at one of the various paru defiles on the road between Mastuj and Chitral. However he showed a steady front, saw all these cut-throats in durbar, and carried on generally as if nothing had happened.

The Chitral fort is most interesting; it is a very large place, a square structure, about 80 yards square, with five lofty towers--walls about 25 feet high and the towers fully 30 feet higher again. Two of us were sent to look at the fort on the 1st February, and were shown round by the little Raja Shujah-ul-Mulk. The fort, as I have said before, is situated on the right bank of the river, which runs north and south roughly here; the west and south sides are hidden entirely by gardens and trees-some extremely fine chinars and some very tall poplars. The fort is divided into two parts---one half, the southern, contains the royal apartments, the harem and so forth. This half is the keep or redoubt, and commands the other half of the fort. We were told that all the royal ladies were now in the fort, but beyond one or two sheeted bundles seen in the garden at a distance, who appeared to regard us with disfavour, no sign was given of their presence. We went over the private apartments of Nizam-ul-Mulk, got up very neatly with dados and so forth; a couple of photos of Captain Younghusband graced the wall, surrounded by a chorus of troublante ladies, taken from the backs of chocolate boxes evidently. To get to this room one goes along a dark and low passage leading into a little square room lighted by an open hatchway from above---it was in this passage that Shah-ul-Mulk and his two brothers were murdered by Afzul-ul-Mulk at the end of 1892, when Afzul-ul-Mulk seized the throne at the end of 1892 on the death of Aman-ul-Mulk, his father. He sent for his brother, Shah-ul-Mulk, and bu two brothers, Wazir-ul-Mulk and Bairam-ul-Mulk, to see him at the fort. He knew that Shah-ul-Mulk was plotting for the Mehtarship, and resolved, no doubt, to be beforehand. He saw Shah-ul-Mulk in the little apartment described above, and was very nice to him. In the mean-time men had been stationed in the dark passage. Afzul-ul-Mulk then bid good-bye to his brother, and Wazir and Bairam closed the door as they went out: he then listened against the door to the struggle and the groans in the passage as his brothers were cut to Their bodies were thrown out of the fort the next morning. pieces. Their bodies were enrown out or increase the Wazir-ul-Mulk was found to be still alive, and they despatched him then. We next saw the tower where Afzul-ul Mulk himself, a short time later, was short dead by Sher Afzul's (his uncle) men in suprised Afaul. He might, who had broken into the fort and surprised Afaul. He might have escaped, and they say his wife begged him to do so, but he was a brave youth, and refused to fly, saying it was not kingly to run, and taking a rifle he ran up into one of the towers. They saw he came out of the tower again, and ordered a fire to be lit to see, and the fire showed him up and he was shot dead at once through the head. The whole place reeks of murder and treachery. At the Musjid the rombs of Aman-ul Mulk, Alzul-ul-Mulk, and Nizam ul-Mulk lie side by side; Shah-ul-Mulk, Wazir-ul-Mulk, and Baitam lie on the top of the hill alongside the tower, on the top of the cliff over-looking the bridge. Then there are a lot of illegitimate sons tombs, all murdered, Murid Dastgir, Juma Khan, &c., and all this Directly Amir-ul-Mulk had murdered the end of 1892 ! Nizim ul-Mulk, he had Nawah, the Aksagal of Snogat, and his three sons killed. The sons were killed first in front of the old three sons killed. man's eves---all being stripped and then cut to pieces with tulwars -- then Nawab was killed himself.

I suppose Chitral is one of the last homes of the feudal system. The Adamzadas or nobles are little kings in their own villages --they pay no revenue, they keep slaves; their only duty is to entertain the king when he goes on tour, and furnish fighting men in war time. They are quite a different looking race to ordinary villagers, and have a Persian look about them. According to the Agency Munshi here, "they have lost the knack of fighting and prefer to enjoy their sweet lives." The old fort though is one of the most interesting places I have seen in this part of the world, have a guard in it now, over stores, ammunition and so forth.

It is three months since we got an English letter, and eigarettes exist only in the imagination. We do not wish to be personal, but we would like to remark that those whom the gods love die young, and we hope that whoever is in charge of the Kashmir-Gilgit postal arrangements, is one whom the gods love.

Now that preparations for an expedition against the Bajouris are proceeding, i may be useful, writes the Proper, to note the fighting strength of the tribes on the route to Dir. The Swatis, whose country will first have to be crossed, could probably muster 15,000 men; the O.man Khel, 5,000; and Umra Khan himself could raise in the hills and valleys over which he exercises authority, at least 15,000. Eastward of Swat in the Buner country, held by clansequal in physique and warlike qualities to the pick of the Pathan race. West of the Utman Khel come the Mohmands, numerically strong, but by no means endowed with courage. At Umbeyla the strong, out oy no means endowed with courage. At Umbeyla the tribal combination resulted in a gathering of 60,000 men, a number which proved how great was the strength of the tribes north of Peshawur District. In the present instance we have no quarrel with any one but the Bajouris, but one cannot calculate on the temper of the people whose territory will have to be passed through before a blow can be struck at Umra Khan. The Swatis and Umra Khel, for instance, may attempt instance. Utman Khel, for instance, may attempt ineffectually to bar the advance of the Field Force; but the Bunerwals can only be drawn in by fanatical sentiment, as there is no intention of interfering with them. The Mohmands, again, should stand aloof, as the line of march to Dir will be far from their boundaries.

It there were a man of Cavagnari's strong personality on the frontier to conduct political negotiations with the tribesmen, Swat might possibly be crossed without a shot being fired save by stray blackguards, and the Bunerwals be persuaded that their best course is to look quietly on. But there is no one now on the borderland equal to the political finesse required. When the frontier is crossed General Low will doubtless have full political power and his line of action will be clear enough: he will have to force a way through to Chitral. But it would be something gained if the necessity for thrashing anyone but the Bajouris could be avoided. As it is, all eventualities must be guarded against by making the Field Force of a strength equal to dealing with any combination, and by having brigades in reserve to watch the Buncrwals on the one hand and the Mohmands and Utman Khel on the other. There must be no the Mohmands and Utman Khel on the other. risk run of communications being cut, as was the case at Umbeyla.

"KISS ME, JACK, AND LET ME GO."

"KISS ME, JACK, AND LET ME GO."

ONCE, long ago, I was witness to a duel in California. The two men had been bosom friends, but had quarefled about (of course) a woman. Splendid follows both—young, brany, and ambitious. As they stood in a clear space among the pine trees near Sciamento, pale as lines, steady as rocks, weapons in hand waiting for the word, the rising sun shining athwart the line of vision, they presented a picture too often seen in 1856. The pistols cracked almost simultaneously. One man stood erect, evidently untoucned; the other fell upon his back and lay straight and still. Seconds, surgeons, and spectators rushed to his side. He was "all there," mind as well as body. "No, don't disturb me," he said coolly to the doctor, "I'm shot fatally and shall die in five minutes. Call Jack and be quick." Pistol still in hand, his antagonist came and bent over his erstwinte chum. The excitement among the crowd was intense; the dying man alone was calm. "Jack, my darling old boy," he said, "forgive me and forgive her. Kiss me and let me go A minute more and he was dead, with Jack lying across his body, crying like a baby. crying like a baby.

After I have told you another and very different story, I'll show

After I have fold you admited and very director story, I show wheten they teach the same lesson.

There is no tragedy in this one; nevertheless it is of wider human interest than the other. A woman had been ill more or less all her life. The details are commonplace enough, and yet they will appeal life. The details are commonplace enough, and yet they will appeal to millions who care nothing for the jealousies of young men of love.

"At times," she says, I suffered from pains at the back of the head, and a sense of weight, and felt tried and weary, yet it was not from work only. I had a strange feeling, too, of something hanging over me, as of some evil or danger that I could not explain or define.

My appetite was variable; sometimes I could eat anything and again I could not touch any food at all. But I vous never laid up as it were."

Please note the last sentence. It may seem like the weakest but really is the strongest point in this lady's statement. We will tell you why in a moment.

In a momen,

She goes on: "Still I was often in misery, but got along fairly well until August, 1890, when I had a severe attack of theumatism. First the great toe of my right foot and the thumb of my right hand grew hot and pairful. After a time the trouble extended to my back and hips. I could not straighten myself; I was almost bent double. Month after mouth I was like this, getting little or no sleep at inglit. Medical treatment proved of no benefit to me. In December, 1891, the pain almost drove me mad. My face was swollen to nearly twice its natural size, and my eyes were so covered by the enlarged lids that I could scarcely see. There was a constant ringing in my ears, and the doctors and I had envisibles. scarcely see. There was a constant ringing in my ears, and the doctors said I had erysipelas.

"For days and days I could not walk across the floor, and for some

"For days and days I could not walk across the floor, and for some time I was able to move about only by taking hold of the furniture or other objects. When all other means had been tried and had failed, Mother Seigel's Cutative Syrup was recommended to me. A single bottle did me a deal of good. I kept on with it, and soon was stronger and in better health than for forty years previously. I still take an occasional dose and continue in good health notwithstanding my age (48), and the 'change of life.' I tell everyone what the Syrup has done for me, and give you permission to publish what I have said. Yours truly (Signed), (Mrs.) MARY JANE MILNES, 18, Walker's Buildings, Brewery Lane, Thombill Lees, near Dewsbury, Yorkshire, October 12th, 1802."

Now for the lesson of both these incidents; what is it? This; that it is not people in desperate extremities who suffer most. Pain is in proportion to the resistance to disease. Those who surrender, who are in despair, who give up, have present punishment largely remitted. Dying persons are the most comfortable of all. Hopelessness and dissolution administer their own anodynes. Those who are not laid up. dissolution administer their own anodynes. Those who are who are ill, and yet work and struggle, need pity and help, was one, and to such Mother Seigel always proves a friend.

Lady Elliott Portrait Memorial Committee.

Allan Arthur Hon, Justice Beverley Hon, C. E. Buckland W. D. Crinckshank Baron Gaetter Col. Hailes, 6th B. I. A Macdonald David McLaten Motti- Hon, P. Playfair, W. O. Bell-Irving S. E. J. Clarke H. H. The Maharaja Darbhanga, K.C.I.E. J. Jouslain, E. F. Longley, C. Moore.

A.F. M. Abdur Rahman A. Sunson, J. O'B Saunders A. H. Wallis,

J. O'B Saunders A. H. Wallis,

Mahai ji Su J M. Tagore, K C S I,

PRESIDENT—Allan Arthur,

HON. TEFASURER—J. O'B. Saunders,

HON. SECRETARY—David McLaren Morrison,

At the meeting of Committee held at the Chamber of Commerce on the 19th January,

it was decided to have a picture of Lady

Elhott painted, any surplus to go towards a personal present.

All subscriptions to be sent to the Hon. TREASURER, 9, Hare Street, Calcutta,

Ready for the Press

LIFE AND CORRESPONDENCE

Dr. SAMBHU C. MOOKERJEE.

late Editor of "Reis and Rayyet," BY

F. H. SKRINE, Esq. Of the Indian Civil Service,

The volume, uniform with Mookerjee's Travels and Voyages in Bengal, will consist of about 600 pages and contain, among other

I. A photograph of the Dortor's head from painting by the Scotch Royal Academician Mt James Archer.

A Biography illustrated by copions notes and ana.

About 225 pages of original essays from 3. About 225 his bulliant pen

Selections from his correspondence with literary men and statesmen.

PRICE:

To subscribers paying before the 30th April, 1895 5 o To registered subscribers paying before publication 5 8
To mere registering subscribers and ordinary purchasers ... 6 0 The prices do not include postage and forwarding charges.

After paying expenses of the publication, the surplus will be placed wholly at the disposal of the family of the deceased.

Orders will be registered by Messrs Thacker, Spink, & Co., Government Place, and by Babu Kisari Moh in Ganguli, B. L., 12, Ashutosh

Dey's Lane, C doutta.

Subscribers to the "Essitys by a Brahman" will be communicated with by Babu Kisari Mohan Ganguli.

Mohan Ganguli.

To ensure accuracy and avoid all mischance, some such form may be used as, — Please enter my name as a subscriber for copies of the Life and Correspondence of Di-Sambhu Chunder Mookerjee. The amount, chr que has been remitted permoney order. To be legibly (Name..... written Address.....

The 1895.

GENUINE HOM(EOPATHY. A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S.

Homoopathic Practitioner, May be consulted by letter or personally daily at his residence, 30-1, Colootolah Street, Calcutta.

WANTED.

A Sanskiit Pandit for the Hutwah Sanskiit School who must be a passed Acharya in Bya-karan Sahiya and Dhaima Shastra. Preference will be given to a Sarjoopari

Apply with copies of testimonials to-

BABU DEVENDRA NATH DUTT, Dewan, Raj Hutwa,

> Shanker Bhawan. Pisachmochan,

Benares.

THE WORKS OF DR. JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE. Rs. As.

Commentaries on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, Mariage, Adoption, Wills &c.* Price
'No student or practitioner should be without a copy of this GREAT 16 0

Work.

Work.

(Sd.) Nana Bhai Handas."

Bengah translation of the Dyabhaga and the Mitakshana.† Price ... 2 8

Bengah Translation of the Dittakachandrika.† Price ... 0 8

The Evidence Act with notes in Bengah.† Price ... 1 0

The Civil Procedure Code with notes in Bengah.† Price ... 1 0

... 4

The Civil Procedure Code with notes in Bengali, Price
Principles of Zemindari Management and Book-keeping in Bengali First Lessons in English for Bengali boys, Price

gali boys, Price 1 o 4

8. Bharat Sasan Pranali* ... o 8

In THE PRESS

The Philosophy of Religion from the point of view of Common Sense, Price Rs. 5.

CONTENTS

Historical Analysis of the evolution of

Historical Analysis of the evolution of religious systems.
Definition of the term "religion."
The problems of the philosophy of religion and their solutions, old and new.
(a) Why do Hindus believe in ten Avatais or incarnations including in the series three that are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a tortoise, and a boar.
(b) Why is it that all ancient systems recommend the sacrifice of animals, and the bump of ghee or incense &c. &c. &c. &c.

&c. &c. &c. &c. &c.

religious teachers.

The power of fine words,
The art of becoming a prophet,
The cumulative effect of hardswearing for ages. Specimens of Puranised history.

Brahminical and Christian priesteraft compared The artificial miseries of men caused by 10.

religion. Tyranny and taxation of religion

The good man's adversity is the sharp man's opportunity.

man's opportunity.

Swinding as a fine air.

New Supersitions that may be suggested for the benefit of the priests.

The giert prophets of the world and their doings.

Probable origin of the Sawa religion

Tantric mysticism and abominations,

Congress Sketches: A Review

OF THE

SPEECHES AND THE SPEAKERS ALTHE

Fourth Indian National Congress
Held at Allahabad,
Reprinted with additions and alterations from

Reps the with additions and alterations from Reis & Rayyet
With a portrait of Mi. George Yule, President, Sold by the publisher G. P. Varma, and at the office of the Advacate, at Lucknow for 8 Annas a copy, besides postage

* To be had of Messis. Thacker Spink &

To be mad of Messis. Thacker Spink & Co., only.

† To be had of Messis. Thacker Spink & Co., and also at the Suradhani Agency, No. 11, Raja Nabakushna's Street, Calcutta.

A Wonderful Medicine.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

A RE universally an mitted to be worth a Guinea a box, for Bilhous and Nervous Disorders, such as wind and Pain in the Stomach, Suck, Headache, Giddiness, Fulness, Swelling after Meals, Dizziness and Diowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat Loss Flushings of Heat Loss Flushings of Heat, Loss Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Senivy, and Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams and all Nervous and Trembling Sensation, &c. The first dose will give relief in twenty minutes.

Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one box of these Pills, and they will be acknowledged to be

WADDRIL 4

WORTH A GUINEA A BOA.

For females of all ages these Pills are inly valuable, as a few doses of them carry off albinnours, and bring about all that is required. No female should be without them. There is no medicine to be found equal to Beechams Pills for removing any obstuction or irregularity of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box, they will soon restore females of all iges to sound and robust health. This has been proved by thou sands who have tried them, and found the benefits which are ensured by their use. For a Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, and all Disorders of the Liver, they act like magic, a few doses will be found to work wonders on the most important organs in the human machine.

The Natives of India will find Beecham's Pills the finest medicine ever introduced to their notice; the European residents also will find them of great value for cooling the blood For throwing off fevers and preventing inflummations in hot climites, they stand without a rival. For females of all ages these Pills are inmations in hot climites, they stand without a rival.

These are Facts testified continually by members of all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debi litated is, BEECHAM'S PHLIS have the Largest Sale of any Patent Medicine in the social.

Beecham's Magic Cough Pills.

As a remedy for Coughs in general, Asthmi, Bronchi d Affections, Housewers, Shortness of Breath, Tightness, and Oppression of the Chest, Wheeleng, &c., these Pills stand univilled. Let any person give Feech an's Cough Pills a trial, and the most violent Cough will in a short time be removed

Beecham's Tooth Paste

Will recommend itself being efficients and economical: it is packed in near airtight collapsible Tubes.

NOTICE G Atherton & Co will forward on receipt of letter, samples it the following rates size 9½d at 8 annas per hox, 1 1½d size 12 annas per hox, 25, od size 2 rupers per box; Tooth Paste 12 annas per Tube, these rates do not include the cost of postage which will be added to the amount

Sole Wholesale Agents for India, BURMAH & CEYLON. G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3, NEW CHINA BAZAR STREET. CALCUTTA.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUT	EEF
MEMORIAL FUND.	Rs.
1 His Highness The Maharaja of Dur	-	.
2. His Highness The Maharaja of Vizi	1,000	i
His Highness the Nawab Bahadur o	f
Moorshedabad, Amirul Omra, GCIF 4. His Highness the Nawab of Junagada		- 1
5. His Highness the Maharaja Bahadu	ı İ	ĺ
of Cooch Behar, G.C.LE.	,
Kesti, and Nawio Bahadur K Ashin Ulli, CTR. Nawab Imad Jing Bahadur N Nawib Imad Jing Bahadur N Nawib Azon Yu Jing Bahadur Shansan Ulama Syed Ah Belgram Lie Walio Bahadur CTR. Shansan Ulama Syed Ah Belgram	. 500 . 500
7. Nawah Imad Jung Bahadur 8 Nawah Azun Yu Jung Bahadur	. 500 . 500)
10. Kn in Bahadar BhaiBahauddin, C I E. Vizier to the Nawah of Junagadh	. 30:	1
II. Manual Banadar Su Jounda was	-
12. Babu Jodu Lil Mullick	200	0
13. Messrs Mackinion Mackenzie & Co 14. Prince Wala Kadr Syed Hosein A Maza Bahadur	1 150
15. Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Nawa Syed Zamul Abdin Khan Bahadu) ·
Farry Long	. TA
16. Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee, CS. 17. The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chandr Madhab Ghose		- 1
18. Prince Muza Sir Jahan Kadar Baha	ı- •• 10	ļ
19. The Hon'ble P. Playfair	·· 10	ю
21. Lieutenant-General the Hon'ble S
	10	- 1
Banerjee	5	0
		9
Bahadur, CS.I Maharakan Benova Krishna		50 50
28. The Hon'ble Mr Justice E. J. Fred		50
29. The Hou'ble Mouly: Abdul Jabb		50
30. The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop	of 	50
Calcutta 31. M tharsja Durga Chuan Law, CT 32. Nawah Jahandar Meerza 33. Niwah Huyoni Mira 34. The Howble W. C. Bonnerjee 35. Nawah Syed Ameer Husem	E.,	50 50
33 Navab Huzoni Muza 34 The Houble W. C. Bonnerjee		50 50
30. Sven Numi Hum, Esq. C.S.	•••	50 50
37. Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan 38. J. G. Ritchie, Esq. C.S.,	•••	50 50
39. Sir Alexander Miller		50 32
41. Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi Khan l	•••	25
hadur, 42. Kumar Rudha Prosad Roy 43. Kumar Dinendia Nurain Roy		25 25
44 Babu Pashuparty Nath Bose 45 Kumar Doulat Chandra Roy 46 Babu Guru Prosonno Ghose		25
47. Rija Sir Somindra Mohan Tage		25
48. Raya Joundea Nath Chowdhury 49. Babu Rama Nath Gnose	•••	25 25
50 Raja Sceenath Roy		25 25
52 R Belchambers, E-q	• • •	25 25 25
54. Rai Budreedas Mukim Bahadur	•••	25 25
56, Mouler Syad Abdus Salam		25 25
57 A. T. Apcar, Esq 58. H. Luttman Johnson, Esq C.S. 59. Lord William Beresford, K.C.I.E.,		25 25 25
Za Manchi Chalam Rasant		25 25
61. F. H. Skune, E.q. C.S., 62. The Hon'ble H. J. S.Cotton C.S., C. 63. Prince Mahomed Bukhtyar Shah 64. Baboo Surendra Nath P.d. Chowdr	S I.	20
65. " Aukhov Kumar Ghose	y	20
66. Moulvi Imadd Ali 67. Rai Shib Chunder Nundy Bahada	•••	20
68. D. Panioty, Esq 60. Chowdry Mahomed Arjamand K	han	20
70 H. E. A. Cotton, Esq., Barrister-a 71, Moulvi Syed Ashiuffuddin Alii	t-law	20
Khan Bahadur 72. T. Inglis, Esc., CS		17

72. T. Inglis, Esc., C S.

7.2	A. H. Giles, Esq		16
73.	F. F. Handley, Esq, C.S.		16	1
74.	The Hon'ble Mouly Sirajul			1
75.			16	ı
	Kuan	•••		i
76	Moulvi Serajuddeen	•••	15
77.	Abul Hasan, Esq.,	•••	15	1
78.	H. A. D. Phillips, Esq. Cs.	•••	10	ŀ
79.	Baboo Kiran Chunder Roy	• • • •	10	ı
80.	E. N. Biker, Esq		10	ł
81.	Baboo Doyal Chand Bose	•••	10	l
82	" Madan Mohun Bose		10	l
83.	"Kanai Lai Khan		10	۱
	Moulyi Synd Akram Hossain		10	١
84.	Monivi Synd Akram Linssam		10	١
85	Moulvi Aziz Ahmud	•••		١
86	Ru Kanyelal Dev Bahadoor	• • • •	10	l
87	H Holmwood, Esq	• • • •	10	l
88	B tha Harry Mohan Chunder	•••	10	I
89.	Baboo Chakkanlal Roy	•••	5	l
oo.	Sundaprasad Ghose		5	١
S	abscriptions will be thankfully	received	by the	Honorary Joint Secretaires,			İ
RAI	RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI	BAHAD	UR,	١
	teal to the Count	Calcutt	· ·	1

Rs. 6 "UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Guaranteed three Years.

4, Boush Indian Street, Calcutta, and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMAN, Esq.,

Baruster -- at Law,

16, Taltolla, Calcutta.

Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, smill, open fuced, nickel silvern, keyless, short winding, patent, "UNDAUNTED" watch, with hand setting mechanism, secondhand for Doctors, omamental bold dial, for Rs. 6 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' guarantee. Wurranted to stand the roughest use. Runs more tim 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily repaired by the control of the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Juo. Dickson of Haputal Rulway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps solended time and never stopped although it sustained bard knocks and jetks. x Dr. H. Moore of Royal Artillety from Ponnamaltee says:—I sold it for Rs. 16. x Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Regi. from Dundum says:—I have sold it for Rs. 20. x Mr. T. B. Scott of Patna Opum Department says:—The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time.

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty Canadian gold chain Re. 1-8-0.Fashtonable Canadian Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeralic, at Re. 1-8-0. Fashtonable Canadian Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeralic, at Re. 1-8-0. Fashton Sandraby at Rs. 30. 'Key winding, Government stamped, solid silver hunting case, koyal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee, for Rs. 13. Pie. G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light Infantry from Parandhar says. "For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Sergeant for Rs. 28 × Pte. H. C. Bishop of L.
F. L. Regt. from Kumptee says: "A Corporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch, Gentlemen's open ticed, keyless real solid gold watch
Rs. 30; ladies' Rs. 24; both with extras and puaranteed for 3 years. Mind they are guranteed to be of real so id gold. No agents keyl and goods sent only by us from Bombay
per V. P. P.
WES FERN INDIA TRADING CO.,
BOMBAY Pretty Canadian gold chain Re. 1-8-o.Fash-

CATARRH,

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness.

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these

Sufferers are not generally aware that these discuses are contagions, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the hining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that proved the total proved the store of the stressing diseases are rapidly and permanently cured by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaining this new treatments sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUTTON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORONTO, Canada.

Scientific American.

"IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer and sure reisef from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering: while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, LUMRAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs

is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the tortures of TOOTHACHE? A single application will relieve you

In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the result speak for itself.

The Oriental Baim is used by the best Physicians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of homes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar pre paration has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re each

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throngnout the world

Agents in Calcutta , Smith Stanisticet & Co-R, Scott Thompson & Co, and Baingare & Co. Limitea.

REIS & RAYYET (PRINCE AND PEASANT)

WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

AND

Review of Politics, Literature, and Society RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION. If paid in auvance.

Yearly	•••		ks.	12
Ham-ye miy	•••	•••	,,	7
Quarterly		•••	,,	4
Montmy	•••		Κe.	1 - 8
Single or sample	Copy	•••	Ans.	0-8
It no	ot paid in ac	vance.
Yearly			Rs.	31
Half-yearly		•••	,,	10-8
Quarterly	•••	•••	13	6-0
Monthly		•••	"	2-4
Single or sample		•••	Ans.
No auditionai	cnarge for	postage	or p	eou.

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insertion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5.

Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphlets (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayyet." Advertisements (three columns to the page

OFFICE: I, Uckoor Dut's Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutta.

DROIT ET AVANT.

PRINCE & PEASANT)

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

AND

REVIEW OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, APRIL 6, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 669.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

TRANSLATION OF LA PARTENZA OF METASTASIO.

THE hour is come, replete with woes, Nicc, my love, adieu, No ray of bliss the future shows, 'Tis darkness to my view.

Can I enjoy the balm of rest, If distant far from thee?

What boding fears alarm my breast! Thou witt not think of me!

Though peace is banish'd from my mind,
And hope's gay joys are flown;
Still would my thoughts these phantoms find,
Where thou art found alone;
Ah! let them stray, by fancy led,
In vision's paths with thee;
But yet, alas! bow much I dread
Thou wilt not think of me!

The sea's lone shore my grief shall know, I'll mourn like widow'd dove, I'll ask the tocks, with ceaseless woe, Ah! tell me where's my love? Eagh morning's beams my voice shall hear, That voice which calls on thee; But yet, alas! how much I fear Thou wit not think of me!

I'll visit oft each flowery vale,
Each scene to me once dear,
Where joy was breath'd by every gale,
When thou, my love, wast near;
Remembrance sad, in every part,
My torment now must be;
What fears, alas I distract my heart
Thou wilt not think of me!

This stream, I'll say, with crystal wave, Was witness to my pain
To see her frown; but then she gave Her hand in peace again;
'Twas here I oft have seen the smile,
'T was here I sigh'd for thee;
But will e'er hope again beguile?
Say, wilt thou think of me?

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free.—Artificial Ear-drums and similar appliances entirely superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

How many swains, with love sincere,
And hearts to thee most true—
How many scenes of hope and fear
Thy new abode will view!
While each fond breast its homage shows,
And pours its griefs to thee,
Who knows, my love, alas! who knows
If thou wilt think of me?

Remember oft, when once we part,
My deep, yet pleasing wound,
Remember oft, Phileno's heart
Was ever constant found:
Remember oft this sad farewell
Which now I give to thee,
Oh! think, my love—but who can tell
If thou wilt think of me?

WEEKLYANA.

THE subscription to the Lady Elliott Memorial Fund is no longer limited to Rs. 20. The Committee have decided to receive such sums as may be sent to them.

On a reference, the High Court has held that the Standard Marin Insurance Company, Limited, of whom Messis. Gladstone, Wylhe & Co. are agents, are not hable to the Municipal License Tax. The asson for the exemption is that in the Municipal Act insurance business is not expressly mentioned as a tax-ble trade. It is besides not the trade but the person exercising it and having a place of business in Calcutta, that is hable to the tax. This decision is sure to reduce appreciably the income of the Municipality from trade licenses. No matter; the law should be upheld.

FIVE solicitors in England have been struck off the rolls for misappropriation of clients' money. The men struck off were, it is evident, unable to replace in time what they had appropriated.

REFERRING to the decoration of Mrs. Fowler and Lady Sundhurst with the Crown of India, the St. James's Gazette observes that if a lady is to be decorated for something her husband has done, these Orders may soon become inconveniently common. The Gazette, it is evident, ascribes the honours, in the cases mentioned, to something done by Mr. Fowler and Lord Sandhurst. This is scarcely fair in an age when women are regarded as the equals of men in many respects. Why should not the wives be deemed to have earned the decoration in their own right? Then, again, honour shown to wives is not necessarily honour shown to husbands. Are examples needed for bringing this out more clearly?

WE read in the papers :-

"By order of the Tsar, a Commission is stated to have been appointed to discuss a scheme for the foundation of an institution, to be named

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, it possible, as the safest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

after the late. Alexander 111, where literary men, artists, and actors incapacitated from work by old age or suckness would be received and provided for. The institution is to be ejected on one of the Imperial domains.⁹

If such an institution becomes an accomplished fact in Russia, barbarous Russia will have done more for literature and art than civilised England, or France, or Germany, or America. In England, pensions from the sovereign's privy purse have in a few instances proved efficacious, but what is wanted is an organised system of

Two more natives of India, who are Statutory Civilians, have been appointed to act as District and Sessions Judges in Bengal. The total number of such Judges is now six, and they are Baboo Brajendia Kumai Seal (Burdwan), Kumar Gopendra Krishna (Dacca), Syed Nural Huda (Jessore), Moulvi Ashanuddin Ahmed (Nadia), Babu Barada Charan Mitra (Farridgur), and Babu Kedar Nath Roy (Pabua).

... By virtue of his office, the officiating Advocate-General is a member of the Bengal Legislative Council, and the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Humphrey Pugh Evans, K C.I.E., has been so gazetted.

THE Hon'ble Mr. W. C. Bonnerjee, having left for England and not meaning to return before November, till after the Long Vacation of the High Court, has resigned his seat in the Bengal Legislative Council. The resignation has been accepted and the Calcutta University will be called upon to elect a successor. Already, active canvassing has commenced, and the ubiquitous candidate is abroad. To him no place is sacred. He is fit for all offices that can bring power or pelf.

: . THE Houble Mr. F. R. S Collier goes on furlough, Mr. E. W. Collin succeeds him as Magistrate and Collector of the 24-Parganas, and Mr. Herbert Hope Risley as member of the Bengal Legislative Council, Mr. Collier is no doubt an officer of mark. His edition of the Bengal Municipal Act shows an acquaintance, that is above the average, with the law. Unfortunately, he thinks too highly of his covenanted dignity and is unwilling to cultivate closer relations with the people of the country.

MR. G. C. Kilby left India on furlough on the 20th March. We are glad that Mr. P. L. Roy, Barrister-at-Law, acts as Deputy Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs. Mr. Roy has good criminal practice, and is sure to give satisfaction. Another reason for our gratification is that the place has been opened to the natives of the country. We had had a native Standing Counsel, and now we have a native Deputy Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, though only officiating. As in the case of Mr. W. C. Bonnerjee, Mr. Roy is a loser, financially. To make up, in however small a degree, the loss, Mr. Roy has permission to do. Chamber criminal business and to take up civil cases, provided that does not interfere with his regular duty.

THE Lieutenant Governor has prohibited the levy of any fee on applications for new trial of contested cases under section 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts' Act 1882 (as modified by Act I of 1895)

THE excise duty on each gallon, London-proof, of country-spirit manufactured in the distillery of the district of Bankura, Lower Bengal, has been fixed at Rs. 2. In the Hooghly District, there will be two rates, namely, Rs 5 in the Hooghly Sidar Sub-Division and in the Serampore Sub-Division, and Rs. 2 in the Jahanabad Sub-Division,

THE Collector of Customs, Calcutta, has been declared. Collector under A t XVII of 1894 in regard to all mills in Bengal not specially declared to be within the jurisdiction of any other Collector, and not neluded within Calcutta.

THE Government Municipal Commissioners, or as the late Babon Jadu Lal Mullick would say, the Imperial Commissioners, on the new Municipal Board, are -

Surgeon-Lieut.-Col. J. O'Brien, M.D.

Mr. Elias S. Gubbay. Mr. Elias S. Gubbay. Mr. Baraja Sr. N nendra Krishua Bahadin, K.C.I.E. The Honble Prince Sri Jahan Kadi Meerza Muhammad Wahid Ali, Sahebzada Muhammad Bakhtiyar Shah. Sahebzada Muhammad Bakhtiyar Shah.

Bigade-Surgeon Lieut, Col R. C. Sanders, M.D.
The Hou'ble Maulyi Muhammad Yusuf Khan Bahadur.
Mi. Hirjeebhoy Manackjee Rustomjee.
The Hou'ble Sir John Lambert, K.C.LE.
Lieut, E. W. Petlev, R.N. (retired.)
The Hou'ble Ran Durgagati Banerji, Bahadur, C.LE.
Naw ib Syed Ameer Hossein, C. LE.
Mr. A. F. M. Abdur Rahman, Barrister-at-law.
Mi. W. J. Simmons.

The representatives of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce are- Mr A. Macdonald and Babus Joygobind Law, Poolin Behary Sucar and Heera Lall Bagla. The Calcutta Trades Association bave elected Messis, E. F. Longley, W. H. Phelps, F. A. Larmour and W. Bushby, The Hon'ble Mr. C. C. Stevens and Mr. C. R. Marriot represent the Port Commissioners.

A CORRESPONDENT , writing from Bankipore, says :--

"Great sympathy was felt by all classes for the serious illness of our Collector Mr. C. J. O'Donell who has endeated himself to all classes and especially to the natives. A large number of native gentlemen were seen calling at his house daily during his illness to enquire after his condition. I am glad to report that he is now out of danger and progressing favourably. He will soon be going on leave, Mr. Bolton, the Additional Commissioner, is acting for the Magistrate in addition to his own duties. It is decided that Mr. Salmon, the District Engineer, reverts to the P. W. D. from April, and the District Board will have to appoint a successor to him. The pay of this post is Rs. 1,000, and probably a large number of applications will be received.

The post of the Secretary to the District Board is hanging fire for the last six months."

TESTIMONIALS of Dr. Surat Lal Mitra, Homocopathic Physician, Calcutta," is a collection of opinions of the press, regarding the Babu's popularity at Dacca where he practised homeeopathy for six years. Last year when he found it necessary, on account of the death of his father, the late Baboo Nilmoney Mitter, to remove to Calcutta, they held a meeting and presented him with a gold watch and chain. Mr. Mitra also holds a gold medal from a Mahomedan of Kaltabazar for having successfully treated a case in his house.

THE Indian Hemp Drugs Commission has made its Report to Govern ment and Government has recorded its Resolution on it, without publishing the Report. The conclusions arrived at are-that a moderate use of hemp drugs is not injurious; that the habit of using hemp drugs is easier to break off than the habit of using alcohol or opium, that a moderate use of hemp drugs does not cause mjury; that a moderate use of ganja and charas is not appreciably harmful; that bhang is a harmless, and refreshing drink; that there is no evidence to support the very strong popular impression, that hemp drugs are a fourful source of insanity; that moderate consumers of these drops are not offensive to their neighbours, and are not distinguishable from total abstainers; that excessive use of hemp drugs may bring the consumer to poverty and so lead him to dishonest practices, and although there may be cases where excessive use of the drugs has led to violent crime, there are no such marked ill-effects, physical, mental or moral, as they were popularly believed to be before the enquiry was made. The suggestions of the Commission as regards Control and Taxation are -

"(a) That in Bengal, Government watchouses for the storage of ganja should be constructed in Rajshahi (Chapter XVI, paragraph (b) That, subject to this addition, the Bengal system of ganga

(b) That, suspect to this addition, the Bengal system of ganga administration should be generally followed in the Central Provinces, Madras, Bombay, Beilu, and possibly in Ajmere and Coorg (Chapter XVI, paragraphs 656, 671, 672, and 673).

(c) That in the Central Provinces all ganja should pay a direct duty, whether consumed in the province or exported; that the rule under which a julies supplied by wholesale to retail vendors at a fixed price should be abelished; and that the number of wholesale licenses should granted more freely and without charge (Chapter XVI, paragraphs (d) That in the North-Western Provinces the cultivation and mann-

(d) That in the North-Western Provinces the cultivation and manificatine of gany is should be prohibited and the system of bouded warehouses introduced for its strorage (Chapter XVI, paragraph 657).
(e) That the Madras and Bombay cultivation of the hemp plant should be prohibited except under license, and that the licensed cultivation should be restricted to limited areas; also that a fixed duty should be imposed on ganga, such supervision of the manufacture and storage of the crop being maintained as is necessary to its imposition (Chapter XVI) paragraphs (65, 66, and 67). (Chapter XVI, paragraphs 662, 669, and 671).

(/) That similar measures should be introduced into Berar and possibly Ajmere and Coorg (Chapter XVI, paragraphs 672 and 673).

(g) That on all charas imported into the Punjab a duty of not less than Rs. 80 per maund be levied, the drug being stored in bonded warehouses, and duty paid when it is taken out by the vendors. Interprovincial arrangements regarding the crediting of duty to different provinces to be made under the orders of the Supreme Government (Chapter XVI, paragraphs 674 and 675).

(h) That, where possible, a duty should be levied on bhang. Where refuse ganja is used as bhang, the rate may have to be fixed at a higher figure with reference to this fact (Chapter XVI, paragraph 6771).

a higher name with reference to the same should be granted for the sale of the different kinds of drugs (Chapter XVI, paragraph 680).

(j) That heeness for retail sale should not ordinarily be granted to wholesale dealers (Chapter XVI, paragraph 682).

(k) That a separate license should be granted for each shop (Chapter XVI, paragraph 683).

(l) The licenses for retail vend should contain a provision prohibitive.

ter XVI, paragraph 683).

(1) The licenses for retail vend should contain a provision prohibiting the vendor from selling the drugs to children or insane persons (Chapter XVI, paragraph 684).

(m) That when new shops are proposed, municipal bodies, rural notables, zamindars, or headmen, as the case may be, should be consulted as to the necessity of opening them and as to their location, and that objections, if made, should receive the most careful attention (Chapter XVI, paragraph 688).

(n) That the limit of legal possession of the hemp drugs should be the same for the whole of British India, viz—Ginja and charas, or any prepiration or admixture thereof, 5 tolas. Bhang, or any preparation or admixture thereof, one-quarter of a ser. And that Native States should be invited to adopt this maximum (Chapter XVI paragraph 690)."

THE Governor-General in Council approves generally of the suggestions. The Resolution thus concludes :-

tions. The Resolution thus concludes:—

"In conclusion, the Governor-General in Council desires to thank the President, Mr Mackworth Young, and the members of the Commission for the exhaustive inquiry they have mide. The investigation has been a laborious one, but it has been very complete, and the manner in which the Commission have pursued, to definite conclusions, the various matters arising out of the evidence brought before them, leaves nothing to be desuiced. The general ignorance on the subject of hemp drugs with it is trusted, now be dissipated by the attention which the investigation of the Commission has directed to the subject. The want of uniformity in the excise administration of hemp drugs which has been found by the Commission to exist, will, no doubt, in due time, be set right, and this most valuable result is of itself sufficient to justify the appointment of the Commission. The Report of the Commission has shown how little foundation there is for many of the popular beliefs and impressions which have prevailed in regard to the preparations mide from the hemp plant and the effect of the use of hemp drugs upon their consumers, and the information which has been brought toupon their consumers, and the information which has been brought to-gether on the subject in the Report of the Commission is of great interest and value, not only to Government and its officers, but also to the est and value, not only to general public.

The acknowledgments of the Government are especially due to the three unofficial gentlemen, Raji Soshi Sikueshwar Raji Kunwar Hainam Singh, and Lala Nihal Chand, who at great expenditure of the configuration and in one case at least, at some risk to health, took part in the investigations of the Commission. The inability of the Governor-General in Council to agree with two of these gentlemen, in the points on which they dissent from the views of their colleagues, does not diminish his appreciation of the care and labour they have bestowed on the task entrusted to them."

The dissentients are Raji Soshi Sekareshwar Roy and Lila Nihal Chand. They also do not agree with each other. The Raja believes that "the injurious effects of the hemp drugs are greater and their use more hurtful than one would naturally suppose to be the case after reading the concluding portion of Chapter XIII of our Report, although I think I should say that the facts elicited by our enquiry do not go to support the extreme opinion held by some well-intentioned people that these dougs in all their forms and in every case are highly permicious in their effects." He is "inclined to believe that the prohibition of the use of ganja and charas would be a source of benefit to the people," But the prohibition is to be gradual. The Lala is unable to come to any conclusion.

It is the Mecca pilgrim season and cholera has appeared at Camaran on board three Bombay pilgrim vessels.

THE Times publishes an article on the present speculation in silver which is based on the prospect of demand in the East, and also on the chance that the forthcoming Monetary Conference of which, however, Government has heard nothing officially, may do something.

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all knols. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Street, Westminster, London, S. W.

NOTES & LEADERETTES. OUR OWN NEWS,

&
THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

THE assault on the Chinese Envoy in Japan has proved an advantage to the Celestial Empire. To atone for the outrage on the Viceroy Li Hung Chang, the Mikado has decreed that an unconditional armistice shall be observed until the conclusion of the peace negotiations. By the terms of the armistice the Japanese will maintain all the positions at present in their possession. Telegrams received in London state that the armistice limited to the Shangtung-Pechili localities expires on the 20th April. If in the meantime the negotiations for peace have been broken off, the armistice terminates forthwith. Either the Chinese or the Japanese Government may make a fresh distribution of troops so long as such movements are not intended for the purpose of augmenting the armies already in the field. The would be assassin, Koyama Young, has been sentenced to penal servitude for life. Further reports of the Japanese operations in the Pescadores state that the capture of the Islands was preceded by two days' fighting at Makung. A thousand Chinese surrendered at Yenkung, and many guns fell into the hands of the Japanese.

FETES were held throughout Germany on April 1, in honour of Prince Bismarck's eightieth birthday. Enthusiasm was specially marked in Berlin and Hamburg, which cities were illuminated at night.

LORD Kunberley, in receiving a deputation about the amelioration of the condition of the Armenians, dwelt upon the difficulty of dealing with the matter, for fear of raising an Eastern Question. Lord Kimberley said he believed that France and Russia were equally convinced of the necessity of a permanent remedy.

THE Paris papers in commenting upon Sir Edward Grey's statement in the House of Commons declare that France recognises the Egyptian rights on the Upper Nile, but nobody else's. The Under-Secretary of State for Forign Affairs, replying to Mr. Labouchere, said that the question of the British sphere of influence on the Nile was discussed with France last year. The discussion was not concluded, but neither were the negotiations broken off, Government did not ignore the title of Turkey or Egypt to the Upper Nile. The Temps, commenting on the statement, says that France recognised the convention concluded in 1891 only regarding Zanzibar, for which she received an equivalent in Midagascar. The article concludes by declaring that it is useless to resort to high-sounding words.

In the annual hoat race, between the two. Universities. Oxford won by two lengths. This is Oxford's seventh successive victory, Cambridge having won in the four years 1886-89. List year Oxford won by 31/2 lengths, in iking her total 38 as against 22 for Cambridge. The contest in 1877 was a dead heat.

In the House of Commons, on April 2, the Welsh Disestablishment Bill was read a second time by a majority of 44, the vote being 304 for the Bill and 260 against.

SIR Edward Grey replying to a question put by the Hon. G. Carzon, said that the agreement with Russia regarding the Pamirs had been concluded, and that a copy would shortly be laid on the table of the House. By the terms of the agreement the stream issuing from Lake Victoria is recognised as the Oxos, and the frontier is drawn thence eastward to the Chinese forntier. The trans-Oxian villages of Shignan and Rosh in will be Russian, while the cis-Oxian village of Darway will belong to Afghanistan, Russia also gives the Afghans some Bokharan villages cis-Oxus.

THE condition of the Czarewitch, who has been staying in Algiers for the benefit of his health, has become much worse.

LORD Harris, addressing a Conservative meeting at Faversham, referred to the attacks on his administration made by the Vernacular Press, and ascribed them to his policy benefiting the poor instead of yielding to the pressure of the richer classes.

THE Government yielding to pressure of the Radicals, have finally nominated Mr. Gully as their candidate far the post of Speaker. This selection will involve the first contest for the Parliamentary chair that has taken place during the last sixty years.

IT is stated that the Government of South Australia have decided to abolish the militia as a measure of economy.

MR. Balfour, speaking at a meeting of the Binnetallic League, said that he considered the Indian currency system combined all the drawbacks of any system ever tried in the Empire. A change in the general monetary system was imperative, but it was impossible for England to act alone, since it was dependent upon the world for its food supply.

THE Directors at the Liberator Society who were charged with fraud have been committed for trial, bail being allowed.

THE case against the Marquis of Queensberry at the Old Bailey was brought to a sudden termination yesterday. Sit Edward Clarke, Counsel for Wilde, asked permission to withdraw the case. The Judge consented, and a verdict of acquittal was then passed. The complainant Wilde was absent from Court. Mr. Edward Carson, who appeared for Lord Queensberry, stated to the Court the day before that he was going to produce absolutely damining evidence against Wilde. A plea of justification for the libel was set up by the defence. Mr. Wilde was submitted to a most searching cross-examination which continued for two days. He denied that he had been guilty of any misconduct, but made certain admissions. An equivocal letter from Mr. Wilde to Lord Alfred Douglas was also read. The demeaneur of the witness and the startling admissions which were extracted from him produced an immense sensation.

IN the House of Commons, Mr. Russell, replying to a question, said that he believed the report of the Opium Commission would be presented to the House on the 11th instant. A forecast report published by the Duity Chronicle says the abuse of opium is overstated. The natives of India do not use the drug so intemperately as Europeans in India do alcohol. The Commissioners do not favour the forbidding of the growth of the poppy, or making the sale of opium prohibitory, but suggest the introduction of certain regulations and limitations on the traffic in opium, especially with reference to smoking dens.

THE Archbishop of Canterbury has written a letter on the subject of the Ritualist movement in favour of the remnion of the Anglican with the Roman Church. His Grace says that the idea of the corporate remnion of the two Churches, while the Roman Catholic Church retains her erroneous doctines and advances inscriptural claims, is absolutely visionary.

REFFRRING to our semarks of the 30th March last, on Mir Sultan Saheb, the head clerk in the office of the District Superintendent of Police, Yemethen, a correspondent writes. —

"I may be permitted to tell you that he is in the legitimate line. He is evidently the son of Sultan Iwan Bukht, the youngest and the only surviving son of Bahadooi Suah, who with his wife and mother Zennat Mehal was allowed to share his captivity. The boy was born at Rangoon after the death of Bahadoor Shah. Prince Iwan Bukht was allowed to live outside the jul under Police surveillance. He used to occupy a two storied Bunglow fairly furnished, and was attended upon by a lot of Calcutta servants. He used to receive about Rs. 1,200 a month, and his mother Zennat Mehal would occupy another house and receive Rs. 800 a month. This happy change occurred through the good graces of Sn Ashley Eden, who was then the Chief Commissioner of British Burma. In 1874, when I was at Raugoon I occupied a furnished Bungalow opposite the Prince's house. The boy, as I have said, was born at Ringoon and was an exact picture of the noble House of Akbai whose blood ran through his veins. He was educated in the Rangoon High School along with other boys,"

Some of the descendants of the ill-fated Bahadur Shah are living at Rangoon on pensions that are ridiculously insufficient. Poor Bahadur Shah was no rebel. More sinned against than sinning, some timing ought surely to be done for rescuing his unfortunate children from insery. The Chief Commissioner of Burma is supposed to be their guardian. But does he know any of them by name? Cannot steps be taken for giving them some education in order to fit them for the duties of life? At any rate, they may be prevented from falling into low and disteputable company. As to Zennat Mehal, notwith-standing what some English historians have said, the noblest associations must always centre round the name. Unique was the example site set to the world of true wifely devotion. In the prime of beauty and youth she cheerfully shared the captivity and exile of a husband old enough to have been her site or even grandsire. She was the daughter of a Hindu Raja and hence the devotion to her wedded lord.

In the Statement of Object and Reasons of the Hon'ble Mohim Mohan Roy's But to regulate the award of interest in suits for simple money-debts and mortgage-debts, it is said:—

"At present there is an anomaly of practice in our Courts in the matter of awarding interest and there is no limit to the amount up to which interest may be awarded. In a recent case decided by the Calcutta High Court compound interest at 33 per cent, amounted in ten years to 17½ times the principal, or, in other words, the interest was on an average 175 per cent, of the principal per annum. The High Court held that the defendant was bound by 'the bargain which he had entered into,' and stated in its judgment that the rate of interest was not higher than had been allowed in other cases.

The object of this Bill is to remove the existing anomaly of practice and to place a limit upon the award of interest."

The above scarcely explains what the anomaly is in practice. In the case cited, the High Court seems to have only followed its own precedent. Does the Hon'ble Member mean to say that the Judges sometimes give effect to the contracts made between borrowers and lenders and some times rescind them totally or partially? Or, does the anomaly consist in the interest decreed having only exceeded the principal several times? Is this little Bill a precursor of others in the back-ground which will usher those happy times when open attempts on the part of creditors to evade the law against usury led to loss of interest and covert attempts of the kind to loss of both interest and principal? To confer substantial benefit on the Indian borrower, the Hon'ble Mohini Mohan Roy must be prepared to go the whole hog of repealing Act XXVIII, of 1855 and reviving sections 8 and 9 of Regulation XV. of 1793, or he must give up the attempt. The matter is serious. The highest considerations of political economy and statesmanship are involved in such legislation.

AFIER the late accident he bad met with at the Somastipore Railway Station, Mr. Skime, in the interests of the public, had addressed the Engineer in charge of the line. The reply is characteristic.

"The inspection pus have existed as they are at Somastipore for the last 20 years, and you are correct in saying that several Europeans have been victims in stepping into them, the worse case having been that of Mr. Sindford, late Traffic Superintendent of the Railway, who injured his leg, and was laid up for a long time after it. There have been proposals to fill in the pits, but the Locomotive Superintendent considers it necessary to retain them to ensure the safety of the men employed in examining the wheels and axles of the vehicles in passing trains."

So the pits will continue to yawn for their nightly victims without the Railway authorities doing anything. A Truffic Superintendent was not enough, and now a Magistrate and Collector also, it is proved, as not sufficient. Bishops in Iudia are not plentiful as berries, and hence we must have to want till at least a Provincial Governor is engulphed in one of these pits. Sich a consummation will immediately lead to a code of the most careful rules productive of unspeakable benefits to the public. Far be it from us to wish any real injury to gubernatorial horbs even for such a salutary end as the safety of the general public. No. We should like a gentle fall attended with unfractured integrity of limb, total exemption from pain, and a complete absence of everything endangering the prolongation of existence. Judge of the addresses with which such a Governor is sure to be greeted! An actual fall even may not be necessary. A quiet walk, in a forgetful mood, to the edge of one of these pits may bring about all the consequences of which we speak, for the reporters accompanying the Governor may do much by expatiating on the danger incurred and avoided.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL Sir George Tomkyns Chesney, K. C. B., R. E., is dead. He was educated at Woolwich and joined the Bengal Engineers in 1848. In 1854 he was made Lieutenant. He served throughout the siege of Delhi where he was twice wounded; Captain in 1858; Major in 1872; Lieutenant-Colonel in 1874; Colonel in 1884; and General in 1885. His well-known book, entitled "Indian Polity," was first published in 1868. His famous brochure, "The Battle of Dorking," came out anonymously in 1871. In 1887 General Chesney was made a member of the Council of the Governor-General. He retired in 1891 and, therefore, lived for only four years at home when death seized him for its victim. He was for many years the Principal of Cooper's Hill College, and before that he had served for some years as Principal of the Civil Engineering College, Calcutta. During his early days he was for sometime Controller of Public Works Accounts, Bengal. General Chesney, whatever his speculative opinions regarding the government of India, used to love the people of India. He took an active interest in the English translation of the Mahabharata published by Pratapa Chandra Roy. A short time before his retirement, he passed more than an hour in conversation with the present writer, on the incidents connected with his earlier days. He recollected many Bengalt gentlemen, now heads of families, having children and grand-children, who had at one time sat as students at his feet. While Controller of P. W. Accounts, Bengal, General Chesney used to protect the poor Bengali clerks against the petty tyranny of European and Eurasian heads of departments and sections of his office. The General's memory was remarkably good. His intimate acquaintance with the higher branches of mathematics never left him aimid even the graver occupations of his later life. He knew the system of Public Works Accounts so well that it was impossible for any clerk to deceive him by a show of work. He was acquainted with the merits of almost every man in his office. He never signed a statement of Accounts without carefully checking it by a comparison with the books from which it was compiled. On one occasion, a native clerk took a statement to Colonel Chesney for his signature. In course of checking it, he believed he had detected an error, and saying as much he was about to score a figure through, when the native cherk who was a very good. Accountant and who had himself very carefully done his work, caught his hand, observing,-"Colonel Chesney, not cut, Sir, you are wrong, Sir. I thought it a mistake atifirst, Sir, but thought it otherwise afterwards, Sir." Coloel Chesney argued the point for a minute, but his original assumption having been wrong, his argument was not right. Babu R---greatest coolness, then said,-"Colonel Chesney, you speak all nonsense, Sir. This is how I came at the figure," Babu Rselderly man. Laughing at the Babu's simplicity of demeanour, Colonel Chesney examined the statement with greater care and soon found that his clerk was right. Rising from his chair he shook hands with the elderly man, and complimented him highly, adding that from that time he would think twice before convicting his friend of error. We venture to say that it is not everybody who could put up with a native clerk's arguments backed by a sudden seizure of the hand and such sweet epithets as "you speak all nodsense, Sir," even though the words came from one whose knowledge of English was very limited.

General Chesney owed his success in life to merit alone. He was in the full vigour of his senses when he retired from service. We sincerely condole with those he has left behind.

THE Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jubbar, Khan Bahadur, having resigned his seat, Rii Bahadur Duigagati Baneijea, C. I. E., Collector of

The Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science.

210, Bow-Bazar Street, Calcutta.

(Session 1894-95.)

Lecture by D. N. Chatterjee, B. A., M. B., C. M., on Wednesday, the roth Inst., at 5 3 . P. M. Subject : "Circulation." (continued).

Lecture by Dr. Nilratan Sarkar, M. A., M. D., on Thursday, the 11th Inst., at 5-30 P. M. Subject : Histology " Endothelium."

Admission Fee, Rs. 4 for Physics, and Rs. 4 for Chemistry; Rs. 6 for both Physics and Chemistry; Rs. 4 for Physiology; Rs. 4 for General Biology; Rs. 6 for complete course of Physiology and Biology. The charge for a single lecture is 2 Annas.

MAKENDRA LAL SIRCAR, M.D. Honorary Secretary.

Stamp Revenue, Superintendent of Excise Revenue, and Deputy Collector of Land Revenue, Calcutta, has been appointed a member of the Bengal Legislative Council. Possessed of administrative experience, the Rai Bahadur fittingly replaces the Khan Bahadur. We hope he will be allowed full bittude to prove his usefulness. Sir Ashley Eden had offered him a seat in his Council when Baboo Baneriea was Personal Assistant to the Commissioner of the Patna Division, but he declined the honour, thinking that he would be more serviceable at Patna than at Calcutta. The translation of Babu Banerjea to the Legislative Council is a disappointment to Moulvi Delwar Hosaen Ahmed, Khan Bahadur, who was sure of the place. He has, however, an agreeable surprise in his new post, that of officiating Inspector-General of Registration, which was Moulvi Abdul Jubbar Khan Bahadur's due, but who was not allowed to retire in that capacity. The objection stated was that he had exceeded the official limit of age and, under the rules, no new appointment could be his. The present incumbent suffers under the same disability about being confirmed in the post, for he is already on extension.

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, April 6, 1895.

THE BUDGET DEBATE.

THE debate on the Budget is of interest from more than one point of view. Sir James Westland was in the happy position of having presented a more satisfactory statement of the finances than had been anticipated. Accordingly, felicitations, which he so well deserved, poured in from every side. What a contrast to the memorable Budget debate of last year on the cotton duties and the peculiar obligations of "official consciences" on that question! That unhappy situation is past, and to Sir James has been given to restore those duties and remove the strain on the consciences. A year of surplus, however moderate the surplus may be, is, again, no small thing with the exchange ruling so low. This is the more satisfactory as being due to economies in the Military and Civil expenditure for which the Finance Minister's efforts are worthy of all praise. The result, however, is not less due to the cotton duties about which his efforts have been not less laudably persistent. The Budget of 1895-96 in regard to these duties embodies an act of justice to India for which, however tardy, the Government deserves well of the people. Our sentiments of gratefulness for this would have been more unmixed if it were not for the countervailing excise duty on Indian cotton goods. In view of the actual situation, our hope is that the Secretary of State may raise the line of exemption to counts of 24's instead of 20. On the necessity of this there was a strong expression of opinion in the course of the debate. The decision of Mr. Fowler is awaited with keen anxiety.

Of the speaking in the Council, the opening speech of the Hon, H. E. James is a most interesting account of the achievements of the Indian Post Office. It is a most popular Department which has always been above the altercation of political strife, and it has gone on improving in diverse ways by leaps and bounds. Mr. James, however, had still greater improvements in view, and he put in a powerful pleafor the Department being treated in the future as it has been in the past, namely, as existing for public convenience, and not as a source of public revenue. The great expansion the Post Office has made and the development of its usefulness in so many directions, are due to this principle, and he prayed that there might be no departure from it, at any rate till his entire programme of postal reform were realized. Mr. James put in his plea for his Department in such good spirit that it was at once accepted on the part of the Financial Department.

Sir Griffith Evans made, as usual, a capital speech, by which he fully maintained his reputation as the champion of public interests. He briefly touched on all the points upon which public opinion has been at issue with the Government as well as loudly expressed of late. After congratulating the Government on the expenditure having been kept within the income, as well as on the decision to pay the expenses of the Opium Commission out of the English Exchequer, which he hoped, would be a wholesome lesson to those incorrigible faddists who were hard to deal with, he emphasized the necessity for looking more closely into the Home Charges. The justice of the demand for the excise duty being fixed at 24's had also his support, while, in referring to the Chitral expedition in the terms he did, he only reflected the voice of public opinion. Without intending to embarrass the hands of Government, Sir G. Evans said that there was a very uneasy feeling abroad that they were having too many expeditions of late years, and that whenever the Finance Minister seemed to be getting his head above water, then one of these expeditions was undertaken which soon got his head down again. He contended that more care and forethought were needed to prevent such complications as resulted in no manner of good. They often arose from light-heartedness on the part of young political officers who required a strong hand for keeping them down. These remarks elicited a frank explanation from the Viceroy who entered at some length into the circumstances which have made the present resort to arms necessary.

The Hon'ble Mr. Playfair spoke with ability from the mercantile point of view. Among other things, he laid great stress on the importance of buying stores locally or through local agency. The Government, however, could not hold forth any hope in that direction, the Finance Minister being of opinion that the payment of middlemen here was not likely to be of advantage to the Government. Truly, the question is not so easy as the Finance Minister thinks. Even with regard to articles manufactured in England, the Government may purchase them with advantage from middlemen in India. Manufacturers have two prices, one for wholesale purchasers and another for ordinary ones. Many English manufacturers, again, have Indian Agents who are capable of selling at rates that are even a trifle less than the rates charged at home plus the costs of transit. The charge, again, of keeping up an establishment at home for executing the orders of the Indian Government should be taken into consideration. Even if the Indian Government gain nothing in the form of direct saving by patronising middlemen in India, still the indirect advantages that accrue from fostering Indian mercantile houses and traders, deserve to be reckoned. The rule should be strictly followed of never purchasing in England any article that is manufactured in India and that is capable of being purchased here at a price even equal to the English price plus the costs of transit.

The speech of the day was, we may say, Mr. Phirozesha Meht is. It was an eloquent deliverance with the ring of true patriotism. It presented the view popularly taken of the financial administration of the Empire, and no wonder that in these days of official touchiness it fell on the Council like a bombshell. It produced no small dissatisfaction among the official members of the Council, several of whom, Sir Charles Elliott in particular, spoke in strong disapprobation. To us, this betokens an impatience of criticism which was seldom discovered by officials before. Far stronger things have been said in Council by independent non-official and even by independent official members without creating half the excitement Mr. Mehta produced on the present occasion. Mr. Mehta pointed to such names as those of Sir David Barbour and Sir Auckland Colvin as keeping him in countenance. But to no avail. It is, however, significant that, in spite of all that ministers in office say of economy in the administration of finances, the moment they are out of office, they tell a different story. They deplote, as Sir Auckland has done, the continual drain on the exchequer by all the spending Departments. Sir James Westland's statistics of the economies effected were, however, somewhat re-assuring.

The Viceroy's speech was in the main a reply to Sir G. Evans's remarks on the Chitral expedition. For thus taking the public into his confidence Lord Elgin deserves our acknowledgments. For the rest, he gave full support to the Finance Department and joined in the felicitations of his Finance Minister. Sir James's labours in connection with the Conversion of the Loans were particularly extolled by the Viceroy.

HYDERABAD.

In one of our recent issues we gave a picture of the bright side of Nawab Vicar-ul-Omra's character. On the present occasion, we purpose to have a look at the other side of it, and then discuss some of the principal features of his administration. The chief defect in Nawab Vicar-ul-Omra's character is want of strength. Nothing, indeed, is more necessary to an administrator than strength of character. Without it, no man, however gifted, can ever win success in the difficult work of administration. Nawab Vicarul-Omra, while wanting in strength of character, also lacks judgment. He is intelligent, but his intelligence is not of that kind which enables one to grasp a knotty or intricate question without the help of others. Then, again, although outwardly frank and open, he is naturally of a suspicious mind. Unable, therefore, to place entire confidence in any single person, he is obliged to surround himself with many counsellors. As a matter of fact, he has more than half a dozen confidential advisers, of different creeds and nationalities, who are all jealous of one another and every one of whom always advises against the advice of every one else! Of the long line of Prime Ministers we read of in English history, no one was more ignorant of general history and geography than the Duke of Newcastle. His surprise was very great upon learning that Cape Breton was an island. While announcing the English victory at Annapolis in Parliament, he could not explain in what part of the world Annapolis was. Yet, as a Prime Minister, the Duke of Newcastle was not a failure. He had the extraordinary faculty of at once selecting the right man who was to coach him on the particular question of the hour. Amid diverse kinds of counsels offered to him by others, he could unerringly select those which were right and marked by true statesmanship. Nawab Vicar-ul-Omra, though much better informed in many respects than the Duke of Newcastle, is inferror to the Duke in the matter of selecting the adcan never go hand-in-hand with suspiciousness of temperament. The next noticeable feature in Nawab Vicar-ul-Omra's character is that he is wanting in foresight, and his reckless extravagance, which has long become notorious, may be considered as largely due to this natural defect in him. Among the minor traits in his character may be mentioned his impulsiveness, unsteadiness, sellishness, love of ease, and want of application. We have taken the liberty to disclose these features because, we believe, they have a direct bearing on the work of administration. have no business to look into his private moral character, and so shall not pry into that preserve.

Let us now examine some of the principal measures of the administration. Nawab Vicar-ul-Omra commenced his career as Prime Minister by trampling under foot the Kanuncha Mobaruk of the Nizam, and knocking the Cabinet Council on the head. A short while before the overthrow of Sir Asman Jah's Ministry, the Nizam passed certain rules for the better administration of the State. Those rules were called Kanuncha Mobaruk It was in conformity with them that the Cabinet Council was established. That Council, as originally formed, was, with the Prime Minister as President, composed of the four Muin-ul-Mahams or Departmental Ministers, viz., the Revenue Minister, the Military Minister, the Judicial Minister and the Police and Public Works Minister. The Revenue Minister was also the Vice-President of the Council. During the absence of the Prime Minister, the Vice-President was empowered to preside. Nawab Vicar-ul-Omra was the Revenue Minister, and as such he was also Vice-President of the Council. This was the main feature of the constitution of the Cabinet Council, On the elevation of Nawab Vicarul-Omra to the office of Prime Minister, it was expected that a nobleman of the highest rank would be appointed his successor in the Council. But instead of appointing a new Revenue Minister, a Revenue Board was established, composed of two members, Mr. Dunlop, Inspector General of Revenue being the Senior Member, and Nawab Muktadir Jung, Revenue Secretary, the Junior Member. But, enriously enough, though the Revenue Board has been established in place of the Revenue Minister, it has not been formally invested with all the powers of the latter. The Board is directly responsible to the Prime Minister, so that, as matters stand at present, Nawab Vicar-ul-Omra practically combines in himself the functions of Revenue Minister as well as those of Prime Minister. It will be remembered that the Cabinet Council was established with the chief object of dividing the responsibilities of the Prime Minister. But the very first thing that Nawab Vicar-ul-Omra did on assuming the office of Prime Minister was a deliberate and positive move towards the destruction of that Conncil There was absolutely no necessity for a Revenue Board. It has only added a fifth wheel to the coach of administration. Instead of simplifying, it has only complicated matters. It I as increased expenditure and increased the responsibilities of the Prime Minister. What is most to be regretted is, that it has emasculated the Cabinet Council. By the reduction of its numerical strength, the Council has been weakened. The President, by his casting vote, can carry through any measure if he can manage to secure only one vote in his support, and he, we are told, can always count upon one such vote from the Police Minister. The other two members, Rajah Kishen Prasad, the Military Minister, Mr. Dunlop as the Senior Member of the Revenue and Nawab Fakhr-ul-Mulk, the Judicial Minister, are the most independent and active Members of the Council. Gifted with great intelligence and endowed with proper culture, they can think for themselves and have the courage of their convictions. They are incapable of surrendering their judgment hoodwinked. They are sure to oppose the Prime Minister on any question in which they may not agree with him. But however strong and just their opposition, it can be of no avail in the Council for the reason mentioned above. It is plain, therefore, that the Prime Minister is now supreme in the Cabinet Council, and the Council is only a nonentity. It should also be mentioned that the Council is without a Vice-President.

The Revenue is surely the most important department in the administration. Its range and scope will be apparent from the following sub-departments into which it is divided :- Land Revenue; Revenue Settlement; Inams; Customs; Abkari; Forests; Agriculture and Commerce; Stamps; Mint; Cattlebreeding; Local Fund. Each of these sub-departments is placed under a separate official with the designation of "Subadar," "Commissioner," "Director General," and so forth. The salaries of these officials vary from Rs. 1,200 to Rs. 2,000 a month They were all, according to the rules of the Cabinet Council, formerly held responsible to the Revenue Minister. Previous to the establishment of the Board, the Revenue Minister used to place all important matters connected with the administration of his department before the Council for settlement. The Prime Minister could not have his own way in any matter. All that is changed now. There being no Revenue Minister, Revenue matters are no longer placed before the Cabinet Council, and the Prime Minister is all in all in this most important branch of the administration. Such being the case, we fail to see the use of keeping up this sham of a Council at so much cost to the State. The question is, what was the reason of not appointing a Revenue Minister? Was it owing to the absence of a suitable person for that important office? No. We are imformed, the Nizam ordered, immediately after the vacancy had occurred, that Nawab Zuffer Jung Bahadur, son of the Premier Noble, Nawab Sir Khurshed Jah, and nephew of His Highness, as well as of the Prime Minister, be appointed. Nawab Zaffur Jung Bahadur is by far the best specimen of the younger generation of the Hyderabad nobility. By birth, intelligence, education and character, he is well fitted to occupy a place in the Cabinet Council. His appointment as a Muin-ul-Maham would have given general satisfaction to the Hyderabad public. Why was not His Highness's order given effect to? Why? Because, we are told, the order was suppressed somewhere! Inscrutable are the ways of Hyderabad officials. In the place of the Revenue Minister, a Revenue Board was established. We have also seen how Nawab Vicar-ul-Omra has increased his own powers by establishing the Revenue Board, and reducing those of the Cabinet Council. But he has served another purpose by this measure. He has raised Mr. Dunlop to a position to which that gentleman could never have otherwise attained. As a European, Mr. Dunlop could not be made a member of the Cabinet Council, for the Kanuncha Mobaruk strictly enjoins that no European is to be appointed as Secretary to the Cabinet Council, far less a Member of it. But by appointing Board, the Prime Minister has made him virtually the head of the Revenue Department, responsible only to himself, but not to the Cabinet Council, and so made his position almost equal to that of a Muin-ul-Maham. Mr. Dunlop is also one of the chief advisers of His Excellency, and is said to have acquired great influence over him. He is reported to be an able man possessing much experience in Revenue matters. But whitever his ability and experience, his appointment as the head of the Revenue Department is not viewed with approval by the people of Hyderabad. Indeed, Nawab Vicar-ul-Omra has incurred much public odium by this appointment. Mr. Dunlop was formerly in the private service of Nawab Vicar-ul-Omra, and a great favorite. It is believed that kindness to Mr. Dunlop was one of the causes that led to the establishment of the Revenue Board, Whatever the reason, the establishment of the Revenue Board has destroyed the vitality of the Cabinet Council.

It is in connection with the recent changes that the helplessness of the Cabinet Council is to be most regretted. The Council was not even consulted in regard to those changes. Nawab Fakhr-ul-Mulk is the Judicial Minister. He is responsible for the Judicial administration of the country. But with regard to the recent changes in the High Court and in the Judicial Secretariat, both of which are directly under him, he was not only not consulted, but was studiously kept in the dark. The Judicial Minister did not know anything of the changes in the Judicial Department until they became accomplished facts!

THE HIGH COURT VS. THE POLICE COURT. THE Chief Justice Sir Comer Petheram and Mr. Justice Beverley have made absolute the two rules issued by them against the Honorary Magistrates Mr. N. N. Mitra and Nawab Ashgar Ali Diler Jung, one to show cause why the conviction of Mr. Palit should not be set aside, and another to aside a proceeding of the Magistrates calling on Mr. Cranenburgh to show cause why he should not be prosecuted for perjury. The Judges take the ordinary view that Mr. Palit should not have been pursued to the bitter end. They hold that the apology, such as it was, should have been accepted and the matter allowed to drop. Mr. Palit's conviction being quashed, the order in the matter of Mr. Cranenburgh necessarily follows. We give below the two judgments. The Chief Justice remarks,--- "The Magis_ trates have convicted Mr. Palit, acting, as it seems to us, not on the testimony of the witness who was called and examined by them, but on their own recollection of what they heard Mr. Palit say." In justice to the Magistrates, it must be said that the witness called and examined by them, that is, the Bench Clerk, had heard what they themselves remembered hearing, namely, that Mr. Palit had used the insulting words--- "It is a misfortune tha, you are a Court at all." Mr. Cranenburgh's recollection was differ ent. But he was the witness, as the judgment, a few lines before, says, for the defence, and examined on behalf of Mr. Palit by Mr. Hill. In the whole course of the wrangle, Mr. Palit, while not remembering that he had used the words charged to him, did not say what words he had used, which if he had done or if Mr. Cranenburgh could see his way to inform the Court the first day what he had heard, it is likely the matter would have dropped then and there. It is to be remarked that the judgment takes no exception to the procedure adopted by the Magistrates. Much was made of it by the Counsel for Mr. Palit. They called it irregular and denied the power of the Magistrates to try their client on the second day. Evidently the High Court accepts the expalit for contempt under section 482, Criminal Procedure Code, and that section 555, on which the desence had relied so much, was no bar. We wish the High Court had clearly expressed itself on these points, for future guidance of Magietrates. Without going into them, it thinks that the Magistrates should not have allowed the matter to drag into unpleasant lengths. The judgment seems to say, the Magistrates might have accepted Mr. Cranenburgh's version and let the non-remembering Counsel go-The triumph of Mr. Palit is complete. His opposing Pleader had deposed in his favour. The Bar had made common cause. with him, and the High Court Bench upholds him.

The only other case of contempt occurring in the Police Court which we can remember, was in the Court of the Northern Division Magistrate, Mr. Ameer Ali, now a Judge of the High Court. The offender was a ship Captain and was tried by the other stipendiary Magistrate and two Honorary Magistrates forming a Bench. The Captain offered to apologize. He was allowed to make his apology to the forwarding or committing Magistrate. That Magistrate, however, without expressing himself in any way as to the sufficiency or insufficiency of the regret expressed by the Captain, left the matter entirely at the hands of the Bench. The Bench convicted the Captain and fined him the maximum amount allowed by the law, namely, Rupees one thousand, in lieu of imprisonment which, the Magistrates thought, he had deserved but which they would not order as his ship would be sailing the same day. The High Court confirmed the conviction but reduced the fine to Rupees two hundred.

MR. T. PALIT'S CASE.

The Chief Justice .--- This rule was obtained to set aside a convic-The Chief Justice...-This rule was obtained to set aside a conviction by two Honorary Presidency Magistrates, both barristers of considerable standing, of Mr. Palit, another barrister of considerable standing, of the offence of insulting them while sitting in judicial proceedings. The offence is created by section 228 of the Indian Penal Code, and the sentence passed on Mr. Palit was that he pay a fine of Rs. 20, or in default suffer one week's simple imprisonment. The matter arises out of a most unseemly wrangle which took place on the 20th of Pebruary in the Police Court between the two presiding magistrates and Mr. Palit, in the course of which it is evident that at least one of the magistrates and Mr. Palit became angry and excited, and certainly did not treat each other with the courtesv and respect which the public have a right to look for in gentlemen of their position and experience when engaged in their public duties. In the course of a case in which he was engaged Mr. Palit was charged by the magistrates with having, some fifteen minutes before the charge was made, used an insulting expression towards them, and they called upon Mr. Palit to withdraw it. Mr. Palit said that he did not remember using the expression, and afterwards himself, and through his counsel, assured the magistrates that they had misunderstood him, and that the words which he had used were different to those which they thought they had heard ; but added that had he said what the magistrates had understood him to say it would have been most improper conduct on his part, and that if he had done it he would withdraw the expressions and apologise for having used them. This the magistrates refused to accept and, as Mr. Palit refused to plead guilty, proceeded on the 26th to try him themselves for the offence with which they charged him. The evidence in support of the charge was, we think, taken in such a way as to be very unsatisfactory, and Mr. Cranenburgh, a wellknown Pleader of the Police Court, was called for the defence. He said that he was engaged in the case in opposition to Mr. Palit and that what he heard was what Mr. Palit says himself he remembers saying, and not what the magistrates understood him to say. Notwithstanding this the magistrates have convicted Mr. Palit, acting, as it seems to us, not on the testimony of the witness who was called and examined by them, but on their own recollection of what they heard Mr. Palit say. We do not think that a conviction arrived at heard Mr. Palit say. We do not think that a conviction arrived at in such a way can be maintained. As I have said before, it is manifest that an angry discussion was going on at the time which would render it possible or even probable that an expression used by one person might be misunderstood by another, and under such circumstances we do not think it possible to convict a erson of a criminal offence for using particular words, when he insisted at the time, and has always insisted, that he was misunder-stood, and when a disinterested by stander swears that he heard the words used and understood them to bear a totally different meaning to that which the magistrates have attached to them. We must add that when Mr. Palit said that he did not remember using such on the second day. Evidently the High Court accepts the ex-planation of the Magistrates that they had the power to try Mr. them and apologised, he did all which he could be reasonably expected to do, and that that expression should have been accepted and the matter silowed to drop. The rule will be made absolute to set aside the conviction. The fine must be refunded.

MR. D. E. CRANENBURGH'S CASE.

The Chief Justice...-This case arises out of the same facts as those which we have just considered in the last case. This rule was obtained to set aside a proceeding of these magistrates calling upon Mr. Cranenburgh to show cause why he should not be prosecuted for perjury, and we think that the rule must be made absolute. In doing so we need only say that we see no grounds whatever for supposing that Mr. Cranenburgh was not stating the words as he understood them, or for thinking that it is possible that a prosecution could result in a conviction under such circumstances. The rule will be made absolute.

CHITRAL.

THE VICEREGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL, THE BUDGET DEBATE, MARCH 28.

His Excellency the President said:—I am afraid that I cannot gratify the curiosity of the Hon. Mr. Mehta and add to the information, which he seems to have obtained from some unknown source, of what takes place when the Council of the Governor-General meets in this chamber without the Additional Members who give their assistance in making Laws and Regulations. Even with the explanation of the Hon. Sir James Westland, I must not be taken as admitting the accuracy of this information; but in any case the Hon. Financial Member speaks here as the representative of the Government on the general financial position. It is therefore no part of my duty to do more than to emphasise the fact that is apparent from the speeches of the Hon. Member and Sir Henry Brackenbury, and from the events that have taken place elsewhere, that the Government of India and Her Majesty's Government are thoroughly in accord in promoting and maintaining the measures which the necessities of India may require.

There is only one section of the General Financial Statement on

There is only one section of the General Financial Statement on which I wish to say a word, and that is the section beginning with paragraph 59, dealing with the conversion of the 4 per cent. Debt. The Hon. Mr. Playfair has, I think, expressed the public appreciation of the success of this operation, which has resulted in a large saving to the Imperial Revenues, and has been carried out in a manner calculated not only to ensure success, but to cause as little inconvenience as might be to individuals, or to the money

The Hon. Financial Member in paragraph 74 has conveyed to the Banks the thanks which are undoubtedly due to them for their exertions. There was no word which he could not add. I think I ought to say that her Majesty's Government left the conduct of this matter to the Government of India, and have recorded in a despatch lately received their high appreciation of the manner in which the work has been done by the Financial Department, and especially by the Member in charge. I know that the Hon. Member modestly attributes much to a good opportunity; but it is not every one who knows how to use a good opportunity well; and so one who has stood by and seen every stage, I think it my duty to bear witness to the tact, resolution, and knowledge displayed in this business by any hon. colleague and his chief co-adjutor, Mt.

There is one other subject which has been referred to in this discussion on which I have something to say. The Hon. Sir Griffith Evans called attention to the Chitral Expedition in terms to which I wish to take no objection. I recognise that he speaks with no intention of embarrassing the Government; and I am sure he will appreciate my observation that, while it is easy for him to put general questions and raise questions of general policy, it is quite a different thing for me to follow him over all the ground that he has covered.

It is desirable that the position of the Government of India in Chitral should be clearly understood. So long ago as 1876 the Maharaja of Kashmir was permitted to accept the Chitral Mehtar's offer of suzerainty, and the Government of India then undertook to afford countenance and material aid to Kashmir in the defence or maintenance of this arrangement. This pledge has been repeated to Kashmir and also directly to the late Mehtar of Chitral. The Kashmir State and the Government of India have both for years granted annual substiles to the ruler of Chitral. When the British Agency at Gligit was withdrawn in 1881, the Kashmir State was assured that the Government of India nevertheless adhered to their policy with regard to Chitral. This policy has been to accept the de facto Mehtar, provided he could maintain his position and accepted the suzeramty of Kashmir.

maintain his position and accepted the suzerainty of Kashmir.

One of the consequences of the re establishment of the Gilvit Agency in 1889 has been that the legitimate influence of the British Government has been maintained by the presence in Chitral territory of an officer, who is an Assistant to the British Agent at Gilgit, with a small escort of regular troops supported by garrisons at Gupis and Ghize in Yasin. His head-quarters have been at Mastuj, but he has been in the habit of visiting the Mehtar at Chitral This arrangement has been cordially acquiesced in by successive Mehtars. The late Mehtar would have preferred to keep the British officer permanently with him in Chitral itself; but the Government of India declined to increase more than necessary the unavoidable risks of the position.

It was foreseen that in case a British officer were in Chitral,

It was foreseen that in case a British officer were in Chittal, and should Nizam-ul-Mulk come to an untimely end in spite of his presence, his position would be one of extreme danger.

At the time of the murder of Nizam-ul-Mulk in January last, Lieutenant Gurdon, the Political Officer, was on a visit to Chitral with an escort of only ten men. By great prudence and tact he avoided any collision with Amir-ul-Mulk and his party, and the arrival of a reinforcement of fifty men from Mastuj enabled him to maintain his position till he was joined on February 1st by Mr. Robertson, the British Agent at Gilgit.

That Lieutenant Gurdon's position was one of danger was realised by Mr. Robertson and by the Government of India from the moment that they received the news of Nizam-ul-Mulk's murder. It was impossible for him to withdraw with safety On January 8th Mr. Robertson wrote to Lieutenant Gurdon.—"If there is any prospect of trouble, sit tight and send off urgent messengers to Mastuj and Ghizr, and do not commit yourself and your escort to that terrible road along the left bank of the river between Mastuj and Chiral." Recent events have only too terribly confirmed the wisdom of that advice. It was therefore essential that he should be supported or telieved in some manner. It was also considered by the Government to be desirable that Mr. Robertson should go to Chitral to endeavour to bring about a peaceful solution of the succession—a very difficult task, for which his experience specially qualified him. He was instructed to report to the Government of India what claimant would be most acceptable to the people.

All this was in the regular course of business. But at this point Umra Khan appeared on the scene, perhaps as a partner in the plot for the murder of the Mehtar, but, at all events, as an aggressor, who laid siege to the frontier fort of Kıla Drosh. There is no community between the people of Bajaur and the tribes subject to the Mehtar of Chitral, who are different in race, in sentiment, and in character. Umra Khan has entertained for some years past aggressive designs upon Chitral, and has openly acknowledged his enmity with the ruling family. The Government of India have had on several occasions since 1891 to warn Umra Khan that aggression in Chitral would be regarded with disfavour. Umra Khan could make no pretence of a right to interfere in the Chitral and the Government of India to mediate between him and Chitral in regard to their respective claims to land, which, however, he subsequently occupied by force when the old Mehtar, Aman-ul-Mulk, died in 1892. On the occasion of making his present invasion into Chitral territory he represented, in writing, to the officers of the Government, but that Amit-ul-Mulk had opposed his wishes, and he had been compelled to become his enemy. Still the fact remains that it was in defiance of warnings that he still remains.

Umta Khan was joined about the 24th of February by Sher Alzal. This man is a brother of the former Mehtar Aman-ul-Mulk, and therefore uncle to the last two rulers. He had long been a refugee from Chitral in Badakshan, whence he made a sudden raid on Chittal in November, 1892, killed his nephew Alzal ul-Mulk and usurped the power. His rule was short, for when Nizam-ul-Mulk advanced on December 1st 1892, he had not sufficient support to hold his own, and fled to Kabul, whence he has now re-appeared as a claimant for the Mehtarship. There is reason to believe that he has by no means the unanimous support of the people, but under certain circumstances he might have proved an acceptable candidate. He has, however, come with the open support of Umra Khan, has identified himself with the defiance of the Government of India, and has sent an insolent letter to the British Agent requiring the withdrawal of all British officers from Chitral, and threatening an advance of Umra Khan's troops should they not be withdrawn.

It has been necessary to say this much to enable a just view to be formed of the circumstances. Mr. Robertson, in the exercise of his duty as the representative of the Suzerain Power, is present in Chitral. Under all ordinary circumstances the forces and supplies at Gilgit would have sufficed for the maintenance of peace and of our proper influence and position. But the circumstances are not normal; the presence of Umra Khan has disturbed the calculations on which the existing arrangements were based. I can best describe the effect of the invasion in Mr. Robertson's own words. Writing from Mastuj on January 28th he said:—"Umra Khan invested Kila Drosh on the 26th, and has effected a complete change in the situation. All Chitralis are united to resist Umra Khan." In the same letter he said:—"Gurdon cannot withdraw from Chitral without our help; and if he made any sign of retiring, we should be mobbed and overwhelmed by crowds of fugitives. Chitral is in a state of panic. We cannot get to Chitral before the 31st.

"Umra Khan is credited with a desire to arrest Gurdon-by some people. When we get to Chitral, the situation is not much better, except that Gurdon will be safe.

"If Umra Khan advances rapidly with the most overwhelming torce, even then we can hardly retire with prudence; the road is so terribly bad.

"Supplies, if they can be purchased, cannot be brought in at present, as all men are away fighting. My present idea, subject to subsequent alteration or modification, is to try and get to Chitral and hold the fort there, to the bitter end if necessary. If Umra Khan tails at Kila Drosh, or makes no further advance, it is only the supply question which should then trouble us."

The fall of Kila Drosh still further accentuated the difficulty. Up till then Mr. Robertson had, after reaching Chitral, maintained most scrupulously the attitude of non-interference prescribed by his instructions, in spite of repeated requests from the Chitralis. But when Umra Khan had thus committed himself to an act of open hostility, the Government of India felt that, however unwilling they might be to recognise Amir-ul-Mulk as Mehtar, he was there de fucto, and they were bound to authorise Mr. Robertson to give the Chitralis such material and moral support as was necessary to repel the invaders; and they at the same time gave orders for the rein-torcement of the various garrisons so far as troops were available in the Gilgit District. I was a little sorry to hear the remark made by the Hon. Member, which might be taken--though I am sure he did not so mean it --- as somewhat disparaging to our officers in the Gilgit District. I have before me a list of those officers; and it contains many names of men who, though perhaps comparatively young, have seen much service of the kind they are now called upon to perform, and have been specially selected for the present duty. We able at present to write the history of recent events; but we do know that in a moment of emergency Lieutenant Gurdon, one of these officers, not only kept his head, but showed a courage and resource that would have done credit to the most experienced. I should also mention that Colonel Kelly, commanding the Pioneer Regiment, the senior officer, is now in military command. The orders for the reinforcement of the garrisons issued from Calcutta on February 19th, before Sher Afzal had appeared on the scene, and when the matter before Mr. Robertson and the Government of India was the rendering of assistance to Chitral in protecting the country from an invader--not the support of one candidate against another.

It soon became apparent that further measures were necessary; and when, after March 1st, all communication with Mr. Robertson ceased, the Government of India were forced to review the position. Shortly it was this, that Mr. Robertson, our duly accredited Agent, who had been obliged to push on to Chitral, as I have stated, by the paramount necessity of securing Lieutenant Gurdon's safety, was himself cut off by some agency of which we knew little, but which did not regard himself in any immediate danger. He held the fort, a strong position, with about three hundred men, and he said that a strong position, with about three number men, and no season any attrack on the fort was "as improbable as its accomplishment would be impossible;" but his communications being cut, any atdifficult and dangerous has since been seen. The Government of India were bound by every consideration to relieve their officers trom such a position which, if not of immediate, was certainly one of proximate, danger.

Now, reinforcements could not be sent by Kashmir and Gilgit, because the passes are closed by snow until June at earliest, when it would be too late to relieve Mr. Robertson by that circuitous route. There was but one alternative -- an advance from Peshawar; and the hostile combination of Umra Khan and Sher Afzal gave an additional justification for its adoption.

Jandol lies between British India and Chitral on the only road open at this time of the year, and the Government of India have come very reluctantly to the conclusion that as Umra Khan will not listen to remonstrances, but persists in a course which must result in danger to Mr. Robertson and his party, they have a duty which they must perform, and that is by entering his territory to compel him to look to his own affairs.

On the best information available the Government believed that Mr. Robertson's supplies ought to suffice till about the end of April, and the orders for the collection of transport, issued on March 7th, were calculated to enable his relief to be effected by that time. Subsequent arrangements have been made with the same object.

I have no doubt that Hon. Members will agree that the disaster to Captain Ross's party in their attempt to reach Chitral from Mastuj has made it apparent that these orders were not issued a day too soon, and has established the necessity of the expedition.

It may be desirable to indicate the considerations which have determined the strength of the force which is being mobilised. The Government of India have proclaimed to the tribes along the Peshawar border the object with which this expedition will go forth, and that their independence is absolutely assured; and it is hoped that their concurrence will be obtained. But the Government of India cannot shut their eyes to the fact that they have to secure a long and difficult line of communications, and they are of opinion that in the interests of peace this must be held in great strength Any resistance offered not merely to the fighting line, but to it, supports or convoys, might leave behind fresh grounds of quarrel--s and the Government of India, while they must push on to their goal and insist, by force if necessary, upon the removal of the hostile aggression which menaces their officers in Chitral, desire, above all things, to avoid any step which may lead to any ex-tension of the frontiers of British India, or any interference with the independence of the tribes. For the attainment of these attainment of these objects, it is necessary not only to use every effort to convince the tribes of our friendly intentions to them, but also to advance, now that an advance has become inevitable, in such force as to make it evident that any hostility on their part could be instantly and effectually crushed.

I hope that Hon. Members will admit that, in laying before them I have spoken with the utmost frankness. I am not going to obscure what I have endeavoured to make clear by being drawn into a disquisition on frontier policy which might not in any event be very appropriate in this Council---certainly never so inappro-priate as now. For the present we have before us a single issue---the claim of brave men, British and Indian, who have not flinched in the performance of their duty, to the support of their country-men in their hour of need. It is a claim that I believe will go straight home to every British and Indian heart, that will inspire our counsels with unanimity, and will quicken the step of every man whose duty calls him forth on this expedition.

"KISS ME, JACK, AND LET ME GO."

ONCE, long ago, I was witness to a duel in California. The two men had been bosom friends, but had quarelled about (of course) a woman, had been bosom friends, but had quarelled about (of course) a woman. Splendid follows both—young, brainy, and ambitions. As they stood in a clear space among the pine trees near Scramento, pale as lines, steady as rocks, weapons in hand waiting for the word, the rising sun shining athwart the line of vision, they presented a picture too often seen in 1856. The pistols cracked almost simultaneously. One man stood erect, evidently untouched; the other fell upon his back and lay straight and still. Seconds, surgeons, and spectators rushed to his side. He was "all there," mind as well as body. "No, don't disturb me," he said coelly to the doctor, "I'm shot fatally and shall die in five minutes. Call Jack and be quick." Pistol still in band, his antagonist came and bent over his erstwhile chum. The exctement among the crowd was mitense; the dying man alone was calm. "Jack, my darling old boy," he said, "forgive me and forgive her. Kiss me and let me go," A minute more and he was dead, with Jack lying across his body, crying hise a baby. crying like a baby.

After I have told you another and very different story. I'll show wherein they teach the same lesson.

There is no tragedy in this one; nevertheless it is of wider human interest than the other. A woman had been ill more or less all her life. The details are commonplace enough, and yet they will appeal ite. The details are commonplace enough, and yet they will appeal to millions who care nothing for the jealousies of young men of love.

"At times," she says, I suffered from pains at the back of the head, and a sense of weight, and felt tired and weary, yet it was not from work only. I had a strange feeling, too, of something hanging over me, as of some evil or danger that I could not explain or define.

My appetite was variable; sometimes I could eat anything and again.

I could not touch any food at all. But I was never land up as it were."

Please note the last sentence. It may seem like the weakest but really is the strongest point in this lady's statement. We will tell you why in a moment.

She goes on: "Still I was often in misery, but got along fairly well until August, 1890, when I had a severe attack of rheumatism. First the great toe of my right foot and the thumb of my right hand grew hot and paneful. After a time the trouble extended to my back and hips. I could not straighten myself; I was almost bent double. Month after I could not straighten myself; I was almost bent double. Month after month I was like this, getting little or no sleep at night. Medical treatment proved of no benefit to me. In December, 1891, the pain almost drove me mad. My face was swollen to nearly twice its natural size, and my eyes were so covered by the enlarged list that I could scarcely see. There was a constant ringing in my ears, and the doctors said I had eryspelas.

"For days and days I could not walk across the floor, and for some

said I had erysipelas.

"For days and days I could not walk across the floor, and for some time I was able to move about only by taking hold of the furniture or other objects. When all other means had been tried and had failed, Mother Seigel's Curative Syrip was recommended to me. A single bottle did me a deal of good. I kept on with it, and soon was stronger and in better health than for forty years previously. I still take an occasional dose and continue in good health notwithstanding my age (48), and the 'change of life.' I tell everyone what the Syrip has done for me, and give you permission to publish what I have said. Yours truly (Signed), (Mis.) MARY JANE MILNES, 18, Walker's Buildings, Bieweyy Laue, Thornhill Lees, near Dewsbury, Yorkshire, October 12th, 1892."

Now for the lesson of both these incidents ; what is it ? This ; that Now for the lesson of both these incidents; what is it? This; that it is not people in desperate extremities who suffer most. Pain is in proportion to the resistance to disease. Those who surrender, who are in despair, who give up, have present punishment largely remitted. Dying persons are the most comfortable of all. Hopelessness and dissolution administer their own anodynes. Those who are not laid up, who are ill, and yet work and struggle, need pity and help. This lady was one, and to such Mother Seigel always proves a friend. Ready for the Press

AN INDIAN JOURNALIST: LIFE, LETTERS AND CORRESPOND-ENCE

Dr. SAMBHU C. MOOKERJEE,

late Editor of " Reis and Rayyet,"

BY F. H. SKRINE, Esq., Of the Indian Civil Service,

The volume, uniform with Mookerjee's The volume, uniform with Mookespee's Travels and Voyages in Bengal, will consist of about 600 pages and contain, among other things,—

1. A photograph of the Doctor's head from a painting by the Scotch Royal Academician Mr. James Archer.

- A Biography illustrated by copious notes
- About 225 pages of original essays from
- his brilliant pen.

 Selections from his correspondence with literary men and statesmen,

PRICF ;

Rs. As.
To subscribers paying before the 30th
April, 1805 April, 1895 5 o To registered subscribers paying before publication ... 5 8 To mere registering subscribers and ordinary purchasers 6 o The prices do not include postage and forwarding charges.

After paying expenses of the publication, the surplus will be placed wholly at the disposal of the family of the deceased.

Orders will be registered by Messrs. Thacker, Spink, & Co., Government Place, and by Babu Kisari Mohan Ganguli, B. L., 12, Ashutosh

Babu Kisari Mohan Ganguii, B. L., 12, Ashutosh Dey's Lue, Calcitta. Subscribers to the "Essiys by a Brahman" will be communicated with by Babu Kisari Mohan Ganguli. To ensure accuracy, and ayord all mischance,

To ensure accuracy and agons account some such form may be used as,— Please enter my name as a subscriber for copies of "An Indian Journalist." The amount, cheque has been remitted permoney order.

To be legibly (Name..... written Address.....

1895

GENUINE HOMGEOPATHY.

A CARD. Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M S. Homwopatnic Practitioner,

May be consulted by letter or personally daily at his residence, 30-1, Colootolah Street, Calcutta.

Novelty in Ayurvedic Medicine. AYURVEDIC PHARMACY.

36, Lower Chitpore Road, Fouzdari Balaknana, Calcutta.

KAVIRAJ NAGENDRA NATH SEN, Physician, Surgeon, Accouchem, practises the Aymvedic system of medicine, after having obtained a diploma at the find examination of one of the Government medical Institutions of the

SPECIFICS

for all ordinary diseases, like Fever, Cough, Asthma, Phthisis, Diabetes, &c., including diseases brought on by inegularities and indiscisions of diverse kinds. Catalogues, containing full accounts of diseases and remedies, are transmitted on application. Prescriptions, with or without medicines, sent to every part of India and Ceylon, Cape Colony, and the Brutsh Isles, on receipt (by post) of full accounts of diseases. counts of diseases.

Thousands of unsolicited Testimonials from every quarter.

Lady Elliott Portrait Memorial Committee.

Allan Arthur Hon, Justice Beverley Hon C. E. Buckland W. D. Cruncksnank Buon Gierter

C. Moore,
David McLaren MorriHou, P. Playfair, A.F.M. Abdur Rahman A. Sunson.
J. O'B Saunders A. H. Wallis.

W. O. Bell-Irving S. E. J. Clarke H. H. The Maharaja Darbhanga, K.C.LE. J. Jouslain, E. F. Longley, C. Moore,

Maharaja Sir J. M. Tagore, K. C. S. I.
PRESIDENT—Allan Arthur.
HON. TREASURER—J. O'B. Saunders.
HON. SECRETARY—David McLairen Morisson.
At the meeting of Commutee held at the Chamber of Commerce on the 19th Junary,
it was decided to have a picture of Lady
Elliott painted, any surplus to go towards a personal nesent. personal present.

All subscriptions to be sent to the HON. TREASURER,

9, Hare Street.

Calcutta.

THE WORKS OF DR. JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE. Rs. As.

- Commentaries on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, Marriage, Adoption, Wills &c.* Pirce ... 'No student or practitioner should be without a copy of this GREAT Work.
 - Work.
- (Sd.) Nana Bhai Handas,"

 2. Bengah translation of the Dyabhaga and the Mitakshara,† Pirce ... 2

 3. Bengah Translation of the Dataka-8
- Chandrika,† Price
 The Evidence Act with notes in Bengah.† Price
 The Civil Procedure Code with 0 8
- Principles of Zemindan Management and Book-keeping in Bengali o to First Lessons in English for Bengali boys. Price 8. Bharat Sasan Pranali*

IN THE PRESS.

The Philosophy of Religion from the point of view of Common Sense. Price Rs. 5.

CONTENTS. I. Historical Analysis of the evolution of teligious systems.

Definition of the term " religion. The problems of the philosophy of religion and their solutions, old and new. (a) Why do Hindus believe in ten Avatars or incarnations including in the series three that are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a tor-

(b) Why is it that all ancient systems recommend the specifice of animals, and the borning of ghee or incense ec. &c. &c. &c.

and the butting of ghee or incense &c. &c. &c. &c.
The weapons offensive and defensive of religious teachers
The power of fine words

The art of becoming a prophet, The cumulative effect of hardswearing for ages Specimens of Puranised history Brahmingal and Christian priesteraft compared,

The artificial miseries of men caused by

Tyranny and taxation of religion.

The good man's adversity is the sharp man's opportunity.

nan's opportunity.

Swinding as a fine art.

New Superstitions that may be suggested for the benefit of the priests.

The great prophets of the world and their doings.

Probable origin of the Saiva religion.

Tantuc mysticism and abominations.

* To be had of Messis. Thacker Spink & Co., only.

† To be had of Messrs, Thacker Spink & Co., and also at the Suradhani Agency, No. 11, Raja Nabakushna's Street, Calcutta.

CAUTION!

It having been notified to the Proprietor of Beecham's Pills that certain unscrupulous dealers have recently been perpetrating a feaud in connection with the 4 anna box lately introduced, the public are requested to see that the retail prices, (202, 4 annas, 8 annas or 91/2d, 12 annas or 18, 11/2d, and Rs, 2 or 28 9d.) are clearly printed on the lid of each box. The fraud to which attention is drawn is that in the case of the two smaller sizes, the prices have been obliterated and the boxes represented to be of higher value than they really

Sole Wholesale Agents for India, Burma and Ceylon,

G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3, NEW CHINA BAZAAR STREET CALCUITA.

NOTICE.-Should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining supplies, the Agents will be happy to forward sample boxes at above Rupee rates plus V.P.P. Charges and Postages

TEXT BOOKS IN ENGLISH.

By SARADA PRASAD BANERIEE SPECIMEN PAPERS AND ANSWERS

an THE ENGLISH ENTRANCE COURSE For 1895.

Having the largest sale of all similar works,

ENGLISH PREPARATORY COURSE

FOR 2nd & 3rd CLASSIS.

This book has been approved by the Central Text Book Committee

INDIA READERS NO. 2

FOR 4th & 5th CLASSES

INDIA READERS NO. 1

FOR 6th & 7th CLASSIS.

These books are of remarkably simple style and quite suited to Indian students

The attention of School authorities in the N.-W. P and Oudh, the Punjah, Madras, Bombay, the Central Provinces, Assam, and Barma, invited to the above publications of unique

To be had of S. K. LAHIRI & Co., College Square, Calcutta.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF

	MEMORIAL FUND.
1.		Rs.
	bhanga K.C.I E.,	2,000
2.	anagrun, G.C.I.E.,	,000
3.	. His Highness the Nawab Bahadur of	,
4.	 Moorshedabad, Amnul Omra, G.C.L.E. His Highness the Nawab of Junagadh, 	800
	G C.S.1	500
5.	His Highness the Maharaja Bahadur of Cooch Behar, G.C.L.E	500
6.	Nameh Rahadar Sir E. Abdul Chan	,
	K C.S.I., and Nawib Bahadur K. Ashan Ulla, C.I.F.	500
7.	KCS.I, and Nawib Babadur K. Ashan Ulla, C.I.E Nawab Imad Jung Bahadur Nawab Az un Yar Jung Babadur Shams-ul Ulama Syed Ali Belgram	500
8. 9.	Shams-ul Ulama Sved Ali Belgrami	500
10.	Kom Danagar DharDanagaan, C. E.,
11.	Vizier to the Nawab of Junagadh Mah iraja Bahadur Sir Jotindra Mo-	300
12.	han Tagore, K.C.S.I	250
13.	Messis, Mackinnon Mackenzie & Co. Prince Wala Kadr Syed Hosem Ali	200
14.	Prince Wala Kadr Syed Hosem Ali Mirza Bahadur
15.	Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Nawab	150
	Syed Zamui Abdin Khan Bahadur
16.	Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee, C.S.I. The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chandra	140 100
17.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chandra Madhab Ghose	100
18.	Prince Mirza Sir Jahan Kadar Baha-	100
19.	dur, K.C.I.E., The Hon'ble P. Playfair	100 100
20,	Hap Kasim Ariff	100
21,	H. Brackenbury, K.C.B.,	100
22,	Babu Jai Gobind Law	100
23.	The Honble Mr. Justice Guru Das Banerjee	50
24.	The Honble Dr. Rash Behary Ghose	51
25. 26.	Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt Shahibzada Mahomed Obidulla Khan	50
	Bahadur, C.S.I	50
27. 28.	Maharajkumar Benoya Krishna The Hon'ble Mr. Justice E. J. Treve-	50
	lyan	50
29.	The Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jabbar Khan Bahadur	50
30.	The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Calcutta	50
31,	Calcutta Maharaja Dunga Charon Law, C.I F., Nawab Jahandar Meerza Nawab Husoor Mura The Hon'ble W. C Bonnenjee Nawab Syed Ameer Husen Card M. Harde F.	50
72.	Nawah Huzoor Muza	50 50
33. 34.	The Horble W. C. Bonnerjee	50
35. 36.	Syed Nurul Huda, Esq., C.S.,	50 50
37.	Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan	50
38. 39.	J. G. Ritchie, Esq. c.s., Sir Alexander Miller	50 50
40.	F. J. Rowe, Esq	32
41.	Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi Khan Bahadur,	25
42.	Kumar Radha Prosad Roy	25
43 44.	Babu Pashupatty Nath Bose	25 25
45. 46.	Kumai Doulat Chandra Roy Babu Guru Prosonno Ghose	25 25
47.	Raja Sir Somundra Mohan Tagore,
48.	Raya Jotindra Nath Chowdhury	25 25
49.	Babu Rama Nath Ghose	25
50 51.	Rap Steenath Roy Rai Sew Bux Bogla Bahadar	25 25 25 25
52.	R Belch imbers, Esq	25
53. 54.	Raja Surja K inta Acharjee Chowdhury Rai Budieedas Mukim Bahadur	25 25
55.	Babu Gop d Lal Seal	25
56. 57.	A. T. Apcar, Esq	25 25
58.	H. Luttman Johnson, Esq. C.S	25
59. 60.	Manshi Cholam Rasod	25 25
61. 62.	The Hon'ble H. I.S. Cotton CS CS1	25
63.	Prince Mahomed Bukhtyar Shah	20
64. 65.	Baboo Surendra Nath Pal Chowdry " Aukhoy Kumar Ghose	20
66.	Moulvi Imadd Ah	20
67. 68.	Rai Shib Chunder Nundy Bahadar D. Panioty, Esq	20
69.	D. Panioty, Esq Chowdry Mahomed Arjamand Khan	20
70 71.	H. E. A. Cotton, Esq., Barrister-at-law Moulvi Syed Ashruffuddin Ahmed,	20
72.	Khan Bahadur	17-8
/ 4.	I. Inglis, Esq., C.S	16

73.	A. H. Giles, Esq		16
74.	F. F. Handley, Esq , C.S.	•••	16
	The Hon'ble Moulvi Siraje
75.		l Islam
	Khan	•••	16
76	Moulvi Serajuddeen	•••	15
77.	Abul Hasan, Esq.,	•••	15
78.	H. A. D. Phillips, Esq., c s.	•••	10
79.	Baboo Kiran Chunder Roy	•••	10
80.	E. N. Baker, Esq		10
81.	Baboo Doyal Chand Bose		10
82.	" Madan Mohun Bose	•••	IO
83.	" Kanai Lal Khan		10
84.	Moulvi Syud Akram Hossain	•••	10
85.	Moulvi Aziz Ahmud	•••	10
86.	Rai Kanyeial Dey Bahadoor	•••	10
87	H. Holmwood, Esq		10
88.	Babu Huny Mohun Chunder		10
89.	Baboo Chakkanlal Roy	•••	5
90.	" Sarodaprasad Ghose		- 5
Su	bscuptions will be thankfully	received	bv l

the Honorary Joint Secretaries the Homorary Joint Secretaries,
RAI RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI BAHADUR,
4, British Indian Street, Calcutta,
and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMAN, ESQ.,
Barrister-alLaw,
16, Taltolla, Calcutta.

"IMPROVED UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Rs. 7.

Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, small, open-faced, nickel silvern, keyless, short winding, patent, NEW STYLE IMPROVED UNDAUNT-"NEW STYLE IMPROVED UNDAUNT-ED" watch, with hand setting mechanism, secondband, for Doctors, ornamental bold dial, for Rs. 7 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' quarantee. Warranted to stand the rough-est use. Runs more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Eastly re-pairable. Others sell at double our rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Jno. Dickson of Haputal Railway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps splendid time and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jerks. × Dr. H. Moore of Royal Artillety from Poonamaltee says:—I sold it for Rs. 16. × Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Regt. from Dumdum says:—I have sold it for Rs. 20. × Mr. T. B. Scott of Patna Opium De-partment says:—The watch you sent me some from Dumdum says:—I have sold it for Rs. 20. × Mr. T. B. Scott of Patna Opium Department says:—The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time.

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real
Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real
Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty electro cased gold chain Re. 1-8-0. Fashionable electro cased Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, at Re. 1-8-0 Mr. G. Smith, Salt Inspector from Sankutia, says: "A German valued the diamond ring at Rs. 50 and tuby at Rs. 30." K-y winding, Government stamped, solid silver hunting case, Koyal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee, for Rs. 13. Pte G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light Infantry from Purandhar says:—For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Sergeant for Rs. 28. Yet. H. C. Bishop of L. F. L. Regt. from Kamptee says:—A Corporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch, Gentlemen's open faced, keyless real solid gold watch Rs. 30; ladies' Rs. 24; both with extras and guaranteed for 3 years. Mind they are guaranteed to be of real sond gold. No agents kept, all goods sent only by us from Bombay per V. P. P.

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO.,

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO., BOMBAY.

CATARRH. Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness.

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.
Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of hving parasites in the hining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these distressing diseases are rapidly and permanently cuted by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUTTON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORONTO, Canada. Scientific American. "IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer find sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffer after years of semi-helplessness and suffi-ing: while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most chronic form.

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs Is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the of TOOTHACHE? A single applica-tortures of TOOTHACHE? A single applica-tion will relieve you.

In Soie-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the result speak for itself,

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Physicians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of homes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar pieparation has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re, each.

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throughout the world.

Agents in Calcutta: Smith Stanistreet & Co. R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Bathgate & Co. Limited.

REIS & RAYYET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT) WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

AND

Review of Politics, Literature, and So RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION. If paid in advance,

Yearly .	,	•••		Rs.	12
Halt-yearl		•••	•••	,,	7
Quarterly .		•••	•••	,,	4
Montaly .		•••	•••	Кe.	1-8
Single or s	ample	Copy		Ans.	0-8
	If no	paid in ad	vance,
Yearly		•		Rs.	31
Half-yearly	···	•••	•••	,,	10-8
Quarterly		•••		,,	6-0
Monthly		•••	•••		2-4
Single or s	ample	Сору		Ans.
No addi	tionai (cnarge for	postage	or p	eor.

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insertion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5.
Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphlets (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayyet."

OFFICE: I, Uckoor Dut's Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutia.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

AND

REVIEW OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, APRIL 27, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 672.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

-reaser-

THE LIFE OF THE SEA.

BY B. SIMMON

"A very intelligent young lady, born an order in the Orkney islands, who lately came to spend a season in this neighbourhood, told me nothing in the mainland scenery had so much disappointed her as woods and trees. She found them so dead and lifeless, that she never could help pinning after the eternal motion and variety of the ocean. And so back she has gone; and I believe nothing will ever tempt her from the wind-swept Orcades again."—Sir Walter Scott. Lockhart's Life, vol. ii. [Although it is of a woman this striking anecdote is related, it has been thought more suitable to give the amplitude expression of the sentiment in the stanzas a masculine application.]

I.

THESE grassy vales are warm and deep,
Where apple-orchards wave and glow;
Upon soft uplands whitening sheep
Drift in long wreaths.—Below,
Sun-fronting beds of garden-thyme, alive
With the small humming merchants of the live,
And cottage-homes in every shady nook
Where willows dip and kiss the dimples of the brook.

11.

But all too close against my face

My thick breath feels these crowding trees,
They crush me in their green embrace.—
I miss the Life of Seas;
The wild free life that round the flinty shores
Of my bleak isles expanded ocean pours—
So free, so far,that, in the lull of even,
Nought but the rising moon stands on your path to heaven.

111.

In summer's smile, in winter's strife,
Unstirred, those hills are walls to me;
I want the vast, all various life
Of the broad, circling sea—
/ Each hour in more, or noon, or midnight's range,
That heaves or slumbers with exhaustless change,
Dashed to the skies—teeped in blue morning's rays—
Or back resparkling far Orion's lovely blaze.

IV.

I miss the madd'ning Life of Seas,
When the red, angry sunset dies,
And to the storm-lashed Orcades
Resound the seaman's cries;
Mid thick'ning night, and fresh'ning gale, upon
The Tretched ear bursts Despair's appealing gun,
O'er the low teef that on the lea-beam raves
With its down-crashing hills of wild, devouring waves.

٧.

How then, at dim, exciting morn,

Suspense will question—as the Dark
Is clearing seaward—"Has she worn
The tempest through, that bark?"
And 'mid the breakers, bulwarks parting fast,
And wretches clinging to a shivered mast,
Give funeral answer. Quick with ropes and yaw!!
Launch! and for life stretch out! they shall not perish all!

VI.

These inland love-bowers sweetly bloom,
White with the hawthorn's summer snows
Along soft tuif a purple bloom
The clin at sunset throws:
There the fond lover, listening for the sweet,
Haif-soundless coming of his maiden's feet,
Thrills if the luner's rustling pinions pass,
Or some light leaf is blown rippling along the grass.

VII

But love his pain as sweetly tells Beneath some cavern beetling hoar,
Where silver sands and rosy shells
P. we the smooth glistening shore—
When all the winds are low, and to thy tender
Accents, the wivelets, stealing in, make slender
And tinking caccine, wafting, every one,
A golden sinile to thee from the fast-sinking sun

viii.

Calm through the hevenly sea on high
Corres out each white and quiet star—
So calm up Ocean's floating sky
Come, one by one, aftr,
White quiet sals from the grim it y coasts
That hear the battles of the wholing hosts,
Whose homewild crews with fest and flates in time
And spirits roughly blithe, make music to the moon.

ıx.

Or if (like some) thou'st loved in vain,
Or madly wooed the already won,—
Go when the Pission and the Pain
Their have begun,
And date the Thunder rolling up behind
The Deep, to match that hurricane of mind:
Or to the wa-winds, raging on thy pale Grief-wasted cheek, pour forth as bitter-keen a tale x.

For in that sleepless, tumbling tide— When most thy fevered spirits reel, Sick with desires unsatisfied,— Dwell life and balm to heal.

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, if possible, as the safest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

Raise thy free sail, and seek o'er ocean's breast -It boots not what-those rose clouds in the west. And deem that thus thy spirit freed shall be, Ploughing the stars through seas of blue Eternity

XI.

This mainland life I could not live, Nor die beneath a rookery's leaves-But I my parting breath would give / Where chainless Ocean heaves; In some gay turret, where my fading sight Could see the Lighthouse flume into the night, Emblem of guidance and of hope, to save; Type of the Rescuer bright who walked the howling wave.

Nor, dead, amid the charnel's breath Shall rise my tomb with hes befooled, But like the Greek who faced in death The sea in life he ruled.* High on some peak, wave-girded, will I sleep, My dirge sung ever by the coral deep ; There, sullen mourner ! oft at midnight lone Shall my familiar friend, the Thunder, come to groan. XIII

Soft Vales and sunny Hills, farewell! Long shall the friendship of your bowers Be sweet to me as is the smell Of their strange lovely flowers; And each kind face, like every pleasant star Be bright to me though ever bright afar : True as the sea-bird's wing, I seek my home And its glad Life, once more, by boundless Ocean's foam ' -Blackwood.

WEEKLYANA.

THE following Notice of Motion appears in the Order Book of the House of Commons, 1895. No date being fixed, it will appear every day till the motion is made :

"Mr. Naoroj.,—Civil Service (India) (Simultaneous Open Competitive Examinations in England and India), That, in the opinion of this House, in order to preserve and maintain the stability of the British Power, the loyalty, confidence, contentment, and gratitude of the people of British India, to improve their material and motal condition and to increase largely commercial and industrial benefits to the people of the unclease largely commercial and industrial benefits to the people of the United Kingdom, it is expedient that the solemn pledges of the Act of 1833, of the Proclamation of 1858 after the Mutiny, of the Proclamation of 1877 on the assumption of the Imperial Title at the great Delhi Durbar, and of the further confirmation of these Proclamations on the Jubilee by Hei Most Gracious Majesty the Queen-Empiess of India, should be fulfilled by, among other reforms, giving effect to the Resolution adopted by this House on 3rd June, 1893, viz.: 'That all open Competitive Examinations heretofore held in England alone for appointments to the Civil Services of India shall henceforth be held simultanesses by the India and Knalland such Exprintations in both countries. ously both in India and England, such Examinations in both countries being indentical in their nature, and all who compete being finally classified in one list according to ment!."

We are afraid the Motion will drop off like the Resolution on which it is based.

ANOTHER cure for snake-bite is announced. It is-a light ligature and leeches. Khodabux, a cook, being beaten, after the bandage, leeches were promptly applied. After a time, they fell off one by one, dead, and the man was lively and then pronounced completely cured.

BEGINNING with the Empress's Buthday, the Overland Mail now leaving on Saturdays will leave Bomb iy on Fridays. Accordingly, in Calcutta, from the 21st May, the mail days will be Tuesdays instead of Wednesdays. The next mail is expected in Calcutta to-morrow.

THE Hon'ble Arthur Charles Trevot, C.S.I., has been appointed to officiate for Sir Charles Bradley Pritchard, K.C.I.E., on six month's leave, as Public Works Minister. He entered into his duties on the afternoon of the 20th April under the usual salute.

MR. P. O'Kinealy has been appointed Standing Counsel for the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal. At the Criminal Sessions, the presiding Judge, Mr. Justice Norris, congratulated Government on the appointment, offered his best wishes to Mr. O'Kinealy, and regretted "the absence of the almost invaluable assistance which for years the late Standing Counsel has rendered to this Court in the discharge sometimes of very onerous and difficult duty."

A CORRESPONDENT signing himself "A Ratepayer of Santipore" writes:—

"Sir,—I was very much pained to read, in your issue of the 13th April last, a paragraph on the transfer of Baboo Nobin Chandra Sen, the Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector of Ranaghai, stating that the transfer is a rehief to the people of Sartipore, who, you say, have grown used of him. I wonder how you could form this opinion of Baboo Nobin Chandra Sen. The people of Santipore entertain great respect for Baboo Nobin Chandra Sen, and are truly sorry to pait with him. And the best proof of this is afforded by the fact that when the Government was disposed to appoint a non-official chairman, the Municipal Commissioners of Santipore perfered Baboo Nobin Chandra Sen to a non-official Chairman who would have been appointed from one of their own townsmen. If the people of Santipore weige tired of him, they would not have thus honoured him with their confidence and regard. During the short space of two years he has been Chairman of our Santipore Corporation, he has tendered conspicuous services to the ratepayers of Santipone. When he took charge of the office of Chairman, the finances of the Santipore Corporation services to the ratepayers of Santipone. When he took charge of the office of Chairman, the finances of the Santipore Corporation, he has tendered conspicuous services to the ratepayers of Santipone. When he took charge of the office of Chairman, the finances of the Santipore Corporation, and the finances of the Santipore Corporation, he has tendered conspicuous services to the Tate of the Santipore Corporation, he has tendered conspicuous services to the Tate of the Santipore Corporation, and the support of the support of the support of the Santipore Corporation of the Santipore Corporation of the Santipore Corporation of the Santipore Corporation of the Santipore Corporation of the Santipore Corporation of the Santipore Corporation of the Santipore Corporation of the Santipore Corporation of the Santipore Corporation of the Santipore Corporation of the Santipore Corporation of the Santipore Co

Our correspondent is evidently an absentee rated iver, or he would have known better, felt more deeply, and echoed the relief. Babu Sen's appointment of Chairman could not, by any stretch of argument, be any evidence of approbation of his administration of the Municipality. It is undoubtedly due to the Baboo that he did not further embarrass the finances which were recovering from the chaotic condition. We do not deny that he is a graceful versifier. Even his own apologist, while ranking Sen among the poets of the world, cannot say that he is read beyond his own Province of Bengal. Our correspondent, however, has missed the point of our remark. Babu Sen may be a good, even a very good poet. We have no quarrel with those who drink delight from his stanzas or lines many of which are highly artificial. It is one thing to write well, and another to speak of oneself as "the Byron of Bengal." We heard it from a European gentleman in the Civil Service that Babu Sen, very probably for impressing the gentleman with what was truly due to himself, informed him in the very first interview of the fact that he is regarded as the Byron of Bengal The reply received was,-" Oh ! indeed, I did not know that Bengal has already produced a poet with Byron's fire and originality. What, please, is the Childe Harold you have given to the world, or the new Bengali Don Juan ?"

DOES our correspondent "A Mussalman" deny that the Mahomedan officer for whom he speaks was not on sick leave which had just commenced? We pause for a reply.

A CORRESPONDENT at Odessa writes to the Times :-

"An experiment has been successfully carried out by the Russian Government during the past winter of great importance to the British authorities in India and Australia. Up to the present time Russia's Asiatic outlet at Vladivistok has always been regarded as closed during the winter months; but this fact no longer exists, because the cruiser Kostoma, which was sent out as a trial, was not only able to land the reinforcement of soldiers she carried out, but, with the aid of the ice-breaker which was recently seen there, the cruiser pot alongside of the Government quay and dischauged the heavy guns and other war material she took out from here. This was done in the depth of winter with the cold at such a point that the opening she made was fast frozen half an hour afterwards. It is well known that Vladivostok is the post from which Russia would attack our Asiatic possessions in the event of hostilities with England, but as it was thought to be ice-bound several months of the year, its importance was considerably lessened. Now this supposition no longer exists, and it is now known for the first time since Russia has become an Asiatic Power that she has a mature outlet for offensive and defensive purposes that can be termed open all the year round." "An experiment has been successfully carried out by the Russian termed open all the year round."

The civilised world has now but one thought, viz., the discovery of new methods and routes of attacking neighbours and repelling their attacks, those that excel in the art of destroying and defacing God's works being regarded as truly great. The oddest masks of the Earth must be explored for victims to Bellona and Mars. Representatives of the strongest nations must poke their noses into affairs that do not concern them at all, provided they can win martyrdom for themselves by losing liberty or life in the confidence that their people would avenge them on their captors or slayers and thereby increase their military renown and extend their political and commercial dominion. If science progressed with equal strides in every country, the depopulation of the Earth would have by this been an accomplished fact. Little insects and worms die and from their number form new islands in the sea. Who knows that the human race has not been created for perishing by one another's hands as the direct result of an extended acquaintance with the secrets of Nature? The reflections that Rider Haggard puts into the mouth of Alston in one of his beautiful novels, though gloomy, have much to recommend them for general adoption.

^{*} Themistocies ;-his tomb was on the shore at Salamis.

ONE of the attractions of the Paris Exhibition of 1900 is thus anticipated. At the last Show they had a Tower, at the next they will have a Pit -

"Instead of building a tower, Paris is now asked to dig a pit. Although M. Grousset desires primarily to solve a geological problem, his manner of doing so is by no means designed to repulse the Philisine mind. He wants to test practically the asserted existence of a central fire beneath the earth's crust, and he shows us in appropriately glowing language how eminently practicable, useful, and entertaining withal such an undertaking, as imagined by him, would certainly be found. According to M. Grousset, the existence of internal terrestrial fire is not absolutely certain. It is only probable, and if he should not meet it he will not be disappointed. He finds that in mines the temperature down to a certain depth is practically equal to the average temperature above ground. On descending beyond that point, however, the thermometer has been found to rise about one deg. Cen. per 100 feet. He desires to test the continuance of this thermal law at a much greater depth than has yet been reached. Should it he found to remain constant, boiling point would be reached about 9,000 or 10,000 feet below the surface, and 666 degs. Cent.—a point at which nearly all bodies would be in a state of fusion—some twelve and a half inflex down. Of course M. Grousset would not take Pairstans down as fit as the point of fusion, but only until tropical heat was reached. After that he would continue his experiments by means of borings. The plan of M. Grousset's Inferior comprises a series of vertical shafts, each 600 feet long, and terminating in a vast subterranean gallery. Each shaft would have a couple of his for the transfer of pressengers up and down from the various stages. The lowest 'cincle' would probably be at a depth of about 4,000 feet. Each gallery would be fitted up in keeping with its own special temperature. Arctic scenery would be found near the surface. This would be managed by means of artificial ince. In the lower latitudes tropical landscapes would, of course, delight the eye. The electric light would be managed by m

NOTES & LEADERETTES,

OUR OWN NEWS,

&

THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

-4144444-

THE treaty of peace between China and Japan has not yet been ratified. In China, there is a disposition to resist it. The state of affairs at Pekin are said to be critical. Some Chinese Generals are reported to be in favour of the continuance of war to the bitter end. With the ratification, the Chinese Army may give the Government trouble. Li-Hung-Chang has arrived at Tientsin from Simonosaki quite well. His reception at the Capital, we believe, will decide the question.

Japan obtains, under the treaty, peace under the most favourable conditions. China conforms to the Japanese customs tariff. Japan demands openings for trade in Chentu, Kufongfu, Pekin, Shaoking and Huchow. The Japanese Givernment denies the report current of an offensive and defensive alliance with China. It also declares that the commercial concessions obtained from China extend to all Powers by virtue of the favoured nation clause. The Chinese indemnity is payable within seven years, the rate of interest being five per cent. per annum, but no interest is chargeable if the indemnity is settled before the expiration of three years. A Chinese loan of three millions sterling has been concluded with a German syndicate.

France, Germany, and Russia remonstrated with Japan against the cession on the Chinese mainland. The Russian Government besides made a strong representation to the Japanese Minister at St. Petersburg. Russian official circles are irritated at the supposed tendency of Great Britain to stand aloof. Part of the German press approves of England's reserve and opposes Germany joining Russia and France. The Times says that the British Government has set a wise example in refusing to join France, Germany, and Russia in putting pressure on Japan. The proposed naval demonstration is an unprecedented and impolitic step. Any Power meddling with Japan must act on its own risk. In the opinion of the paper conditions agreed to by China are not directly menacing to British interests. British trade is not affected by the Japanese annexation of the Liaotung Peninsula, and the smaller commercial interests of France and Germany are equally untouched. Other English newspapers unanimously approve of England's abstention from the step taken by the three Powers and express surprise at the action of France, still more so of Germany. The papers are of opinion that both these Powers are simply pulling chestnuts out of the fire for Russia.

Japan has replied declaring that to yield to the remonstrances of the Powers Japan would risk an uprising of her people who are drunk with the successes which have been achieved in war by their country, and would never allow any concession of the terms of the treaty peace at the bidding of any Power.

The Mikado has issued a proclamation in which he highly approves of the agreement arrived at between Japan and China, and declares his ardent desire for peace. His object is to promote national prosperity. He hopes that the Japanese, avoiding self-contentedness, will now modestly strive to perfect the defences of the Empire. In conclusion, the Mikado enjoins his subjects to cultivate friendly relations with China as soon as the ratification of the peace is complete.

The Moscow Viedomosti, in a leading article, says that it is inevitable for Russia to present an ultimatum to Japan for refusing to allow that country any territory or influence on the Chinese mainland. The journal warns Great Britain that if she supports Japan in her opposition to Russian interests, her Indian Empire will be the sufferer. The work in connection with the Pauni agreement between the British and Russian Governments, which was the result of a cordial wish on the part of Russia to act in harmony with England, will be undone.

MR Peel, late Speaker of the House of Commons, has been created a Viscount. The House has voted him an annually of £4,000. Mr. Gully was formally installed as Speaker on April 23.

THE Queen has left the Riviera for Darmstadt, where her Majesty is the guest of the Grand Dake and Grand Duchess of Hesse.

MR. Fowler is convalencent. He took carriage exercise last week.

PRESIDENT Fame inspected the British cruiser Australia at Havre on April 19th. He was received with great enthusiasin on board, speeches of the most cordial character being exchanged.

THE British Channel Spittleron will shortly visit Kiel. Admiral Fitzroy has been instructed to invite the Russian. Admiral of the Baltic Squadron to pay a visit to Spithead during the Cowes Regatta.

OSCAR WILDE has been committed for trial on a charge of conspiring to commit acts of indecency. His associate Faylor, who is charged with the gravest offence, was also committed. But was refused to both.

THE Council of the Rissian Empire has approved the scheme of the Finance Minister to authorise commercial transactions on a gold basis. This is regarded as the first step towards a gold currency for Russia.

M. DELONCLE has returned from Egypt. He will raise the Egyptian question in the French Chamber of Diputies, as it is now time, he thinks, that England fulfilled her engagement to the Great Powers to evacuate Egypt. M. Deloncle considers that the sole solution of the Egyptian difficulty is the neutralisation of Egypt.

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all kinds. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Street, Westminster, London, S. W.

THE Pope has issued a letter addressed to the English people in which his Holiness asks for the prayers of Roman Catholics and men of goodwill of all communions in order to obtain the re-union of the Roman and Anglican Churches and Christendom generally.

NEWS from the Madagascar Coast state that the French have occupied the fortress of Ambodivohibe, near Diego Saurez.

CHOLERA among the Mecca pilgrims at the Kameran Lazaretto is increasing. Great mortality prevails.

THE Opium Commission's Report is signed by all the members of the Commission except Mi. Wilson, who drafted a minority report. The report is divided into two parts. The first deals with the opium traffic as affecting India and the producer; the second part treats of the traffic as affecting China and the consumer. The report observes that prohibition of the cultivation of poppy would inflict a heavy loss on the revenue of India. Moreover if the prohibition were extended to Protected Native States it would be unjustifiable and be resented by the Chiefs and people. China on her part has fully recognised the provisions of the existing treaties regarding the importation of opium. The Times, in reviewing the report, declares that the result is a great victory for the cause of commonseuse. The paper entirely supports the conclusions arrived at by the Commissioners. When will the Report be published in India?

PRESIDENT Cleveland's friends are organising a vigorous campaign against the silver coinage propag inda of the Democratic party

THE period of seven weeks allowed in the British ultimatum to Nicaragua having expired, the Government of that Republic replied proposing the appointment of a Commission to adjudicate the questions of indemnity for dimages to persons and property. There being again delay in the appointment of the Commission, two British waiships have sailed to Corinto to enforce the ultimatum. The British Naval Commander has allowed Nicaragua three days for the payment of the indemnity, faling which the Botish warships will blockade the Port Counto, and will land a force and occupy the INIFILIGENCE has been received from Cuba announcing the rout of a large rebel force under the powerful leader Maceo, who has succeeded in landing his strong filibustering expedition on the island. The Government troops fought with great bravery, the battle being a bloody one, and among the killed and wounded and prisoners were several prominent rebels.

A SEVERE shock of earthquake was felt, on April 15, in Italy and in the Southern districts of Austria. Several houses collapsed, and railways were blocked by falling debris. About twenty persons were killed.

THE Amir of Bokhara is sending a special Embassy to St. Petersburg to arrange for the evacuation of the ceded territory in the Pamirs. The Amir of Cabool makes no sign yet.

DURING artiflery practice at Woosing a forty-ton Armstrong gun burst and set fire to a powder magazine, which, exploding, killed fifty

WE believe it is not generally known how Sir Charles Elliott, returning from England on the expiry of his leave for six months, sought to draw the exchange compensation allowance and how he had at last to give in before the determined opposition of Mr. Finlay. There is a rule which lays down that leave on medical certificate for not more than six months may be granted to a Lieutenant-Governor. On resuming duties he is entitled to half his salary for the period of his absence. Sir Charles, 119, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

therefore, could not draw his pay in England. He came back to Bengal, and sought to draw the exchange compensation allowance. Our trusty Finance Minister, Sir James Westland, was disposed to befriend Sir Charles by giving orders for the passing of his ciaim. Mr. Finlay, however, opposed the endeavour. He had very good grounds for so doing. The matter had to be referred to the Viceroy in Council, Lord Eigin played the man by resisting the claim. It has now been definitely declared that " exchange compensation allowance is admissible to officers on leave in India in the same way as to officers on duty." Whatever the English of the rule,-for instead of an allowance being admissible to officers, officers are admissible to it,-there can be no question that the thanks of the country are due to Mr. Finlay for the resolution he showed in baffling this well supported attack on the improtected revenues of India.

WE hear with pleasure of efforts made in the suburbs for the improvement of bastis, particularly of those situated in the neighbourhood of Jute-mills. A Municipality could not more usefully bestir itself than in this direction, for it is these crowded insanitary places which are the hotbeds of cholera and small-pox. Nothing can be more satisfactory than when the officers of these factories themselves are found zealously co-operating with a Municipality in putting the dwellings of their working men into better order. We understand this is being done at Bara nagar, where there are some of the largest Jute-mills. in the country, the latest improvement being the laying of pipes of good drinking water into the bastis for the use of the working people. The Man acapality has effected some improvements of late by the opening out of 10 ads and otherwise, and this has encouraged Mr Thoms, Manager of one of the Mill s, to carry the work further. He has already carried the pipes into one of the bastis, and Mi. M' Pherson, the other Manager, is following suit. This supply of pure drinking with at no cost to the people, will be a great blessing to them, while with proper drains and connections it ought to enable the Municipality to supply dired up tanks with a plentiful stock of good water and to carry out other improvements. Messis, Thoms and M'Pherson are entitled to the best thanks of the community.

WHATEVER the faith of medical men in India in vaccination and revaccination as a preventive of smill-pox, the enlightened opinion in England is that vaccination, how many times repeated soever, is no protection against that fell disease. The chief argument against the utility of vaccination, it seems, is this, small-pox is a generic name for more than a dozen well defined and different diseases having a common appearance. Microscopic examination has proved that the outill traceable in these varieties are all different from one another in habits, forms, and nature. It does not stand to reason that lymph having one kind of bacilli, introduced into the human system, will protect it from those varieties of pox which have other kinds of bwills What was the kind of lymph with which Dr. Jenner made his expenments? Can any one answer this question? Vaccination and re-vaccination are, therefore, leaps in the dark. Without the beneficial effects being at all guaranteed of such introduction of a powerful poison into the human system, its evil effects are certain. In England, vaccination is not everywhere enforced under the law The manner in which certain mercantile firms of Calcutta have behaved towards their native assistants by compelling them to undergo re-vaccination, is certainly censurable. Fear of losing their bread obliged the poor men to submit to the medical fad of the hour. Panic frequently deprives Englishmen of reason. We know nothing of how pox is generated, or why one variety of it should manifest itself on Jack and another on Tom. Some medical enthusiast proclaims with a loud tongue that although nothing is known of the generation of the disease or the modus operands of its cure, yet a remedy has been found for its prevention. Bus! The very legislature forthwith places itself in the hands of that enthusiast. Is this science? Is this civilisation? Is this common sense? How many medical men in Calcutta have subjected themselves to this operation of their own recommendation?

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness. Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free .- Artificial Eur-drums and similar appliances entirely superseded Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBBRS,

WHEN, amid the rapid development of the situation, the expeditionary force was put on the field, nobody could think that that was the time for a dispassionate survey of the policy pursued towards Chitral by the British Indian Government. The representative of British India at Chitral was threatened to be cut off like another Cavagnari. The relief of Dr. Robertson and his small party became a matter of paramount necessity. Every other question receased before it. The British Government had for a series of years been regularly subsidizing the frontier tribes. Barbarous and ignorant peoples must have looked upon this as evidence of inherent weakness. The prestige of the British Government required to be upheld. Still more was it necessary to prevent the slaughter of brave men who had imperilled themselves at the call of duty-Whatever one's opinion, therefore, of the frontier policy pursued for years, no man with the slightest tincture of patriotism could think of raising a voice against the forward advance of British troops to Chitral. Two other British officers with at least their personal escort were pusoners in the hands of another. Chief to whose action the peril of Dr. Robertson was largely ascribable. To rescue the captives and save the small British garrison at Chitral from immediate extermination were objects whose accomplishment could not be delayed. Both the officers and the troops despatched on the expedition have behaved admirably. The commissariat too has shown its mettle. Every opposition has been overcome. Height after height and pass after pass have witnessed the valour of our troops. Setting his captives free, Umra Khan has abandoned the scene and is now a prisoner awaiting the pleasure of the Ameer. Shere Afzal, it is true, had endeavoured to give further trouble on his own account, but the brilliant advance of Colonel Kelly and General Gatacre has paralysed his movements. Meanwhile, Dr. Robertson himself was not mactive. Shut up in Chitral, he dared the attack of all corners. The sight is not new of a handful of British soldiers defending with wonderful gallantry some miserable fort for days together, amid all sorts of hardships, against tremendous odds. It could not be expected that Di Robertson would sustain no loss while maintaining himself thus-For all his losses, however, British pluck and gallantiv and the British contempt for danger have been abundantly proved by him. At a time when others would have trembled for their own safety, Dr. Robertson had the courage to even effect a revolution in Chitral by deposing and putting under arrest the ruling Mehter Amir-ul-Mulk and setting up another named Shuji-ul-Mulk. Of course, Dr. Robertsen has done nothing towards pledging the British Government of India to this or that line of policy, for all his measures have been provisional and temporary. For a detailed account of the campaign we would refer our readers to the Despatch of General Low to the Government of India published elsewhere. There can be no doubt that from a military point of view the subsequent action of the expeditionary force has been quite in keeping with the promptitude with which it was put on the field. There will be no difference of opinion on this. The policy, however, that led to Dr. Robertson's imperilling himself in the first instance will, we are sure, divide public opinion.

WE read :--

"Nine months for nine cocoanuts,—Yesterd iy (April 26) at the Court of Mr. Abdus Silain, Deputy Magistrate of Howrah, Uma Charan Mullick, an incorrigible thief, was no proof of previous conviction sentenced to nine months' rigorous imprisonment for stealing nine cocoanuts from a girden in the Howiah District."

A month each for a cocoanut not worth more than two pice !

Again :—

Again:—
"At the second Criminal Sessions, Mr Justice Norris, in pssing sentence on Abdus Sobhan, said that the offence for which he had been commuted was a very trix done. Two men were wrangling in the steet, and one of them dropped a wrapper, which the presoner picked to and ran away with. The offence was such a paltry one that his lord-hip could not conceive how the Magistrate had comitted the man to the sessions. The sentence of the Court would be that the accused be rigorously imprisoned for three months."

We also read that the prisoner was committed for house-breaking by night in order to commit theft in a building, and dishonestly receiving tolen property. The wrapper was much more valuable than the nine cocoanuts, and while Abdool the Magistrate sentenced his prisoner to nine months, Abdool the pusoner received only three months from Justice Norris.

A CORRESPONDENT writes from Simla under date the 22nd April :-

"We had three tremendous thunder-storms en route in the Hills: but now the weather is lovely. Simila looks bright indeed, bathed in sunshine with the glorious snow showing in so marked a contrast to the wretched attempt at architecture scattered over the mountain side on the near foreground. The air is such as Calcutta enjoys for only a few fleeting days in January. It raises my bile, however, to think of the gig once dereliction of duty exhibited by those who bask in such a climite while drawing pay and enjoying leave on a scale fixed as a compensation for toil in the plains."

It is no Baboo that speaks.

PREPARATIONS are making for election of members to the Bengal Legislative Council. Raja Surja Kaut Acharjee of Mymensing has offered himself a candidate for the Ducca Division. Dr. Rash Behary Ghosh has been asked to stand for the Burdwan Division. It is well that he has agreed. He would be a proper representative of the Calcutta University. List time the Fellows were alive to their responsibility. But one election seems to have been enough to make them indifferent to the matter and allow things to take their own course. Another candidate has appeared for the Burdwan Division in Babu Shib Narayan Mookerjee, a grandson of Babu Joy Kissen Mookerjee, of Uttarpara. Babu Shib Narayan's printed manifesto will, we are sure, settle his eligibility.

Ar the last meeting of the Calcutta Corporation, the Health Officer made the following answers to several questions on the small-pox epidemic which still rages.—

epidemic which still rages.—

"In the capital of India the system of vaccination is to-day in much the same condition as the system of inoculation was in some parts of Europe nearly two hundred years ago, when old women used to perform the operation. I would recommend that the present vaccinators be replaced by Civil hospital assistants, who should first have a special training in vaccination and pass successfully an examination upon it. All public vaccinators in Eugland have to do this. As a young medical man I had to pass a special examination, in vaccination, before I was permitted to hold the office of public vaccinator to the town of Dover. I mention this to show the importance attached to a proper system of vaccination. In India the curious custom has grown inp, for the majority of Indian medical practitioners, to thus it beneath their dignity to vaccinate. It is a feeling which is not entertained elsewhere. On the contrary, medical men of a family take a pinde in vaccinating those under their cive thoroughly, and I think if medical men were appointed as vaccinators, in the way I have suggested, the feeling now prevalent among Indian medical men, that vaccination is an unimportant and rather menial work, requires improved, would gradually disappear, and with it vaccination would become more popular among the people. The organization for the supply of lymph, in neover, requires improvement. Arm to arm vaccination having practically gradually disappear, and while traccination having practically gradually disappear, and with it vaccination, and one of the first essentials is the supply of abetter class of animals. The calves now supplied are insertable creatures and hardly fit subjects for the cultivition of good lymph.

"English of course, again means extra expense."

He admits what we have contended that

"The hospital statistics are no index of the prevalence of the disease in the town. All Europe us and in 5t Eurasians go voluntarily to hospital, whereas Natives only go when compelled. One week when there were 17 deaths in the hospital, there were 216 in the town."

Regarding the prevalence of the disease among Europeans and Eurasians and their willingness to be vaccinited, Dr. Simpson says .—

"Among the Europeans, one of the first deaths in the hospital was that of a jatient who had never been vaccinited, and from the returns many possession, nearly 40 per cent. of Europeans and Eurasians, admitted into hospital, had never been vaccinated in their lives, and there is only a single case recorded which had been re-vaccinated. This re-vaccination, however, unfortunately, had been unsuccessful, and wis done in England. In a large number of Eurasian houses where small-pox had broken out, re-vaccination was refused."

Dr. Sumpson is a believer in vaccination and wants more powers to inflict it. To other questions he replied :-

on Without powers of compulsory removal, a large isolation hospital would be empty. I had the honour of being the Similary Adviser to the Committee that framed the present Monocoal Act, and niged upon them the importance of a compulsory clause, but I could get the Committee to go no further than insert a clause that under certain conditions males might be removed to hospital. It is to be hoped that one of the frames of the removed to hospital. It is to be hoped that one of the frames of the present epidemic with be the graining of compulsory powers in this respect, and then it will be time enough to bring forward proposals regarding an isolation hospital. Calcutta is, however, not totally without isolation accommodation. As matters now stand, the Campbell Hospital, which belonged to the Justices of the Peace for a short time and which was restrainferred by them to the Government with a contribution of Rs. 30,000 annually, performs, in part, the functions of an isolation hospital, several large buildings being set apart for cholera and singlipox, and for several years, past I have hid the satisfaction of seeing established at the General Hospital and the Medical College, small isolation hospitals for cholera and dipptheria. That a large central isolation hospitals for cholera and dipptheria. That a large central isolation hospitals for cholera and dipptheria. That a large central isolation hospitals for cholera can be no doubt, but for it to be useful the necessary powers of compulsory removal must first be obtained. It will, however, be a very costly undertaking."

He gave the history of the prosecution of the wisberman sentenced by the Chief Magistrate to one month's rigorous imprisonment for starching and froning clothes in the room in which his wife layill with small-pox.

"Matha Dhoby was warned by one of the Medical Inspectors.

and after this notice, the Medical Inspector visited the premises four or five times and warned the immates of the house of the consequences which the dhoby was incurring. He was given the choice to remove his wife to hospital or even to another house."

They are a kind people. Having lodged the man in jail, they have started a subscription for the support of his family. We have a Vaccination law in Bengal, but the washerman was not punished under it. The aid of the general Penal Code was invoked to allay the panic of the hour. The Bengal Vaccination Act makes vaccination compulsory and no more. The Municipal Act empowers only the removal of any male person suffering from any dangerous, epidemic, endemic, or infectious disease, who is, in the opinion of the Health Officer, without proper lodging or accommodation. Failing to remove the wife, the husband was punished for "unlawfully or negligently doing an act which was, and which he knew or had reason to believe to be, likely to spread the infection of any disease dangerous to life." What became of the clothing for ironing which the washerm in was sent to jul? Were the articles disinfected and returned to their owners, or were they destroyed? We are not sure that the section could be lawfully applied in the present case. Mere ironing could not be punished. We doubt whether allowing the clothing to continue in alhouse with a small-pox patient could be visited with the penalty of the section, namely, imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both. The washerman was not, according to the reply of the Health Officer, given the choice to remove the articles to another house. He was ordered to remove his wife. And because he would not remove her, he was sent to jail. The Municipal law, section 322, Act II., B. C., of 1888, lays down.-" The Commissioners may, at any time, after giving such notice of their intention as shall, under the circumstances, appear to them to be reasonable, enter and inspect any place in which any dangerous disease is reputed or suspected to exist, and take measures as they shall think fit to prevent, the spie id of the said disease beyond such place," Under this power, the Health Officer could, we think, justly remove the articles of clothing to be detained or disinfected. Section 325, which the Health Officer hunself quotes later on, expressly empowers the Commissioners to cause any building or part of a building or any article therein to be cleansed or disinfected.

Regarding disposal of infected articles, Dr. Simpson said --

"In those cases where infected articles are not destroyed and in which "In those cases where infected articles are not destroyed and in which immigation is considered insufficient, the articles are sent by the Medical Inspector to the steam disinfector belonging to the Municipality. The Medical Inspector carries out the disinfection by means of cooless made over to him specially for the purpose by the Superintendent of the town. In those cases where disinfection is refused, notices are served under section 325 of the Municipal Act, requiring the parties to carry out the disinfection within twenty-four hours, to the satisfaction of the Medical Inspectors, and on the back of the notice are printed rules for disinfection. The general effect of this notice is for the parties to ask the Medical Inspector to arrange the disinfection."

THE executive authorities at Nuddea are going on as jauntily as ever Our readers know on what flimsy pretext the Magistrate, Mr. Garret, set at naught the orders of the High Court which had directed, on the 1st of May 1894, that the rayyets in possession should not be suffered to be ousted in consequence of the orders of the Deputy Magistrate, dated the 31st of January 1894, under section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The seventy-seven rayyets, who ought to have been maintained in possession as against both the Chetlangis and the Natudah Pal Chowdhuries, were, however, not allowed to approach their lands on the extraordinary ground that Mr. Garret had not a sufficient establishment of D-puties through which he could identify which land was held by which of them. From the 12th of May 1894, the date when the order of the High Courut was communicated to him, to April 1895, is almost a year. One whole year, however, is a very small period to a Magistrate like Mr. Garret for disposing off seventyseven claims to possession of land. Not that Mr. Gariet ever made the attempt himself or even directed any of his Deputies to do it. But knowing that there would be such an unprecedented number of cases as seventy-seven to dispose of and hampered with an estabhishment of Deputies no way smaller than elsewhere, this young Qve Hye has actually abstained from interfering. A very small measure of common sense, of even ordinary tact, which we have a right to expect from Mr. Garret, however tender his age, could have brought about peace without the posting of an additional Constability whose costs are realised from the ousted rayyers but who are engaged in A warning notice was also served under section 269 of the I. P. Code, Commissioner having been appealed to by the rayyets against the oppressions committed in the name of the law, chose to read the memorial as one complaining only of the manner of assessing the Police dues. Finding themselves the indulged masters of the situation, the Nuddea Magistracy have been acting in a way the like of which we have not seen for many years in even the wildest. Indian district.

> A Deputy has lately been transferred to that District whose relations with Bibu Naffer Chandra Pal Chowdhury are believed to be intimate. Both are members and office-bearers of a Society started with the questionable object of depriving of its glory the place that is now regarded by the generality of the Vaishnavas as the birthplace of Chaitanya and conferring it on a thinly peopled Mussalman village on the other side of the river. Some of Babu Naffar Chandra's men filed complaints, under various sections of the Penal Code, against two of the seventy-seven rayyets who had cut some crops growing on chur Paninala. The accused asserted that the lands were theirs, the Deputy Magistrate's order ousting them therefrom having been set aside by the High Court. The Deputy found that the crops had been sown by others. The accused urged that even if sown by others, the crops must be held to belong to them as they grew on lands from which they had never been legally evicted. The experienced Deputy had no ear to lend to such a plea. His chief himself had said that the question could not, with the present establishment at Nuddea, be settled as to which lands had really been held by which rayyet of Paninala, and as this was an administrative problem practically incapable of solution at Nuddea, the best course would be to allow Babu Naffar Chandra to take possession of all the lands on the chur and to call down a special Constabulary to protect that weak helpless individual against the very powerful confederacy of seventy-se ven starving ploughmen who must, besides, pay for that Constabiliary. Unable to fly into the face of his chief, the Deputy has sentenced the accused to imprisonment, having taken judicial cognisance of the fact that if fined, the fines would be paid by the Chetlangis, the opponents of Babu Nuffar Chandra and so would not it all touch the convicted. The latter have moved the High Court which has ordered bail. The cases will come on for disposal very soon. Meanwhile, may we ask who is responsible for the posting and transfers of Deputy Magistrates? When this particular Deputy was transferred to Nuddea, was the Chief Secretary of the Bengal Government ignorant of the intimate relations of that officer not only with Babu Nuffar Chandra, one of the largest Zemindars of the place, but with many others living in that district? Was the fact known that Nuddea is his domicile? Was it known that the endeavour to discredit tradition and establish a new place of pilgiimage on the other side of the river as the time site of Chaitanya's birth place, is calculated to inflict pecuniary injury on some and bring an accession of wealth to others among those that would be subjected to his jurisdiction?

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, April 27, 1895 SIR LEPEL GRIFFIN ON INDIA.

SIR Lepel Griffin's lecture on "India in 1895," read before the East India Association, has naturally excited much attention. Sir Lepel is an Indian Civilian who has seen much and varied service, and is an able officer, with strong convictions which he is fond of expressing in strong language and with a decision which often borders on dogmatism. His opinions may be taken as fairly representing the views of the Official class in this country. When we have said this, we have sufficiently indicated how they must be, at some points, divergent from opinions which are now making progress amongst a class of politicans more sympathetic towards the aspirations of our advanced countrymen. Sir Lepel's views are encrusted with the traditions and prejudices of the ruling caste to which he belongs. He is naturally fond of the paternal despotism which he has administered so long, while the new order of things that is rising in Bengal and other advinced Provinces seems strange and of evil protecting the possession of the Pal Chowhuries. The Divisional portent to one who has been accustomed to the different atmosphere of the Punjab. That he has, therefore, no patience with the pretensions of the new school of politicians who demand representative government and simultaneous examinations, will go without saying; while, as to the Press, he would probably be very glad if he could curb it with an iron censorship.

While it is impossible for us to agree with the lecturer in some of his opinions, at any rate without considerable reservations, we cannot but admire the freedom with which he speaks on the Cotton duties and the Opium Commisson. Sir Lepel Griffin rejoices over the re-imposition of those duties by the Government of India, and the exemption of the Indian treasury from the whole of the Opium Commission charges. Referring to the recent debate in the House of Commons on the Cotton duties, Mr. Fowler is justly applauded for the statesmanship he showed by his decision that India is not to be tossed lightly on the wave of English party politics. On the opium duty Sir Lepel spoke with great practical knowledge and wisdom. His observations will, no doubt, be read with interest in this country:—

"It is a remarkable thing that at the very moment that the Indian Government is reduced to great financial distress, a certain number of Englishmen, misled by a generous sentiment and the national love of meddling, should be endeavouring to destroy the revenue from Opinin, which is, perhaps, the most satisfactory item of the Indian Budger It nas all the characteristics of an ideal revenue. this imposed on a luxury, and is paid in great part by foreign consumers, the Chinese But whether consumed in India, by Sikhs and Rajputs, or in China, it is equally an object of dis-like to a large body of respectable and pious people in this country, who think that it is immorel for the Government to hold a monopoly and gain a large slice of its revenue by the growth and sale of this and gain a large size of its revenue by the growth and sale of this wicked and pernicious drug. I can only say here the, while in charge of Central In Ita, I wis in charge of the whole Opium revenue of the Gov rument derived from Native States, and two or three millions sterling of this Opium money passed through my hand, every year. It was my necessary duty to be intimately famihar with the growth, manufacture, use and abuse of opium, and my har with the growth, manufacture, use and abuse of opinin, and my inviction is that it would be a foolish and wicked thing to interfere with its consumption. As Magistrate or Judge I have never entenced a man for a crime committed under the influence of Opinin. And although Opinin in excess is bad, as brandy or tea in excess is bad, it is not taken to excess in India; while in China, where the poppy is everywhere grown, and Opium generally used, the Indian drug is merely the luxury of the rich as champagne in Enghand. If the Anti-Optum Society were to endeavour to make the manufacture of beer in England and the importation of French wines penal off-nees, they would be doing a far more sensible and honest thing than by attacking the Opium trade; for the evil effects of alcohol, in murder, violence, and prostitution are to be seen on every ide.

But even if the use of Opium were injurious, instead of being innocuous or beneficial, what right have we to interfere? Are we, English, so virtuous that we must insist upon the whole world conforming to our ethical code? The Indians enjoyed a high civilization thousands of years before the brith of the Anti Opium. Society, and it is a gross impertinence to interfere with the social usages of a people who have as absolute a right to take opium as we have to enjoy tea and tobacco. A tardy justice has removed the cost of the Opium Commission from the Indian treasury to the English Exhequer, and this is so far an advantage that the House af Commons will be less likely in future to adopt silly proposals, the cost of which will fall on English tax-pavers. But it is still hard that you and I should have to pay for this monstrous Commission. There is a pleasant law in India under which people are fined for bringing wanton or vexatious charges; and if these philanthropists were compelled to pay for their vicarious virtue out of their own pockets a great public gain would be secured."

The case for opium could not be put better within as short a compass for the apprehension of an English audience. Not only is opium not taken to excess, but it is incapable of being taken to excess. A dose of opium does not create, like a dose of brandy, a hankering for speedy repetition. Hence there cannot be orgies with opium as with brandy, and other intoxicating liquors patronised in Europe in countries. The philanthropy of Except 11 dl is forquently misdirected. Familiarity blinds it to those social evils of even gigantic proportions which flourish before its eyes. Perhaps, its enthusiasm requires to be fed by considerations of singularity and remoteness in respect of objects. A crusade against alcohol waged on English ground would be a very tame affair. Fortanately, the truth has come out and India has been saved. Sir Lepel Griffin has done real service by repeating the principal considerations on behalf of a source of revenue which India can ill afford to abandon at any time.

The cry for representative institutions that has gone forth from the Congress has been too much for Sir Lepel. India, he says, wants to be governed, and does not desire representative institutions, and is not fit for them. The people have never yet shown any sympathy with that madness known as representative institutions. Indeed, Sir Lepel goes further and has doubts whether the virtue of representative institutions is not already departing even in England and America. As to France, these never had any virtue there at all. In Sir Lepel Griffin's eyes they seem to be everywhere failing in Europe. He prays, therefore, that they may not be forced on Asia with the present experience of their results. Sir Lepel is, indeed, a thorough advocate of despotism. His concluding words on this topic are-"Our Indian fellow subjects ask to be governed, justly and wise ly, but still to be governed; and if the reins of power slip from the nerveless fingers of her rulers. there are others who will quickly pick them up and invite us to step down from the chariot" In other words, Sir Lepel Griffin maintains that the people of India wish to be governed by England and, therefore, their wish should be gratified by England governing them with a strong hand, for if England's government be weak other nations will appear in the scene and send England out bag and baggage. Strong Government, Sir Lepel holds, consists in maintaining the present system of administration, without granting the people any sort of voice in their own affairs. Views such as these have able advocates, it is true, but it is equally true that they are not wholly correct. The character of British rule in India has been progressive. At first it was feared that if the people of India were educated, they would be disposed to throw off England's rule. The boon of education, however, could not be withheld. Schools and Colleges rose rapidly in every part of the country and did their work. British administra-tion, however, has outlived the inauguration of its educational policy. The cry now of the advanced sections of the people is for a larger share of power in the government of their own country. Sir Lepel Griffin and politicians of his class will oppose that cry as long as they will live. For all that, there will be progress and not retrogression. The people will bave a larger share of power. Whether that is to be accomplished by an expansion of the Provincial and the Supreme Legislative Councils to an extent that is incapable of being foreseen at present, or by any other means, one need not care. But the clock of progress is incapable of being permanently put back.

THE UNDER-DEITIES OF OLYMPUS

AND

THEIR PROTEGES.

If the secret history were known of the rise, in the uncovenanted rvice of particular Europeans distinguished by no ment that one core, a correct idea could be formed of how some of our heads" of a certain class. Just now, in one of the large controlling Military Accounts establishments, there is an uncovenanted European assistant who has recently been made Superintendent of a particular branch. As such he exercises considerable power for good or evil over hundreds of native clerks placed under him. Some years back he received a small appointment on a pay of Rs. 80 rising to Rs. 100. Though not possessed of any merit, yet an opportunity having soon presented itself, he was promoted to a post with pay from Rs. 110 to 180. Some time after and before, in fact, he had reached the maximum of his grade, a new official superior, holding the rank of Major, at once promoted him to a grade higher than the next, with pay rising from Rs. 300 to 400. The Major went away. His successor, a Colonel, a man with keen sense of responsibility, seeing the worthlessness of the Major's protégé, reduced his pay to Rs. 200 to 280. A little while after, the exigencies of the service led to his transfer to another branch where the qualification necessary was ability to draft ordinary official letters. The man was at once found out, and his Chief, the same Colonel who had degraded him, re-transferred him to his former post with directions to a native assistant to watch him closely. The few drafts he had to make were found by the gentleman under whose supervision he was placed to be always worthless. These had to be substituted by drafts entirely new, as no measure of alterations and additions could bring them up to the ordinary standard of official correspondence. Seeing that this could not go on for any length of time, he induced the native assistant to make over the latter's drafts to him so that he might copy them out in his own hand and save appearances as much as possible. Meanwhile, having lived beyond his means and incurred more debts than he could ever hope to re-pay, he applied to the High Court for a thorough white wash. The High Court, without granting his prayer, passed an order protecting him from arrest and for a rateable distribution of half his pay among his numerous creditors. As regards the other half, a considerable portion of it had to be given to his dear wife whose fancy, about living separate from her husband in consequence of his tender treatment of her, had previously been indulged by an order of the Civil Court. Be that as it might, a second Major took charge of the Office and very soon promoted him to a grade beginning with Rs. 400. Not content with this, the Major has made him a Superintendent, superseding the just claims of another European clerk whose abilities are unquestionable but who has not any of those questionable qualifications that can at once compel an official superior to take an extraordinary interest in him, and who accordingly had been drawing a pay of only Rs, 400 although the period of his service was nearly 32 years. Moved by this act of injustice, the latter has taken furlough for two years, more with the intention of permanently retiring than of coming back to India.

As Superintendent, the gentleman to whom we refer has lately been instrumental in inducing his official superior, a third Major, to pass a circular order on the subject of the absence of clerks from duty through illness or otherwise. Before we reproduce that circular, it would be better to quote an earlier one issued at the height of the panic caused by the small-pox epidemic raging in the town. The united wisdom of the Major and his Superintendent will not then require comment. First read the following :---

"All members of the establishment who have infectious diseases in their households are warned to report the matter in order that such measures as may be necessary may be taken to prevent their bringing the infection to office. If it is discovered that this has not been done, the person endangering others in the office by such concealment will be severely punished.

Whenever the occurrence of any infectious disease is reported, a certificate from a qualified medical practitioner should accompany the report, stating on what date the infectious stage is likely to be reached and another certificate should be submitted when all danger of infection is passed.

The absence during the two stages will be treated as casual leave, every two days of absence reckoning as one day's casual leave.

large ministerial establishments are managed by "responsible If the maximum of 15 days be exceeded by this calculation, the case should be submitted for special orders.

Officers in charge of the several branches of this office will use their discretion in applying the above rules.

Considering the circumstances under which these orders were issued, no one can find fault with them. Infection is carried from house to house, or person to person, by myriads of ways unknown to science. For all that, the modus operands of its travel, when intelligible, should be provided against. It should be noted that sufficient discretion is given to officers in charge of the several branches in applying the rules. Compare now the above with the following stringent regulations applying, it should be remembered, not to half-a-dozen, or even a dozen or dozens of clerks but to men by hundreds whose social position, judged by the standard of their own country, is much higher than either the Major's or his favoured Superintendent's in European society in even India where rules are laxer than at home. These rules will speak for themselves.

"In consequence of the inconvenience caused to the work of the office by the large percentage of absences, the following rules will have effect from to-morrow the 11th instant.

1. Every assistant in the branch, absent on account of ill health, must, on the 3rd day of absence, furnish a medical certificate whether he rejoin on that day or not.

Should the Examiner see fit, in special cases the assistants will be required to obtain the counter-signature of a Presidency of Civil Surgeon to the certificate.

3. On return to duty on any day subsequent to the 3rd day of absence, assistants will produce a further medical certificate concerning their absence beyond that date.

The description of leave will be determined by the Examiner on the assistant rejoining, but except in exceptional circumstances nothing more than half pay will be given.

5. Inc cases of men who have been absent, without previously obtaining lety, for more than one day a month during the year, will be specially dealt with, and such men must be prepared to produce a medical certificate even tor one day's absence.

6. No pay will be granted to any assistant absent without leave previously obtained, except on the ground of his own illness and he will further be hable to be dealt with for absence without leave.

These orders, it must be held, apply to assistants who catch illness themselves as well as those in whose families infectious diseases break out. A more stringent circular could not be issued for regulating the conduct of the native servants of Government. The majority of assistants do not, as a rule, call in any medical aid on the third day of illness. In case of small-pox, again, the eruptions do not appear till the fourth or fifth or even a later day. During an epidemic of pox, it is folly to call in medical assistance on the third day. Supposing a man ultimately gets the pox, for him to obtain a medical certificate on the third day, especially if he has no relatives or friends to look after him, is practically impossible. The provision about the counter-signature of certificates by a Presidency or Civil Surgeon practically amounts to the imposition of a mulct measured by the fee, not less than Rs. 16, demandable by such officer, it being well-known that the Civil Surgeon never examines a person without a fee unless the latter is sent to him by the head of a department. Besides, conscientious Civil Surgeons cannot countersign certificates in the majority of cases. Whatever their medical skill, how can they take upon themselves to state that a person whom they have not seen during the continuance of an illness was ill of this or that disease? In cases of pox, regular practitioners are seldom called in or they refuse to attend. Western medical science, whatever the measure of its pretensions, is powerless to deal with malignant cases of pox. The lower class of native practitioners, called Tikadars, however, are seen to very often treat almost every such case with success. Supposing such a case to occur in the family of a native assistant, a Tikadar's certificate is all that the assistant can produce. Will the Civil Surgeon countersign such a certificate? The entire circular is the outcome of absurd redtapeism. It seems to be a counterblast against the first circular. Men made miserable by disease are sought to be made more miserable still by the action of their office heads. No discretion is allowed to heads of branches, These orders cannot be withdrawn too soon.

CHITRAL

SIR R. LOW'S DESPATCH.

The despatch of Major-General Sir R. C. Low, K. C. B., commanding the Chitral Relief Force is as follows :---

I have the honour to make the following report on the action of 3rd April, when the Malakand Pass was captured by the troops under my command.

As previously explained by telegram, I learnt on the 1st of April that all three passes into Swai, viz., the Malakand, the Shahkot, and the Morah passes, were held by the enemy, and that the majority of them occupied the Shahkot and Morah passes.

At that time, the disposition of the troops of this force was so arranged as to attack the Malakand and the Shahkot Passes simultaneously on the morning of the 3rd of April. The 1st Brigade was then at Lundkhwar on the road to the Shahkot Pass. The 2nd and 37d Brigades were at Jalala on the road to the Malakand Pass.

Consequent on the above information, I determined to deceive the enemy as to my intention by advancing cavalry to Pali on the Shahkot road on the 2nd of April. The idea that that pass would certainly be attacked was maintained, but I directed the 1st Brigade to join me at Darghai opposite the Malakand Pass on the morning of the 2nd of April, and hoped by a forced march on the night of the 1st of April to reach Darghai by 8 a.m., and carry the pass on the 2nd of April with the three brigades.

A storm of wind and rain, however, raged all through the night of the 1st, and at midnight I was obliged to abandon my intention of a night march, it being an impossibility for the men to load up the transport in such darkness, rain, and mud. All that could be done, therefore, was to start at day-break, and collect the three brigades at Durghai on the 2nd, and make the attack on the 3rd of April.

I may note here that, so far as deceiving the enemy as to my intention of attacking only one pass, the plan was completely successful, though the attack took place a day later than I had hoped for. The enemy had not sufficient time to get across the hills and help their contrades on the Malakand Pass between the evening of the and of April, when they must have fathomed the plan, to the morning of the 3rd, when the attack took place.

The attack took place on the morning of the 3rd with the 2nd and 1st Brigades It was my intention to use the 2nd Brigade only, the 1st being in year with its mule transport ready to cross the pass as soon as captured, and march on the Swat river; but as will be seen, I found the pass 50's roughy held, and so obstinately detended, that to gain the victory I had to utilize both brigades, and at the final moment I had only one regiment in reserve, the other three regiments of the 1st Brigide as well as all four regiments of the 2nd Brigade being engaged in the attack.

Starting from Datghai, the pass at first goes through a gradually narrowing valley to the north for about two miles, then the north east for a mile and-a-half, where the high hills on the west dtop precipitately into the pass. On reaching the bend of the pass to the north east, it was apparent that the pass was strongly held on the west side, the whole range being lined by men with flag, and banners

At this point the 4th Sikhs were sent to occupy a spur which jutted outsfrom the range to the west and they had to remain there, covering the advance, for the day.

The Guides Infantry were directed to ascend the highest point of the western hill, and after gaining the summit, to turd along the crest, and enfilade the position of the enemy which evidently extended from the highest point to the end of the range, and where, as already noted, the hill precipitately desends into the pass. Guides Infantry had a most arduous task to perform; they had to ascend the highest peak of the range, about 1,500 feet high, and attack and capture several Sanger full of the enemy, which were held by riflemen and crowds throwing rocks and stones down, and their advance was necessarily gradual.

Meanwhile, as the force advanced, the position of the enemy was disclosed. They occupied the whole of the crest of the western hill with numerous Sangas down the sides of the hill, each commanding the one below it, and their main strength was on the northern end of the hill where it precipitately descended into the valley. Three hills on the eastern side of the pass were not held by the enemy till after the point where the western hill dropped into the valley. Full advantage was taken of this fact.

There were three mountain batteries with the troops in action, namely, Nos. 3 and 8 Mountain Batteries, Royal Artillery, and No. 4 (Derajat) Mountain Battery, of four guns, in all 16 guns; and these took ap position after position on the eastern slope of the valley, and most successfully prevented any concentration of the enemy when the infantry advance was ordered.

It soon became apparent that if the assault was delayed till the position was turned by the Guides that the action would be unduly delayed and the Guides themselves seriously out-numbered

At this time I also ascertain that, although the pass appeared to lie in the valley itself and to round the corner of the western hill where it dropped into the valley, yet that beyond this point there was no path nor roadway whatever, the valley being blocked with huge rocks and boulders, and that the crossing of the pass lay to the left over the heights to our left, and which was so strongly held by the enemy. Action was at once therefore taken to carry held by the enemy. Action was at once therefore taken to carry the hill to the left, which from this point was about 1,000 feet

The Gordon Highlanders were directed up the crest of the ern hill from the point where it touched the valley. The King's Own Scottish Borderers were directed up the centre spur. 60th Rifles were directed up the slopes from futher back in the line, while the Bedfordshire Regiment and 37th Dogras pushed on, rounded the point from which the Gordon Highlanders commenced the ascent, and turning to the left, ascended the hill from the northern side, the 15th Sikhs being held in reserve

As the infantry ascended it was seen how well the defence of the hill had been organized. The Gordon Highlanders and King's Own Scottish Borderers, ascending as they did on a direct attack. met the greatest resistance and suffered most. Sanga after Sanga was obstinately held, each Sanga as it was rushed coming at once under the fire of the one above it; and here I may note the admirable service done by the artillery and Maxim guns; several at tempts were made by the enemy to concentrate from above the whole lower Sangas and positions, but all such attempts were frustrated. by the admirable practice as the mountain batteries and Maxim guns over the heads of our advancing infantis, although at several points the Sanzar were only carried by hand-to-hand fighting. The enemy were gradually driven from position to position, and eventual ly fled down the other slopes of the western hill as the head of the attacking columns reached the top, when the pass was captured and fighting over, though they were pushed down the other side as soon as the men got together.

The action was begun at 8-30 A. M. and concluded at 2 P. M.

The total numbers of enemy are variously reported, but the actual numbers on the pass were probably about 10,000 to 12,000 men some 3,000 armed, and the rest using rocks and stones.

The enemy's loss was said by themselves to be about 500, and road down the other side was covered with signs of numbers of wounded men having been carried away. Our loss 11 men killed, eight officers and 39 men wounded.

The 1st Brigade remained at the top of the pass, holling it, while the mules of the brigade passed up but the path was so bad that only a few mules reached the top that night.

HIGH COURT: CRIMINAL JURISDICTION TWO IMPORTANT POINTS OF LAW

The Hon. Sir W. Comer Petheram, Chief Justice, and the Hon Mr Justice Beverley, lately heard the case of Durbari Mandu, petitioner, to. Jagoo Lal, opposite party, and delivered the follow judgment. The ficts out of which this rule arises as follow .-- One Jagoo Lal on behalf of Raja Harballah Naram Singh applied in the year 1893 to the Munsif of Madhipura, for sanction to prosecute the petitioner, Darbari Mandai, for perjury and for-gery, alleged to have been committed by him in a suit tried by the Munsif in the previous year. Sanction was at first refused, but up Munist in the previous year. Sanction was at first refused, bit upon appeal to the higher authorities a further enquiry was ordered, and sanction was ultimately granted by the Munist's successor on the 10th March, 1894; against this order an appeal was preferred both to the District Judge and to this Court, but the order was affirmed, it being held by this Court, but that, notwithstanding his original refusal, the Munist had jurisdiction to grant sanction subsequently upon fresh materials. sequently upon fresh materials.

The order of this Court was dated 16th August 1894, and on the 28th September Jagoo Lal instituted proceedings before the Deputy Magistrate of Madhipura. The petitioner, Durbarn Mandar, was accordingly artested, but was discharged on October 30th, on the ground that when the proceedings were instituted (28th September) more than six months had clasped since the date the sanction (10th March).
Thereupon, on the 28th November, Jagoo Lal applied to the successor of the Munsil who had granted the sanction of 10th March for a fresh sanction to prosecute, and fresh sanction was granted on 1st December. The Deputy Magistrate, however, who opinion that he could not make further enquiry into the matter unless he was ordered to do so by the District Magistrate, and he accordingly made a reference to that officer on the 15th December

On the 22nd December the District Magistrate made the follow ing order:---"I think it very doubtful that Section 195 can be evaded by the grant of a fresh sanction. If this was permissable, would disappear." Jagoo Lal then made an application to the would disappear." Jagoo Lal then made an application to the Sessions Judge who, on the 15th February 1895, directed the District Magistrate by himself or by some other Magistrate to The present ril was then obtained from this Court to show cause why both the order of the Munsil granting fresh sanction on 1st December, 1894, and the order of the Sessions Julge of Pebruary 15, 1895, directing further enquiry into the charges of perjury and forgery should not be set aside.

It is contended in the first place that the Sessions Judge had no jurisdiction to over-ride the District Magistrate's order made under Section 437 of the Code, and in the second place that under the Section 195 it was not competent by the Munsif to grant a fresh sanction to prosecute after the first sanction had ceased to operate by effluxion of time.

The first point was taken before the Sessions Judge, but that officer was of opinion that he has jurisdiction, inasmuch as the District Magistrate had not made any order under Section 437 of the

We think it clear, however, that the District Magistrate did decline to order a further enquiry, and that his doing so must be taken to be an order under that section. Both the District Magistrate and the Sessions Judge are competent under Section 437 to orders further enquiry, but when a further enquiry has been re-fused by one of these officers, we think it would be an unseemly proceeding, to say the least, that it should be ordered by the other.

If the Sessions Judge was of opinion that the order of the District Magistrate was wrong, it was open to him to refer the matter to this Court under Section 438, but we are clearly of opinion that he had no jurisdiction himself to revive an order made by the District Magistrate under Section 437.

As however, it would have been competent to the Sessions Judge to report the District Magistrate's proceedings for orders of this Court, and as it is open to him to do so now, we are of opinion we ought to decide the second point raised in the rule, namely, whether when a sanction granted under Section 195 has expired by effluxion of time before any prosecution under it has been commenced, it is open to the prosecutor to procure a fresh sanction and to institute proceedings upon such fresh sanction. In the case of Jagdu Singh v. Harihar Pershad Sing, I. I., R. 11, Calcutta 577, this contention was raised before a bench of this Court, but that bench thought it unnecessary to express any opinion upon the point, because even, assuming that the Munsif who granted the fresh sanction in that case had power to grant it, the Court held that he had not exercised a sound discretion in granting it.

In the matter of the petition of Goolab Singh vo. Dabi Pershad, I. L. R. 6, Allahabad 45, Straight, officiating Chief Justice sitting alone, expressed the opinion that a firsh sanction could be given it that already granted had expired by effluxion of time, but that opinion was a mere obster dictum, as it was held that the proceedings under the first sanction given in that case were still pending. The point has, therefore, not been decided so far as we are aware, and it is therefore necessary to consider the terms and the mention of the sanction.

Section 195 is included in Chapter XV of the Code headed " of the jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts in enquiries and trials, and it falls under the heading B. Conditions requisite for Initiation of Proceedings.

Omitting those portions which are irrelevant to the present

(b) of any offence punishable under Section 193, 194, 195, 196, 199, 200, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211 or 228 of the same code when such offence is committed in or in relation to any proceeding in any Court except with the previous sanction or on plaint of such Court or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate.

(c) Of any offence described in Section 463 or punishable under Section 471, 475 or 476 of the same Code, when such offence has been committed by a party to any proceedings in any Court in respect of documents given in evidence in such proceeding except with the previous sanction or on the complaint of such Court or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate.

"Any sanction given or refused under this section may be revoked or granted by any authority to which the authority giving or refusing it is subordinate; and no such sanction shall remain force for more than six months from the date on which it was

Now what this section expressly says is this, that in respect of the offences described in clauses () and (c) no Criminal Court shall take cognizance of them unless the Court concerned in the offence shall either itself institute the proceeding, or sanction their institution, and that where the Court does not itself institute the proceedings but sanctions their institution, the proceedings must be instituted within six months from the date of the sanction.

As regards the complaint by the Court itself, no period of limitation is prescribed, it is clear that the Court may proceed either by way of complaint or under the provisions of Chapter XXXV, at any time.

But when the Court delegates the duty of prosecuting to another, when it merely sanctions the prosecution, then the plain intention of the section seems to be that the proceeding must be initiated within six months from the date of sanction, and the reason of this rule seems to be the very wholesome one that a private prosecution shall not be at liberty to procure sanction to prosecute from the Court, and then to keep the sanction pending in terorem over the head of the accused indefinitely.

Now if this is the true meaning of the section, it seems to su that this wholesome provision of the law is entirely nullified if a person is at liberty to apply for fresh sanction over and over again every six months. If that were to be allowed the Court would, in our position, be lending its sanction to enable a private prosecutor to do the very thing which the law is intended to prevent, and this, moreover, can only be effected by a fictitious use of the word sanction

If the Court sanctions a prosecution it sanctions it once for all; there may be fresh order written on another piece of paper after six months, but that is not a fresh sanction, it is only repetition of the original sanction, and when the section speaks of "six months from the date on which the sanction was given " we think it must be taken to mean six months from the date on which it was given in the first instance, and not from any subsequent date on which the purport of the order may have been repeated.

That being our view of the section the rule must be made absolute to set aside the orders of the Sessions Judge, and any proceedings that may have been taken under the so-called fresh sanction.

Another important point arises in this case, but as it was not been argued we feel it unnecessary to do more than notice it. It is to be observed that the munsif who actually tried the suit out of which application for sanction arose, refused to sanction any pro-secution; the munsif who originally sanctioned the prosecution was a different officer, while the munsif who gave the fresh sanction was neither the munsif who tried the case nor the munsif who sanctioned the prosecution originally.

Under the circumstances we think it extremely doubtful whether the sanction was such as is contemplated by Section 195 C. Cr. P.

WHAT DREAMS MAY COME.

IN a recent lecture at the Royal Institution, Dr. B. W. Richardson says that the sleep of health is dreamless, "Dreams," says Shakespeare, "are condition of an idle brain," If both the doctor and the peare, "are canonen of an idle brain." If both the doctor and the poet are right it follows that rate brains are unhealthy brains. No doubt there might be truth in the inference, but that is not quie the point. Are a l dreams signs of a diseased condition? To this the doctor says "No." He divides doe ans into two classes; those started by noises or other classes outside the sleeper, and those produced by noises or other classes outside the sleeper, and those produced by by noises or ones account pain, fever, or indigestion.

Here we inject a fact. We receive multitudes of letters containing Here we inject a fact. We receive multitudes of letters containing this afficination, almost in identical words. "I was worse tirea in the morning than when I went to bed." To this the doctor has an answer.

morning than when I went to bed" Fo this the doctor has an answer, the says, "When we feel wearied in the morning very likely it results from dreams that we have forgotten." Quite so.

In other words there is a bodily condition which may prevent a person from working by day at his usual calling, but obliges him to labour all night under a mental stimulus of which he knows nothing save by its resulting exhaustion. These inhappy wretches toil harder, therefore, for no compensation, when they are it, than they have to do to earn a living when they are well. What an internal and frightful to earn a fiving when they are well. What an internal and frightful fact! And this too without taking into account their physical sufficing at all times. "Night," said Coveridge, "is my hell."

From one of the letters referred to we quote what a woman says of her daughter: "She was worse tired in a morning than when sho went to ved." Poor gill. Those "lorgoiten dreams" had tossed her went to veed." Poor gul. Those "forgotten dreams" had tossed her about as a sinp is tossed in a tempest. Night was her day of labour. The mother's simple tale is this. "In June, 1890, my daughter Ann Enzaoein became low, weak, and freda, and complained of pain in the chest after eating. Next her stomach was so initiable that she womited all the food she took. It was awful to see her heave and strain. For three weeks nothing prissed through her stomach except a little sock water and lims water. Later on, her feet and legs began to swell and puff from droppy. She was now pale as death and looked as though she had not a drop of blood in her body, and was always cold. Mouth after mouth dragged by and she gut weaker every day. She could not waik without support, for she had lost the proper use of her legs, and her body swaved hou side to side as she moved.

"A doctor attenued her for twelve months, and finally said it was no use giving her any more medicine as it would do no good. In May, 1891, I took her to the Dewsbury Infirmary. She got no better their, and I thought I was surely going to lose her. She was then thuteen years of age.

"One day a lady (Mrs. Lightoller) called at my shop, and seeing how bad my daughter was, spoke of a medicine called Mother Seigel's how had my daughter was, spoke of a medicine called Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup, and persuaded us to try it. I got a bottle from the Thornhill Lees Co-operative Stores, and she began taking it. In two days she found a little relief; the sickness was not so frequent. She kept on with the Syrup and steadily improved. Soon she was strong as ever, and has since been in the best of health and can take any kind of food. After she had taken the Syrup only two weeks the neighbours were surprised at her improved appearance and I told them whith had brought it about—that Seigel's Syrup had done what the doctors could not do, it saved her life. Yours truly, (Signed), (Mrs.) Sarah Ann Sheard, 19. Brewery Lane, Thornhill Lees, near Dewsbury, October 11th, 1892."

It is included the surprised state of the control of the most dangerous days and dyspepsia, dropsy being one of its most dangerous

The meeting cause of all this young girl's pitful suffering was indigestion and dyspepsia, dropsy being one of its most dangerous symptoms. It attacks both youth and age, its fearful and often fatal results being due to the fact that physicians usually treat the symptoms instead of the disease itself.

"A child's dreams," says Dr. Richardson, "are signs of disturbed health and should be regarded with anxiety." The same is true of the dreams of older people. They mean poison in the stomach and point to the immediate use of Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup.

Ready for the Press

AN INDIAN JOURNALIST:

Life, Letters and Correspondence

Dr. SAMBHU C. MOOKERJEE,

late Editor of "Reis and Rayyet,"

F. H. SKRINE, cs.

The volume, uniform with Mookerjee's Travels and Voyages in Bengal, will consist of about 600 pages and contain, inter alia, I. A photograph of the Doctor from a

- painting by Mr. James Archer, R.S A. 2. A Biography, illustrated by copious notes and ana.
- 3. About 225 pages of original essays from his brilliant pen.
- 4. Selections from his correspondence with statesmen and literary men.

PRICE :

Rs. As

To registered subscribers paying before publication ... To other subscribers and ordinary purchasers ...

After paying the expenses of the publication, the surplus will be placed wholly at the dis-posar of the family of the deceased man of letters.

Orders will be registered by Messis. Thacker, Smile, & Co., Government Place, and by Bobi Kivari Mayon Gonguli, B. L., 12. Ashintosh Deg's Line, Colonia.

Subscribers to the "Essays by a Brahman" will be commondated with by Babu Kisari Moha i Gongulo.

Mana (Conga).

To ensure accuracy and avoid all mischauce, some such form may be used as,— Please enter my name as a subscriber for copies of "An Indian Journalist." The amount,

has been remitted permoney order To be legibly (Name

Address..... written

GENUINE HOMŒOPATHY.

• A CARD. Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S. Homeopathic Practitioner,

May be consulted by letter or Personally daily at his residence, 30-1, Colootolah Street, Calcutta.

Novelty in Ayurvedic Medicine, AYURVEDIC PHARMACY.

36, Lower Chitpore Road, Fouzdari Balaknana, Calcutta.

KAVIRAJ NAGENDRA NATH SEN, Physician, Surgeon, Accoucheur, practises the Ayuvedic steem of medicine, after having obtainted a dyloma at the final examination of one of Government medical Institutions of the

SPECIFICS

for all ordinary diseases, like Fever, Cough, As-thma, Phithisis, Diabetes, &c., including dis-eases brought on by irregularities and indis-cietions of diverse kinds. Catalogues, con-taining full accounts of diseases and reincedies, are transmitted on application. Proscriptions, with or without medicines, sent to every part of India and Ceylon, Cape Colony, and the British Isles, on receipt (by post) of full ac-counts of diseases.

Thousands of unsolicited Testimomals from every quarter.

Lady Elliott Portrait Memorial Committee.

Alian Arthur Allan Arthur Hon, Justice Beverley Hon, C. E. Buckland W. D. Crunckshank Baron Gaetter Col. Hailes, 6th B. I. A. Macdonald

W. O. Bell-Irving S. E. J. Clarke H. H. The Maharaja Darbhanga, K.C I.E. J. Jonstain. E. F. Longley. C. Mo A. Macdonald
David McLaien MorriHon. P. Playfair.

A.F. M. Abdur Rahman A. Sunson, J. O'B Saunders A. H. Wallis,

Maharaja Sir J. M. Tagore, K. C. S. I.
PRESIDENT—Allan Arthur.
HON. TREASURER—J. O'B. Saunders.
HON. SECRETARY—David McLaren Morison,
At the meeting of Committee held at the Chamber of Commerce on the 19th Junary,
it was decided to have a picture of Lady
Elliott painted, any surplus to go towards a personal piesent.
All subscitutions to be sent to the

All subscriptions to be sent to the HON. TREASURER,

9, Hare Street,

Calcutta.

THE WORKS OF DR JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE.

I. Commentaries on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, Marriage, Adoption, Wills &c.* Price
"No student or practitioner should be without a copy of this GREAT

Work,
(Sd.) Nana Bhai Handas,"
Bengali translation of the Dyabhaga and the Mitakshara. † Price ... Bengali Translation of the Dattaka-3. Bengal Translation of the Dattaka-chandika.† Price ...

4. The Evidence Act with notes in Bengalit.† Price

5. The Civil Procedure Code with notes in Bengalit.† Price

6. Procyples of Zemindari Management and Book keeping in Bengali

7. First Lessons in English for Bengali boys. Price ...

8. Bharat Sasan Pranah* ...

IN THE PRESS

The Philosophy of Religion from the point of view of Common Sense, Price Rs. 5. CONTENTS.

Historical Analysis of the evolution of religious systems.

Demittion of the term "religion.

The problems of the philosophy of religion and then solutions, old and new. ligion and their solutions, old and new. tars or incarnations including in the series three that are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a tortoise, and a boar.

(b) Why is it that all ancient systems recommend the surifice of animals, and the burning of ghee or incense.

&c. &c. &c. &c.

&c. &c &c. &c
The weapons offensive and defensive of religious teachers.
The power of fine words.

The art of becoming a prophet.

The cumulative effect of hardswearing for ages.

Specimens of Puranised history.

Brahmanical and Christian priestcraft compared.

The artificial miseries of men crused by religion.

Tyranny and tax ition of religion
The good man's adversity is the warp sine good man's adversity is the darp man's opportunity. Swindling as a fine air. New Superstitions that may be suggest-ed for the benefit of the priests. The great prophets of the world and their doings.

Probable origin of the Sawa religion. Tautic mysticism and abominations.

* To be had of Messis. Thacker Spink &

† To be had of Mes-rs. Thacker Spink & Co., and also at the Suradham Agency, No. 11, Raja Nabakushna's Street, Calcutta

A Wonderful Medicine.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

 $\Lambda^{ ext{RE universally ad-}}_{max}$ A Guinea a box, for Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as wind Districts, such as wind and Pain in the Sto-mach, Sick, Hendache, Gadiness, Fulness, Swelling after Meals, Dizzness and Drow-siness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy, and Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams and all Nervous and Trembling Sensation, &c. The first dose will give relief in twenty minutes.

Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one box of these Pills, and they will be accompanied to be

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

For females of all ages these Pills are invaluable, as a few doses of them carry off all bumons, and bring about all that is required. No female should be without them. There is no medicine to be found equal to Beecham's no medicine to be found equal to Beecham's Pills for removing any obstruction or irregularity of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box, they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and robust he dilt. This has been proved by thousands who have fired them, and found the benefits which are ensured by their use. For a Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, and all Disorders of the Liver, they act like magic, a few doses will be found to work wonders on the most important organs in the human machine.

human machine.

human machine.

The Natives of India will find Beecham's Pills the finest medicine ever introduced to their nouce; the European residents also will find them of great value for cooling the blood
For throwing off fevers and preventing inflam mations in hot climates, they hand without a rival.

These are Facts testified continually by tuese are racts testified continually by members of all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the Newvous and Debitated is, BEECHAM'S PILLS have the Largest Sale of any Patent Medianie in the world.

Beecham's Magic Cough Pills.

As a remedy for Coughs in general, Asthma, Bronchial Affections, Hoarseness, Shortness of Breath, Tightness and Oppression of the Chee, Wheezing, &c., these Pills stand unrivaled. Let any person give Beecham's Cough Pills a trial, and the most violent Cough will in a short time be it moved.

Beecham's Tooth Paste

Will recommend itself being efficacious and economical it is packed in neat airtight collapsible Tubes.

collarsible Tubes.

NOTICE.—G. Atheiton & Co, will forward on receipt of letter, samples at the following rates: size 9/4d at 8 and so per box; 1-1/3d, size 12 mass per box, 2-, yd, size 2 mass per box; Tooth Passe 12 and so per Tube, these rates do not include the cost of postage which will be added to the amount.

Sole Wholesale Agents for India, BURMAIL & CEYLON. G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3, NEW CHINA BAZAR STREET, CALCUTTA.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF

	MEMORIAL FUND.
ı	His Highness The Maharaja of I) Our-	Rs.
	bhanga K.C.I.E., His Highness The Maharaja of V	2	,000
2.	His Highness Inc Maharaja of V	171-	,000
3	anagi un, G C.L.E His Highness the N (wab B thadm	01
4	Moorshedabad, Amrul Oara, G.C. His Highness the N (wab of Junaga	I E	გია
*	G C.S I		500
5.	His Highness the Maharaja Baha	dur
64	of Cooch Beha, GCIE. Nawah Bahadur Sir K Abdul Ghi	ım,	500
	KCSI, and Nawib Bahadui	K
7.	KCS1, and Naw b Bahadur KCS1, and Naw b Bahadur Ashan Ulla, C1E. Nawab Imad Jung Bahadur Nawab Imad Jung Bahadur Nawab Itana Syed Ah Belgra Khu, Rabada Rabada C1	•••	500
7. 8.	Nawab Azon Yar Jung Bahadur	•••	500
9. 10	Khan Bahadar BhatBahauddin, C I	E,	500
	Khan Bahadar Bhai Bahauddin, C I Vizier to the Nawab of Junagad	 •	ვია
11.	Maharaja Bahadur Sir Joundra M han Tagore, K.C.5.1		250
12.	Bibb food Lil Mollick		200
13. 14.	Messis, Mackinnon, Mackenzie & Prince Wala Kadr, Syed, Hosein	Alt	200
	Muza Bahadur Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Nav		150
15.
- (Feraz Jung		140
16. 17.	Feraz Jung Rija Petry Mohan Mookerjee, C The Houble Mr. Justice Chan	s,ı. Ira	100
	Madhab Gho e	•••	100
18.	Prince Muza Sir Jahan Kadar Ba	ha-	100
19.	dut, K.C I.F., The Hon'bl · P Playfair.		100
31 30	Hap Kasim Auff Lieutenant-Ganeral the Hon'ble	Sir	100
	H. Brackenbury, K.C.B.,	•••	100
22	Babu Jai Gobind Law The Honble Mr. Justice Guid I)as	100
	Banerjee		50
24 25	The Hanble Dr. Rash Behary Gh. Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt.	ose 	51 50
26	Snahibzida Michomed Obidulla Kl	un
27	Bahadur, CSA Maharajkumar Benoya Krishna	•••	50 50
28	The Hon'ble Mr Justice E. J. Tre	ve-
29.	lyan The Hon'ble Mouly: Abdul Jab	bar	50
	Khan Bahadur The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop		50
30	Calcutta		50
31	Maharata Danga Charan Law, C.1		50
32. 33	Naw de Jahandre Meerza Nawab Huzoor Muza The Houble W. C. Bonnerjee		50 50
34.	The Houble W. C. Bonnerjee Nawab Syed Anger Husem	•••	50
35. 36.	Syed Nurul Huda, Esq., c.s., Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan		50 50
37· 38.	Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan J. G. Ritchie, Esq. CS,	•••	50
.30. 39.	Su Alexander Miller		50 50
40.	F. J. Rowe, Esq Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi Khan	 B 1-	32
41.	hadur,		25
42.	hadur, Kuma Ridha Prosad Roy Kumar Dinendra Nurain Roy	•••	25
43. 44.	Babu (Pashupatty Nath Bose	•••	25 25
45. 46.	Babu (Pashupatty Nath Bose Kumai Doulat Chandra Roy Babu Gum Prosonno Gnose	• • •	25
47.	Raja Sir Somundra Mohan Tago	 ne,	25
48.	CIF Ray i Jotindra Nun Caowdhury	•••	25
49.	Babu Runa Nati Ghose	•••	25 25
50.	Raja Steen th R v	•••	25
51. 52.	Rai Sew Bux B. (a) Bahadar R. Belchings (b) q	•••	25 25
53.	R. Belchimo and P. quanta Raja Surja Karana Arana Chowd Rai Budicecta and V. Karana andur	hary	25
54 55.	Banc Gopul J. Leut	•••	25
56. 57.	Month. Synd Arms Salam	•••	25
58.	A. I. Apear, E. H. Lutter of Joseph C.S.	•••	25 25
59. 60.	Manch Coulty By an	•••	25
61.	F H Skripe k	.	25
62	The House H IS ron CS, C.	⊰. I.	20
63. 64.	Prince Mahome Bakuyai Shah Baboo Sujendi Nan Pal Chowdry	···	20
65.	" Auknoy Kumar Chose	•••	20
66. 67.	Ray Stub Churcher Numdy Rahadas	• • • •	20
68.	Chowden Mathama	•••	20
69 70	D. Pantoty, Esq Chowdry Manome Argunand Kl H. E. A. Cotton, E. q., Burnster-at	ian Iaw	20
71.	Moulvi Syed Asi uffuddin Ahm	ed,

72. T. Inglis, Esq , C.S.

73	A. H. Giles, Esq		16
74.	F. F. Hundley, Esq., C.S.		16
75.	The Hon'ble Mouly: Sirajul
,).	Khan		16
-6
76	Mouve Serajuddeen	•••	15
77.	Abat Hasan, Esq.,	• • •	15
7d.	H. A. D. Pullips, Esq. Cs.	•••	10
7).	Babon Kiran Chunder Roy	• • •	10
8ა.	E. N. Baker, Esq		10
81.	Baboo Doyal Ca ind Bose		10
83	" Madan Mohun Bose		10
83.	"Kora La Khan		10
84.	Moulvi Synd Aleim Hossain	•••	10
85.	Moulvi Az z Annud		10
86.	Ru Kanyelal Dey Buhadoor		10
87.	H Holmwood, Esq		10
88	Babu Harry Mohan Chunder		10
89.			5
90.	" Sarodapiasad Ghose		5
	ibscriptions will be thankfully
the	Honorary Joint Secretaries,
	RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI	BAHADU	JR.
	4, British Indian Street,
	and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHM
			,
	Barrister-	ai Law,

"IMPROVED UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Rs. .

16. Taltolla, Calcutta.

Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, small, open-faced mickel silvern, keviess, smort winding, pitent, "NEW STYLE IMPROVED UNDAUNT-ED" witch, with hind setting mechanism, secondhand, for Detuns, or normental bold dial, for Rs. 7 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box, and full three years guarantee. Withouted to cand the roughest use. Rins, more that 23 hours with one winding. With list the time. Easily teparable. Other is lat done be one tates. One watch fire further purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. 100. Dick is a life time. Easily teparable. Other is lat done be on tates. One watch fire further purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. 100. Dick is a life time by the formal and never stopned amongh it sustained hard knocks and petks. X Dr. H. Moore of Royal A thirty from Program the says:—I sold the Rs. 16 x Pr. W Hopkins of Sussex Regt from Dimeter is says:—I have sold it for Rs. 20. X M. F. B. Scott of Patin Optom Department says:—I are watch you sent me some seven years root still keep no very good time. Jewollod Ring Rs. 1-3-0. Real Silver Wa35h Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty electro cased Gold Ring set with sore infic dromonds, Rubies, Emeralds, at Re. 13-0 Mr. G. Smith, Silt Inspector from Stutkuta, says: "A German valued the dramond ring at Rs. 50 and ruby at Rs. 30." Key winding, Government stamped, solid silver hunting case, Royal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee, for R. 13. Pre G. Howkes, of 2nd York Light Infanty from Purandhar says.—For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Seize int for Rs. 28 x Pre. H. C. Bishop of L. F. L. Regt, from Kimptee says:—A Corporal offered Rs. 30; ladies Rs, 24; both with extras and printanteed for 3 years. Mind they are guaranteed to be of the 4 and gold. No agents kept, all goods sent only by us from Bombay per V. P.

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO, Strong, accurate, pretty, small, open-faced, snort winding. NEW STYLE IMPROVED UNDAUNT-

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO, BOMBAY.

CATARRH,

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness.
A NEW HOME FREATMENT.
Sufferers are not generally aware that these

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are the to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the noise and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these distressing diseases are rapidly and permanently curred by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUTTON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORONTO, Canada. Scientific American. ... 17. TORON 10, 18 Scientific American.

"IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer and sure reitef from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering; while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most cmonic form

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs

Is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE. Are you subject to HEADACHES and the tortures of FOOTHACHE? A single applica tion will relieve you.

In Sore-throat its power has been so ray. and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the result speak for itself,

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Physicians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of nomes. By its intrinsic virine, it has achieved a wide spread popularity which no similar preparation has ever before attained

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable chemist

Agents in Calcutta : Smith Stanistreet & Co R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Bathgate &

REIS & RAYYET (PRINCE AND PEASANT)

WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

AND

of Politics, Literature, RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

	If i	paid in adva	nce.
Yearly	. '	•••		Rs	12
Half-year		•••	•••	,,	7
Quarterly.		•••	•••	,,,	4
Montaly	•••		•••	Re.	1 - 8
Single or s	ample	Copy		Ans.	0-8
	If no	t paid in adv	ance.
Yearly		•		R۹.	31
Half-yearl		•••	•••	,,	10.8
Quarterly	•••	•••	•••	12	6-0
Monthly		•••	•••	"	2-4
Single or s	sample	Сору	•••	Ans.	0-12
No ada.	Lonal	charge for p	ostage	or p	eor.

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are chaiged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insertion. The lowest chaige for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5.

Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Maniger," and Literary Communications and pooks and pamphlets (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayyet." Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are

OFFICE: I, Uckoor Dut's Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutta.

(PRINCE PEASANT) Ġ

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

OF POLITICS LITERATURE. AND SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

REVIEW

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, MAY 4, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 67 3.

. CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

DERMOT'S PARTING.

OH waken up, my darlin'-my Dermot, it is day,-The day-when from the mother's eves the real light dies away ! For, what will day-light be to me, that never more will see The fair face of my Dermot, come smilin' back to me? Arise, my son-the morning red is wearing fast away, And through the gray mist I can see the masts rock in the bay. Before the sea-fog clears the hill, my darlin must depart-But oh the cloud will never lift that wraps the mother's heart !

Sure then, I'm old and foolish? what's this I'm sayin' now? Will I see my fair son leave me with the shadow on his brow? Oh no! we'll bear up bravely, and make no stir, nor moan-There will be time for weepin' when my fair son shall be gone ! I've laid the old coat ready, dear-my pride this day has been. That on your poor apparel shall no rent, nor stain be seen. And let me tie that kerchief, too ;-it's badly done I fear, But, my old hands tremble sadly -with the hurry-Dermot dear !

And are you ready, darlin'? Turn round, and bid farewell To the roof-tree of the cabin that has sheltered us so well-Leave a blessing on the threshold, and on the old hearthstone,-'T will be a comfort to my heart, when I sit there alone. And often at the twilight hour, when day and work are done, I'll dream the old time's back again-when you were there, my son. When you were there-a little thing that prattled at my knee ! Long ere the evil days had come to part my child and me.

The dear arm is still round me, the dear hand guides me still ! 'I is but a little step to go-see now, we've gained the hill; Is that the vessel, Dermot dear ?-- the mist my eye-sight dims-Oh shame upon me ! now-what means this trembling in my limbs ? My child ! my child ! oh let me weep awhile upon your breast ; Would I were in my grave ! for then-my heart would be at rest-But now, the hour is come-and I must stand upon the shore, And see the treasure of my soul depart for evermore !

I know, my child! I know it-the folly and the sin! But oh, I think my heart would burst to keep this anguish in-To think how in you sleeping town, such happy mothers be, Who keep their many sons at home! while I-I had but thee! But, I have done. I murmur not-I kiss the chastening rod .-Upon this hill-as Abraham did-I give my child to God ! But not like him, to welcome back the precious thing once given-I'll see my fair son's face again-but not on this side heaven. - Framiner.

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free .- Artificial Ear-drums and similar appliances entirely superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

WEEKLYANA.

DR. Fitzedward Hall expressed in this paper his sense of the loss occasioned by the death of Dr. Sambhu C. Mookerjee. He again writes in a private letter :-

" It grieved me, too, that Dr. Sambhu Chunder Mookerjee was cut off in the midst of a career of distinguished usefulness. His life, though not long, was a very full one; and his countrymen have lost, in him, a man of signal ability and sterling worth."

ELSEWHERE will be found a letter from the Minister, Sulana State. It does not refer to the State itself but to a matter in which all India is interested. It announces a cure for cobra poison. It is a plant discovered by the Maharajkumar, and is given freely to any one who may wish to verify its vittues.

IT is said that the meanest of millionaires is Mr. Russell Sage. For over seven years he hasn't bought a new hat, and for years his lunch has never cost him more than two pence half-penny a day.

THE following will be read with interest by many :-

"It is commonly said that Sir Charles Russell never made less than "It is commo-dy said that Sir Charles Russell never made less than $20,000 in $25,000 per annum for m my years preceding his promotion. Large as his income was, there were half-dozen men at the Bar running it very close. Both Sir Richard Webster and Sir Edward Clarke are making fully $20,000 a year; and men like Mr. R. B. Finlay, Sir Henry James, Mr. J. F. Murphy, Mr. Lawson Walton, Mr. Fielding Dickens, Mr. W. Willis, Mr. Cozens Hardy, Mr. Graham Histings, and others, are credited with almost equally large earnings. But most Q. C.'s are, of course, very much less fortunate.

Some of the Indian barristers, particularly of the Calcutta High Court, are not behindhand, in this respect, to their brethien of the English bar. They have made litigation doubly costly.

WE take the following from Luzac's Oriental List :-

WE take the following from Luzac's Oriental List:—

"Everyone who takes an interest in the island world known as Insulinde or the Indian Archipelago will have welcomed with pleasure the announcement of an 'Encyclopæthe van Nederlandsch-Indie' in course of publication under the able editorship of Professor P. A. van der Lith and Mr. A. J. Spaan whose names are a guarantee of the absolute trustworthniess of the work. It is not intended to make it so full and exhaustive as several modern publications of this class are, but to keep it within the limits of three volumes of about 40 sheets each, and make it a handy book of reference on my topic connected with its main object. Judging, however, by the flist fisciculus just to hind, and taking into account the tendency towards expansion as works of the kind proceed, we should think that that limit may probably have to be exceeded, without in the least imparting the usefulness of the work. A special feature aimed at, to enable students to study certain questions more in detail, is to consist in full literary references under each head Veth's Geographical Dictionary of the Indian Archipelago, and the many valuable essays by the late Professor Wilken are patterns in this respect, and we can but recommend the contributors to the present Encyclopædia to follow their example. From a careful examination of the first fasciculus it would appear to us that our recommendation is to a certain extent justified."

Few persons in India know anything about the Indian Archipelago. Yet European scholars have extracted a mass of truths from a careful study of the ethnography, language, habits and customs of the diverse peoples inhabiting those islands which stretch from Asia to Australasia. Again :-

Again:—

"A fresh and most powerful stimulus has just been given to the study of folklore by the publication, at the University Press, Cambridge, of the first volume of a complete translation of the ancient Buddhist story-book known as the Járaka. The idea of dividing the work of translating among different hands, so as to be able to encompass its publication within a reasonable time, was first conceived by Professor Cowell, who assigned the first volume (stories 1 to 150) to Mr. Chalmers, the second and fourth to Mr. W. H. D. Rouse, and the third and fifth jointly to Messrs, H. J. Francis and R. A. Neil, reserving to himself the general control and superintendence of the work. The members of this guild of Játaka translatois, adhering as they do to a general uniformity in technical terms and transliteration, have agreed each to exercise a free hand, within certain limits, in his own work, so that every member of the band, unhampered by canons of style and diction, is left to render the original as he thinks most suitable. The advantage of this system is apparent in the volume before us which, while fauthfully reflecting the original ast, in terseness and vigour of language leaves nothing to be desired. Special attention should also be drawn to the Edutor's prefice which, brief as it is, is pregnant with valuable details conceining the history and character of the Játaka hierature Half of the second volume is already in type and the remainder will follow in quick succession."

The Játaka is of great value to those who wish to study the pecu-

The Jatak cas of great value to those who wish to study the pecuharmes of Buddhism. Many of the stories are characteristic. The plan of bringing out large works, through the co-operation of several scholars is certainly advantageous

HERE is an interesting piece of information, sufficient to whet one's curiosity without the means of gratifying it :-

curiosity without the means of gratifying it:—

"A story is going the rounds of London Society about an emerald necklace, which will make it almost as famous as the diamond necklace which was bought for poor. Marie Antomette. It is alleged to have been a portion of the crown jewels which were stolen from the Tuileries in 1792. The necklace was lost to sight for many years, until in a miserable lodying in an obscure qurater, an old Irishwoman died, amongst whose belongings it was found. It was taken to a pawn-broker who gave £5 for it. After hiving it some months in his possession he thought he would clean up the dirty necklace with the green stones, and found them all brilliant emeralds. He sold them for £12,000. Lord Rosebery has since purchased them for £20,000. People are wondering for whom they are intended, and the story is revived of his approaching marriage with the Duchess of Albany."

To trace the necklace to the possession of the poor Irishwoman must now be a feat of great difficulty, especially as the poor woman is dead. Through what strange vicissitudes must it have passed in its descent from the pidice to the garret. The outlier history of the Koh-1-noor is a series of surmises, though its later history is not altogether unreliable. It is perhaps not generally known that at one time the Koh-t-noor incurred the risk of passing into the Dhobi's hand. After its transfer from the palace of Dalip Sing to John Lowernce, the latter, having consigned it to his coat pocket, forgot all about it amid the thrilling incidents of the week. Suddenly reminded of its existence, he became really alarmed. If it could not be recovered, nobody, he thought, would believe that he had taken so little care of it as to have lost it through carelessness. Fortunately, he succeeded in recollecting that he had kept it in one of the pockets of his coat. That piece of clothing waited, in a basket of cain, for the Dhobi. John Lawrence ran up and brought it out from the place. He began to breathe freely from that amount.

MR Justice Hill has been elected President of the Faculty of Law of the Calcutta University.

READ the following from the Civil and Military Gazette .-

"Hanuman monkeys are regarded as sacred in ludia, and they know it; having become more impudent ruffians even than monkeys in general, in consequence. They take un their quiters in the villages, and swirm about the streets and over the roofs with all the confidence of proprietorship. They stroll about the market-places and help themselves to whatever is estable with perfect impunity, for the proof Hindu must treat them with respect and forbeatance. Nevertheless, if he is quite sure that mobody is looking to bear withess to the sacrilege, the worthy tradesman will sometimes so far prefer his own corn, or his pastry, to his immortal welfare, as to catch the deprecator and give him as ly like of a strick and so induce him to give some other merchant a turn of custom. Also, it is not considered irreligious to cove a roof with sharp thorn branches, by way of dissuading Humman from his his proprietor, and lay out for them many unconsidered trifles of food. Shameless vigabond as he is, however, the Entellus monkey the monkey-people—and lay out for them many unconsidered trifles of food. Shameless vigabond as he is, however, the Entellus monkey explained the surface of the sacrety has one virtue—he kills snakes. He does it, however, with a cert in excitant savagery that gives one a doubt as to whether a writte may he no virtue. He is always careful first to see that the snake is fur as elect. Then he catches it by the neck with a lightning grab, a disalest. Then he catches it by the neck with a lightning grab, a disalest. Then he catches it by the neck with a lightning grab, a disalest the same of course the monkey of the monkey of the nearest stone. On this he steadily grinds the snake's he office of the monkey with a cert in the monkey of the the rest of the repule to pieces, or throws it to the young monkeys to be despatched as slowly or as quickly as their fancy may suggest. It is very hard on the snake, who, after all, has one vitue of his own; which is, that he sometimes kills an Entellus monkey."

It is not true that the Hanuman is treated with such consideration even by Hindus all over India. In many districts, the stick is freely laid on his back if he is caught in acts of robbing. Nowhere, however, does a Hindu kill a Hanuman. That would be an act of downright sacrilege. As to Hanumans killing snakes, we think it would be news to many. They are known, however, to destroy hornets by thousands and thus do a good turn to villagers. As soon as a Hanuman discovers a hornets' nest, he approaches it very cautiously. Quickly destroying the two or three hornets that mount guard ever it, he stops up the entrance with his fingers joined together, leaving a very little opening through which his foes may come out. As each insect seeks to escape, Hanuman seizes it dexterously and cuts it off in twain with his teeth. He would sit for several hours in this way, till, in fact, the nest has been entirely emptied of its dangerous denizens. Intelligent as the Hanuman is, it is seen to discover a stupidity in one respect that is very remarkable. In certain districts of Bengal, when householders get particularly annoyed with him, they dig a little hole and cause an earthen jug with a narrow mouth but broad belly to be placed in it and properly fastened by cords and sticks. Some fruit,-a bringal, perhaps,-is then thrown into the jug. The operations having been performed in the presence of Hanuman, the latter comes down as soon as the villager leaves the spot. Slyly looking into the jug, be inserts his hand into it for bringing out the fruit. He seizes it, but the mouth of the jug being narrow, his closed fist with the fruit within it does not come out. He begins to pull hard. Just then the villager approaches with a stout stick and begins to belabour the mischievous thief. The latter suffers the beating, all the while seeking to bring out his hand. Of course, if he only lets the fruit off, he can easily escape, but that is a feat of reasoning of which he is not capable. The jug has actually to be unfastened and taken up and broken before the representative of prehistoric humanity can be let off. The circumstance has given rise to the expression Bandure-mut in Bengali, applied to the efforts of one to retain something whose retention results in injury and loss.

THE monthly meeting of the Calcutta Corporation held on Thursday was almost entirely taken up by questions and answers. Mr. Graham entered a protest and asked whether the questions were in order as they did not relate to any business before the meeting. The questions, however, elicited important facts :-

"(1) Will the Health Officer please furnish the Commissioners with the weekly death returns for small-pox from the 1st January to the 1sth April of the current year and compare them with the weekly death returns for the same period of any previous year in which an epitlemic of small-pox approaching the present in regard to the severity prevailed in this city?

Will the Health Officer furnish the Commissioners with a table of deaths from fevers for the last fifty years, similar to the table marked A, which was annexed to his Report on the present small-pox epidemic,

A, which was annexed to his keport on the present small-pox epidemic, dated the rith February, 1895?

(3) Will be please note in such table the year in which the present sewer system was completed, and in which the sewage of the city was first discharged from the sewer outfalls? Is there any record to show how the death-rate from fever has been affected in the different wards by the extension of the sewer system to those wards? If so, what re-

(4) Could he also note the year in which vegetables which are usually eaten uncoded (e. g., lettuces, celery, spring onions, radishes, water-cress, &c.,) were first supplied to the Calcutta markets from the reclaimed trarts at the Salt-water Lakes known as the "square mile"? Any particulars he can furnish in this connection will be useful.

(5) Are there any statistics available to show, whether or n reclaimed tracts at the Sait-water Lakes known as the "square mile".

Any particulars he can funnsh in this connection will be useful.

(5) Are there any statistics available to show, whether or not there has been during the last six months a decidedly marked increase in the number of cases of typhoid fever in this city? If so, in what localities has typhoid prevalled and amongst what classes?

(6) Are these cases of typhoid in any degree attributable to the sewers, whether it be to their faulty construction, want of repair, want of thorough and efficient cleansing or otherwise?

(7) Is effect given to the provisions of section 321 of the Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act, 1888: and if not, why not?

(8) Are any returns made to the Corporation or to the Health Officer, by medical practitioners which will enable the Commissioners to ascertain definitely to what extent 'dangerous diseases' (cholera, small-pox, diphinerit, typhoid, &c.) exist, or prevail, in the different words, 't se returns' as distinguished from the mere death returns (in other words, 't see returns' as distinguished from 'death returns'?)

(9) Dies the Health Officer consider what such 'case returns should' made; and, if a t, why not?

(10) Is not by of the mode-snapply of the city drawn from the tracts adjoining the Sid-vaste Urkes?

The inswers are:—

The businers are :-

" No. 1. The following statement shows the number of small-pox deaths week by week from the 1st of January to the middle of April in the two epidemic years of 1865 and 1895. There were 3,710 deaths in 1865 against 1,235 in 1895 for the town proper.

1865.—(a) Week ending. (b.) No of Deaths. (Town) 1895.—(c.) Week ending. (d.) No. of Deaths (Town.) (c.) No. of Deaths (Suburbs.) (f) Total Deaths.

(a.)		(b.)	(c.)	(d.)	(e)	(1.)
7th Jan.	•••	91	5th Jan.	24	ìí	:5
14th "	•••	143	12th ,,	17	2	19
21st "	•••	142	19th ,,	31	3	34
28th "	•••	200	26th ,,	34	2	30
4th Feb,	•••	24 I	2nd Feb.	37	6	43
Hill "	•••	310	9ւհ "	58	2	60
ր8ւհ _ո	• • •	301	16th "	70	3	73
25th "	•••	293	23rd ,,	73	19	92
4th Mar.		249	2nd Mar.	106	17	123
11th "	• • • •	325	9'h ,,	103	22	125
18th ,,		383	16th ,,	138	25	163
25th "	•••	323	231d "	171	62	233
ist April	• • • •	308	30th ,,	153	47	200
8th "		187	őth April	124	42	166
15th ,,		214	13th ,	96	44	140
			- "			-40
Total	•••	3710		1235	297	1532

2 and 3.—I am sorry I am unable to furnish the fever statistics for the past 50 years, I can give only the annual registered deaths from fevers ward by ward since 1869. In 1870 the sewage of the city was first discharged from the sewer outfail. In 1874 the southern portion of the town was practically completed except Hastings which was drained only a few years ago. In 1888 the sewage system was completed. The only recorded medical opinion regarding the effects of the dialinage in the earlier years is that of Dr. Tonnerre, the Health Officer who in March, 1875, after referring to the completion of the drainage in the South division of the town and its extension in 1874 to some of the main streets in the northern portion says: 'I is an undoubted fact that the improvement has not k-pt pace with the progress of the drainage. On the contrary, with the extension of the drainage there has been a retrograde movement in the sanitary condition of the town.' As to my own opinion about the effects of the drainage I think it is well known in this city. To my minut there can be no coubit that the extension of the drainage has in most parts of the town caused —I am sorry I am unable to furnish the fever statistics for As to my own opinion about the enects of the dealiness no could that the well known in this city. To my mind there can be no could that the extension of the dramage has in most parts of the town caused a great improvement in its cleanliness and in its amenities; and a great improvement in its cleanliness and in its amenities; and that the sewerage performs a most important function in carrying away the immense amount of water with which the inhabitants of Calcutta are supplied and which if allowed to sink and soak into the soil instead of being promptly removed would cause a vast amount of sickness and mortality. At the same time the full benefits to be obtained from an efficient sewerage system are not securing an inclination of alcutta, because the sewerage of the tiwa is in a most unsatisfactory condition which is evident enough from the offensive smells which enable from the very innermal security from the offensive smells which emanate from every opening, especially from those in connection with the brick sewers. Since my first year of office in Calcutta I have systematically drawn attention to the necessity of improvement of the sewer system and after nearry 5 years of reteration and insistence succeeded in inducing the Commissioners to appoint Mr. Baldwin Latham, a sanitary expert who has been connected with the drainage and water-supply of over 100 cities, to report as to what was required to be done. Mr. Baldwin Latham confirmed my views as to the great defects both in flushing appliances and in the construction of the extractions of Children are after the construction of the extractions of Children are after the construction of the extraction of the defects both in flushing appliances and in the construction of the existing sewerage of Calcutta, one of the most important points being a defective outfall, and he recommended certain remedies. But it appears as if another 5 years of constant reiteration and insistence are needed before the essential parts of his valuable recommendations are to be negun; four years have already possed. In the meantime the town is year by year becoming most unhealthy, a condition of things to which I have drawn special attention in my annual reports, requesting always that Mr. Baldwin Latham's recommendations should be put into opelation.

The town drainage should not be confused with the result.

The town dramage should not be confused with the newly proposed scheme of Suburban dramage which the Commissioners have recently, on my advice, sent to Mr. Baldwin Latham for his opinion. The two are on my advice, sent to Mr. Baldwin Lathan for his opinion. The two are quite separate and not necessarily interdependent on one another; and there is no very important reason that the recommendations of Mr. Baldwin Latham should not have been given effect to long ago, and I earnestly trust now that attention has been again drawn to the subject that steps will be taken to secure that the recommendations be promptly and efficiently carried out. Without wishing to cause unnecessary alarm it is my duty to state that long delay in this matter will constitute a grave danger to the inhabitants of Calciuta.

4. The markets of Calcutta are not supplied with lettuce, celety, spring omous and water cress from the Satt-water Lakes, but for the past 20 years Indian corn, different kinds of sag, cauliflowers, large radishes, and cabbages have been supplied.

5 and 6 Calcutta is not subject to any considerable outbreaks of typnom fever. It may an excellent water supply, and an Asiatic popula-typnon lever. It has an excellent water supply, and an Asiatic population which enjoys a peculiar immunity from typical typhoid fever. A few cases occur every year among Europeans and Eurasians and they are usually traceable to defects in house dramage, which, owing to the condition of the sewerage, are particularly dangerous. The localities recently affected have been Chowningh, Russell Street, Council House Street and Canning Street. My experience of typhoid in Calcutta is that it is most prevalent among the business men of the city. There were two deaths registered from typhoid in R0, three in R02 and four vere two deaths registered from typhoid in 1891, three in 1893, and four 10 1894 from October to March.

be to print the words of the section on the back of the license

None to enable the Commissioners to ascertain definitely.

8. None to enable the Commissioners to ascertain denuitely.

9. I think that it would be most useful but as half the people in the town are never attended by medical men, it might be necessary to ask the head of the house to notify, and, in the case of small-pox, to compet the Sitola Paudas to notify, as comparatively few cases are attended by any one else.

Io No, There are 879 cowsheds within the boundary of the Municipality and outside milk comes from Sodepur and other places on the Eastern Bengal Railway."

The Health Officer admits the unhealthmess of the sewers as the cause of unhealthmess in the town. Dr. Sunpson attributes the presence of typhoid fever in European houses to defective drainage and offensive sewerage. Native houses are as much, if not more, exposed to sewer gas. The law compels house owners to connect their houses with the sewers which are dangerous. There is no escape from them. The city is doomed.

NOTES & LEADERETTES,

OUR OWN NEWS,

THE WEEK'S FELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

THE Mikado is unwell, having caught a severe chill. The protest delivered to Japan by the Ministers of the three Powers is couched in the most friendly terms. It maintains simply that the cession of the Liantong Peninsula to Japan will be a source of constant menace to Pekin, and also to the autonomy of Corea. The statement that Japan has already replied to the protest of France, Bussia, and Germany is not correct. Russia has requested China to delay the ratification of the Treaty of Peace for a few days. Many Censors in China have petitioned the Throne opposing the conditions in the treaty of peace. The Japanese consider that when China has ratified it no ground will exist for the intervention of European Powers. The Japanese will not regard calmly the action of any Powers attempting to deprive Japan of the fruits of her victory over China. The relations between Russia and Japan are regarded as serious. At the Russian War Office frequent conferences are taking place. The Chiefs of the several military departments are busily engaged in considering the strategic measures which should be adopted in the event of the Mikado finally refusing to modify the treaty. The Russian Press virulently attacks England's refusal to co-operate with the three Powers, and tegrets the conclusion of the Pamir agreement. The papers threaten hostile action on the Indian frontier. The French press exhibits increasing objection to France joining Germany and Russia in coercing Japan. In the articles published the feelings of distaste and distrust of German co-operation in the matter are distinctly expressed. The Times says that Russia is preparing to mobilize her troops although the necessity of doing so is not expected. It also publishes a telegram from Kobe stating that the Japanese Ministry has resolved to resist. Russian dictioning. It is believed that the United States support Japan. The Emperor of China has summoned Li-Hung-Chang to the capital. The ratification of the treaty of peace 15 probable.

The Times' correspondent at Hongkong reports serious troubles throughout the Island of Lormosa. Her Mijesty's cruiser Leander has gone to Takin. The Germans have landed a force of marines at Tamsin in order to prote tithe foreigners there. A mutiny has broken out among the Chinese troops was have killed their General. The savages from the interior or the Island descending the hills attack the Natives. Renter's correspondent at Shanghai telegraphs that the Chiaese in Formosa begger Great. Britain to prevent the Japanese annexation of the Island and offered a large share of profits from the mines. Great Britain has declined to entertain the request.

THE trial of Oscar Wilde opened at the Old Bailey on April 26, and terminated on May 1. The Jury brought in a verdict of acquittal on in 1894 from October to March.
7. Circulars were sent to all practitioners in Calcutta in 1889, directing their attention to the section, and postcards were supplied to be filled up and forwarded to the Health office on their being called in to see an infectious disease. The success has been very limited, for though the European practitioners usually notify, it is quite exceptional for the Indian practitioner to do so. Rossibly the best reminder would for the Indian practitioner to do so. Rossibly the best reminder would a fiesh trial at the next sessions. But was refused. the charge of conspiring to procure, and in respect of gross indecency, which the Crown Prosecutor withdrew. With regard to the other charges of indecency, the Jury were unable to agree, and as there was no likelihood of their coming to a verdict, they were discharged. THE meeting of knights, dames, and associates of the Primrose League took place at the Covent Garden Theatre on April 26. Mr. Balfour in addressing the meeting said the existence of serious dissension in the constitutional Unionist Party, reports of which were current throughout the country, was a fiction. The political and personal friendship of Mr. Chambeilain was never, he said, greater than at present, and he hoped the permanent muon of the Conservatives and the Liberal-Unionists would eventually replace the present alliance.

An immense reservoir at Bonsey, near Espinal, South America, has burst, causing great havoc. A great wave formed and swept the Adiete Valley for ten inites, carrying everything before it. Many villages were completely destroyed, and 110 persons were drowned. Reports continue to arrive of the immense destruction of property, several hundreds of people are rendered houseless, and are encamped in the pestilent marshes.

A FORCE of British marines landed at Corinto and occupied the town. Nicaraguan troops are entrenched in the vicinity. Nicaragua formally protested against the occupation of the town by the British, characterising the action as an outrage. To seize an unowned sum by force of arms, it declares to be contrary to all international laws as well as to the common dictates of right, and justice, and equity. The feeling against the British in the Republic is intense. Senor Jose Sanlos Zelaya, President, has urged the Minister of Foreign Affairs to hand his passports to the British Minister at Mangua. The snob paraded the streets yelling and shouting, "Down with English tyrants!" They tried to remove the British escutcheon from the Legation. The neighbouring Republics are urging Nicaragua to pay the indemnity. The Consuls of the various European Powers also urge the Government to yield to the British demand. Two warships of the United States have been ordered to the Nicaraguan coast, That Government is striving to arrange a settlement of the difficulty According to the latest advices, Nicarigur, agrees to pay the indemnity a fortught after the British evacuation of Corinto, Great Britain accepts the proposal provided the payment is guaranteed.

THE French Mission to the Court of the Sultan of Motocco starts shortly for Fez.

SEVENTY deaths from cholera have occurred at Jeddah.

THE ex-Speaker has taken the title of Viscount Peel.

TENDERS are invited by the Secretary of State for India for two millions of India Bills for renewing the Bills account on the 12th of May. In consequence of this the idea of a loan has been abandoned.

THE Duke of Orleans fell off his hoise while out riding near Seville and broke his leg. Pneumonia and fever have supervened, and his condition is serious.

In the House of Commons, on April 30, Mr. Shaw-Lefevre introduced the one man one vote Bill. The Bill was read a first time. The House has read for the second time the Corrupt Practices Act Amendment Bill, which is designed to prevent the growing practice of making during the election context false statements affecting the personal character and conduct of a candidate.

Major von Wissman, former administrator, has been appointed. Governor of German East Africa.

In consequence of the transport Thibet, belonging to the Madagascar expedition, being badly ashore, the Canal traffic is stopped.

THE May Day demonstrations throughout Europe were generally conducted in an orderly in order. Trivial conflicts with the authorities took place in Austria and Belgium.

SIR Lepel Griffin probably successes Sir Henry Rawlinson in the India Council.

In the House of Commons, on May 2, the Chancellor of the Exchequer submitted the Financial Statement for 1895 96. The estimated revenue for the present year amounts to £95,662,0-0, the expenditure to £95,681,000, the deficit being converted into a surplus of £181,000 by reimposing an additional duty of sixpence on beer and an extra sixpence on spirits. The surplus of the past year, amounting to £776,000 will be applied to the reduction of the National Debt. In the Customs revenue, tea yielded £189,495 or £37,000 more than the estimate, while coffee decreased. Sir William Harcourt, in the course of his speech, took the opportunity of warning the House that it will be impossible to continue the increasing national expenditure without having 18-course to the intolerable burden of additional taxation. Probably, he said, this will be the last occasion upon which he, from his responsible position, will be able to give such a warning to the House.

The Times connects the warming with the report which is current of the miniment resignation of Lord Rosebery and the speedy dissolution of Parhament. The Budget is well received by the English press.

THE Secretary for War, in reply to a question, said that he was unable to concur in the proposals of the Government of India for shortening the periods of service required for promotion in the Staff Corps, consequently the rules will remain unchanged. Majors and Captains in the Staff Corps permanently appointed Commandants and Second-in-Command in native regiments will be given a step in temporary rank. Replying to a further question, Mr. Campbell Bannerman said that Her Majesty's Government was considering the policy which should be pursued with regard to the future of Chitral.

On Monday a telegram reached Calcutta from Bombay reporting the death of the Jam Sahib of Jamnagar-a Kathiawar juling Chiefon the previous Sunday. Jam Shir Sir Vibhaji Ranmalji, K.CSL, the Jam Saheb of Jamoagar, or Nawanagar, was nearly 69 years of age, having been born on the 8th of May, 1827. He was the son of Jam Ranmaly, who was the adopted son of Ram Achuba, the widow of Jam Jasaji who died in 1814 without male heirs. Sir Vibhaji, like the Jam Ranmalji, was a famous sportsman, though not a hon-killer. He had a harem of 14 Rants and 4 Mussalmanis. The first issue commonly named Kalu Bhá, was by a Mussalmani. He was proclaimed heir but is now, we believe, in confinement at Ahmadnagai He was formally known as Kalyan Singh and was married to a Ghassia Rajputni and has a son Lakhu Bhá-Lakshman Singji- who was the year before last in the 1st class of the Raj Kumar College at Rajkote and has a great taste for science. Next the Jam adopted his first cousin's son-Ranjit Sing-who was sent to Cambridge and has got his degree and is the famous cricketeer, the Captain of the Cambridge Liberal Cricket Club, Ranjit was adopted on condition that on the birth of an issue of the loins he would be cut with a jaghir worth Rs. 20,000 a year. He too was set aside and a hoy born of a Mussalmani, named Jasso Singh, now about 15 years of age, was recognized as the heir-apparent. Later on, one of the Ranis was delivered of a son. On the birth of that son the Raja refused to pay any more the expenses of Ranjit's education. But European interference forced the Raja to pay not only Ranjit's expenses but also the costs of his education in Europe, as he was a brilliant boy and could be sent there. Attempts were made at two different times to have Kalyan Singh and Jasso Singh recognized by the British Government as heirs to the Nawanagar State. The Foreign Office said that it would not interfere then, but would decide after the Jam's death between the several claimants.

THE following appeared in the New York Nation of March 21 .-

"If the German fashion prevailed with us, telegrams of congratulation would, on this seventieth builday of Dr. Fuzedward Hall, be pouring into Marlesford, England, where this American scholar has his home. His name is not unknown to our readers, who have for years enjoyed his expositions of Log ish verbal usage, such as no other man aiving could produce. But he has experienced the usual fate of an absentee, in being overlooked by his countrymen, and in being accordingly without his proper honeun hire. That he is even a Harvard gradulate—a member of the class of 1846, and classmate of Profs. Child, Lair, and Notton—is little susperted by the great majority of the alumni of that institution, to which he has even many valuable Oriental books, and recently some five human of Oriental MSS, many of the greatest resulty. Those, are now well of the many all Oriental MSS, many of the greatest resulty. Those, are now to go of incomparable services in suppliementing the readers of notice proof coaters of the New English Dictionary—acknowledgments which, to be adequate, would seem exaggerated—do not think of Dr. Hill as an Orientalist who spent sixteen years in India. His caiser there, whose beginning was made memorable by a shipwreck in the treacherous river Hoogly, was the inonurable one of public usefulness as superintendent of schools, and as professor of Sanskirt at the sacred city of Benares, the very centre of Hindu learning. In India he familiarised himself with divers Eastern languages, was the first American to publish a Sinskirt text, and has, in the Journal of the Astatic Society (re, of Bengal) and in Indian magazines and printed volumes, been a most profitie writer and editor bon Oriental subjects, as the Bittish Museum Catalogue will iestify. Of his achievements in the various fields of Hondu antiquity, we may mention his books and essays on the philosophical systems, especially the Sankhya, on dramaturgy, astronomy, and epigraphy ithough published for the most part three or four decades ago, they are still of great and almost undiminished value and authority. His wonderful Beleschehet—which competent authorities pronounce to be as admirable in Sanskirt as we know that it is in English—was brought to bear not only upon the annotation of texts, but also upon some of the intricate problems of Hindu therary chronology, with extraordinary acuteness and success. Since 1862 he has been constantly emologed by the British Civil Service Commissioners as examiner in Sanskirt, Hindustein, Hindu, Bengala, or English. All this time has been going on the note-making on points of English which, as he lately wrote to the Cincago Drad, he began in 1838, or when he was but thirteen years of age, and which has borne front not only in the present help to Dr. Murray's interpational enterprise, but in classical works like his Recent Examplifications of False Philology (1872), Modern Engish (1873), On English Aldectives in—able (1877), and others more continuers, and with the sound of the highest recognition from the University of Oxfo

Though seventy years old, Dr. Hall has few of the infirmities of age, and is as capable of work as if he had the light burden of only half the number of his years on him. His health being such, with his experience of seventy years, he can work all the better. He lives a quiet life in a zery pleasant and retired corner of England, near the North Sea. He was never known to live fast. While in India he led an abstemious life and seems not to have departed from it. His love has always ocen his books; his garden affords him no small delight; and he feels measure in renewing to; poor. He has not visited America for iventy-one years and hopes to end his days—which we hope will be prolonged—in England, where he has resided for twenty-six years. After his return from India he travelled largely and saw much of various mations and peoples. During the sixteen years that he was in this country, he contributed largely to the Bibliotheca Indica and the fournal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal.

Here are the nett results of three of the last examinations of the Counta Doiversity .—

	Ba	helar of Arts.			_
1	Trible	Honours	• • •	••	2
Honour Course {	Double	Honours			11
Honour Course {	Single	Honour			83
Pass Course					350
		First Arts.
First Division		•••			61
Second Division		•••			324
Third Division					903
		Entrance.
Fust Division	•••		•••		541
Second Division	•••	•••			1208
Third Division	• • •	•••	••	• • •	991

THE Bengal Times has been let off with the following apology. We have no space to notice it this week.

"I, E. C. Kemp, Editor and Proprietor of the Bengal Times, do hereby, without reserve and limitation, withdraw, cancel and annul, every imputation and insimuation made, in respect to, and concerning B door Saroda Prosad Surkar, Deputy Magistrate, Dacca, in his public and private capacity, in whatsoever form, it or they may have appeared, between the months of October and November last past, and also, subsequently, in the said paper, Bengal Times; and I regret, that such imputations and insimuations, which are entirely unfounded, wholly supustifiable, utteily devoid of truth, and grossly defamatory—should have been allowed publication in my said paper. I express, in a penitent ppint, my sincere sorrow for the same, and I retract them all unrepervedly, and applogise to the said Baboo Stroda Prosad Strkar, for heir insertion. For this unconditional apology Baboo Sarode Prosad Surkar, for heir insertion. For this unconditional apology Baboo Sarode Prosad Surkar has kindly consented to withdraw the proceedings pending against me and my printer, Shak Mahomed Hossein, and not to institute, or take, any further proceedings, Civil or Criminal, against us. I undertake to publish this apology in 3 successive issues of my paper, the Bengal Times, and also in the local papers, the Dacca Gazette and the East, in two successive issues of the same."

MR. Walter Davies, Honorary Magistrate, Calcutta, sentenced a did wan, in the employ of Mr. Grossman, to a fine of Rs. 20, in default three weeks' rigorous imprisonment, for assaulting Mr. Anderson. According to the report in a morning paper, Mr. Anderson was driving in a hack ney phesion, the driver of which, seeing the accused in the centre of the road, called out to him to move away. The min, instead of so doing, stopped the horse, and going up to the driver, assaulted him. At this stage, Mr. Anderson remonstrated, and the accused, resenting the interference, took a stick from another durwan who was close by and aimed two blows at Mr. Anderson, who warded them off, one blow grazing his head and another his arm. Unless the attack was pie meditated, it is difficult to understand that the durwan could muster up courage for it. The durwan was stan ling in the middle of the road, where he should not have been disturbed unless the driver was justified in abandoning his side of the road.

The office-master in a first class mercantile firm in this city belaboured, a high native officer in the establishment with blows to unconsciousness. The Sibeb kicked the Bibbo down the stairs and when the Bibbo took shelter in a conveyance on the Queen's highway his mister pursued him there, took him out, and thrashed him taliantly. The native assistant was unable to attend office for fever that had set in. He was, however, sent for and rewarded for his forbearance with an increase of Rs. 25 to his pay. He would have gained more if he could return the blows. This is not the first time that the office-mister has so treated the native assistant. We wish he had a Patrian under him who would have set him right and taught him to govern his temper.

MR John Croft, successively of Messis Graham & Co., Croft Wells & Co. of this city, is under trial, in the Scaldth Magistracy, formanufacturing liquor without license. The charges are--

"That he on or about he 22nd day of Nord, 1895, at 40, Tangas Road, and in his possession for 5 de a greater quantity than is allowed by law of excessible atticles, 2023, liquids and spirits, without a licence or pass and thereby commutated an offence punishable under section of Act VII of 1898. (2) Having for a period of about four months from January to Aoril, 1895, at the place affires and, manufactured without a licence excissible articles, to wit, liquids, and thereby committed a offence punishable under section 53 of the said Act."

As one of the few Europeans whose heads were not turned by the furious opposition to the libert Bill, as the first European who tried to mitigate the mischief done by Mr. Beurson, as almost the only non-official European who was present at the grand staticase to welcome back Lord Riphy, Mr. Coff, true to himself, waived his right to be tried by a European and entirely submitted himself to the jurisdiction and adjudiction of the Busion Magistrate. He pleads I not guilty, and asked for time as his Counsel and solicitor were absent from Calcutta. One witness from Messrs Markenzie Lyalwas examined and the case postponed to the 8th of May.

In the interest of a particular person, attempts, overt and covert, are being made to dissuale electric from returning Di. Rashbeharv Ghose to the Bong d Council from the Burdwin Division, H. is decidedly the best candidate that could be returned. He had already proved his worth in the Chineil. Fae objection tused is that he is disqualified by non-residence in the Division The rules about residence were never meant to be strictly enforced Even if they were, they could not affect him. He is as much a resident of Burdwan is of Currer. In Burdwer he has he home and family and munt is a comb senior. Every year he visits his native place, where he had stablished and maintains a school, has dug tracks and otherwood interested houself in his native village. Another chart against him is that he seeks the Lower Chamber as a stepping some to a Copper. He has been in both the Councils and done good service. He now comes forward because he has been asked, in a iswer of a call of duty, and is willing to continue in the Bengal Council for the full term of he be honoured with the choice of the Burdwan Municipalities.

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, & , may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all knots. If ill particulars, including many unsolited testimonial, and newspaper press natices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Building, 39, Victoria Sireet, Westinfuster, London, S. W.

A lelegram to a contemporary states that "Prince Nastrulla's followers pocketed all the silver spoons and forks in the bung flow they occupied in Bombay. The annexation of these articles appears to have been simple and natural—discovery causing not a single blush to dye an Afghan cheek. When the indignant G is boy—we may presume he was a Goa boy—in charge, hinted at restitution, he was infortiged that the confiscation of the spoons and forks was strictly according to precedent—an 'Afghan custom. Afghan customs, such as trees, offer the possibility of picturesque and unlimited development. A Guidhall banquet would offer interesting scope for their illustration, or, indeed, almost any form of hospitality in England. Various worshipful bodies bent on the entertainment of His Highness had better take note."

Yes, there is precedent. The Khan of Khelat set the example. He was allowed to take away the articles after a report by the Foreign Office to the Viceroy houself. Not that the Khan had waited for the result of the reference which was, of course, made unknown to him, for he had appropriated the articles after the dinner was over, quelly and as a matter of right, without the slightest suspicion, that he was doing anything which anybody in the world would disapprove of The matter is not without an explanation. It may very probably ce that when the guest in Afgnanistan happens to be superior in social position to the host, the latter is bound to make over to tre former every asticle used by him in course of the hospitable e testamment. Prince Nasirulla is an intelligent man. He will certhely de that Afghan customs, when so inconsistent with Western : mons of property, are not enforced by the members of his retinue while travelling in foreign lands. Travel blunts the angularities of conviduals. There is every hope of these Omrahs coming back, Act their European tour, with notions of ownership as correct as to se of my Anglo-Indian journalist while not dealing with attract, tice paragriphs and items of news in pipers included within his e , bange,

The ideas of hospitality in the East are widely different from those in the West. Eastern enquerte requires that the guest should not go into ary expense, while under the root of the host, and that he should take away some memento of the hospitality offered and enjoyed. The Lince of Wales, while he realized his "dream of dark women and ewelled donkeys," was presented with the golden spoons and torks he had used in a native entertainment, at Behar, in his honour. His my d brother too, before him, had been similarly presented with a ver Hookah and a gold uttarden and Pandan, at Calcutta. Trece are particular Bradas (religious rites) performed by Hindu des of the wealther classes, in which the custom is invariaby followed of making over to the Brahmans fed every article of tries, silver, or gold that is used by them on the occasion. In foregal, among a certain section, it is still the custom for the consinstant to claim every article used by him in his first visit to his father-in-law's after marriage. In this connection may be neutroned the custom, widely prevalent in Bengal and Gaugetic riotia at least, of poorer Brahmans taking away, after eating their fit as much of the costly yiands as the host is able to give them, Indians do not use spoons and forks. If they did, perhaps the custom es carrying away those also, after the manner of their Gándhára neighcoms, would have been noticeable among them to this day. In the expressive language of the Bengal gluttons-we cannot call them continuands—the practice of bearing away food from festive entertainment- in the houses of the well-to-do, is called Cch inda-bandhan which has its corruption in Cchandan or Bandhan. The philosophy of these customs is not for to seek. In most Asiatic countries, the quest is viewed as a sacred person. The Sanskrit scriptures declare um to be an embodiment of all the deities. The house-holder is enjoined to withhold nothing from his guest. We read in the Mahabharata that Krishna achieved great renown by playing the host, for period of six months, to the highly capricious and irritable wette Durvásas, who proceeded to the length of yoking Rukmini, the favourite queen of his host, to a car on which he journeyed for a while, whipping the delicate queen for forcing her to mend her pace. Talk of the annexation of spoons and forks after that?

In our last number, speaking of the maladministration of criminal pastice by the Nadiya Magistracy, we referred to a recently transferred to Deputy Magistrate. We have since been informed that the connection of the said Deputy with the religious syndicate formed for "floating" a new shrine at Meapore, is more nominal than real The idea of turning Meapore into Mayapore and of making it a rival to Nadiya originated in the fertile brain of the late Bhakti-Binoc Deputy of Kishinghur. But he knew that his brother Deputy, as an inhabitant of Nadiya, and as the leader of the Chaitanyaite Gossams and Babajis of that place, had influence enough to spoil the Bhakti-Benodian game, and so he managed to get a possible enemy into his camp by offerring him the nominal Chatemanship of his Board. The installation ceremony of the Meapore idol was held in the name of the Brahman Deputy. He would not, perhaps, mind obliging a brother official religiously bent. But we think we may safely give him credit for understanding that two birds in hand are much better than one in the bush; and we feel no doubt that as he has a prospering Chaitanyaite chapel in his own house, and as his has acquired a share in the ancient and well-established shrine of the great Vishmuvite prophet of Bengal, he can have no motive to use his influence and opportunities for the benefit of a rival concera now ii. the embryo stage.

HERE is a characteristic paragraph from an Anglo-Indian contemporary:

"We regret to hear that another of those lamentable accidents, which prove that casual discipline is not wise in the case of punkah coolies, occurred in a boarding-house in Harrington Street A punkah coolie was neglecting his business, and the gentleman who employed him remonstrated, probably with his foot, as the punkah coolie had immediately afterwards to be taken to hospital, where he has since died. The case is extremely awkward for the gentleman concerned, who has to have left Calcutta next week. It doubtless goes without saying that the punkha-wallah was the victim of his own enlarged spleen, and that the blow he received was of an extremely slight character, but the circumstance is one which should once more impress the general public with the advisability of other methods of stimulating the energy of this particular domestic."

The above deserves study and is capable of yielding many lessons There is mention of "regret" upon learning that another of those "Lumentable accidents" has occurred. It is, of course, an "accident." That is certain; and the accident only proves that it is not wise to inflict "casual discipline" on punkah coolies. Many such accidents, since the first invention of the punkah, had happened, but these could not clearly inculcate the unwisdom of such discipline. The necessity of another accident for that purpose could not be regarded to entirely obviated. The story of the punkah coolie's neglect and the gendem in's practical remonstrance with well-shod feet are invariable concomitants of such accidents, and no one should, therefore, stop to notice them particularly. The removal to the hospital and the death are incidents of the same kind, which also should not arrest the reader for a moment. There has been no post morten examination, but the writer in our contemporary has no doubt that the deceased coole had an entarged spleen, and not simply that, but also that "the the blow he received was of an extremely slight character." It does not appear whether the writer was present at the spot to notice the very mild measure of muscular energy that was put forth in the act of remonstrance, or whether the st nament is due to his own experience of that energy in consequence of his having ever before been himself its object. The death, however is deplorable, not because of a human being having been sent out of the world untimely, not because of the poignant grief into which the deceased's parents or wife or children would be plunged not because of, perhaps, half-a-dozen helpless human beings being de prived of their means of sustenance, for who knows that the deceased was not the only earning member of his family? No; considerations such as these do not deserve to be indulged. In a land of niggers what matters it whether there is one ingger the less or more? The real circumstance to deplore in the matter is its "extreme awkwardness," for it is calculated to delay the departure, which has been fixed, of the good gentleman for home. The disappointment felt by him is certainly of tragic interest. In the hands of an Æschylus how affecting could it not be made? The trunks have all been filled with the clothes necessary for the voyage. The passage has been secured. Letters have been written by the mail. The very day has been named. When, lo, a wrenched migger, with an enlarged spleen, takes it into his stupic his skin by way of legitimate remonstrance! Nucle in tears annot move one to deeper pity. The grief of Œdipus himself is nothing compared to the sorrow brought about by such a disappointment. While, as regards the nigger that has whreathed his last and has taken an eternal firewell of his fither, mother, wife, and children, he has only furnished an additional example of that inveterate hostility which the people of his race bear to their white fellow-subjects-an hostility that is not ashamed to interfere, of sec purpose as it should seem, with definite arrangements made by a gentleman going home-

In a later number our contemporary says :---

IN a later number our contemporary says

"Our readers will be relieved to learn that the punk invallah, yesters day reported the victim of a combination of enlarged spleen and his master's boot, came to his end only in the imagination of a number of his fellow-Ayans. He was discharged from hospital yesterday, and various embarrassing possibilities are happily averted. The incident, however, points an obvious moral, which will probably not be lost upon either the the punk inwallah community or the sahib-log of Calcutta."

So, when the writer was under the impression that the coolie had dieds he was sure that death had been due to enlarged spleen and that the character of the inputy inflicted had been extremely slight. As soon, however, as he heard that death had not ensued, he had nothing but all for the crafty relatives of the injured coole-"his fellow-Aryans -who had been guilty of the extraordinary offence of bearing the man to hospital for stanching his wounds, if any, or for a proper internal examination. The writer does not tell us as to how the rumour f the man's death first arose. From the paragraph we have already commented upon, it is, nowever, evident that the believer in the enlarged spleen and the gentleness of the touch had himself credited the story of death. His imagination, therefore, was no less at fault than that of the poor "fellow-Aryans" of the man who are held up to

REIS & RAYVET

Saturday, May 1, 1895

RELIGION DES VEDA.

DR. Oldenberg is one of the greatest of German Orientalists. He is the author of a Life of Buddha which has been translated into Engish. He is also one of the scholars employed on the series called the Sacred Books of the East. The opinion of such a savant about the ancient Vedic religion is certainly entitled to great weight. But it does, not seem that in his recent work entitled Religion des Veda he has been able to rise dove the level of thought that has been attained by his collaborateurs in the same field. Their industry in prosecuting the necessary researches deserves the highest praise. Europe, however, is no more the proper place for the study of the religious systems of the world, than Iceland is for the cultryation of Botany. Europe knows only one form of religion namely, Christianity. In India, every form of faith may be found in the living state, from the ancient and very nearly defunct nature-worshipping Vedic cult, to the snares invented by the latest patron-saints of the most unmitigated forms of wickedness and immorality.

In an article on the evolution of the theocratic art which appeared in these columns in November 1893, we pointed out, as clearly as we could, what the true place of the Vedic cult is among the ther religious systems of the world. We will not repeat what we then said. Suffice it to state that the primary characteristic of the Vedic religion is that it provides its priesthood with a machinery for exacting only ghee, meat and wine from the people, by promising to bring about rainfall in return. That was enough to satisfy the aspirations and wants of our primitive priests. Their success naturally led their descendants to make more exorvitant demands on their followers, and by methods !

less wasteful than fire worship. Hence, the Vedic cult has been very nearly superseded by idol-wor-shipping and Guru-honoming religions. Neither of these two forms of faith involves any waste, and so far they are on an equal footing. But each of them has its own advantages and disadvantages. Idolworship, in many of its aspects, resembles indirect taxation, and has, therefore, considerable advantage over Guru-worship which is always more difficult to enforce. Idols are inanimate objects, and it is not possible, in the name of a stone, metallic or wood en image, to command the enjoyment of many things that the Guru might desire. Hence, in modern Hindu society, idol-worship and Guru-worship have existed side by side. The Hindu priest's ambition is always to have his own self-accepted as equivalent to Siva or Krishna. To enforce such homage is not always easy, and, lience, the more cautious and unambitious priests encourage idol-worship, while Guru-worship is enjoined by only a few autocrats of a domineering nature. To make an attempt to measure the spirituality in either the Vedic cult or in any of the modern idol-worshipping and Guru worshipping phases of faith, is simply Love's Labour Lost. A great many of them do, no doubt, deal in a little genuine morality. But the poison within the pill is very nearly the same in all cases. It is absolutely useless to enquire whether any of them have not a thicker coating of moral sugar than the others. With reference to Dr. Oldenberg's Religion des Veda, the following notice appears in an English

"Since the time of its discovery by the western world of the exist ence of the Vedic literature much has been written on the subject and many theories advanced, while opinions on it have ranged from extrawigant ealogy on the one sale, to majoral depression on the other A work like Professor Oldenberg's 'Rangion des Veda' strikes the mean tray agant enlogy on the one side, to usust depression on the other A work like Professor Oldenberg's 'R digon des Veda's stries the one obstween these extremes. His view is a strictly impartial one. It many cases his theories differ from those of his predecessors or contemporaties in the same field, and as a tale his arguments consince by the more scientific nature of their method. With regard to his conception of Vede religion as a whole three will probably be disappoint ment felt by those who incline, from whatever teason, to regard it some of a highly spiritual type. Professor Oldenberg shows it to have been characterised by a very worldly spirit and to have been almost destritte of the elements which might have transformed it into a mora force capable of moulding the life of the nation or the individual—it came early under the blighting oil ience of the priesthood, an influence which accounts for much of the extravagant artificiality of Vede literature. Especially interesting is the professor's treatment of the survivids, from prehistoric periods, of religious thought represented by the magic spells, rites and incanations of the Vajur and Atharva Vedas as well as by the remnants of feish worship and intermine traceable through the whole hierature. The subject is exhaustively treated in the third section of the book on the Cult of the Veda. Passing from a general account of the Vedac gods, Professor Oldenberg proceeds to treat the principal defines such as India and Agni in detail. These were originally defied natural forces, but as time went on their original features were lost. So with the myths relating to the original features were lost. So with the myths relating to the aggregates of such indicates which the professor warms us from misriking for the aggregates of such molecules which his provessor of the survivaluration. The book apart from its ments as a contribuaggregates of such molecules which may owe their existence to cluses aggregates or such injudences within may owe man existence to choose like poetical invention. The book apart from its merits as a contribution to Indian research has a scientific value which should commend it to a wider circle of readers than is usually found for works of this kind."

The writer of the notice seems to be of opinion that because Professor Oldenberg does not take an extreme view, therefore his doctrines must be held to be unexceptionable. The idea that the right way to pursue is to steer a middle course, is quite as fallacious in navigation as in philosophy. In the concluding passages of the above extract, the writer has propounded a very important fact of our theological history. But he has not made any at tempt to explain why the deified forces of nature came in time to be regarded as entitled to worship, quite irrespective of their capacities to give us rain heat, light, wealth, or health. The fact is that in primitive times the priest has to promise tangible service. As the result very often shows that he has not the powers to fulfill such promises, he takes the earliest opportunity to shift his ground, and to impress upon the lay members of the community the belief that there is great merit in worshipping the gods without looking for any reward.

THE ALLEGED IDENTITY OF SAYANA AND MADHAVA.

Among the names most renowned as theological and juridical commentators in Sanskrit literature, those of Sayana and Madhava enjoy such preminence that questions relating to their personal history cannot but be regarded as highly interesting. That these two revered names were borne by two different individuals, is amply proved by the accounts obtainable from the numerous works ascribed to them. In some of these they are expressly spoken of as brothers whose father's name was Mayana, and whose mother's name was Srimati. In spite of the evidence thus afforded, the late Dr. Burnell, in his Vansa Brahman propounded the dectrine that Sayana and Madhava were one and the same individual, and his view has been adopted not only by some of the best Euro pean scholars, but also by some Hindu authors, as, for instance, Mr. R. C. Dutt. In Sir Monier Williams's recent work on Bramhanism and Hinduism, the learned author states in a footnote that the preponderance of evidence seems now to be against the identity of Sayana and Madhava. In the body of his work, however, he has given countenance to the view of the late Dr. Burnell, and there can be no doubt that European scholars genetally still consider the question as an open one. In this state of things, it is highly gratifying to find that the subject has been taken ip for discussion by a learned Tailangi scholar named G. Sri Rama-Murti. This gentleman is the author of a large number of Telegu works on the history of the Decean, and holds at present a high appointment under the Maharaja of Vizianagram. The cucumstances which led him to interest himself in the question and the manner in which he conducted his investigations are described as follows .---

"Several modern English Orientalists have attempted to write the history of this Madhavachary, the great annotator of the Vedas, but want of sufficient information dissuaded them from completing the same. Mr. Max Müller in his annotations to Rig Veda, dwells apon the subject and regrets the lack of further information. He stated that he wrote to the late Dr. Burnell, the well known Orientalist, then living in Southern India, asking him to obtain information on certain points, by making enquiries at Sringeri where the successors of Madhavachary now reside, but Dr. Burnell could not make the enquiry, as the Guru of Sringeri was absent in Northern India, but replied to the queries proposed by Mr. Max Muller from such data as he then possessed. Mr. Max Müller, not satisfied with this information, was of opinion that some of the points raised still required careful investigation.

About May 1884, I happened to go to Madras, for the purpose of getting certain information for my history of the country, now in preparation, and I came across the remarks made by Mr. Max Muller about the life of Madhavachary. As a native historian and in inhabitant of the neighbouring district, I thought it but right on my part to attempt to help the great Orientalist, by ascertaining these facts from the Guru of Stingeri. When I enquired as to the Guru's whereabouts, I was informed that he was about to go on a pilgrimage and might not return to his head-quarters for 30 or 40 years. So I at once hastened to Stingeri, which is situated in the south-western corner of the Mysore Territory on the Western Ghauts. Fortunately, I met the Guru who kindly gave me copies of the old works that contain the history of the various Gurus that ascended the Mantra Simhasanam of Stingeri. I had already collected some meterials on the subject which were at Cocanada in the Godavery District, where I live, hence the work could not be ammediately commenced. In the course however of a few years I was lable to write a book giving an account of the life of Madhavachary, in the Telugu language. At the suggestion of some friends who have read this work, I have prepared this abridgment of what I have written in Telugu.

 See the Introduction to Sayana's Commentary on the Taittirya Sanhita. See also the treatise on Hindu Law called Parasar Madhavya.

The works consulted by me in the completion of the life of Madhavachary are as follow:—I. Vidyaranya Saka, 2 Mani Manjaribhedini, 3 Kalamadhavam, 4. Vedardha Prakasika, 2 Mani Manjaribhedini, 3 Kalamadhavam, 4. Vedardha Prakasika, 2 Manada Acharya Madhavam, 6. Panchadasi, 7. Guru Parampara, 8, Caunada Acharya Cheritram, 9, Madhaveeyam, and some other unimportant books. Of these books, those numbered 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 are printed and published, and of the others I have lately procured copies. Excepting the second book all the printed books give the pedigree of Madhavachary's family. They say that the name of Madhava's mother was Srimati, his father was Mayana; Sayana and Bhoganada were his brothers. His Sutram was that of Apasthamaba, his Sakha (branch) that of Yajurveda, his Gotram that of Bharadwaja."

In the list of the works of Madhava given in the pamphlet under notice, the author has not included many of the most important works of the great political minister of the Vizianagiam Rajas, as, for instance, the Jaiminya Nya Mala. If Mr. Murti had referred to the Introduction to the Anandasram edition of this great work, he would have found many important authorities in support of the conclusion at which he has arrived. Mr. Murti has not given a list of the works ascribed to Sayana. But he refers to one of these, namely, the Yajana Tantra Sudbanidla, and says that in it the author Sayana, speaks of himsolf as the son of Mayana and the younger brother of Madhava. That statement, if similted to be geunine, is as conclusive about the non-identity of Sayana and Madhava, as the collophons usually found in the works of Madhava himself. Mr. Murti makes no mention of the work called "Madhaviya Dhatur Vritti" by Sayana. This book contains the very same kind of evidence that Mr. Murti has found in the Yajana Tantra Sudhanidhi. At the end of each Gane in the Dhatur Vritti, Sayana speaks of himself as the son of Mayana, and the brother of Madhava. The original words are Iti Sri Purva Dakshina Pasihima Saviuara Ilivwara Sri Kari Raja Suta Sangama Maharaja Mahamantrana Mayana Sutena Maukas. Sabodorena Sayanachoryena Birachitáyam Maakov,yan Dhatu Prittan, etc.

Mr. Murti would have done well to have referred to these fact and authorities. However, what he has done is highly creditable to him, and we congratulate him on the success he has achieved in collecting the valuable evidence that he has condensed in his book. We congratulate also the Maharaja of Vizianagiam for having in his service such a learned and painstaking scholar. There are few Rajas in the country, now-a-days, the atmosphere of whose durbating pure enough to be congenial to the temperaments of such good and learned men.

Letter to the Editor.

A CURE FOR SNAKE-BITF.

Sir,---Maharajkumar Sahib Jeswant Singh, heir-apparent, of the Sailana State, C. I., has discovered a plant which works as a sure antidote to cobra venom. It has been tried with success in many instances. Those that are desirous of trying the remedy and make sure of its virtues, are requested to apply to the undersigned, who will be glad to supply it to them free of all charges, with directions how to use it, and who will feel obliged by their communicating the results of their experiments to him.

N. M. Khory, Minister, Sailana, C.I.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL CONGRESS THE VICEROY'S SPEECH.

The projectors of the Congress were fortunate in having secured the patronage of the Viceroy from the very beginning. Sovereigns and their representatives have in all ages, and especially in the present, shown their willingness to extend their patronage to any movement which is calculated to promote the general weal. This is certainly very gracious on their part, considering how little time is left them after the conscientious performance of their own legitimate duties,—the duties of the state, involving the regulation of its affairs as regards its external and internal relations.

Next to the maintenance of peace within and without, the preservation of the health of the people is now recognized as a legi- man might well envy. In describing the medical profession timate duty which it would be suicidal for any State to neglect, and the qualities of the heart which the exercise of it calls forth, timate duty which it would be suicidal for any State to neglect.

The medical department forms accordingly a most important department of all civilized Governments. Considering the as yet uncertain state of the medical sciences, the differences of opinion which prevail in and devide the medical profession, and the pro-tound ignorance of matters medical which, from want of general education and enlightenment, still prevail among the laity, it must be admitted that it is no ordinary task for any Government to keep an eve over its medical department so as to maintain it in its full we have been led to this observation in view of the tendency to stereotyped conservatism and a bigoted and liberal resistance to new discoveries to which men in official positions and power become but too prone.

We were present at the inaugural meeting, and it has appeared to us not a little singular that the Viceroy's speech should have appeared in a mutilated form in the medical journal, which, being under the editorship of a most important member of the Congress, no less than its projector and one of its joint secretaries, was expected to give faithful reports of the speeches made, addresses delivered, and papers read at the congress.

The Englishman, however, has done a service by giving a full report of the Viceroy's speech, which we look upon as a most important deliverance.

His Excellency began with expressing his inability to understand how it happened that this was the first Indian Medical Conference. Lord Rigin must have remembered that medical congress, national dinternational, were being held for upwards of thirty years in Europe, and, therefore, could not help wondering how in the face of this fact Indian medical men did not till now realize the importance of such assemblies. Perhaps it would not be alrogether idle and unprofitable to speculate as to what could have been the reasons of this apparent apathy and indifference, certainly want of earnestness and enthusiasm on the part of the medical men of India.

From what we have said in our last number about the composition of the Medical Profession in India, it must be evident that the idea of a medical congress could not possibly originate in the indigenous practitioners, the Kavirajs and Hakims. men, though as we have said they do command a ress in practice which is sometimes striking, cannot possibly rive, from their absolute ignorance of biology, any comprehensive idea of medicine as a science with all its relations to other sciences. Besides, these men are so widded to their authorities that they cannot conceive of any possibility of advance upon their teachings, and necessarily look upon all progress with suspicion and distrust. And though some of the most enlightened of them have been startled by modern discoveries in medicine and surgery, their eyes have not been sufficiently opened for the reception of new truths and the improvement of their respective systems. Hence we could not expect them to entertain the idea of medical congresses for the purpose of taking a survey of the progress already made in order to lay down lines for further progress.

The idea of a medical congress, then, could only originate in the scientific section of the profession, and the hom capathic branch of it being in the position described above, the idea of a congress, however originated, could only be carried out by the oldest and the largest branch, which as we have seen, constitutes the dominant majority. Now here in India this dominant majority is formed almost entirely by Government officials, in whose exclusive monopoly are still all the most important poets, and who alone, therefore, enjoy opportunities of observation and research from which non-official medical men in a manner are excluded.

It must be said to the credit of the Indian Medical Service that the members of it have not neglected their opportunities, that as far as their multifarious administrative duties have permitted, they have done much to advance the medical and the collateral sciences But we are of opinion that much more could have been done if they had not formed an exclusive service, if they had not been over burdened with work, and if the heads of the service had not been pampered with fat pay at the expense of the lower grades. Much more could have been done it the non-otheral members of the protession had been allowed free and fair play in the race of compermon

Nothing so forcibly supports the view we have taken as the fact at which the Viceroy expressed his surpuse, and the fact that the ilea of the recent Congress was conceived by a gentle.nan who not belong to the service.

We have dwelt on this subject at some length because, as must now have been apparent, of its great importance, an! we trust that it will lead to a revision of the polly of the Government as regards the recruiting of its medical service

We now proceed to confider the other parts of the Victor's speech. As a non-professional atterance on a pro-casional rule of operation as a non-prior server interface on a pro-casion of edge of it cannot be expected to a sugo one riticism. Nevertheless, a careful period of it shows no lit is characterized by an amount of thoughtfulness and one of which a server essential of the state of or water a registered by Lord Elgin spoke like a veteran professor delivering an introductory lecture. "No effort of oratory is requisite," said His Excellence, "to describe the noble profession, whose chief aim is the reliation of human suffering, and which offers opportunities to those who follow it for the exercise of some of the highest qualities of which our nature is capable, the prompt decision, the steadiness of purpose, the courageous, or, if need be, the heror devotion to duty which we sometimes specially claim for man, the intuitive instinct, the quick and ready sympathy, the tender care which we gladly confess finds its highest examples in women." How ingeniously and beautifully is it here shown that it would be to the advantage of the patient world if the medical profession were followed by both the sterner and the gentler sexes, each having its special and necessary sphere of usefulness.

The Vicerov then assured the Congress that the Government of India was not indifferent to its proceeding, because he said, "no one will dray that one of the first duties of the organized Government is to consider how the health of their living within its jurisdiction can be improved or maintained." He Excellency with a thorough mastery and grasp of the subject added, --- "As it appears to me, there are two distinct lines on which to approach this question; we may either pursue an enquiry into the nature of the diseases which specially affect the country, or we may turn our attention to the habits and mode of life of the people in relation to the prevalence of disease. It is obvious that on both sides great differences will arise according to varying circumstances of time and place. The diseases of the tropic, or, at any rate, the conditions under which we are attacked by them, are not the same as those of the temperate zone. The customs of the East are not those of Europe, and it cannot, I think, but be advantageous that the circumstances which affect us in India should be considered here in India."

Lord Elgin confined his observations to the second branch of this inquiry, namely, the connection of the habits and customs of the people with the subject of Public Health, as one with which Government was chiefly concerned. "It was here that the non-professional student of the subject," said he, "feels more at liberty to intrude, and indeed I cannot deny that occasionally a certain amount of jealousy of scientific sanitation is found amongst those who have to deal practically with questions which arise. need not say that I have no sympathy myself with the jealousy, but I must honestly add that I think it sometimes finds an excuse I will not say a justification --- when theories are ridden too hard. I hold very strongly that in sanitary matters, as in many others, the best way to secure real progress is to begin by forming a public opinion in its favour, and that action in advance of, or in opposition to, public opinion, is often apt to retard, rather than promote the cause we have at heatt.'

The Viceroy thus handled with admirable delicacy a most delicate and difficult subject. As ruler of a vast population with timehonored habits, customs, creeds, and prejudices more varied than the races of which that population is composed, he had to interpose between them and the scientific sanitarian who, in the ardor of his conviction, thinks that he cannot have any respect for prejudices and creeds and customs and habits of any kind when they interfere with health.

Having, in the course of his recent tours, met a large number of representatives of municipal committees and other local bodies who, in their addresses to His Excellency, always laid stress on what they had done, or proposed to do, in the matter of water supply and the like, Lord Elgin could not help noticing not only that there were some righs of the growth of public opinion in India on sanitary some rights of the growth of public opinion in India on sanitary questions, but that public opinion in England had not gone much further. He related the following incident that occurred in the course of his travels as evidence in point. "I was walking one day through a village in a remote district. The ruins that lay about it bore testimony to greater importance in days gone by. There was, I was informed, no pretence of any sanitary arrangement, or water-supply, and the people suffered severely at certain seasons from fever. But I was struck forcibly by the fact that, in house after house which I parsed, the doorway and its surroundings were scrupulously clean. My mind reverted to many an instance where the contrast was not favourable to Western civilization."

Candour and outspokenness are the noble characteristics of the genuine Englishman, and this candid comparison of Western and Eastern civilization, is regards sanitary matters, shows that Lord Elgin has not allowed aimself to be prejudiced against everything Indian by Anglo Lulian influence. His Excellency thus meets any objection this might be taken to the inference he has drawn from a solitary instance: "I know the danger of arguing from a singular i stan e, but I cin only use the opportunities I possess, and all I what a aggregation this little experience of mine is the n ces "v of tol rance. We hear a good deal of the opposition to aid prijulace on the officer arising from custom. I should like to seek for and glidy acknowledge, the encourage which if me example is worth anything, I believe, can also be found therein. Somethings, of course, we must insist upon, but where there is a fair question of expediency,—where the difficulty comes from religious feeling, local customs, financial pressure, or even personal prejudice, I believe there is only one safe rule which I ventured to define to a friend who once asked my advice in a case of the kind as 'unlimited patience.' There can be no surer test of the sincerity of a man's belief in his cause than the good-humoured acceptance of any reverse in the struggle on the ground that it can only be temporary."

Thus, throughout, the Viceroy spoke as a statesman of liberal and advanced views and as one well-informed even in a technical and professional suoject. Nothing could be more sound and practical than the advice he gave as to how reforms generally are to be carried out. Tolerance and unlimited patience must indeed be the qualities which should characterize all true reformers. Of course it is not denied that there are, and may be, evils arising from custom, prejudice, and religious convictions which may so in-juriously and deeply affect life and health and morals that telerance becomes impossible and even unlimited patience gets exhausted. For instance, it is not possible to have any tolerance of and patience with Sati and human sacrifice, certain forms of religious practices which essentially consist in drunkenness and debauchery, the massing of large numbers of human beings in limited spaces in free defiance of the simplest and clearest sanitary laws, &c. And yet defiance of the simplest and clearest sanitary laws, &c. And yet Government has only been able to deal effectually with evils which entail direct loss of life; and is yet impotent to deal with evils which undermine morals, or which indirectly lead to sacrifice of life. Hence even the most enlightened Government must feel its strength in enlightened public opinion before it can venture to eradicate evils which are flagrantly outrageous. The Viceroy's advice, therefore, remains practically unassailable.

We have spoken with unqualified commendation of Lord Elgin's speech so far as it has touched on one of the chief functions of the medical profession. We wish we could stop here. But duty compels us just to speak one word about a subject which we look as of vital importance to the profession. His Excellency urged reformers to cultivate the virtue of tolerance. The cultivation of this virtue is no less imperative upon those who, in the fancied possession of all truth, resist all reform, and are intolerant of any innovation upon their preconceived opinions and ideas, had expected from His Excellency some expression opinion regarding the intolerance and bigotry which the majority of the profession to the present day are guilty of in respect of certain members of their body who have happened to differ from them in matters of theory and practice.

We cannot believe that a state-man of Lord Elgin's general culture and information could be ignorant of the New School of medicine. The promulgation of Homospathy as a system of of medicine. The promultation of Homospathy as a system of medicine based upon a natural law of healing superior to all other laws, and therefore constituting the greatest reform of the Healing Art, is over eighty year, old. The reform sprung up in the midst of the profession. The reformer, on the admission of his contemporaries, some of whom were his bitterest enemies, was contemporaries, some of whom were his bitterest enemies, was one of the greatest medical philosophers of the century, remarkable alike for his vast general erudition and encyclopadic knowledge of all the branches of medical science. The system, notwithstanding the most violent opposition of the majority of the profession, has been making solid progress, daily gavining adherents not only from amongst members of the profession of admitted reputation for learning and professional ability, but from amongst the most intelligent and educated laymen. All this could only arise from the practical success of the system. this could only arise from the practical success of the system, which is all that non-profession men care for, however much it may be decided and explained away by interested processing men. This practical success carries more weight with those who owe to it their recovery from diseases pronounced incurable by old school practitioners, than all the theoretical arguments that are advanced against the system. It is this practical success which has gained for it the support of all respectable lay journals throughout the world. We have not come across a single such journal which has not condemned in the strongest language the opposition to the system still being carried on by men who are never tired of boasting of their scientific culture.

Admitting then, as we have seen Lord Elgin has done, that it is a legitimate duty of a civilised Government to look after the health of those under its jurisdiction, admitting, as we have seen, it is impossible not to do it, that the homoeopathic system of medicine not only professes to be based upon strictly scientific methods, but by its practical success is daily more and more gaining the confidence of the public, that is, gradually encroaching upon the domain of the old school which notwithstanding still enjoys the exclusive petronage of our Government, admitting these two facts, the inference becomes irresistible that the recognition or otherwise of such a system cannot be a matter of indifference to that Government. Not to speak of its immense therapeutic superiority which leads to con-siderable indirect financial economy, the very great direct finan-cial economy which would follow the adoption of the system ought to commend it to any Government. It was, therefore, a great disappointment to us that Lord Elgin should not have availed himself of the splendid opportunity that was presented by the first Indian Medical Congress to allude to this subject of such grave inportance to the people and the Government.

Considering the sensitiveness of men of medicine, and the temper and attitude of the dominant school to the new school, the subject, we admit, would have been a most delicate one to deal with. But from the way in which his Lordship dealt with deal with. sanitary enthusiasts, we are persuaded that if any one was able to deal with the subject we speak of it was His Excellency. There is one point in connection with the medical profession which might have furnished a justification for a passing allusion to the anomaly presented by it in its division into two schools, one of which is so dominated by the other as to be in a hopeless minority in the matter of urging its claims to public and government patronage, a fact which stands in the way of its further advancing medicine itself, and of doing that amount of good to humanity which it could otherwise do. The point is the disagreement among doctors, which has passed into a proverb, and which is particularly noticeable in the old school. Lord Elgin might have taken advantage of this fact to point out to members of this school not only the injustice but the ansurdity of their excluding from fellowship some of their brethren simply for difference of opinion, when among themselves they agree differ. A strong-minded ruler bent upon removing this injustice and anomaly would, if we are not mistaken, not have omitted to perform this obvious duty .--- The Calcutta Journal of Medicine.

GRANNY GORTON'S BIRTHDAY.

GRANNY GORTON'S BIRTHDAY.

SATURDAY, Junary 21st, was a great day in Central Village, in the State of Connecticia, in America. On that day Miss, Jonathan Gotton was 100 years old and formally received her friends, of whom hundreds were present. Sine wore her best black silk gown, with a rose in the bodice. The venerable lady was seated in a comfortable armchair on a piatform in the best room of her house. Then the train of callers filed through, each and all shicking bards with her. "Grainly Gotton," as she is called, is a trim little body and very numble on her feet. There was never anything alled her, she says, and, except that her eyesight isn't quite so good, as it used to be, she is as active as any woman of 50. Why has Grainly Gotton lived so long? Why is she so active now? Sine lets on the secret herself when she says, "There was never anything alled me," That's it, and all of it.

People who live 100 years are not so very rate. The deaths of 45 such were reported last year in Eigland—22 men and 23 women. Yei, computed to the multitudes who die, these are nothing—nothing. Can we not keep things from alling is, cod so live long as Mis. Gotton?

such were reported last year in Eigland—22 men and 23 women. Yei, computed to the multirudes who they there are nothing—nothing. Can we not keep things from along us, and so live long as Mrs. Gorton? Yes, if we will take the trouble to deat! Men and women too years old, still upgrous and the headed, should be a sight so common as not to be remarked a wiffit be yet in the future. Why not so now? "Ask yoursefithe Groon," is the boatmen say down on Dead beach. Here's how it is: A woman's tale. She says she fell ill when a girl of about 15. She lost her appetite, had paths in the sides and chest, frequent headaches, and was often obliged to be down on the conchand rest. All this didn't promise long life, did it? No; it was a bad start.

start.

Well, she got worse instead of better. She was often sick, vomited her food, and spitting of a sour fluid. For five years, she went on this way. This brings us to October, 1881. She was then in service as parlour-mad at Leanington Histings, Variwickhire. Here she suffered from constant sickness, retching, and heatburn. The chest pains were so bad as to bend her two double. No position that she could take relived her. Her stomach was so tender and sore that everything she ate pained and distressed her. For months and months she only took liquid food—milk and heaten eggs, and so on.

She got weaker and weaker every day, so she says. Of course; how she are panied and distrete edited.

She got weaker and weaker every day, so she says. Of course; how else could the? A doctor at Rughy told her she had "ulceration of the chest," which she didn't at all. What is "ulceration of the chest," which she didn't at all. What is "ulceration of the chest?"

He gave her medicines and advice, but she grew no better on that account. This young lady was now about 20 years old, with a poor outlook for ever being much older. She didn't expect it, nor did her friends. Then another doctor, being consulted, said "ulceration of the chest," like his medical brother at Rugby. Buth wrong,

"After Six months' medical treament" she says, "I gave up my situation and returned to my home at Buxton Lamis, Norfolk. This was in June, 1882. Then I was taken so bad I had to take to my bed. My mother thought I was in a decline."

Now, the word "decline" means consumption, as we all know; a disease common in Eugland and incurable everywhere. Thousands of bright grist and young men "decline" into their graves every years in this populous island. Sid enough it is to see.

Well, at this point her good and wise mother interfered in her daughter's case. She give the doctors the go-by and sent to Norwich for

Well, at this point her good and wise mother interfered in her daughter's case. She give the doctors the go-by and sent to Norwich for some bottles of Mother Seigel's Curative Syrip. In two weeks the young pattent began to feel better, and in three months she got a new situation and went to work.

"Since then, fifteen years ago," she says, "I have kept in better health than ever before in my life, thanks to Seigel's Strup. Yours truly, (Signed). (Mrs.) SARAH ELEANOR BAKER, 8, King's Street, Church Road Tottenham, near London, September 30th, 1892."

A dozen words more and we're done. Mrs. Baker's ailment was indigestion and dyspeptia, nothing else, and quite enough. The "ulceration" was inflamnation of the inner coating of the stomach, a symptom of the disease. We wish her a long and happy life, and merely add that if all her sex could avoid or cure this one trouble most of them might live to be as ald as Granny Gorton.

heady for the Press

AN INDIAN JOURNALIST:

Life, Letters and Correspondence

Dr. SAMBHU C. MOOKERJEE,

late Editor of "Reis and Rayyet,"

RV

F H. SKRINE, cs.

The volume, uniform with Mookerjee's Travels and Voyages in Bengal, will consist of about 600 pages and contain, inter alia,

- 1. A photograph of the Doctor from a painting by Mr. James Archer, RSA.
- 2. A Biography, illustrated by copious notes and ana.
- 3. About 225 pages of original essays from his brilliant pen.
- 4. Selections from his correspondence with statesmen and literary men.

PRICE.

Rs. As.

To registered subscribers paying before publication ... To other subscribers and ordinary purchasers ...

After paying the expenses of the publication, the surplus will be priced wholly at the disposal of the family of the deceased man of

Orders will be registered by Messrs, Thacker, Spiok, & Co., Government Place, and by Babu Kisari Mobin Ginguli, B. 1., 12 Ashutosh

Devs Lune, Calcutta

Subscribers to the "Essays on a Brahman" will be communicated with by Rabu Mohan Ganguli,

To ensure accuracy and avoid all mischance,

some such form may be used as,— Please enter my name to a subscriber for copies of "An Indian Journalist" The amount, cheque has been remitted permoney order

written Address

The 1805

GENUINE HOMCEOPATHY.

A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S. Homwopathic Practitioner,

May be consulted by letter or Personally daily at his residence, 30-1, Colootolah Street, Calcutta.

Novelty in Ayurvedic Medicine, AYURVEDIC PHARMACY.

36, Lower Chitpore Road, Fouzdari Balaknana, Calcutta.

KAVIRAJ NAGENDRA NATH SEN, Physician, Surgeon, Accounteur, practises the Ayuvedic system of medicine, after having obtained a diploma at the final examination of one of the Government medical Institutions of the country.

SPECIFICS

SPECIFICS

for all ordinary diseases, like Fever, Cough, Asthma, Phthisis, Diabetes, &c., including diseases brought on by integularities and indiscretions of diverse kinds. Catalogues, containing full accounts of diseases and remedies, are transmitted on application. Prescriptions, with or without medicines, sent to every part of India and Ceylon, Cape Colony, and the Bruish Isles, on receipt (by post) of full accounts of diseases.

Thousands of unsolicited Testimonials from every quarter.

every quarter.

Lady Elliott Portrait Memorial Committee.

Allan Arthur Hon. Justice Beverley Hon. C. E. Buckland W. D. Cruicksnank Baio i Gaerter

W. O. Bell-Irving S. E. J. Clarke H H. The Maharaja Darbhanga, K.C.I.E. Baio : Gaerter
Col. Hatles, 6th B. I.
A. Macdonald
David McLaren MorriHon. P. Playfair.

A.F. M. Abdur Rahman A. Simson.
J. O'B Saunders A. H. Wallis.

Maharaja Sir J. M. Tagore, K. C. S. I.
PKESIDENT—Allan Arthur.
HON. TREASURER—J. O'B. Saunders.
HON. SECRETARY—David McLairen Mottison HON. SECRETARY—David McLaren Monison, At the meeting of Committee held at the Chamber of Commerce on the 19th January, it was decided to have a picture of Lady Elliott painted, any surplus to go towards a personal present.

All subscriptions to be sert to the HON TREASURER, 9, Haie Stieet,

Calcutta.

THE WORKS OF DR. JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE.

- Commentaries on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, Marriage, Adoption, Wills &c.* Price ... 'No student or practitioner should be without a copy of this GREAT Work.

 (Sd.) Nana Bhai Haridas."
 Bengali translation of the Dyabhaga and the Mitakshara.† Price ...
 Bengali Translation of the Dattaka-thandrikk † Price ...
- Principles of Zemindari Management and Book-keeping in Bengali o 10

IN THE PRESS

The Philosophy of Religion from time point of view of Common Sense. Price Rs. 5.

CONTENTS.

Historical Analysis of the evolution of religious systems.

Definition of the term " religion,"

The problems of the philosophy of re-ligion and their solutions, old and new. ligion and their solutions, old and new.

(a) Why do Hindus believe in ten Avatars or incarnations including in the series three that are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a tortoise, and a boar.

(b) Why is it that all ancient systems recommend the sacrifice of animals, and the burning of ghee or incense

&c. &c. &c. &c.

And the offining of give of intense &c. &c. &c. &c.

The weapons offensive and defensive of religious teachers.

The power of fine words.

The act of becoming a prophet.

The rumulative effect of hardswearing

for ages. Specimens of Puranised history.

Brahminical and Christian priestcraft compared The artificial miseries of men caused by religion. Tyranny and taxation of religion.

The good min's adversity is the sharp man's opportunity

Swindling as a fine art.

New Superstitions that may be suggested for the length of the priests.

The great prophets of the world and their doings.

Prolable argum of the Saiva religion. Tai, we mysticism and abominations,

* To be used of Messis. Thacker Spink & Co., only.

† To be had of Means Thacker Showk & o, and also at the Suadham Agency, No. 11, Raja Nabakusha, Street, Calcutat.

CAUTION!

IT having been sotified to the Proprietor of Beecham's Pills that certa a unscrupulous dealers have recently been perpetrating a fraud in connection with the 4 anna box lately introduced, the public are requested to see that the retail prices, (viz., 4 annas, 8 annas or 91/2d, 12 annas or 1s. 11/2d and Rs, 2 or 2s. 9d.) are clearly printed on the lid of each box. The fraud to which attention is drawn s that in the case of the two smaller sizes, the prices have been obliterated and the boxes represented to be of higher value than they really ate.

Sole Wholesale Agents for India, Burma and

G. ATHERTON & CO.

3, NEW CHINA BAZAAR STREET CALCULTA.

NOTICE.-Should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining supplies the Agents will be happy to forward sample boxes at above Rupee rates plus V P. P. Charges and Postages.

TEXT BOOKS IN ENGLISH.

BY SARADA PRASAD BANERJEE.

SPECIMEN PAPERS AND ANSWERS on

THE ENGLISH ENTRANCE COURSE For 1895.

Having the largest sale of all similar works,

ENGLISH PREPARATORY COURSE

FOR 2nd & 31d CLASES

This book has been approved by the Central Text Book Committee.

INDIA READERS NO. 2 FOR 4th & 5th CLASSES

INDIA READERS NO. 1

FOR 6th & 7th CLASSIS.

FOR 6th & 7th CLASSES.

These books are of even trachly simple style and quite suited to Indian students.

The attention of School authorities in the N.-W P. and Oudh, the Punjab, M (dr. s. Bombay, the Central Provinces, Assam, and Burma, invited to the above publications of unique ments.

To be had of

S K. LAHIRI & Co., College Sanare, Calcutta.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF

ИИ	M TOOOGE TO WANTED TO WANTED	JII	יניני
	MEMORIAL FUND.
			Rs.
I.	His Highness The Maharaja of I)ur-
2.	hhanga K.C.I.E., His Highness The Maharaja of V	/121.	,000
	anagram, G.C.I.E., His Highness the Nawab Bahadu		,000
3.	His Highness the Nawab Bahadu	r of	_
4	Moorshedabad, Amirul Omra, G.C. His Highness the Nawab of Junagi	IE.	800
•	G C.S.I	····	500
5	His Highness the Maharaja Baha	dur
,	of Cooch Behar, G.C.LE. Nawab Bahadur Sir K, Abdul Gh	•••	500
6	Nawah Bahadur Sir K, Abdul Gh	anı,
	Ashan Ulla, C.I R		500
7. 8.	KCS.1, and Nawab Bahadur Ashan Ulla, C.I.R. Nawab Imad Jung Bahadur Nawab Azun Yar Jung Bahadur Shams-ul Ulama Syed Ali Belgr Khan Bahadur Rhauldun, C.	• • •	500
	Nawab Azum Yar Jung Bahadur	•••	500
9. 10.	Khan Bahadar Rhai Bahauddin, C.	auu I.R	500
	Khan Bahadar BhaiBahauddin, C. Vizier to the Nawab of Junagad Maharaja Bahadur Sir Jotindra	h	300
11.	Maharaja Bahadur Şir Jotindra 1	Mo-
12.	han Tagore, K.C.S.I Babu Jodu Lai Mullick	•••	250
13.	Messrs, Mackinnon, Mackenzie &	Co.	200
14.	Prince Wala Kadr Syed Hosein	A۱ı
	Muza Babador		150
15.	Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Na Syed Zamul Abdin Khan Baha	dur
	Feraz Jung	•••	140
16.	Feraz Jung Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee, C	S.I.	100
17.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chan	dra
18.	Madhab Ghose Prince Mirzi Sir Jahan Kadar Ba	ha-	100
	dur, K C I.E.,	•••	100
19.	dur, K C I.E., The Houble P Playfair	• • • •	100
20. 21.	Hap Kasi Ariff Lieutenant-General the Hon'ble	Sir	100
•••	H. Brackenbury, K.C.B.,		100
22.	H. Brackenbury, K.C.B., Babu J.u Gobind Law		100
23	The Hon'hle Mr. Justice Guru
24.	B merjee The Honble Dr. Rash Behary Gh		50 51
25.	Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt.		50
26.	Shahibzada Mahomed Obidulla K	han
27	Bahadur, C S.I. Mahar ijkumar Benoya Krishna	•••	50
27. 28.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice E. J. Tr	ove-	50
	lyan		50
29.	The Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jah	bar
30.	Khan Bahadur The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop	 of	50
J - .	Calculta		50
31.	Maharaja Durga Charan Law, C.	i.e.,	50
32.	Nawab Jahandar Meerza	•••	50
33. 34.	The Hon'ble W. C. Bonneries	•••	50
35. 36.	Nawab Syed Ameer Husein	•••	50
36.	Syed Martin Fluda, Esq., C.S.,	•••	50
37. 38.	Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan
39.	J. G. Ritchie, Esq. C.S., Sir Alexander Miller
40.	F. J. Rowe, Esq		3:
41.	Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi Khan
42.	Kuma Radha Prosad Roy		2 1 2 1 2 1 2 1
43.	Vuman Ilmandes Marsin Dan		2
44.	Babu rPashupatty Nath Bose	•••	2!
45. 46.	Babu rPashupatty Nath Bose Kumar Doulat Chandra Roy Babu Guru Prosonno Ghose Raja Sir Sourindra Mohan Tag	•••	2
47.	Raja Sir Sourindra Mohan Tag	ore,	-
	Raya Joundra Nath Chowdhury	•••	25
48.	Babu Rama Nath Ghose	•••	25
49. 50	Raja Scenath Roy	•••	25
51.	Richiew Bux Bogla Bahadar		25 25 25
52.	R. Belchambers, Esq		25
53. 54.	Raja Surja Kanta Acharjee Chowo Rai Budieedas Mukim Bahadur		y 25 25
55.	Babu Gopal Lai Seai	•••	25
56.	Moulvi Svad Abdus Salam	•••	25
57.	A. T. Apc.u, E.q. H. Luttman Johnson, Esq. C.S.	•••	25
58. 59.	Lord William Beresford, K.C.L.R.,	•••	25 25
60.	Monshi Chalam Rasad		25
6 1.	F. H. Skime, Esq. C.S., The Hon'ble H. J. S. C. atton C.S., C. Prince Mahomed Bukhtyar Shah Baboo Suiendra Nath Pal Chowdr "Aukhoy Kumar Ghose Moulyi Inadd Ali		25
62. 63.	Prince Mahamed Rabbins Chab	.S.1.	20
64.	Baboo Smendra Nath Pal Chowde	v	20
65.	" Aukhoy Kumar Ghose	••••	20
66.			20
67. 68.	Rai Shib Chunder Nundy Bahada D. Panioty, Esq.	r	20
69.	D. Panioty, Esq. Chowdry Mahomed Arjamand K	han	20
70.	H. E. A. Cotton, Esq., Barrister-at	i-la n	20
71.	Moulvi Syed Ashruffuddin Ahr Khan Bahadur
72.	T. Inglis, Esq. C.S.	•••	17

72. T. Inglis, Esq, CS.

73.	A. H. Gues, Esq		16
74.	F F. Hundley, Esq., C.S.		16
75.	The Houble Mouly, Straju	l Islam
	Khan		16
76	Mouly: Serajud teen		15
77.	Abul H is in, E.q.,	•••	15
78.	H. A. D. Phill p., E.q. CS.	•••	10
79.	Baboo Kuan Chunder Roy		10
80.	E. N Biker, E.q		10
.18	Baboo Doyal Chand Bose		10
82.	, Madan Mohan Bose		10
83.	" Kanai Lai Khan		10
84.	Monivi Synd Akram Hossam		10
			10
85.	Moulyi Aziz Ahmud	***
86.	Rai Kanyelal Dey Bahadoor	•••	10
87.	H. Holmwood, Esq	•••	10
88.	Babu Hurry Mohun Chunder	•••	10
89.	Baboo Chakkanlal Roy		5
9o	" Sarodaprasad Ghose		5
	bscriptions will be thankfully	received
	Honorary Joint Secretaries.

RAI RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI BAHADUR,
4, Brutsh Indian Street, Calcutta, and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMAN, ESQ., Barrister -- at Law. 16, Taltolla, Calcutta.

"IMPROVED UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Rs. .

Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, small, open-faced, nickel silvern, keyless, short winding, patent, "NEW STYLE IMPROVED UNDAUNTnickel silvern, keyless, short winding, patent, "NEW STYLE IMPROVED UNDAUNT-ED" watch, with hand setting mechanism, secondhand, for Doctors, ornamental bold dial, for Rs 7 V. P. P with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' quarantee. Warranted to stand the roughest use. Runs more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily repairable. Others sell at double our rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Jino. Dickson of Hapitial Railway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps splendid time and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jerks. Vir. H. Moore of Royal Artillery from Poonamallee says:—I sold it for Rs. 16. X Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Regi. from Dumdum says:—I have sold it for, Rs 20. X Mt. T. B. Scott of Patia Opium Department says:—The watch you sent me some from Dundum says: —I have sold it for, Rs 20. x Mr. T. B. Scott of Patua Opum Department says: —The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time. Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty electro cased gold chain Re. 1-8-0. Fashionable electro cased Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emerides, at Re. 1-8-0. Mr. G. Smith, Salt Inspector from Sanikutia, says: "A German valued the diamond ring at Rs. 50 and ruby at Rs. 30." Key winding, Government stamped, solid silver hunting case, Royal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee, for Rs. 13. Pte G. Hawkes of 2nd Vok Light Infanty from Puranthar says: —For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Sergeant for Rs. 28 x Pte. H. C. Bishop of L. F. L. Regt. from Kamptee says.—A Corporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch, Gentlemen's open faced, keyless real solid gold watch Rs. 30; ladies' Rs. 24; both with extras and Res. 30; ladies' Rs. 24; both with extras and guaranteed for 3 years. Mind they are guranteed to be of real solid gold. No agents kept, all goods sent only by us from Bombay per V. P. P.

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO.,

BOMBAY.

CATARRH.

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness. Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian lining membrane of the nose and euistachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these distressing diseases are rapidly and permanently cured by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUTTON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORONTO, Canada. 17-8 TORONTO, Camerican

"IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer find sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering; while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs Is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE
Are you subject to HEADACHES and the tortures of TOOTHACHE? A single application will relieve you.

In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the result speak for itself.

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Physicians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of homos. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved nd class-spread popularity which no similar pre-Learation has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throughout the world.

Agents in Calcutta · Smith Stanistreet & Co. R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Bathgate & Co. Limited.

REIS & RAYYET (PRINCE AND PEASANT)

WEEKLY(ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

AND

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION. If paid in advance,

rearry		•••	•••	r.s	12
Half-year	ły	•••		,,	7
Quarterly			•••	,,	4
* Monthly	•••			Ke.	1-8
Single or	sample	Copy	•••	Ans.	0.8
	lf no	t paid in ad	vance.
Yearly	•••	·		Rs.	18
Half-year	ly	•••	•••		10-8
Quarterly	• • • •	•••		"	6-0
Monthly	•••	•••	•••	1)	2-4
Single or	sample	Copy		Ans.	0.12

No additional charge for postage or peon. RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

Advertisements (three columns to the page and to 2 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insertion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5. Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphless (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayyet."

OFFICE: I, Uckoor Dut's Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutta.

DROIT ET AVANT.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

AND

REVIEW OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, MAY 11, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 674.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

THE MORNING VISIT.
BY O. W. HOLMES.

A SICK man's chamber, though it often boast The grateful presence of a literal toast, Can hardly claim aimidst its various wealth The right, unchallenged, to propose a health; Yet though its tenant is denied the feast, As prisoned damsels, locked from lovers' lips, Toss them a kiss from off their fingers' tips.

The Morning Visit—not till suckness falls. In the charmed cucle of your own safe walls; Till fever's throb, and pani's relentless rack, Suetch you, all helpless, on your acting back; Not till you play the patient in your tim, The morning visit's mystery shall you learn.

'T is a small matter in your neighbour's case, To charge your fee for showing him your face, You skip upstairs, inquire, inspect and touch, Prescribe, take leave, and off to twenty such. But when, at length, by fate's transferred decree, The visitor becomes the visitee, O then, indeed, it pulls another string, Your ox is gored, and that's a different thing ! Your friend is sick; phlegmatic as a Turk, You write your recipe and let it work; Not yours to stand the shiver and the frown, And sometimes worse, with which your draught goes down; Calm as a clock your knowing hand directs, Rhei, Jalapæ, ana grana sex, Or traces on some tender missive's back Scrupulos duos pulveris Ipecac; And leaves your patient to his qualms and gripes, Cool as a sportsman banging at his snipes.

But change the time, the person, and the place, And be yourself the "interesting case," You'll gain some knowledge which it's well to learn; In future practice it may serve your turn.

Leeches, for instance, pleasing creatures quite, Try them, and, bless you, don't you find they bite? You raise a blister for the smallest cause, But be yourself the great sublime it draws, And trust my statement, you will not deny, The worse of diaughtsmen is your Spanish Fly! It's mighty easy, ordering when you please, Inlusia Senna, capial tuncias tes; It's mighty different when you quackle down Your own three ounces of the hound brown.

Pilula, pulvis—pleasant words enough,
When other jaws receive the shocking stuff;
But oh, what flattery can disguise the groan
That meets the gulp which sends it through your own!
Be gentle, then, though Art's unsparing rules
Give you the handling of her sharpest tools;
Use them not rashly—sickness is enough—
Be always "ready," but be never "rough."

Of all the ills that suffering man endures,
The largest fraction liberal Nature cures;
Of those remaining, 't is the smallest part
Yields to the efforts of judicious Art;
But simple kindness kneeling by the bed,
To shift the pillow for the sick man's head,
Give the fresh draught to cool the lips that burn,
Fan the hot brow, the weary frame to turn;
Kindness—untutored by our grave M. D's,
But nature's graduate, whom she schools to please,
Wins back more sufferers with her voice and smile,
Than all the trumpery in the druggist's pile.

Once more, be quiet-coming up the stair, Don't be a plantigrade, a human bear, But stealing softly on the silent toe, Reach the sick chamber ere you're heard below. Whatever changes there may greet your eyes, Let not your looks proclaim the least surprise; It's not your business by your face to show All that your patient does not wish to know; Nav. use your optics with considerate care, And don't abuse your privilege to stare. But if your eyes may probe him overmuch, Beware still further how you rudely touch ; Don't clutch his corpus in your icy fist, But warm your fingers ere you take the wrist, If the poor victim needs must be percussed, Don't make an anvil of his aching bust ; (Doctors exist, within a hundred miles, Who thump a thorax as they'd hammer piles.) If you must listen to his doubtful chest, Catch the essentials and ignore the rest-Spare him; the sufferer wants of you and art A track to steer by, not a finished chart; So of your questions-don't in mercy try To pump your patient absolutely dry; He's not a mollusc squirming in a dish-You're not Agassiz, and he's not a fish.

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free.—Artificial Eur-drums and similar appliances entirely superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBBRS, 19, SOUTHAMPION BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON

And last, not least, in each perplexing case, Learn the sweet magic of a cheerful face ; Not always smiling, but at least serene, When grief and anguish cloud the auxious scene. Each look, each movement, every word and tone, Should tell your patient you are all his own; Not the mere artist, purchased to attend, But the warm, ready, self forgetting friend, Whose genial visit in itself combines The best of cordials, tonics, anodynes.

Such is the Visit, that from day to day Sheds o'er my chamber its benignant ray. I give his health, who never cared to claim Her babbling homage from the tongue of Fame ! Unmoved by praise, he stands by all confest, The truest, noblest, wisest, kindest, best !

WEEKLYANA.

THE Birthday of Her Mijesty the Queen, Empress of India, will be kept in India on Saturday, the 25th May. On that day, the Viceroy will hold a Levée at Viceregal Lodge, Simia, at 9-45 P M.

THE Government of India, in the Department of Revenue and Agriculture, under the head of Meteorology, corrects

" Sree Rajah G. N. Gajapati Rao Guru, C S.I."

" Sree Rejah G. N. Gajapati Rao Guin, C. I. R."

The correction needs correction. Is it "Guru?" Indian names are yet a stumbling block to Government. With all its learning and attempts to mister the intricacies of matters Indian, it blinders as egregiously as when it first began,

ALL salt imported into the port of Calcutta and issued with the sanction of the Government of Beng il to manufacturers of glazed stoneware, is no longer to be subject to any of the duties of customs, to which it is hable under the Indian Tariff Act, VIII of 1894.

THE Governor-General in Council has ruled that a duty at the rate of six annas a mound of 82 2/7lbs, avoirdupois shall be levied on salted fish, dry and wet, imported into any Customs port from any place beyond the limits of British India.

ON a reference, the Government of India, agreeing with the Government of Madras, has decided that a refund should be made of the difference between the specific and ad valorem duty on arms purch used by European British subjects residing in Native States from an importer or seller also residing in a Native State

CONCURRING with the Government of Bombay, the Governor-General in Council has directed that no refund of import duty can be granted on lost goods, on which duty has been paid, when they have passed out of Customs custody. Two hundred cases of kerosine oil were lost in Bombay Harbour while in transit from the importing vessel to the wharf after the oil had been entered for home consumption and duty paid on it. A claim for refund of the customs duty having been made, the Government of India replied that " To establish a claim for exemption from duty on lost goods it must be shewn that the goods when lost had not actually been entered for warehousing or for home consumption, or that they were lost after entry for home consumption while they were in the custody of the Customs officials. When the goods have been lost before entry for home consumption or after it has been completed, and while the goods are in the custody of the importer or his agents, such loss must be accepted by the importer as a trade risk against which the Government cannot undertake to insure him."

THE Indian Daily News says -

"Dr. Rash Behary Ghose, whose candidature for the Burdwan Division, for the Bengal Council, is announced, has more than one claim to support. He has already served with credit on both the Bengal and the Supreme Council; he is a leader of his profession, and he possesses to a very considerable degree the confidence of both com- | S.hools, Behar Circle, for certain unfavourable remarks made by the munities. With Mr. Hennessy from Bhagulpore, Raja Surji Kant Acharjya of Mymensingh from Dicca, and Dr. Rash Behary Ghose from Burdwan, we should have the nucleus of an excellent representa-tive Council."

Again :-

" In the case of the Burdwan Division, the most influential candi-"In the case of the Burdwan Division, the most influential candidate is Dr. Rash Behary Ghose, who has already served with credit on both the Bengal and Supreme Council, and, with one noticeable exception, has secured the support of the native press. The exception question is an interesting one, for it is hinted that it has been inspired by the Jealousy of a prominent. Bengalee who is a candidate for another seat. This gentleman, it is declared, feels certain himself of election, and hopes hereafter to represent the elected members on the Supreme Council, but fears the advent of so influential a competitor as Dr. Rash Behary Ghose would be (t-bar) in this connection."

There is an unholy double alliance to keep out the best man who would not stoop to arts and manœuvres.

HERE is how Touth describes the Frontier policy of the Indian Government :--

ernment:—

Apropos of the Chitral war, I have received a communication, too long for publication in extenso but containing a highly practical suggestion. The idea is this. Every body knows the policy of "trailing the coat," which is pursued with such success by British statesmanship on the Indian and other forntiers. It consists in sending over the frontier a small force, large enough to alarm the natives, but not lirge enough to pievent them attacking it. They attack. A "British reverse" ensues. Thereupon the national honour requires us to at once advance in force, and average the insult by conquering the "aggressors" and annexing their territory. This policy is not only hard on the natives, it is also very hard on the British force which serves the purpose of a decoy. Its position is compared by the correspondent referred to above to that of the lamb tied to a stake by the huntisman who desires to shoot a tiger or other beast of piey, and doomed to be mangled while the sportsman pots his game from a neighbouring tree."

There is much truth in these observations. And yet this policy of

There is much truth in these observations. And yet this policy of "trailing the coat" is not likely to be checked until those who have the direction of affurs are themselves made to play the part of the

THE High Court down south is not prepared to favour the crusade of the Purists against dancing girls. We read :-

THE High Court down south is not prepared to favour the crusade of the Purists against dancing girls. We read:—

"A dancing girl recently in ide a second appeal to the Madias High Court in a case in which, as the adopted diaghter of a deceased dancing woman, she clumed her in their's privileges, but the temple authorities, bearing in mod that a dimong girl's profession is, if not per seat least in actu, an immort one, questioned the legality in this particular case of tying the initiative orn inneit called the bottu round the girl's neck, seeing that the girl was a minor. The district Moonsiff of Madiria decided that the ceremony was purely a religious one; the District Court on appeal reversed the District Moonsiff's decision; and the case was then brought into the High Court. After nearly a formaght to think over the case, their lockshops have been able to pass a conditional judgment, and have felt themselves necessitated to send the case back to the Lower Court. Then brighting held that there we nothing inmoral in the tying of the bottu riself, in that it consisted merely in tying a small piece of gold round the neck of the woman, but thit, on the other hind, it was intimitively connected with the right to discharge the interact office of temple dancing, to which enablments were attached, and thit, stiting as judges, they would find it difficult to reverse the current of decisions on the ground of a change in the sentiment of the community generally with regard to the institution of dancing girls. They would therefore be inclined to hold that the plaintiff was contiled to succeed in her suit if her adoption which, as a basis of a right to have the bottu tied, was in useff legally valid. In this case, however, it was admitted that the adoption which, as a basis of a right to have the bottu tied, was in useff legally valid. In this case, however, it was admitted that the adoption which, as a basis of a right to have the bottu tied, was in useff legally valid. In this case, however, it was admitted that the ado

THERE was a serious disturbance at the Vizianagram Railway Station, due to a dispute between the sepoys of the 11th Madras Infantry on the one side and the Rulway people and the Police on the other. Two sepoys were killed. Order was promptly restored, but not before grave alarm had been caused in consequence of the entire Regiment fraternising with their roughly handled comrades.

WE hear that Rs. 6,000 are claimed as damages by the Headmaster of the Gya Institution from Mr. G. A. Stack, Officiating Inspector of latter regarding a Collection Register of the Institution. The suit is pending in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Gya. Will the Headmaster be able to prove his case? As Inspector, the defendant had a right to record his impressions of the Headmaster's conduct in so far as that conduct wis connected with the keeping up of the register. Unless, therefore, the plaintiff can prove that there was malice in the report, be cannot expect to succeed.

THE following extract from the Descan Budget will be read with interest. Within the last few years the consumption of kerosine oil in India has gone up with such rapid strides, that both America and Russia drain India of a considerable sum by their supplies of what must now be said to be one of the necessaries of Indian life:—

"The accounts which our duly contemp rearies have recently published regarding the new American oil steamer, presently loading at Bombay for Eutope, naturally recall to mand the rem trkable crisis through which the petroleum trade of India is just now passing. Consumers of the better descriptions of kerosine oil will doubtless have noticed the frontie fluctuous which have attended the market rates of mineral oil for the past eighteen months. To note an instance in point, the freaks connected with the exportation from the United States of the two brands known as 'Snowflike' and 'White Rose,' both of 150 degrees of burning power, may be mentoned. For a time the two oils appeared to run on parallel lines of competition, the older brand commanding a larger market and price than its sturdy young competitor, which was then becoming a fast favourite, and which, it is almost needless to say, has since attained one of the highest commercial positions which refined petioleum can probably ever hope to reach. A sudden lull in the storm of competition next occurred, and for a season demoralised the market. Some of the higher qualities were temporarily withdrawn, and suddenly re-appeared enburthened with fabulously high prices, which, fortunately for the consumer, resulted in their rejection in favour of the cheaper brands till rates were lowered once again. It is not difficult to trace the true cause of these fluctuations. India is supplied with kerosine by the United States and Russia, and as a matter of course becomes the centre of contest between the two great rival producers. The monopoly which the trans-Atlantic product has enjoyed for years has been substantially assailed by Russia, which invested in tank steamers and soon increased their comparative with twenty-four millions of American oil in the same year, to twenty million gallons three years after, when Russia had in that brief period outpaced her neighbour, whose exports had seriously declined. The competition aroused producers in the United States, and last yea

There is now a boom for the oil, and there will always remain the possibility of a "boom" among the nations supplying it. The greater danger is that the cheapness may vanish and the dangers of the oil itself will continue.

**:

WE take the following from a contemporary :-

"The English translation of the authorised account of the Eastern Travels of the young Czar is in an advanced state, and ought shortly to be published. The work was written by a Russian official, and one of the travelling companions of the Emperor or as he then was, the Czarewitch. Some of the author's reflections on what he saw or thought be saw when in India will, if the translator has reproduced them textually, be quite a new departure for Anglo-Indians in official literature."

We hope the Czir has said nothing in depreciation of the Indian Civil Service. The ascription of even the commonest faults of humanity to those belonging to that service is sure to be resented by men like Sir James Westland and Sir Antony MacDonnell.

We never thought that the lowly Indian vegetable product, known as brinjal, would have the favour or honour of careful cultivation on English soil.

"Those who are inclined to cavil at the somewhat frequent appearance of the humble brinjal at dinner during the present hot-weather dearth of belativegetables, should learn that its cultivation is now being urged in England on the ground of its remedial virtues in affections of the liver. In France and in America it is well-known in culinary circles under other names, but in England the plant has hitherto been cultivated chiefly for ornamental purposes. Dr. Paterson, in the Gardner's Chronicle, is responsible for its further recommendation, on the ground of its curative properties. Large Anglo-Indian areas at home might doubtlessly be found upon which experiment would be valuable and conclusive."

Hindu physicians, from the remotest times, have been aware of the benefits of brinjal on weakened constitutions. Roasted brinjals constitute very light food and are prescribed for patients recovering from violent fevers. Of course, it is only for a day or two that such diet is given. Sometimes fried paddy is prescribed to be taken with roasted brinfals. Besides being light, such regimen keeps the bowels open—without causing violent motions.

NOTES & LEADERETTES, OUR OWN NEWS,

&

THE WEEK'S FELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

~からかななないな~

THE treaty of peace with Japan has been ratified by the Emperor of China. Ritifications were exchanged at Chefoo on May 8. The European intervention in which England took no part his prevailed, Japan has abandoned her demand for the cession of the Liaotong Pennsula, including Port Arthur. It is reported that Japan will receive an extra war indemnity of ten million sterling for abandoning the Pennsula. The Temps believes that the basis of the arrangement with Japan for the payment of the indemnity will be the allocation of the Chinese Imperial Customs revenue under the guarantee and control of the European Powers. Squadrons of the European Powers are assembling at Chefoo. Eight Russian warships are already present there and have cleared for action. It is announced at St. Petersburg that the Russian, French and German Squadrons in the Pacific will not be reduced until all the questions arising from the war is finally settled by China and Japan.

SERIOUS trouble is brewing in Formosa. The Black Flags are growing turbulent. British and German marines have already linded at Ankau to protect the foreigners. British launches are patrolling Takau harbour. Five thous and Chinese troops are leaving Canton for Formosa for suppressing the probable opposition of the Black Flags to the Japanese occupation of the Island It is believed at Hongkong. that the Chinese troops are likely to join the Black Flags immediately on reaching their destination. Some of the French newspapers are dissatisfied with the settlement of the Japanese difficulty. They declare that France cannot permit Japanese sovereignty over the Islands of Formosa and the Pescadores. France, the papers point out, would be a dupe to Russia unless the agreement of the three Powers also applies to the settlement of the Egyptian question, thus Russia repaying on the banks of the Nile the services which France has rendered to her on the Gulf of Pechili. It is stated that France is negotiating with Japan with a view to limiting the latter's warships and garrisons in Formosa and the Pescodares.

COUNT Kalnoky had resigned and has withdrawn his resignation. The first step was due to the strictures passed by Baron Banffy, the Hungarian Premier, on the interference of Monsignor Aghardi, the Papal Nuncio, in connection with the Ecclesiastical Bill of the Hungarian Government. The remarks of Baron Buffy were in direct conflict with the views held by the Count. The Count's difference with the Baron was of a temporary nature and has been astisfactorily adjusted by the Emperor.

DEATHS are announced of Lady Kumberley, Lord Selbourne, and Sir Robert Peel.

THE impending resignation of Lord Rosebery is denied

THE London Common Council has voted £1,500 for entertaining Prince Nasirulla

MR. Oscar Wilde has been released on bail, himself of £2.500, and two sureties of £1,250 each.

THE Nicaraguan Government has accepted the modified British ultimatum, and pays, within a fortnight, under protest, the indemnity of £15,500 into the British treasury in London for the alleged personal injuries to British subjects. The other questions will be submitted to a Commission of Arbitration. The British squadron, excepting the cruiser Royal Arthur, has left Country

THE Duke of Orleans is out of danger.

It is expected that the French will commence marching to Antanarivo by the beginning of June.

THE Secretary of State for India, in reply to a question in the House of Commons, said that when submitting to the Queen the names recommended for special marks of favour in connection with the defence and relief of Chitral, he would not overlook the distinguished claims of Dr. Robertson and Surgeon-Captain Whitchurch. To another question he replied that a Royal Commission would enquire into the question of Indian expenditure.

In the House of Lords, on Monday 6, Lord Ripon, referring to the British annexation of the territories north-west of Zulnland, declared that the step was taken to terminate the encoachment of the Transvaal, whose citizens were violating the Anglo-Transvaal treaties. The Secretary of State [for the Colonies added that Her Majesty's Government nevertheless is desirous of maintaining the most cordial relations with the Republic.

TENDERS for two millions of India Bills payable in London in sterling for renewing Bills accruing on the 12th instant, amounted to 8,800,000. Tenders for £98-14-7 receive ninety per cent. of the amount applied for above in full.

THE Secretary of State for India has sanctioned the granting of a bonus of six mouths' pay to the Chitral defenders.

AT St. James's Hall, on May 7, was held a meeting to support the protest against the alleged treatment of the Christians by the Turkish authorities in Armenia. The Duke of Argyll presided. A resolution was adopted insisting on a speedy fulfilment of the sixty-first article of the Treaty of Berlin.

In the House of Commons, on May 8, the Bill promoted by the Parnellites to repeal the Crimes Act of 1887, was read a second time, by a majority of fourteen. While Mr. John Morley was speaking on the Bill, a voice from the Strangers' Gillery shouted, "Assassins' a blow has been struck at my honour in this House." The House seemed electrified at this sudden interruption. The Irish Members appeared to enjoy the incident calmly from their seats. It was soon found that the indignant shout came from the mouth of the great. Feman patriot, O'Donovan Rossa, who had become uncontrollable during the delivery of Mr. Morley's speech on the working of the Coercion. Act in Ireland. O'Donovan Rossa was immediately expelled from the precincts of the House.

LORD Rosebery, while addrssing a meeting at the National Liberal Club on Wednesday evening, stopped and nearly broke down through weakness. After a short interval he resumed his speech amidst cheers He made no allusion to Great Britain's foreign policy

SIR Edward Grey announced in the House of Commons that the French Government had stated that Captain Toutéo's expedition on the Royal Niger Company's territory was of a private nature. In reply to another question, he said that Her Majesty's Government was unable to complete the arrangement with the Imperial British East Africa Company for taking over its territories by the Zanzibar protectorate until Parliament sanctioned the payment of the money agreed upon.

THE agitation regarding the British occupation of Egypt continues. The French press is demanding the British evacuation of Egypt, its au-

THE Nicaraguan Government has accepted the modified British tonomy and the neutralisation of the Suez Canal by a European

IT is said that the number of unmarried women in England and Wales exceeds the number of unmarried men by 200,000. "Men," probably, includes boys, and "women" includes girls. If the figure is correct, it is evident that a very large number of women in England and Wales cannot hope to have husbands. There can be no doubt that in India also, the number of men has always been very much less than that of women. The Mahomedans are addicted to polygamy. Hindus also, though not so generally, take to plurality of wives. If the ratio in India between the two sexes be so disproportionate, notwithstanding the wide prevalence of polygamy, the re-marriage of widows in this country cannot, from an economical point of view, be regarded as an unmixed good. A widow re-married means a maiden deprived of a husband. We suspect this has been the normal condition of India from very ancient times. The Rishis, therefore, were obliged to discourage the re-marrige of widows and sanction polygamy. As regards women also, perpetual virginity, or total husbandlessness, cannot be unquestionably better than the status of a co-wife. Both polygamy and widow-remarriage are treated with so much gush that the most obvious considerations based upon facts and figures cannot be referred to without laying oneself open to the charge of being an obstructive fossil.

WE read :-

"A currous incident has occurred in the history of American athletics Harvard University, by putting a stop to intercollegiate contests, has practically abolished the game of football. From the accounts given by the American papers, the Faculty appear to have been confined with a choice between the cause of the game and the cause of learning, and to have decided that the true end of a University was rather intellectual than physical culture. The excitable American temperament must have contributed largely to this result. It is impossible to imagine the authorities of any English University taking such action with regard to any long-cherished and popular national game. The fact has been for some time apparent that mere physical achievement was becoming prized by young America out of all proportion to its significance, however, and the most extraordinary scenes and circumstances have been reported in connection with notable contests. It is nevertheless a pay that a measure so directly nimed against manly sport as that taken by Harvard should have been found necessary."

It is precisely on such grounds that we are opposed to the diverse fads of the hour in connection with what is called the higher training of Indian students. Boating and foot-ball and drills under Police Sergeants may be good things—even very good things—but the danger is that Indian students are very likely to take to these more seriously than to the cause of learning. The introduction of music in one or two schools of Bengal, spoiled, we are told, a few boys. Finding themselves admired for their voices, they showed more zeal in cultivating the vocal art than Interature and science. Then, again, hard physical exercises for malaria-stricken Bengali boys living upon fish-soup and old rice, is scarcely beneficial. The only exercise for which the generality of Bengali boys are fit is, perhaps, walking, with occasional riding.

LAST week, two sheads were performed in two respectable houses in the native town. One was of Baboo Guinara Chunder Ghose of Pathutraghatta and the other of the wife of Rai Bahadoor Rajendra Nath Mitter of Jhamapookur. Baboo Girindra was a jolly old soul and was, perhaps, the last of the old class who, while posing as strict Hudus, affected Mahomedan manners in diess—specially in the cover for the head. He was always surrounded by Pandits whom he patronized, who specially feel his loss. Although an orthodox Hudu, he had developed a toleration for the heterodox. Shortly before his death, he helped materially in re-admitting into caste the famous U. K. Dutt. But as the fates would have it, those who took the upper hand in the deceased's shead ignored Baboo Dutt altogether.

The loss of his wife, who was a good housewife, at his age and in his retirement, must be a terrible blow to Baboo Rajendra Nath Mitter But death was a relief to her, for she had been suffering long and wanted rest. That can hardly be a consolation to the surviving, specially to the sorrowing husband who was devoted to her and who must now draw his consolation from past memories. If the one sradh was notable for exclusion, the other was marked by catholicity. Baboo Khagender Nath, the eldest son of Baboo Rajendranath, had asked all his neighbours, relatives and friends, including his new acquaintances at Diamond Harbour, of which he is the Subdivisional Officer.

We have received two letters regarding the late Subdivisional Officer of Rauaghat. We shall take them up by and bye.

IT is notified that, under Rule II (B) of the Regulations which have been passed by the Governor-General in Council with the sanction of the Secretary of State, under section 1 (4) of the Indian Councils Act, 1892, for Bengal, the Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to prescribe that a recommendation for a nomination to one seat in the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor for making Laws and Regulations shall be made to the Lieutenant-Governor, respectively,

- 1. by the Group of District Boards of Dacca, Mymensingh, Faridpur, and Backergunge in the Dacca Division;
- 2. by the District Boards of Monghyi, Bhagalpur, Puinea and Malda in the Bhagalpur Division;
- 3. by the sixteen Municipalities in the Burdwan Division, namely, Burdwan, Kalna, Katwa, Ranganj in the Burdwan District; Suri in the Birbhum District; Bankura and Vishnupur in the Bankura District; Midnapore and Ghatal in the Midnapore District; Hooghly and Chinsura, Serampore, Uttarpara, Baidyabatl, and Bhadteswar in the Hooghly District; and Howish and Bally in the Howish District.

The Commissioners of Divisions will now communicate with the Chairmen of Municipalities and District Boards which must meet specially to electione of their members to represent themselves at the meeting of delegates for the election of their representatives. Such election will have to be made within two months from the date of communication by the Divisional Commissioner. Some of the electional bodies have already anticipated the invitation of Government and elected their delegates. To be strictly within the rules, they must, we should think, meet again and re-elect their delegates. The election at the meeting of delegates will be by ballot and the person selected must obtain a majority of votes. If on the first ballot an absolute majority is not obtained, the candidate who obtains the least number of votes goes out and another ballot shall be held for the remaining candidates, and so on until an absolute majority is obtained.

District Boards will have one vote each. Municipalities will have votes according to their income. Thus: Howrah will have 8; Burdwan and Midnapore 4 each; Hooghly-Chinisura and Serampore 3 each; Ranganj, Uttatpara, Burdyabati, and Bally 2 each; and each of the remaining seven one vote.

The three elections are meant to fill the vacancies to be caused, on the 5th June, by the retriement, on the expiration of the usual term, of Mr. L. M. Ghose, Maharaj t Sir Luchinessur Sing of Durbhanga, and Khan Bahaddu Setajul Islam. The Calcutta Corporation will also be called upon to elect a member. The Calcutta University also is to make an election owing to the resignation of Mr. W. C. Bonnerjee. Tye em of Maharaja Jagadindia Nath Roy of Natoie will not determine tin the 22 id January next year. The other elected member is Mr. C. E. Symit returned by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce on the 22 ad of March last.

THE combatants in the Municipal election are Baboos Surendra Nath Banerjee and Kalinath Mitter. Babu Surendra Nath is already an Honourable Member and Babu Kalinath had had a seat in the same Council. Both are confident of being returned. We think it would be graceful for the Commissioners, if they could make up their minds to be represented by a really worthy man belonging to no particular party, to return their Vice-Chairman. The Municipal Act is no bar to such election and Baboo Gopal Lal Mitter is otherwise fit to be a member of Council. If he had been Government Pleader at Hooghly, nobody would have doubted his eligibility. But Municipal Commissioners seem jealous of their superior officers and have for some time discarded them from the posts open to them, for promoting their own selfish ends.

As regards the Calcutta University, only two Fellows have entered the lists. Both of them had contested the election on the last occasion. One of them had the good sense to retire but the other stuck to the last and was defeated. It is strange that no better candidate has been put forward. The University is really on its trial. The result will show whether it is deserving of the privilege conferred on it. It is now too late to think of a third Fellow. The choice must be between the two who have come forward. One of them has already been in the Council and the other has long aspired to be in it.

In the Burdwan Division, two gentlemen connected with two Municipalities are candidates for election. One much greater than they has been brought in and he ought to succeed. An unholy attempt is being made to keep out Dr. Rishbehary Ghose. He is no resident in the Burdwan Division, say they. He is, for purposes of the election, and the highest legal opinion is in his favour. Sir Griffith Evans has pronounced him not disqualified. The miserable shift that when elected, Dr. Ghose will not continue in the Lower Chamber if returned from it to the Upper, has been answered. He will not leave his electors to make another election if he be honoured with a seat in the higher Couucil. Those who opposed his candidature from improper motives, have, we beheve, by this time, been ashamed of their subterfuges.

In setting aside a conviction by the Sessions Judge of Bankura, the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Beverley of the Calcutta High Court observed:—

"The object of the prosecution is not to serve the ends of any one side in particular, but to accertain the truth and, as far as may be place the tribunal which his to try the person who has been charged with having committed an offence, that is, in this cise, the Judge and the Assessors, in a position to come to a right decision, and where persons are vouched for as having been present at the time the crime is said to have been committed, the Judge and the Assessors whose duty it is to form an opinion as to the guilt or moocence of the accused, should in common farmess be allowed to hen what such person has to say and themselves form an opinion whether or not they are telling the truth."

Prosecutions in India are managed by an active Police, in consultation, sometimes, with Government Pleaders. The Police imagine that their chief duty is to obtain a conviction. If in course of an enquiry anything turns up that is slightly favourable to an accused person, the Police immediately hush it up and take the greatest care that it may not come to the knowledge of the Magistrate or the Judge who will have to try the case. The reason is obvious. The Government measures the efficiency of the Police by the number of convictions they are able to obtain. The efficiency of even the Deputy Magistrates who have to try cases is measured by the same standard. The institution of the Jury itself, in this country, has its usefulness tested by the number of convictions resulting from its verdicts. No wonder that Police officers whose status in the service depends upon this unnatural test, should be so anxious in concealing all evidence tending to exculpate the accused Even Government Pleaders, who are men of education, whose professional earnings do not depend upon the number of convictions they may secure, very frequently forget what is due to the Crown they represent. The Crown should never be made to appear vindictive. Nobody, however, can witness a Sessions trial in India outside the Presidency towns without remarking that the Crown in India, as represented by Provincial lawyers, is exceedingly vindictive. If a prisoner be unrepresented by Counsel, Crown lawyers in England always show a certain measure of forbearance that is approved of by every humano person. In India, however, forbearance to an unrepresented prisoner by a Government Pleader, is a very rare thing. All manner of fallacies are freely indulged in for confounding the understandings of the jurors, and it is a pity that the Judge himself, "instead of assisting the comprehension of the jurous by exposing those fallacious arguments, contents himself with a statement, called the charge to the jury which is very often unintelligible. Sessions Judges are not always good lawyers. Hence the necessity of such observations by the Chief Justice. Unfortunately for the country, such observations cannot be expected to (bear fruit as long as our Secretariats continue to be ruled by officials having little acquaintance with the principles of general purispin lence, civil and criminal.

THE Madras Times says :-

"The Rijth of Bhinga is the latest royal recluse. Like the younger Birdha, he has laid aside his royal robes, and has decided to retire from active life, at least for a time, and to adopt the habits and customs of an orthodox Hindu recluse. To those who have followed, with sympathy or otherwise, the public life, and read the open letters of the, at any rate, highly enlightened Rijth, the news of his retirement will have come in the shape of a surprise. The recent bereavements in his family are said to have induced him to take the step—a motive in direct opposition to Gautaina, who became a recluse on the birth of his child. The Rijth's retirement his estates are placed under the management of the Court of Wirds to be administered in his behalf. It will be interesting to see what the Rijth's great renunciation will lead to, and whether he will re-appear to the world as a preacher or a king."

Notwithstanding the mention of the case being "a matter of much sympathy," the whole account is so flippant and unfeeling that no right-thinking man can read it without pun. The grief of a sire at the death of a son is sacred. It is the very last subject for pleasantiy. Burke hunself was thoroughly unmanned. It is no light thing to contemplate that they who ought to be our successors become our predecessors. For the short period that Burke survived his son, he was an altered man. The title of Lord Beaconsfield had been selected for him. He refused it with sorrow because there was no prospect of its descent on any issue of his body. Living in a society in which the spiritual element of man is always subordinated to his worldly concerns, Burke presented the picture of an active man retiring from the bustle of politics and society into the seclusion of private life. The Hindu is differently constituted. The idea of unending eternity is vividly present to his mind. That eternity, his scriptures tell him, is under his own control. For an individual of any of the three higher orders, the periods of pupilage and domesitcity being over, that of retirement from the world comes and then of complete renunctation. Rigah Udoy Pratap has done nothing that can cause surprise to one of his own nationality and faith. His re-appearance in the active world is not possible, unless he swerves from his vow. The ill-concealed banter, of the writer in the Madras Times, about the probable re-appearance of the Rijah as a new religious teacher, proves his own utter want of spirituality. The alternative, viz., the Rajah's re-appearance " as a king " is an instance of wit that is almost unintelligible in the connection. Nor can Bhinga be spoken of as a royal recluse. He was not a reigning chief. The statement is based on either ignorance or flattery. Bhinga is a very sensible person. Unlike his fellows among the landed aristocracy of India, he discouraged others from styling him His Highness, an honour that is reserved for only ruling chiefs. To give up the world and its attractions at his age is a most difficult feat. One of the scions of the great landed house of Gauga Govind Sing of Bengal showed himself equal to this act of courage. The incident, as ordinarily reported, was most romantic. Having fallen asleep one afternoon, he lay on his bed beyond the usual time. His coach was ready for his accustomed evening drive. His valet awoke nim, saying,-" Protector of the distressed, the day is wearing out!" He rose and repeated the expression about the wearing out of the day. He was heard to mutter,-" Yes, the day is wearing out ! What am I doing?" Soon after, giving up everything he possessed, he took a brass pot and a piece of coarse blanket and began his new life of Renunciation. The next day he saw a man quenching his thirst in a stream with his joined hands. He gave his brass pot to the next mendicant he saw, and throwing away his blanket also, set out for places of pilgrimage. He supported himself by mendicancy, sleeping where evening overtook him, and never keeping anything for the morrow. He promptly left the place where his identity was suspected.

At the Bombay High Court, Justices Parsons and Ranade disposed of the appeal of Nawabzada Nasurulla Khan from the decision of Mr. Sanders-Slater, the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Bombay, convicting him of offering a bribe of Rs. 10,000 to Mr. Lely, Collector of Surat. Their lordships held that at the second interview which the appellant had with the Collector, the former made no offer of a bribe, but seemed sorry for what he had done at the former interview. The Judges holding that the charge had not been proved, reversed the sentence passed on the accused and ordered his discharge, and advised Mi Budroodin Tychjee, his Counsel, to apply to the Mamlutdar of Bulsar for the return of the Rs. 10,000. The decision was received with applause in Court.

THE Secretary of State for India has warned the Government of India against hasty removal of officers from service on abolition of appointments due to reduction of establishment. It seems that notices are served on officers in anticipation of orders abolishing their places, This, Mr. Fowler points out, is not only unjust to officers, but may involve inconvenient claims for compensation, specially if the proposed reduction is not given effect to from any cause. The order promulgated is that no Government servant should be discharged until the reduction of establishment, entailing the abolition of his post, has been finally determined on and been actually ordered by Government. The fact that prospective changes are under consideration, and likely to be adopted, which will involve a reduction of establishment, should not be used to justify the removal of an officer from his appointment.

THE recent case of contempt in the Police Court proved the helplessness of Magistrates in engaging Crown lawyers. We quote below the Government order on the subject.

"No. 1652, dated Fort William, the 31st December 1874.
From—Arthur Howell, Esq., Offg. Secretary to the Govt. of India, Home Dept. (Judicial,)
To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal.
In reply to your letter No. 4406, dated the 17th ultimo, 1 am to say that the Government of India concur in the opinion of His Honour that the Lieutenant Governor that as regards officers under the Bengal Government, in every case involving a criminal prosecution the interference of the Government Solicitor and Prosecutor should not be ference of the Government Solution and Prosecutor should not be exercised without the previous sanction of the Bogal Government of the Government of India, with the exception of applications from the Commissioner of Police in Calcutta in all Criminal cases, and from the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, in all cases connected with breaches of the Excise, Opium or Customs laws. The Government Solicitor, however, should not be released from the obligation to supervise all criminal cases committed to the High Coint whether by Calcutta or by Mofussil Magistrates; and in the case of a prosecution being directed by the High Court, as its sometimes done, should take it up without seeking orders from Government. I am to request that the officers to whom these orders apply may be made acquainted with them." acquainted with them."

In Calcutta, it is only the Commissioner of Police and the Board of Revenue that can instruct the Government Solicitor. Unlike the Magistrates in the Mofussil, the Magistrates in Calcutta have not the power in that behalf. If they require any assistance they must specially obtain permission of the Bengal Government, unless the Police Commissioner is disposed to help them. District Magistrates as Chiefs of Police are not handicapped by any such restrictions. Cal cutta Magistrates, being more Judges than Policemen, are denied the privilege. The Honorary Magistrates, again, must approach Government through the Chief Magistrate. This involves a delay which may be disastrous. Whenever the Chief Magistrate is called upon by the High Court to shew any cause, he is not free to engage a Counsel, unless he can pay him from his own pocket. In the contempt case, the Chief Magistrate had asked the Commissioner of Police to instruct the Government Prosecutor in the Police Court to prosecute Mr. Palit. Sir John Lambert was good enough to forward the request to Mr. Hume, who had been instructing Counsel for Mr. Palit, the accused. The Government Solicitor called for the papers and wished not to be instructed as the record did not disclose sufficient evidence for conviction. When the case went up to the High Court, Mr. Pearson, to avoid a second rebuff, would not again ask the Government Solicitor. This is a position which is not at all dignified If he require the advice of Crown lawyers he must apply to the Commissioner of Police. That officer's power is now acknowledged to be great. No appointment of a Magistrate, we believe, can be made without his consent. At any rate, he is given the power to recommend. Most of the Honorary Magistrates are of his making. Magistrates not of his way of thinking have no chance of continuing in the Police Court. It is time, we should think, to revise the order we have quoted. That order is more than 20 years old.

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, May 11, 1895.

BRITISH POLICY AT CHITRAL A FROWARD POLICY.

Now that the professed object of the Chitral expedition has been attained, viz., the relief of Dr. Robertson and his brave companions, speculation is rife both in India and England as to what the finale will be of the brilliant campaign. Opinion is certainly divided as to the wisdom of the policy in pursuit of which a representative of the British Power found himself suddenly invested in a miserable fort and obliged to stand a siege. However much might responsible statesmen strive, by a show of taking the public into their confidence, to explain that the action with regard to Chitral had been dictated by circumstances of individual application, the sensible portion of the public will scarcely accord its credit to that explanation. It will, on the other hand, be disposed to look upon that action as the particular application of a general line of policy which the Government of India has adopted, since sometime, under sanction of the English Cabinet. So far as the history of the Chitral imbroglio is known, it deserves to be carefully studied as offering, perhaps, the best explanation of how the British Government finds itself at war with the semi-civilised Asiatic tribes that stand between India and Russian Asia.

Up to September 1892, Chitral was governed by a strong ruler named Aman-ul-Mulk He had a large family, including, it is said, seventeen sons. In most Asiatic countries, the succession to the throne is really not governed by the custom of primogeniture. That son who happens to be a successful intriguer and who is supported by a larger number of influential persons, or whose authority over the army is greater than that of others, ascends the throne, sometimes in the very life time of his father, whom he disposes of by immurement in a well-guarded castle for the rest of his days, but generally, of course, after his demise. The brothers he disposes of by immediate slaughter, or, if humanely inclined, by only putting out their eyes. Aman-ul-Mulk died with the crown on his head. After he had breathed his last, there was a general scramble among his children for the throne. The second son Afzal-ul-Mulk seized the fort of Chitral, slew as many of his brothers as he could, and drove his eldest brother Nizam out of the country. The latter fled to Gilgit and his fortunes seemed to be desperate. Suddenly, however, a revolution was effected at Chitral by a brother of Amanul-Mulk, named Shere Afzal, appearing on the scene. He surprised his nephew Afzal-ul-Mulk, slew him without difficulty as also one or two brothers of his, and seized the throne. When intelligence of this revolution reached Gilgit, Colonel Durand, the representative of the forward school of politics, thought proper to interfere. We do not know what the arguments were by which he brought over the Viceroy to his views, but the result was that Nizam, who had been staying at Gilgit, marched to Chitral, under at least the moral support of the British Government. Nizam succeeded in defeating his uncle Shere Afzal and driving him once more to Afghanistan whence he had come. The conqueror ruled Chitral for a little over two years, and then on the first day of the present year was slain by a brother named Amir-ul-Mulk. Desirous of regaining the throne, Shere Afzal, as soon as he heard of Nizam's murder, left Afghanistan and once more presented himself before Chitral. His attempt failed and Shere Afzal is now a prisoner of the British Government.

The Viceroy, from his place in the Supreme Council, on the occasion of the debate on the Budget, explained that, so far back as 1876 the Maharaja of Kashmir was permitted to accept the suzerainty of Chitral and that the Government of India undertook to afford countenance and material aid to Kashmir in the defence or maintenance of that arrangement. The pledge was repeated to Kashmir and directly to the ruler of Chitral also. For years subsidies have been granted both by the Government of India and Kashmir to Chitral. When the British Agency at Gilgit was withdrawn in 1881, assurance was given to Kashmir that the Government of India would still adhere to its policy with regard to Chitral. That policy, as defined by Lord Elgin, was "to accept the de facto Mehtar of Chitral provided he could maintain his position and accepted the suzerainty of Kashmir." Lord Elgin further explained that on the re-establishment of the Gilgit Agency in 1889, the legitimate influence of the British Government was maintained by the presence in Chitral of an officer who was an Assistant to the British Agent at Gilgit, with a small escort of troops supported by garrisons at Gupis and Ghizi in Yasin. His headquarters were at Mastuj, but he was in the habit of visiting Chitral now and then. This arrangement, it is said, was gratifying to the Mehtar himself who often expressed the wish to see the British Agent permanently established at Chitral itself, but the risk was one which the Government of India declined to take. In the beginning of the present year Nizamul-Malk came to an untimely end. Lientenant Gordon, the Political officer, then on a visit to Chitral, with an escort of only ten men, avoided with great tact and prudence a collision with Amir ul-Mulk. A reinforcement of fifty men then arrived from Mastuj, and then he was joined by Dr. Robertson on the 1st of February following with a further reinforcement,

These are Lord Elgin's explanations. One may pronounce them satisfactory so far as they go. But it is very much to be regretted that they do not go far enough. If the policy of the British Government was to recognise the de facto ruler of Chitral provided he could only maintain himself and accepted the suzerainty of Kashmir, why was not Shere Afzal recognised when he took the throne after the slaughter of his nephew Afzal? What made Colonel Durand support Nizam in his endeavours to dethrone his uncle? What was the kind of support that Colonel Durand was allowed to give to the defeated candidate who was living at Gilgit? Was it known to Shere Afzal that his nephew marched against him with the support, moral or material, of the British Government? Was Shere Afzal regarded as too powerful a ruler to be allowed to occupy the throne of Chi-tral long? We know, for an Under-Secretary of State for India declared it in Parliament, that the Government of India is very jealous of superior abilities in feudatory rulers and chiefs. Was Nizam supported because he was of mediocre talents? Then, again, when Nizam-ul-Mulk fell a victim to the fury or cunning of his brother Amir-ul-Mulk, was there any desire on the part of the British Government to punish the murderer of a prince who while alive had been known to rule with the support of that Government? Amir-ul-Mulk soon became the favourite of the British Agent at Chitral. Has the British Government ever enquired into the sentiments which a policy of this kind inspires in the breasts of Asiatic peoples? The sight of a British Resident or Agent talking to-day with friendliness with a particular chief and giving him, in the name of his Government, rifles and money for strengthening his position, and the week after shaking hands with the utmost cordiality with the murderer of that chief and behaving towards him in all other respects in exactly the same way as he had towards his unfortunate victim, can, to say the least, inspire only disagreeable feelings in every Asiatic mind, Hindu mythology declares that Indra, the ruler of the Heavens, falls, but his queen Sachi never falls. Blessed with eternal youth and beauty, she approaches the next Indra with as smiling a countenance as she had put on while approaching his predecessor in his days. Inspite of her unchangeable youth and beauty, and her position as the eternal queen of the celestial regions, and the admiration she extorts from all the visitors of the celestial durbar, is there any doubt that she is despised by all in their heart of

The British Government, by engaging to support the ruler who is only able to maintain himself and prepared to accept British suzerainty, demonstrates its own weakness and creates the impression in the Asiatic mind that British recognion and friendship and British subsidies of money and arms are entirely unmeaning and worthless. Look at the case of Sir Jung Bahadur of Nepal and his brother Sir Ranadip Sing Bahadur. The former placed the • resources of Nepal at the disposal of the British Government during the worst days of the Sepoy Mutiny. Napalese blood and money were freely poured for reconquering Gangetic India on behalf of Britain. Both Sir Jung and his brother fought personally against the enemies of Britain. There cannot be the slightest doubt that the speedy suppression of the Sepoy revolt was due to the effective aid rendered by Sir Jung Bahadur and his brother. The former died. Sir Ranadip succeeded him as Prime Minister. His attitude towards the British Government was exceedingly friendly. Sir Ranadip was foully murdered in the bosom of his family by a villainous nephew, The eldest son of Jung Bahadur and his son also were murdered as foully. The ablest of his sons, General Ranbir Jung, was forced to take refuge in the British Residency. With a haste that was exceedingly indecent, the British Government recognised the assassin of Sir Ranadip and of Sir Jung Bahadur's children, and quietly suffered General Ranabir Jung to be driven from the British Residency in Nepal into British India, General Ranbir Jung had officiated on several occasions as Prime Minister of Nepal and he is now a refugee in British India without even the means of living like a Nepalese nobleman. Lord Elgin curtly rejected General Ranbir Jung's prayer for a pecuniary allowance. As representative of the British Power in the East, Lord Elgin had the littleness of refusing a son's prayer for a pittance wellknowing that his father had spent some crores for helping Lord Canning. Bir Shum Shere is the de facto Prime Minister and, therefore, deserves to be recognised. Such is the wise policy of the British Government of India. The people of Asia fail to distinguish such policy from the worst forms of selfishness and ingratitude.

Nizam-ul-Mulk, though he ruled with the support of the British Government, was murdered by Amirul-Mulk. The small British force at Chitral won the approbation of the Viceroy and his councillors for the tact with which it avoided hostilities with the new ruler. Shere Afzal saw that the British Government did not raise its little finger to avenge the late Mehtar. He collected an army and showed himself before Chitral. He wanted to fight Amir-ul-Mulk and ascend the throne which had once been his and to which his claim was as good as that of Amir himself. Shere Afzal, in the first instance, could have no motive to attack the British force at Chitral. It was Amir-ul-Mulk who was Shere Afzal's enemy, and Shere Afzal came to adjust accounts with him. A little tact on the part of Dr. Robertson could easily have prevented a collision between himself and the invader. As far as the facts are known to this date, the entire blame must fall on Dr. Robertson and none else for what happened subsequent to Shere Afzal's appearance before Chitral. The invader ought to have been allowed to settle his accounts with Amir-ul-taken as acting contumaciously towards the British Power. The Viceroy says that Umrah Khan had been informed of the fact that Chitral was under British suzerainty. Could Umrah Khan believe that the British Government was serious? That Government had done nothing to avenge the murder of its devoted ally or feudatory Nizam. Why should it not allow Umrah Khan and Shere Afzal to try their strength with the murderer? Did they say that after settling their accounts with Amir-ul-Mulk they would not accept British suzerainty? The fact is, the Chitral imbroglio was the direct consequence of the British policy of recognising the de facto ruler if only he can maintain himself and accept the position of a British feudatory. The plea that Shere Afzal had not the unanimous support of the Chitralis themselves is exceedingly hollow. Was a plebiscite taken throughout the Mehtar's dominions before the Government of India came to the conclusion that Shere Afzal was not really liked by those over whom he came to rule? When Nizam was murdered, we suppose another vote was taken for ascertaining that his popularity had waned and that all the Chitralis wanted to have Amir-ul-Mulk for a wholesome change.

Whether the fruits of the campaign should or should not be thrown away is a difficult question to answer. Already the military authorities are pronouncing on the value of Chitral as a strategic position. The road to Chitral has been opened at a great cost. The British Empire of India is highly elastic. Chitral may or may not be annexed. It is, however. more than certain that with its advantages as a strategical base, British influence at Chitral cannot once more be contracted into what it was before the campaign The Empire is destined to expand as it has expanded in spite of protests and warnings in the past. It is a law of growth which can no more be resisted than the force of gravitation. Let the empire then fulfil its destiny. Only, let us not hear in the future of this wretched policy of supporting de facto rulers. Let liberality and gratitude take the place of downright selfishness. Let the people of Asia see that British recognition or friendship means something. Let them understand that feudatories or others who are loyal to that Government are entitled to its support, and above all let Asia understand that the slaughter of a British feudatory or ally, or of one whom the British Government honours with its friendship, is certain to be avenged in a truly imperial spirit.

CONTAGION IN TUBERCULOSIS.

BY GEORGE A. EVANS, M.D. (Read before the Medical Society of the County of Kings, February 20, 1894.)

In order to empasize more forcibly the necessity of adopting active measures to limit the prevalence of tuberculosis in this city, it may not be amiss at this time to lay before the Society a brief compilation of data upon which your "Committee on Tuberculosis" largely based its recommendations.

This occasion also affords an opportunity to say that your committee followed somewhat in the footsteps of Dr. Herman M. Biggs, in his report on the subject to the New York City Board of Health.

else for what happened subsequent to Shere Afzal's appearance before Chitral. The invader ought to have been allowed to settle his accounts with Amir-ul-Mulk without the slightest interference by the British Agent at Chitral If Umrah Khan chose to assist Shere Afzal in the latter's efforts to regain the Mehtarship of Chitral, we fail to see how he could be bacilli varied between 20,000,000 and 165,000,000 on the days preceding the Koch inoculations, while the third case varied between 70,000,000 and 12,000,000 before the inoculations. In another case, not undergoing the Koch treatment, the number of bacilli varied between 300,000,000 and 4,000,000. The accuracy of Nuttall's method of computation was demonstrated by a number of test and culture experiments.

According to Bollinger, one cubic centimetre of phthisical sputum contains from 810,000 to 960,000 tubercle bacilli. The average consumptive, therefore, expectorates between 30,000,000 and consumptive, therefore, expectorates between 30,000,000 and 40,000,000 of these parasites a day.

In a series of experiments of investigations made by Dr. T. Mitchell Prudden, of New York, in 1891, as many as 21,460,000 rubercle bacilli were computed to be present in the daily sputum of a single patient. For data taken from the viral statistics report of the last census of the United States, it is safe to assume that the whole number of deaths due to pulmonary phthisis in the entire country during the year 1890, was over 125,000. If we estimate the average duration of the disease as two years, there would be two cases in existence for every death. In this way we estimate 11,000 cases in existence in New York City, 4,000 in Brooklyn and 13,000 in the rest of New York State.

Most of these phthisical subjects eject for months large quantities of sputa containing immense numbers of spore-bearing tubercle-bacilli. "Most of these countless infective germs (to quote Robert Koch) which are scattered everywhere, on the floor, on articles of clothing, etc., perish without finding an opportunity of settling again in a living host, but we should further bear in mind the results of Fischer's and Schill's experiments which demonstrate that tubercle-bacilli may retain their virulence for 43 days in putrefying sputum, and for 186 days in sputum dried at the ordinary temperature of the air." It has also been shown by Sawizky that tuber-culous sputum, dried and preserved under the conditions which usually obtain in the dwelling-house, preserves its infective properties for two months, while the experiments of Stone go to show that the virulence of these parasites may be extended for as long a period as three years. Koch says: "There can be no doubt as to to healthy subjects." By the force of the patient's cough particles of tenacious sputum are dislodged, discharged into the air, and so scat

"Now, numerous experiments have shown that the inhalation of scattered particles of phthisical sputum causes tuberculosis with absolute certainty, not only in animals easily susceptible to the disease, but in those also which have much more power of resisting it." Koch goes on to state that, while a healthy person who is brought anto immediate contact with a phthisical patient and inhaling the fragments of fresh sputum discharged into the air may be thereby infected, inhaling dried sputum in the form of dust is much more likely to set up tuberculosis.

Schirner, of Vienna, reports in the Wierer Medizanische Presse, January 4, 1891, that one day in 1888, on rinsing the dust from some grapes bought on a warm day, late in summer, he found the water quite duty, and, struck by the thought of the large number of phthisical patients who eject their sputa upon the streets, he ejected 10 cubic centimetres of this into the abdominal cavity of each of three guinea pigs. One of the animals died in two days of peritonitis. The other two died in 45 and 58 days, respectively.

peritonius. The other two died in 45 and 58 days, respectively.

Examinations of the bodies disclosed extensive tuberculous infiltration at the site of inoculation, and partly caseous nodules in the peritoneum, in the liver, in the spleen, but with meagre deposits in the lungs. Tubercle bacilli were found in the nodules.

In a communication made to the Académie des Sciences, MM. Spillman and Haushalter, and recorded in La Semaine Medicale, the question of the spread of the tubercle-bacillus by means of the common house fly is considered. The authors state that they have seen flies enter spittoons containing the sputum of phthiscal patients; they were then caught and placed in a bell jar. On the following day several of them were dead. Examination of the abdominal contents and excrement of these flies on the inside of the jar showed the presence of many tubercle-bacilli.

Corner's experiments, which were published in the International Klimiche Rundichau, demonstrate beyond doubt the infective nature of the dust removed from the walls of rooms in dwellings and from those of hospital wards in which tuberculous subjects have lived. In order to examine the walls and floors of rooms, the surfaces were washed over with sterilized sponges, which were then used to inoculate broth, the resulting culture being injected into the abdominal walls of 3 guinea-pigs. The animals were killed forty days later and a careful necropsy made. Twenty-one hospital wards, in which most of the patients were phthisical, were ex amined in this way, the result being that, from the dust of 15 pt them, tuberculosis was set up.

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all kinds. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Street, Westminster, London, S. W.

Similar observations made in lunatic asylums showed that the walls of these establishments are very frequently infected with tubercle. Private houses, were persons affected with phthisis had lived, gave likewise very distinct, positive results. The investiga-tions of Flick in Philadelphia, as well as those of De-Forest in New Haven, which were made to determine the infective or noninfective nature of the atmosphere of rooms in which tuberculous subjects had lived, were also conclusively affirmative.

Marfan, of Paris (Semaine Medicale), reports the following details of a localized epidemic of pulmonary phthisis, in which the element of infection seems to have played a very important part.

"In a large business house in the centre of Paris, 22 persons were employed about eight hours a day. One of them, aged 40, had been phthisical for three years, when he died. He coughed and spat upon the floor for three years, and did not leave his work till three months before his death. From this time, out of 22 persons employed, 15 have died. One only died of cancer, the remaining 14 died of pulmonary tuberculosis. One year before the death of the first person, who appears to have been the starting point of the epidemic, two employees who had been connected with the same business for more than ten years, began to cough and spit upon the They died in 1885. Beginning with the end of 1884, the deaths followed each other at close intervals."

At the meeting of the Congress for the study of tuberculosis, At the meeting of the Congress for the study of tuberculosis, which was held in Paris, in 1888, a permanent committee was appointed to formulate simple and practical instructions regarding the prophylaxis of tuberculosis. On behalf of this committee, Villemin submitted a report which received the approval of four professors of the medical faculty of Paris, of which the following is a brief summary.

- 1. Tuberculosis is, of all diseases, the one which has the largest number of victims in the cities, and even in certain country districts. In 1884, for instance, of 57,970 deaths in Paris, 15,000 were due to tuberculosis.
- 2. Tuberculosis is a virulent, contagious, transmissible parasitic disease, produced by a microbe, the bacillus of Koch. The microbe, apart from direct hereditary transission, finds its way into the organism through the digestive and respiratory tracts, and through wounds of the skin and mucous membrane. The propagation of tuberculosis may be prevented by well-directed precautions.
- 3. The parasite of tuberculosis may be found in the milk, muscles and blood of the food of animals. The use of raw and under done meat, and blood that may possibly contain the living germ of tuberculosis, should be prohibited. Milk, for the same reasons, should be boiled before being used.
- 4. On account of the dangers concealed in milk, the protection of infants, who are so easily attacked by tuberculosis, should attract the special attention of mother, and nurses. The tuberculous mother should not nurse her child. Cow's milk, when given, should always There is less danger in giving ass's and goat's milk unbe boiled.
- 5 It is greatly to the interest of the public to assure the proper inspection of meat, as provided for by law. The only sure way to avoid the dangers of tubercular meat is to see that it is thoroughly cooked.
- 6. Inasmuch as the germ of tuberculosis may be conveyed from a tubercular to a healthy man by the sputum, pus, inspissated mucus, and any object containing tubercular dust, it is necessary to bear in mind that
- a. The sputum of phthisical persons being the most dangerous
- agent of transmission, there is a public danger from its presence upon the ground, carpet, hangings, cuttains, napkins, handkerchiefs, cloths and bedding.

 b The use of cuspidors by everyone should be insisted upon in all places. Cuspidors should always be empired into the fire and cleansed by boiling water. They should never be empired into rubbish piles, upon gardens, or where there is a possibility of in fecting poultry, or even into water-closets.
- It is unsafe to sleep in the bed of a tuberculous patient, or to spend a great amount of time in the room of such a patient; least of all should young children be allowed to sleep in such a room.
- d. Individuals considered as predisposed to contract there ulose should be kept away from localities frequented by phthistical patients.
- e. One should not use objects contaminated by phthisis (linen, hedding, clothing, toilet articles, jewelry, hangings, furniture, play things, etc.) except after suitable disinfection.

 f. Rooms and houses occupied at watering-places and resorts,
- should be furnished in such manner that disintection may be easily carried out after the departure of each invalid. It is the best plan of all to furnish rooms without curtains, carpets or hangings, to whitewash the walls and cover the floors with linoleum,... Brooklyn Med. Your.

SAD MISHAP WITH ANIMAL EXTRACTS.

The blunders I wish to call attention to occurred recently in the preparation and use of the animal extracts so fortunately discovered by the late Dr. Brown-Sequard, of Paris, France, and so effectually developed by certain eminent physicians in our own country. After having carefully and diligently experimented for quite a lengthy period in the manufacture and use of these extracts, I came to the conclusion, from my results in the treatment of certain carried troubles, that I had accidentally hit upon an unusually excellent technique in the manipulation, and felt emboldened to try my hand in the treatment of some organic troubles.

One particular lot of the extract had proved so exceptionally efficient that I decided to adopt the method pursued in its preparation as a rule for my laboratory. Looking up the note of the method I had employed with it, I ascertained that in all essential parti-culars except one I had followed that of the high authorities now everywhere recognized in this connection. The exception had regard to the length of time given to the maceration. Instead of one year, the regulation time, I had left the material in the macerating vats for eleven months, five weeks and eight days.

My first experiment was made with two black-and-tan setter dogs, who, in attempting to take charge of some blue-grass hay in the manger of a Kentucky thoroughbred stallion, had been set upon by that spirited animal and compelled to beat a hasty retreat, each with the complete loss of an ear. These canines were named, respec-tively, Ardotto and Scipio. Ardotto had lost his left ear and Scipio his right. As Ardotto had become quite vicious, and was also unkindly suspected by the neighbours of eating his mutton too tresh, I conceived the notion of killing him and feeding his ear to Scipio in the shape of aurine, or ear-extract, to be made according to my improved formula.

The result was marvellous. In the course of a few weeks after Scipio began taking the aurine thus prepared, an ear began growing and in a short time the appendage was rapidly from the old stump, and in a short time the appendage was fully restored. If there was any difference, it looked smoother and glossier than the other, and, indeed, though not noted at the time, it was an exact reproduction of the ear of the condemned Ardotto. I failed to take into consideration at the time that the dogs were twins, that they had lost opposite ears, and that they were both black-and-tan, all these coincidences being purely accidental. However, after a short time Scipio was unluckily run over by a street-ear, and lost his left hind leg. Encouraged by my former successes, I began looking up a suitable dog that could spare a leg, or a leg that could spare a dog, with the view of preparing a quantity of legine, in the hope of restoring as before the lost member. The first dog brought was a strong, bench legged cur, with a shaggy, well-curled tall.

After the careass had been divided ready for committing to the vats, it somehow failed to meet the fancy of my assistants as well as myself, so we threw it aside and substituted an animal that appeared to be a vigorous cross between setter and Newfoundland, using the right hind leg in the preparation of the extract.

An enterprising young friend, however, took it into his head to treat a bob-tailed dog belonging to his mother, with a preparation of tailine, in the hope of restoring the missing member, and requested permission to prepare the extract in my laboratory from the tail of the rejected cur. To this I cheerfully consented.

e rejected cur. 10 this 1 cheeriumy consented.

After macerating our materials with scrupulous regard to the period we had adopted as our rule, viz : thirteen months, five weeks and eleven days, my assistants went into the laboratory early in the morning, before it was fairly light, to get the legine to begin on Scipio's leg. Unfortunately, in doing so they cracked the glass jar containing it. The jar in which my young friend had prepared his tailine stood next to it, but was thought by them to be empty. Into this they hastily poured the legine and brought the jar into the operating-room, where the mixture was administered to Scipio.

At first things went on most gratifyingly. A leg began growing rapidly from Scipio's stump, and in a short time it was thought best to turn him out for exercise so that the new joints might be made supple. When he was brought out it was observed that the hair on his tail was becoming rather coarse and stiff, and it was noticed, too, that his tail had begun to turn over his back. At first, however, it was thought that this roughness of the hair was due to the fact that he had not been in a situation to have the toilet of his tail properly attended to, while the curling was attributed to pressure against the walls of the narrow kennel in which he had been con fined. Both the curling of the tail and the state of the hair grew worse daily, and an investigation which was now set on foot developed the mistake by which the legine and the tailine had become mixed.

In a short time Scipio's tail had become markedly bushy and ugly, and eventually became curled so tight over tis back that half the time his hind feet were lifted clear off the ground. This led to the discovery that the extract from some animals is prepotent as compared to others, for evidently the tail-developing elements of the cur had predominated over those of Scipio. But poor Scipio's misfortunes did not end here. We had made the legine from the right leg of the mongrel, and the result was that a right leg grew on Scipio's left stump, and the dew claw was on the wrong side. Furthermore, Scipio had always been a right-handed accelerator, that is, he had been in the habit of lifting his right leg whenever he felt an inclina-tion to moisten hat-racks, door-posts and the like, and by a streak of ill-fortune the same had been the case with the mongrel. So, when it became necessary for Scipio to discharge the renal secretion both legs would begin bouncing up in the most tumultuous and unsymmetrical way, and this, with the tilting of the hind-quarters due to the tight-curling of the tail, made poor Scipio at such times a picture of confusion, shame and chagrin that could not but touch a tender spot in the bosom of the most unsympathetic.

Imagine the consequences if I had been treating a sensitive young lady, say a beautiful blonde, who had happened to lose her nose through infection from the kisses of too ardent a lover, and a similar blunder had been made! Imagine that noseine derived from the black, broad and flat proboscis of some glossy son of Africa had been used in the treatment, and worse still, if worse can be, that some one making hairine from kinky shearings from the same source had got the extracts mixed as we did. I draw the veil!

Half the seigniorage in the national treasury would not suffice to meet the damages, especially if the jury should happen to take its cue from a verdict in a recent noted case at the national capital. I only venture this allusion in order to suggest the measure of gratitude that is due me for making this humiliating confession purely for the good of the profession, and bravely regardless of the fact that well-nigh universal success characterizes reports throughout medical literature.---Lukianos, in The American Practitioner and News.

GRANNY GORTON'S BIRTHDAY.

SATURDAY, January 21st, was a great day in Central Village, in the State of Connecticut, in America. On that day Mrs. Jonathan Gorton was too years old and formally received her friends, of whom hundreds were present. Sne wore her best black site gown, with a rose in the bodice. The venerable lady was seated in a comfortable armchan on a platform in the best room of her house. Then the train of callers filed through, each and all shaking hands with her. "Granny Gorton," as she is called, is a trun little body and very numble on her feet. There she is called, is a trim little body and very numble on her feet. There was never anything ailed her, she says, and, except that her eyesight in the properties of good as it used to be, she is as active as any woman of 50. Why has Granny Gotton lived so long? Why is she so active now? She lets out the secret herself when she says, "There was never anything ailed me." That's it, and all of it.

People who live too years are not so very rate. The deaths of 45 such were reported last year in England—22 men and 23 women. Yet, compared to the multitudes who die, these are nothing—nothing. Can we not keep things from ailing us, and so live long as Mis. Gotton? Yes, if we will take the trouble to do it! Men and women 100 years old, still vigorous and clear-headed, should be a sight so common as not to be termicked, and will be yet in the future. Why not so now? "Ask yourself the question," as the boatmen say down on Deal beach. Itee's now it is: A woman's tale. She says she fell ill when a girl of about 15. She lost her appetite, had pains in the sides and chest, of anont 15. She lost her appetite, had pains in the sides and chest, frequent headaches, and was often obliged to be down on the couch and rest. All this didn't promise long life, did it? No; it was a bad well, she got worse instead of better. She was often sick, vomitted her food, and spitting of a sour fluid. For five years she went on this way. This brings us to O tober, 1881. She was then in service as parlou-maid at Learnington Hastings, Warwickshine. Here she suffered from constant sickness, retching, and heartbuin. The chest parswers so bid as to bend her two double. No position that she could take relived her. Her stone ich was so tender and sore that everything she ate pained and distressed her. For months and months she only took liquid from—mitk and beaten eggs, and so on.

She got weaker and weaker every day, so she says. Of course; how else could it he? A doctor at Rugby told her she had "ulceration of the chest," which she didn't at all. What is "ulceration of the chest," which she didn't at all.

She got water and weather every tay, so she says. Of course; now selse could it be? A doctor at Rugby told her she had "ulceration of the chest," which she didn't at all. What is "ulceration of the chest," which she didn't at all. What is "ulceration of the chest," He gave her medicines and advice, but she grew no better on that account. This young lady was now about 20 years old, with a poor outlook for ever being much older. She didn't expect it, not did her friends. Then another doctor, being consulted, said "ulceration of the chest," like his medical brother at Rugby. Both wrong.

"After Six months' medical treament" she says, "I gave up my situation and returned to my home at Buxton Lamas, Norfolk. This was in June, 1882. Then I was taken so bad I had to take to my bed. My mother thought I was in a decline."

Now, the word "decline" means consumption, as we all know; a disease common in England and incurable everywhere. Thousands of bright gibs and young men "decline" into their graves every years in this populous island. Sid enough it is to see.

Well, at this point her good and wise mether interfered in her daughter's case. She gave the doctors the go-by and sent to Norwich for some bottles of Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup. In two weeks the young patient began to feel better, and in three months she got a new situation and went to work young patient began to feel better, and in three months she got a new situation and went to work.

"Since then, fifteen years ago," she says, "I have kept in better health than ever before in my life, thanks to Seigel's Syrup. Yours truly, (Signet) (Mis.) SARAH ELEANOR BAKER, 8, King's Street, Church Road Tottenham, near London, September 30th, 1892."

A dozen words more and we're done. Mrs. Baker's ailment was indigestion and dyspepsia, nothing else, and quite enough. The "ulceration" was inflammation of the inner coating of the stomach, a symptom of the disease. We wish her a long and hippy life, and merely add that if all her sex could avoid or cure this one trouble most of them might live to be as old as Granny Gorton.

AN INDIAN JOURNALIST: Life, Letters and Correspondence:

Dr. SAMBHU C. MOOKERJEE. late Editor of "Reis and Rayyet,"
By

F. H. SKRINE, CS.

The volume, undorm with Mooketjee's Travels and Voyages in Bengal, will consist of about 600 pages and contain, inter alia, 1. A photograph of the Doctor from a painting by Mr James Archet, R.S.A.

2. A Biography, illustrated by copious notes and and and ana.

3. About 225 pages of original essays from 3. About 225 pages of original essays from his brilliant pen.
4. Selections from his correspondence with statesmen and literary men.

PRICE : Rs. As To registered subscribers paying before publication 5 0

To other subscribers and ordinary purchasers ... • • •

After paying the expenses of the publication, the surplus will be placed wholly at the disposal of the family of the deceased man of Orders will be registered by Messrs. Thacker, Spink, & Co., Government Place, and by Babu Kisati Mohan Ganguh, B L, 12 Ashutosh Dev's Line, Calcutta.

Subscribers to the "Essays by a Brahman" will be communicated with by Babu Kisari Mohan Ganguli,

To ensure accuracy and avoid all mischance,

some such form may be used as,— Please enter my name as a subscriber for copies of "An Indian Journalist," The amount,

has been remitted permoney order To be legibly (Name

Address..... written

The

INDIAN MUSEUM.

The Museum will be opened for Native Ladies and their female attendints only, even Thursday between the hours of 3 & 5 PM, from 1st February to 30th April and from 16th May to 31st October and between the hours of 2 & 4 P. Me from 16th November to 31st Ianuary.

A. ALCOCK, Superintendent,

GENUINE HOMCEOPATHY. A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M S. Homeopathic Practitioner,

May be consulted by letter or personally daily at his residence, 30-1, Colootolah Street, Calcutta.

Novelty in Avurvedic Medicine. AYURVEDIC PHARMACY.

36, Lower Chitpore Road, Fouzdari Balaknana, C deutta

KAVIRAJ NAGENDRA NATH SEN, Physician, Surgeon, Acconcheur, practises the Ayurvedic system of medicine, after hiving obtained a lydoma at the final examination of one of the Government medical Institutions of the country. SPECIFICS

SPECIFICS
for all ordinary diseases, like Fever, Cough, Asthma, Phithisis, Diabetes, &c., including diseases brought on by irregularities and indistretions of diverse kinds. Catalogues, containing full accounts of diseases and remedies, are transmitted on application. Prescriptions, with or without medicines, sent to every part of India and Ceylon, Cape Colony, and the British Isles, on receipt (by post) of full accounts of diseases.

Thousands of unsolicited Testimonials from

Thousands of unsolicited Testimonials from every quarter.

Lady Elliott Portrait Memorial Committee.

Allan Arthur Hon, Justice Beverley Hon C. E. Buckland W. D. Crincksnank Baron Gaerter Col. Hailes, 6th B. I. A. Mucdonald David McLaren Morri-

W. O. Bell-Irving S. E. J. Clarke H. H. The Mah naja Darbhanga, K.C.I.E. J Joustain, E. F. Longley. C. Moore Hon, P. Playfair,

A. F.M. Abdur Rahman A. Sunson.
J. O'B Saunders A. H. Walhs,

Mahataja Sir J. M. Tagore, K.C.S.I. PRESIDENT - Allan Arthur. HON, TREASURER - J. O'B. Stunders, N. SECRETARY - David McLaten Morrison,

At the meeting of Committee held at the Chamber of Commerce on the 19th January, Chamber of Commerce on the 19th January, it was decided to have a picture of Lady Elliott painted, any surplus to go towards a person d present.

All subscriptions to be sent to the HON TREASURER, 9, Hare Street, Calcutta.

THE WORKS OF DR JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE

Commentaries on the Hindu Law of 16 Work.

Work,

(Sd.) Nana Bhai Haiidas,"
Bengah translation of the Dyabhaga and the Mitakshara,† Pince ...
Bengah Translation of the Dittakachamitika,† Pince ...
The Evidence Act with notes in Bengala,† Pince ...
The Civil Procedure Code with notes in Bengali,† Price ... 4 o Principles of Zemindari Manage-ment and Book keeping in Bengali o 10 7 First Lessons in English for Bengali boys, Price ... 8. Bharat Sasan Pranali*

IN THE PRESS

The Philosophy of Religion from the of view of Common Sense. Price Rs 5 CONTENTS.

Historical Analysis of the evolution of Historical Analysis of the evolution of religious systems.

Definition of the term "religion."
The problems of the philosophy of religion and their solutions, old and new, (a) Why do Hindus believe in ten Avatais or incanations including in the series three thit are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a fortione, and a boar.

(b) Why is it that all ancient systems recommend the siculfice of animals, and the burning of ghee or incesse.

&c. &c. &c. &c.

&c. &c &c. &c. &c. The we spons offensive and defensive of

The power of fine words.
The art of becoming a prophet.
The cumulative effect of hardswearing for ages

Specimens of Puranised history.

Brahminical and Christian priesteraft

compared, The artificial miseries of men caused by religion. Tyranny and taxation of religion

The good man's adversity is the sharp man's opportunity.

Swindling as a fine art.

New Superstitions that may be suggest-ed for the benefit of the priests.

The great prophets of the world and

Probable origin of the Saiva religion. Tautric mysticism and abominations,

* To be had of Messis. Thacker Spink & Co., only

† To be had of Messrs Thacker Spink & Co., and also at the Suradhani Agency, No. 11, Raja Nabakushna's Street, Calcutat.

A Wonderful Medicine.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

ARE universally admitted to be worth a Guinea a box, for Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as wind and Pain in the Stomach, Sick, Headache, Giddness, Fulness, Swelling after Meals, Dizzness and Drow-siness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, of Breath, Costneness, Scursy, and Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreims and all Nervous and Trembling Sensation, &c. The first dose will give relief in twenty minutes.

Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one box of these Pulls, and they will be acknowledged to be

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

For females of all ages these Pills are invaluable, as a few doses of them cirry off all binnours, and bring about all that is required humours, and bring about all that is required No femicle should be without them. There is no medicine to be found equal to Beetham's Pills for removing any obstruction or riregularity of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box, they will soon testore femilies of all ages to sound and robust health. This has been proved by thou sands who have tried them, and found the benefits which are ensured by their use.

sands who have tried them, and round the benefits which are ensured by their use.

For a Weak Stomach, Imparied Digestion, and all Disorders of the Laver, they act like magic, a few doses will be found to work wonders on the most important organs in the

human machine
The Natives of India will find Beecham's The Natives of India will him becoming Pills the finest medicine ever introduced to their notice; the European residents also will had them of great value for cooling the blood. For throwing off fevers and preventing influmnations in hot cumates, they stand without a const

These are Ficts testified continually by nembers of all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debi-litated is, BEECHAM'S PILLS have the Largest Sale of any Patent Medicine in the

Beecham's Magic Cough Pills.

As a remedy for Coughs in general, Asthma, Bronchid Affections, Houseness, Shortness of Breath, Tightness and Oppression of the Chest, Wheering, &c., these Pills stand univailed. Let any person give Beecham's Cough Pills at ital, and the most violent Cough will in a short time be removed.

Beecham's Tooth Paste

Will recommend itself being efficacious and economical it is packed in neat airtight and economical it is packed in neat airtight coll mobile. Fibes.

NOTICE: G. Atherton, & Co. will forward on receipt of letter, samples at the following tates size 9/2d, at 8 annas per box; 1.1/2d, size 12 annas per box; 7.7/2d, size 12 annas per box; 7.7/2d, size 12 annas per Tube, these rates do not include the cost of postage which will be added to the amount.

Sole Wholesale Agents for India BERS. BURMAH & CEYLON. G. ATHERTON & CC

THERICALCU will be CALCU will be TAR STREET, 3, NEW CHINA BAZAconvey

NAWAR BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF

NA	WAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LU	TE	EF
	MEMORIAL FUND.
1.	His Highness The Maharaja of D		ζ:
•	bhang i K C L F ,	2.	000
2.	His Highness The Mah maja of V	121- I,	.000
3.	His Highness the Nawab Bahadur	of
4.	Moorshedabad, Annual Omra, GCI His Hignness the Nawab of Junagad	dh.	800
4.	C C.S.1	• • •	500
5.	His Highness the Maharaja Bahac	int.	500
6	New ib Bahadan SacK Abdul Gha	m,	,
	of Couch Behar, GCTE Now to B therein Sir K Abdul Gha KC5.1; and Naw to Bahadul Ash to Ulti, CTT Nawab Imad Jing Bahadul Niw to Ayon Yor Jing Bahadur Shams-ni Ulama Syed Ah Belgia Kron Bahade Bhabadur Shams-ni Ulama Syed Ah Belgia	ь. 	500
7. 8.	Nawab Imad Jung Bahadur	•••	500
8. 9.	Shams-ni Ulama Sved Ali Belgia	mı	500
Ió	Kill Dinitial Dinitibilities of C.	,
ĮT.	Vizier to the Nawab of Junagadh Maharaja Bahadur Sir Joundra N	10-	300
	Maharaja Rahadur Sir Jotindra N han Tagore, KCSI	•••	250
12. 13.	Brim John Lai Mullick Messis, Mackingon, Mackenzie & C. Prince Walt, Kade, Sped, Hosen	C.,	200
14.	Time wat that a get trosen	• • • • •
15.	Muza Bahadur Shujaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Naw	ab	150
-	Sved Zamul Abdın Khan Baha	lar
16.	Rija Penry Mohan Mookerjee, C	s i	140
17.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chance Madhab Ghose	dea
18.	Prince Mirza Sir Jahan Kadar Ba	ha-	TOC
19.	dur, K.C.I.F., The Houble P Playfar		100
20.	Haji Kasun Araff		100
21.	H. Brackenbury, K C B.,	Sır	100
22.	Babu Jai Gobind Lew		100
23.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Guru I Banerjee) is	50
24.	The Honble Dr. Rash Behary Gh	ose	51
25. 26.	Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt Shahibzada Mahomed Obidulla Kl	han	50
	Bahadur, CST .		50
27. 28	Maharakama Benoya Krishna The Houble Mr Justice E. J. Fre	 •ve	5'
29.	Iyan The Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jab		51
30.	Khan Bahadur The Right Rev the Lord Bishop		50
21	Calcutta		50
31. 32.	M that op Durga Charan Law, Ca Nawab J thandar Meerza Nawab Huzoni Muza The Houble W. C. Bonnerjee	٠.,	50 50
33 34	The Houble W. C. Ronnenee	٠.	5
35.		٠.	5
36. 37.	Syed Nural Huda, Esq. CS, Hakeem Gholem Revi Khan		5
38.	J. G. Ritchie, Esq. CS.		5
39. 4 0.	Su Alexander Miller F. J. Rowe, E-q
41.	Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi Khan- hadui,	B.ı.
42.	Kuma Radha Prosad Roy
43 44.	Kumar Dinendra Naram Roy Babu (Pashupatty Nath Bose	• • •	. 2
45.	Kumar Doul a Chandra Roy		. 2
46. 47.	Babu Guru Prisonno Ghose Raja Sir Sourindra Mohan Tag
	CIF		2
48. 49.	Raya Joundia Nath Chowdhury Babu Runa Nath Ghose	• •	2 2
50.	Raja Steenath Roy		2
51. 52.	Rai Sew Bux Bogla Bahadar R Belchambers, Esq
53.	Riji Surji Kimta Achingee Chowd	lhui	y 2
54. 55.	Rai Budreedas Mukim Bahadur Babu Gopal Lal Seal		2 2
56.	Monlyi Syad Abdus Salam	•••	2
57. 58.	A. T. Apcar, Esq H. Lutiman Johnson, Esq CS	•••
59.	Lord William Beresford, K C.I E ,	•••	2
60. 61.	Munshi Gholam Rasool F. H. Skrine, Esq. C.S.,		2 2 2
62.	F. H. Skrine, Esq. C.S., The Hon'ble H. J. S. Cotton C.S., C. Prince Mithomed Bakhty ir Shah		2
63. 64.	Baboo S wendra Nath Pal Chowdr	 y	2
65.	Baboo S nendra Nath Pal Chowdr " A ikhov Kumar Ghose Moulvi Imadd Ali	•••	2
66.	D a Shih Chander Nandy Rahada	•	•
ind o	evo. Panioty, Esq	 han	2
lisco	ryo. Pamoty, Esq nis body Mithomed Arjamand K at Cotton, Esq., Burnster-at	·lav	v 2
o-	's, foid Asnuffuddin Ahn	ned,	17
	cre. W	٠

3	A. H. Giles, Esq		16 16
4.	F F. Hundley, Esq., C.S		16
Ţ. 5.	The Hon'ble Moury Straju	l Islam	1
٠.	Khan		16
6	Mouly) Serapadaeen		15
7.	Abul Haym, Esq.,		15
7. 8	H A D. Phillips, Esq. CS.		10
9.	Baboo Kiran Chinder Roy		10
ó.	E N Baker, Esq		10
1	Baboo Doyal Chand Bose		10
2	" Madan Mohan Bose		10
3.	"Kanai Lat Kuan		10
	Moulyi Synd Akram Hossam		10
4. 5 6	Moulvi Aziz Anmud		10
6	Ru Kinyerd Dev Bihadoor		10
	H Holmwood, Esq		10
7 8	Bibn Horry Monuo Chunder		10
9.	Baboo Chakkanlal Roy		5
0	" S wod iprasad Ghose		5
Su	bscriptions will be thankfully	received	by Ionorary Joint Secretaires,
	RAL KILITAN SANVADUICARI	RAHADI	TR

4, British Indian Street, Calcutta, and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMAN, Esq., Barrister -- at Law, 16, Taltolla, Calcutta.

9

"IMPROVED UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Rs. .

Guaranteed three Years.

WATCH. Rs. .

Guaranteed throe Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, smill, open faced, mickel silverun, keyless, short winding, pitent, "NEW STYLE IMPROVED UNDAUNT. ED" watch, with hand setting mechanism, secondhand, for Doctors, ornamental bold dial, for Rs 7 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pietty box and full three years' guarantee. Warranted to stand the roughest use. Runs more tinan 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily reparable. Others seil at double our rates. One witch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mt. Juo. Dickson of Hapital Rulway, from Crylon says:—I keeps selendid time and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jerks. x Dr. H. Moore of Royal Artiflery from Poonamilee says.—I sold it for Rs. 16 x Pre. W Hopkins of Sussex Regt from Domatim says:—I have sold it for Rs. 16 x Pre. W Hopkins of Sussex Regt from Domatim says:—I have sold it for Rs. 20. x Mr. T. B. Scott of Patna Opium Department says:—I he watch you sent me some seven ye us ago it still keeping very good time.

Jewelled Ring Ro. 1-8-0. Real Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real
Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty electro cased gold chun Re. 1-8-0. Fashmonable electro cased Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeriads, at Re. 1-8 0 Mr. G. Smith, Sitt inspector from Samkuna, says: "A Germin valued the diamond silver hunting case, koyal watch with exitas and full three years' guarantee, for Rs. 13. Pre G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light Infanty from Pinandhar says:—For the first one I golf Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Serigant for Rs. 28 x Pre. H. C. Bishop of L. F. L. Regt, from Kamptee says:—A Copputal offend Rs. 39 for the very same watch, Gentlemen's open fice-d, keyless real solid gold watch Rs. 24; both with extras and gnatanteed for 3 years. Mind they are guranteed for 6 years and gold. No agents kept,

Rs. 30; Lidies' Rs. 24; both with extras and guaranteed for 3 years. Mind they are guranteed to be of real soud gold. No agents kept, all goods sent only by us from Bombay per V P. P

WESIERN INDIA TRADING CO., BOMBAY

CATARRH, Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagion, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and enstachan tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple temedy has been formulated whereby these distressing diseases are rapidly and perfectly the second by a few symple amplications. these distressing diseases are rapidly and permanently cured by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUTON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORON FO, C mada.

16 Scientific American. "IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF."

All who suffer and sure reitef from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering; while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the of FOOTHACHE? A single application will relieve you.

In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the esult speak for itself.

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Phvscenars in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of homes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spie of popularity which no similar pre-paration has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re. each

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throughout the world

Agents in Calcutta : Smith Stanistreet & Co R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Batingate & Co. Limited.

REIS & RAYYET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT)

WEEKLY(ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

Review of Politics Literature, and Society RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION. If paid in advance,

Yearly			Rs	12
Haif-venily	•••		11	7
Quarterly	•••	•••	11	4
Montaly	•••		Кe	1-8
Single or sample	Copy	•••	Ans.	0-8
If no	t paid in ad	lvance,
Yearly	• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •		Rs.	38
Half-yearly	•••	•••	"	10-8
Quarterly	•••			0.0
Monthly		•••	17	2-4
Single or sample	Copy	•••	Ans.	0-12
No additional	cnarge for	postage	e or p	eon.

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insertion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5.

Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphlets (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayyet."

OFFICE: I, Uckoor Dut's Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutta.

VDROIT ET AVANT

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

AND

REVIEW OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, MAY 18, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 675.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

-resease

THE PASSING OF MUHAMMAD, PROPHET OF ARABIA.

A DRAMATIC SKETCH BY SIR EDWIN ARNOLD.

The scene is the house of Ayesha,—Muhammad's favourite wife,—at Medina; the date being the month of June, A. D. 632. Muhammad is lying on his bed, sick unto death, his wives and certain Arab women attending him.

AVESHA-

Allah! we never looked that he should be This way, like others: weak and lean and cold, Moaning with mortal pain—whom we did know The Ptophet of the Lord.

Maimuna! drive The gray fly from his brow ! Dost thou recall O Salma's sister ! what a brow it was, How lordly, with the blue vein swollen big When he was wroth, or unpelievers irked? What eyes these sealed eyes were, so keen and stern, That day, the eighth of Dzul Hijj, when we went The pilgrimage to Mecca-we his wives, And five score victims for the sacrifice; He in the front of all, by Bital led, Riding Al Kaswa, that good beast which found The desert well, and knelt at Kaaba-Dropped in the season when he wedded thee ? Was it not like to locust-swarms the folk Hung round Muhassu, and on Arafat, Glad eager masses, while he stood aloft .-As't were the Angel of the Seal, methought,-In Mina, saying loud : " I have fulfilled The message! I have left amidst ye here A plain command, the Book of Allah! This, If we hold fast, shall guide aright your feet,' And, lifting up his gaze, he spake aloud; "O Lord! I have delivered all thy will; Witness thou for me !" Then, what thunder rolled Of forty thousand score of tongues which cried : "Aye! of a truth thou hast!" ; Did we not deem He clomb too near to Heaven in those great hours Ever to fall, like this, to us and death?

MAIMUNA—Nay; and how bright with life this wan cheek was
When he came back from Mecca, all his heart
Full of God's peace, the seven due circuits done,
The Zemzem water quaffed, and each thing set
In just ensample for the days to be
When men shall wend to Mecca! Ayesha!
Thou wert on Arafat that dawn he spake
The sunrise prayer—and afterward the verse
From the fifth Sura: "This day have! made

By Allah ! did ye think it could be so ?

Truth finished for ye; this day have fulfilled My mercy toward ye; this day do appoint Islam your faith forever." On that night I did not date caress him when he came Into my tent; I let the date-water Spill from the leathern bowl, afeard to speak, He was so rapt I chafed his feet, and dropped My eyes—ashamed of his far-seeing eyes.

ASMA (sester to MAIMUNA) -

For me, I held him most majestical,
Surest of years, that day when Zeid's son
O-Ama took command for Syria.
How like a conqueror did our Lord unfoll
The banner of black wool, and bind the sword
Which flashed at Beder on Osama's thigh,
Saying: "Fight thou with thif under my flag,
In Allah's name for Allah's truth, and smite
And break the unbellevers!" Then, indeed,
Who would have dreamed our Master nigh to this

AYESHA-Yet he fell sick next night. Oh, had we marked, There lacked not signs. Fatma! hast thou in mind How Abu Beki met him two moons back In the mosque gate, and, noting that his beard Guzzled annal its flowing ebon, spake Full sorrowfuly in a sudden grief : "Thou-who than father or than mother art More dear to all-alack ! I see gray hairs Are hastening in upon thee !" and his eves Brimmed with quick tear-drops when the Prophet raised With both thin hands his beard, gazing thereon, And answering, "Yea I't is travail of the Word Hath wrought its sign upon me : night and day The saying of the 'Suras Terrible '--'Hud,' and 'The Striking,' and 'The inevitable '--Has burned my strength to ashes,"

FATMA-

Aye! 't was so;

Yet sought we ever what might bring him rest. His uncle Abbas, seeing how the folk. Thronged round him in the mosque, said. "If we build A lofty seat for thee, they shall not throng." But sweet reply our Lord gave. "Kinsman kind! I will not cease from moving in their midst, Dragging my abbas through the press of them, And covered with their dust, till Allah's call. Bring me my time of peace."

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free.—Artificial Eur-drums and similar appliances entirely superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19, SOUTHAMPION BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, if possible, as the safest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

AVESHA-

Ah, Fatma! moist His lips with honey, for I think they move, And peradventure 't will be Allah's will This weakness shall go by. Yet latterly Ofitimes he did recite, as if t were due, That Sura which doth say : " When God's help comes, And victory, and thou shalt see all tribes Entering by troops the gateways of the Faith, Then celebrate the praises of thy Lord, And seek his mercy who is merciful."

FATMA-Aunt! When that same great Sura was writ down, He called me; spake to me with quiet eyes: " My daughter ! it is opened I shall die,' At which hard word mine eyes broke into floods Like rain on Vemen in the sowing-time. But he said softly: " Nay, Khadija's child! Weep not; be comforted! since, verily, Thou shalt first join with me in Paradise." Thereat no more I wept, but in my heart Joy gleamed like sun-breaks when the rain is done.

MAIMUNA-Most happy Fatma ! if it were to me He had spoke so, this sorrow would not be Crushing my soul, as when her too great load Keeps bent the camel's knee. I too recall How-when it was my night, and naught he loved Soothed him, not date-cakes, nor the rabab's string, Nor perfumes of the myrch and ambergris, Nor kisses,-and ye women wot he liked Women and scents and sweets-he rose from me, Wrapped his striped izar-cloth about his head, And, lifting up the inner curtain, passed Into the jeweled stillness of the night. With fearful steps I dated to follow him .--Ah, sisters ! not to spy, -solicitous Lest wandering beast or sinful robber hurt The Prophet of the Lord. But he came straight, Quick-striding, resolute, to where our dead Sleep by the city wall There, 'mid the tombs, Long leaned he on his cedar staff, intent, Deep-meditating, silent. At the end A Jackal backed : whereon, as if the cry Roused him, I heard him in most gentle tones Speak to the dead : "Verily, ye and I Have found fulfilment of what Allah pledged . Blessêd are ye, and blessêd is your lot Beyond the lot of those left in the world ! Sleep well, till God's great daybreak wakens you. O Lord! shew mercy to these slumberers, And grant thy grace to me !" At that he turned And hastened back with such assured strides Scarce I had space to outrun him, and to quench The kindled lamp, and cast my sandals by, And seem to slumber, when he came again, Chilled, to my side, and whispered: "This good night Allah hath proffered me which thing I would,-Long life, or else to meet my Lord betimes, -And I have chosen very soon to die."

AYFSHA-That was the week my brows ached; and I mouned, " My bead! my bead!" not wotting he was near. Then entered he, his own brow knit with pain, And lightly spake : "'T is I might cry, ' My head !" So bitter is this heat that scorcheth me ! But theu, Omm Ruman's child !--were it not sweet If Allah willed thou didst die first : so I That loved ther best, might speak the prayers for thee, And wrap thee in thy grave-cloth, Ayesha, And lay thee safe till I came too, Gazelle?" " Now, God forbid !" quoth I-as who would turn A heaviness to merriment, " Thy wish, I fear me, Prophet, is to find some eyes Brighter than Ayesha's when she is gone, Giving the love that hath been mine to her." But wistfully he smiled, and silent went.

MAIMUNA-Yea, yea! we know he loved you best. You came New to him from the goat's milk and the games. But I, and Haphsa, Zemab, and the rest, Dwelled in the outer garden of his love. It was his will : we grudge thee not ; 't is meet He he now in thy chamber, Ayesha, Since-save Khadija-thou in all these years Held most his heart. But oh, have heed to him-He strives to speak !

(MUHAMMAD awakens.)

(To be continued.)

WEEKLYANA.

THERE is a movement in France to *rect a memorial of some sort to Napoleon's troops at Waterloo. With the permission of the Belgian Government, it is proposed to set up one near Braine la Leud or Mont St. Jean. The Committee of the Souvenir Français, a French Patriotic Society, has accordingly invited subscriptions. The Army and Navy Gazette says: "There are a very large number of memorials on the battlefield, but they are exclusively devoted to the men of the allied forces. The spot where the Prince of Orange was wounded, the pits in which Hanoverians and others were buried, and even the place where the Marquis of Anglesea's amputated leg was placed in the ground, have all their memorials. Yet the French, though they fought with so much bravery and persistency on that ever-memorable 18th of June, have no monument at all."

THERE will be a special meeting, on May 20, of the Royal Geographical Society, to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the de parture of the Erebus and Terror, under Sir John Franklin.

THE twentieth century is being anticipated.

"Under the title of Twentieth Century, a new monthly review of a high character is promised for the beginning of May. The editor is Mr. William Graham, and each number will contain a short story by a distinguished novelist besides reviews of the literature and theatrical events of the month. Among those contributing to the first number are Mr. H. D. Trail, Su Edwin Amold and Lord Byron."

 THE following Notes and News are from Luzac's Oriental List :-

"In the forty years which nave elapsed since Professor Weber wrote his celebrated dissertation on the origin of the Açoka alphabet from the oldest known form of the Phoenician, many theories have been propounded in support of other derivations. The whole question has now been subjected to a careful scritinity by Professor G. Buhler to whose learned researches Indian epigraphy owes some of its most brilliant results. In the third fasciculus of his Indian Studies, after proving that the art of writing was known and practised in India at a much earlier period than has generally been assumed, he proceeds to show that all the new discoveries in Indian and Semitic epigraphy point to the fact that the old Indian or Brahma alphabet is based on a Semitic (Phoenician) prototype. The various steps by which he arrives at his conclusion are well worth careful detailed study. Every are discovery in Semitic paleography will be sure to aid in confirming his identifications and more and more establishing the solid basis on which his theory resis."

"The favourable opinion we expressed of the first volume of Professor H. Grimme's Mohammed applies with equal force to the second volume which contains an introduction to the Koran and a dissertation on the system of Koranic theology. The chief merit of the volume consists in its being based like its predecessor on independent research Proceeding from an exposition of his views concerning the origin of the Koran and the chronological arrangement of the Suras, the author shews that there was far more system in Mohammed's teaching than has generally been assumed, while he traces the modifications that many doctrines underwent in their passage through the various phase of religious development. With all due allowance for what is good and noble in Islam, he records his final opinion that it has entered upon a period of complete decomposition, and will inevitably collapse under the continued influence of European and Christian civilization."

"The fragments extant of the works of the Jewi future."

"Di. M. J. de Goeje, the well known Professor of Arabic in the University of Leiden, has received from the King of Prussia, the Ordre pour le Ménte."

THE letter from the Adjutant General in India, dated the 13th April 1895, forwarding a despatch from Lieutenant-General Sir W. S A. Luckhart, K. C. B., C. S. I., Commanding the Waznistan Field Force. detailing the operations of the troops under his command from the 15th December 1894 to the 13th March 1895, is published in the following observations:—

"The Governor-General in Council entirely concurs with the Commander-in-Chief in India in his appreciation of the skilfur manner in which Lieutenant-General Sr William Lockhart has connucted the operations of the Wazirisan Field Force to a completely successful issue; the strategical dispositions of Sir William Lockhart were so admirably planned and so effectively carried our is to prevent that combined resistance on the part of the Waziris which, had it taken place, would have increased the military importance of the expedition at the cost of greater loss of life to the troops engaged. His Excellency in Council is also fully sensible of the excellent conduct of the officers and men engaged in the operations, which were of the most trying nature, and he has noticed with satisfaction the good services of those who have been especially brought to notice.

the good services of those who have been especially brought to notice.

His Excellency in Council is glad to have an opportunity of expressing his appreciation of the services rendered by Mr. R. I. Bruce, C. I.E., Commissioner of the Derajit, who had full political responsibility in Waziristan before Lieutenani-General Sir Wilham Lockhart took command. The acknowledgments of the Government of India are also due to Mr. L. White King, C.S., Deputy Commissioner of Branul, who respectively carried out the delimitation of the southern and northern portions of the Afghan-Waziristan boundary under Lieutenani-General Sir William Lockhart's orders, His Excellency in Council also notices with pleasure the efficiency of the arrangements made by the Postal and Telegraph services under Mr. W. Van Someren and Mr. A. J. L. Grimes, respectively.

The Governor-General in Council further desires to express his sincere acknowledgments of the great care and attention given to all matters with which the Government of the Punjab were concerned, and of the valuable advice given by the Hou'ble Sin Dennis Fitzpatrick in connection with the various phases of these operations."

in connection with the various phases of these operations.

MR Justice Guiudas Baneijee has obtained privilege leave for one

A BOLD attempt was made to steal Mrs. Langity's diamonds.

"A man broke through the window of her dressing-room at Palmer's "A man broke through the window of her dressing-foom at Paimer's Theatre, and laid hold of the jewellery which was spread out upon her dressing-table. Mrs. Langtry, who was dressing for her part, sprang upon the man, who dropped the jewels, and escaped through the window. The alarm was raised, and a rapidly-growing crowd starteu in pursuit, but failed to overtake the thief."

Few women, European or Asiatic, could spring so courageously on the tobber. Mrs. Lingity deserves to wear her diamonds.

THE status of the canine population in Belgium is very different from what it is in other countries.

"One of the first, things that impress the stranger in. Brussels is the immense number of dogs employed in drawing, barrows and small carts about the streets. In the capital alone over 100 000 dogs are so engagabout the streets. In the capital alone over 100 000 dogs are so engaged and the number of draught dogs in the windle country is probably not less than 50 000. Generations of servitude have made the Belgian dog a race apart. For his size, he is said to possess the greatest pulling power of many animals, four times his own weight being considered a load well within his powers. Taking his average weight as half a nundredweight, this means that something like 5,000 tons are daily dragged about by cannel labour in Belgium."

WE take the following from a contemporary .-

"One of the most amosing contributions to the new number of the Windser Migazine is Mr. Barry Pain's journalistic tragedy, 'The Thitteenth Column.' It is the story of a general utility man, who is told off by a releutless editor to write the Fashious 'article. It is impossible to convey exactly where the tragedy came in, without quoting from the article which wrecked a good all-round journalist's career. It sounds as sensible and intelligible as the majority of such articles — 'One of the best dressed women that I have seen there in the Park One of the best dressed women that I have seen there in the Park lately is unquestionably Lady B. She wore a coat and skirt of Irish guipure of a dull bronze colour, with tabs of eau-de-ni silk bordered with passementeric. The same colour was repeated in the accordion pleating on the poinpoin, and the whole was surmounted by a hat of views tope surab, trimmed with skunk."

As regards the passage quoted, it can, we think, be matched by an extract made at random from the Bangadhip-parajaya. The author of Bangadhip must have laboured under the idea that the more difficult and out-of-the-way the words are that a writer uses, the more dignified does his style become.

THE Pioneer concludes a somewhat discursive leader headed "Circumventing the Money-lender," thus :-

"We entirely sympathine with the Hon'ble Mohini Mohun Roy in his object; and we believe that the law of damdupat is a fair law if it could be enforced. But as the Hon'ble Mr. James pointed out it is not always practicable for the Courts to enforce this law. The Legal Member observed that the object of restraining hard and unconsciousable bargains was very desirable just that the English Court of Chancery had met with varying success in its endeavours to effect that object.

Gazette of India of 11th May. The despatch is introduced with the following observations:—

"The Governor-General in Council entirely concurs with the Commander-in-Chief in India in his appreciation of the skilfur manuscript and the contracting parties and is recognised by the Courts, the parties them-celves always have been able and, good thy the will be able, to find selves always have been able and, grobably a live will be able, to find a way of avoiding an usury law. We agree with Sir James. Stephen in holding that the desired object can be accomplished, although we do not think it can be accomplished by the means proposed."

So, while sympathising with the Hon'ble Mohini Mohan Roy's object and, therefore, sharing with him all the hitted of unscrupulous money-lenders, the semi-official organ thinks that object is incapable of being accomplished by the means proposed. We have expressed the same opinion.

IT is said that

"The present Mikado of Japan, who is forty-two years of age, and who ascended the throne in 1866, traces his descent back 2,555 years, when, according to native history, after endless ages passed in higher spheres the limperial family began its earthly career with the first human monarch, Jimmu Temro. One hundred and twenty-one monarchs have reigned since then, including seven empresses. The average age of the first seventeen monarchs was over a hundred years, some exceeding one hundred and twenty, and one, immediately before the Christian eta, lived one hundred and sixty eight years. The Emperor was often a mere infant in arms, but he was always theoretically head of the State. Mutsu Hito, the reigning sovereign, was married at the age of sixteen to Hardko, the daughter of a noble, and two years older than himself, but the Prince Imperial, and numerous surviving children are by other wives."

Perhaps, no people on Earth are so solicitous of tracing their

Perhaps, no people on Earth are so solicitous of tracing their genealogies to the remotest times as the Japanese, the Chinese, and the Hindus. Ask a Brahman child as to how old is his family, the answer, carefully taught by parents, is invariably "as old as the Sun and the Moon."

THE first section of the Madras Electric Tramways has been opened to traffic

NOTES & LEADERETTES, OUR OWN NEWS,

...

&

THE WEEK'S PELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS -s. whitele

WHEN accepting the advice of the European Powers to renounce a portion of the provisions, contained in the Treaty of Peace signed at Simonosaki, Japan stipulated herself to carry on the negotiations with China in a manner that would conciliate the Japanese demands. With the wishes of the Powers, Japan intends to with leaw her troops from the Chinese mainland gradually as the war indemnity is figurdated. The Times publishes a telegram from Kobe stating that the Japanese are excited and disappointed at abandoning the Lucitung Peninsula. The Ministers at the foreign legations are guarded. A special agreement between Japan and China fixes the terms for abandoning the Liaotung Peninsula. It declares that Japan has consented to the abandonment of Chinese territory on the continent in pursuance of advice proffered by the European Powers with the object of securing a permanent peace. Negotiations regarding the special agreement are proceeding. An agreement between Japan and the Powers has been concluded. Viscount Kibayama will be the first Japanese Viceroy of the Island of Formosa.

AFFER a prolonged and most acrimonious debate, the Reichstag has rejected the Government anti-Revolutionary Bill directed against the Socialists. It has also rejected the Government Bill for the taxation of tobacco. This action of the Reichstag will completely derange the Imperial Budget for 1895-96,

THE French Premier, speaking at Bordeaux, said that although France was engaged in hostilities in Madagascar she had to act in concert with the Great Powers. With regard to the Far East he referred to the increased friendship of Russia as a guarantee for the maintenance of peace in Europe.

THE French Budget for 1895-96 shows a deficit of fifty-five million francs. It is proposed to cover the deficit by the imposition of fresh THE following are the principal points contained in the Note which was presented to the Sultan by the Ambassadors of Great Britain, France, and Russia regarding the reforms in Armenia:—The Powers veto the appointment of Valis. A third of the high roots among the officials to be held by Christians. The Porte to appoint a High Commissioner, not a European, to supervise the execution of the reforms. A Commission, composed of Mussalmans and Christians, to supervise the administration of the Armenian Provinces; the creation of Courts of Assizes; the regular inspection of prisons; the Kurds to be disarmed.

ANOTHER serious Anglo-French question has ausen in connection with the Niger territories. News has been received from the Lower Niger that a French expedition commanded by Captain Decœur has placed a fortified post at Bajibo, in Nupe, within the British frontier on the Lower Niger, which place has been in the Royal Niger Company's sphere since 1885. Advices received from the Middle Niger state that another expedition commanded by M. Ballot, the French Governor of Dahomey, in person, is marching through the Niger Company's territory to Sokoto, seeking to conclude treaties with the Chiefs owning allegiance to the British, constituting thereby a breach of the Anglo-French agreement of 1890.

an the House of Commons, on May 10, Sir William Harcourt, in reply to a question, said that he was unable to name a day for resuming the debate on the motion for the appointment of a Standing Committee on Scotch affairs. Thereupon Sir Donald Marfirlane, member for Argyllshire, 10se and said, that if there was any further delay regarding the matter, the Scotch members would have to reconsider whether they should support the Government any longer. The Chancelloi of the Exchequer anguly retorted that it was entirely open to the Scotch members to reconsider their position.

THE Dake of York, who has now completely recovered from his late illness, will represent Her. Majesty the Queen at Kiel, during the fètes to be held on the occasion of the opening of the Baltic Canal by the German Emperor in June next.

THE House of Commons has approved of the reimposition of the extra beer duty by a majority of twenty-four.

THE Imperial Government has declined to guarantee a portion of the Newfoundland debt, as Canada can ill afford just now to add to her financial burdens by assuming liability for the debt of Newfoundland. It is believed that the scheme for the incorporation of Newfoundland with the Dominion is doomed.

LORD Welby will be Chairman of the Royal Commission to enquire into military and civil expenditure in India. The Members of the Commission will include Mr. George Curzon, Sir Donald Stewart, Sir W. Wedderburn, Mr. Dadabhai Naorop, Messrs L. Courtney and William Jackson, Sir Andrew Scoble, Messrs T. Buchanan, William Caine, Ralph Knox, and George Ryder The terms of reference are—(isi) to enquire into the administration and management of civil and military expenditure in India; (2nd) apportionment of charge between the British and Indian Government

THE Secretary of States for India has consented to receive a deputation of Lancashire experts as to the question of how the Indian duties can be made non-protective.

THE Twikistin Gazette is convinced that, owing to the friendship of Russia and Bokhara, portions of Darwaz, south of the Amu Daria, will be speedily evacuated, and hopes for an equally prompt evacuation of Shignan and Rosnan. This, the paper says, will materially strengthen the friendship between Russia, Great Britain, and Afghanistan.

MR. Lahouchere, speaking at a Radical meeting at Northampton, said that it was most desirable to dissolve the Imperial Parliament as early as possible, as the Liberals could not do much with a majority of nine.

LADY Elgin gave a Garden Party at Viceregal Lodge on May 9 The ladies far outnumbered the gentlemen.

THE Viceroy entertains old Etonians to dinner on June 4.

SRI Jasvatsingji has been instilled Jun of Junnagar. During the minority the State will be managed by the British. Government in such a way, said. Colonel. Hancock, the Kathiawar Political Agent, while putting the Rija on the guddi, "as to give you a fair start when you come of age. By that time the railway will be finished, the State will debt, and the State departments reorganized so as to render it easy for you to carry on the administration in a just, and enlightened manner."

M. R. Rv. P. Ananda Charlu, Rai Bahadooi, has been gazetted an Additional Member of the Supreme Legislative Council. He was chosen by the non-official members of the Madras Council as their representative in the Governor-General's Council. But the election not being strictly according to the jules, he has again been selected. We give him a cordial welcome. He is one of our best men. Madras has been unfortunate in her representatives. Those elected before the Rai Bahadoor were not enabled by death or other causes to take any part in the deliberations of the Supreme Council. A highly honourable man, a true patriot and an able advocate, he is sure to give satisfaction. May he long be spared to his country!

THE acting Superintendent of Police in the Panch Mahals, in Gujerat, Mr. C. F. G. Lester, son of an old Bombay General, and nephew of Sir Edwin Arnold, was shot dead by his wife at Deagad Mrs Lester, a daughter of Colonel Braham, is said to have committed the roul deed in consequence of domestic differences. In a letter Mrs Lester herself says that she shot her husband, as she could bear his building no jonger. Pending enquiries, she was at first lodged in the Godhra Jail, but as there is no proper accommodation for Europeans, and as the heat within the Jul is fearful, she was removed into the empty bungalow of the Assistant Collector.

MESSRS. Methuen & Co., the London publishers, would send their books to the Academy, but that journal would not review them Messrs. Methuen then wrote to the editor complaining of the neglect In reply they received a message which a cierk delivered, namely, "The proprietor wishes me to say that we do not review your books as you do not advertise in our paper, and as you do no business with us, we cease to do business with you." The publishers in reply have published both the letter and the message. Another free advertisement!

As an example of what the Indian cooly can sometimes $\epsilon\epsilon$ neve, read the following '—

me ionowing—

"An extraordinary feat of strength is reported to a mofusual paper as displayed at the East. Indian. Railway goods-shed in Delhi, the other day by one of the cooles, a Poorbia Missulman, of a short bulky build A large box, 9 feet 6 inches in length, weighing 7 mainds 5 seets, had to be unloaded from a 'thaila,' and it took 12 men to do this. The cooly in question then had the box balanced on his back, and unassisted and alone curried it into the goods-shed and deposited it there in the presence of several Europeans."

A heavier weight was raised at the Howish station some years back by a cooly. He is yet alive and is now a contractor for the supply of cooly labour to the Railway at Howish and in my private firms whose boats have to be loaded and unloaded at Howish. The man earns from four to five hundred supees a month when the season is brisk and is charitable. Although a Mussalman, he gives freely to Hindus for shrads and marriages.

EVEN Sen has his parasites. One of these is resolved to assert himself As a rateprayer, although not resident, he claims to know more than "a rank outsider." Lookers on, however, it is said, see most of the game. As a proof of the confidence of the people of Santipore in his idol, he mentions that the Municipal Commissioners at a meeting passed a resolution "expressing the sense of the loss the Municipality has sustained by the transfer of Baboo Nobin Chander Sen and voted him a portrait in recognition of his valuable services to the Municipality." The loss to the Municipality may not be incox sistent with the gain to the people. He wants to know the name of being proposed. The votes have all, we believe, been bespoken and the Civilian to whom Biboo Sen gave himself out as the Brion of Bengal. Without it he cannot accept the statement as correct. Did he enquire of the B thoo himself and has he the authority of his denial? Has "A Rateprayer of Santipore" any reason to give for the speedy transfer of Mr. Sen? Another correspondent writes echoing the tellef ansed by the transfer.

ELECTIVE principle is a sickly plant even in its own home. Electioneering abuses are compant and growing in England. It is not merit but money that wins. Except in rare notable instances, votes go by favour. Yet there are stringent rules to unseat members for delinquencies of their agents. In the abandon of representative government, there is no limit to practices to win an election. Free Britons have tired of the abuses lavished on opposing candidates. A Bill has been introduced in Parliament, in the Lower Chamber, to prevent the growing practice of making false statements regarding the personal character and conduct of a candidate. The Bill named the Corrupt Practices Act Amendment Bill has been read a second time. When we, in another capacity, advocated elective Municipalities for this country, we did not possibly imagine the degeneracy to which representative institutions would be brought down. Good men and true have been elbowed out by the intriguing and the unscrupulous. Honest capable men are obliged to hide themselves that their rivals in all senses, the self-seeking, may flourish. Municipal elections however, have generally not been unsatisfactory. At first truly representative men were returned. The degeneracy is of a later development. In the higher spheres, in the return of representatives for the Bengal Legislative Councils, the elections have not been on proper lines. In the first election by the University a catastrophe was sarely averted. In the present, hardly any attempt is made to return s proper representative. By way of compliment to him and to mark its sense of the acceptance, though on certain conditions, by Government, of the Produgal returned, the Calcutta Corporation voted for the "Apostle of Seif-Government in Bengil." There is an unholy compact to return him again. His supporters make no secret that he seeks the second election that he might be returned to the Upper Chamber. It is on this account that the candidature of Dr. Rashbehary Ghose from the Burdwan Division has been foully assailed, The knowing Bengal Council may prefer him to the other as its representative in the Supreme Council. Therefore he must not come in at all. The vernacular papers, especially one which professes to speak nothing but good but which has begun to deal in fifth, have taken up the Apostolic cause. We only hope it will not, in its vehement advocacy, land itself in grief.

THE machinations against Dr. Rushbehary Ghose continue. Fresh harges have been preferred. They are-that he is no Congressist, that e had no sympathy with the movement against the Jury notification of ir Charles Eiliott, that he has not, after the in inner of a noted patriot, ut no end of questions in Council, that he dances attendance on luropeans. He is not judged by only his public acts or omissions. his private conduct is diagged into the controversy. There is no nestion that by his abilities Dr. Ghose is fully competent to be a tember of the Legislative Councils. He has already proved his orth in them. That seems to be his chief disqualification. With o inclination to pass as a patriot, he did solid silent work. specially in the Upper Chamber. These who know know that the harges, if they can be of any value, against the Doctor, are baseess. He had been a delegate to, and had attended several sittings f, the Congress. He had also been free with his purse in its cause. Nith his other countrymen he had full sympathy with the movement or the withdrawal of the obnoxious jury notification. His detractors rould be more correct in saying that he receives few, of any, visits t his house than that he pays court to the great. He is, indeed, o patriot, as Dr. Johnson defined the word. He makes no profesion of patriotism, nor makes it a cloak for self-interest. With to fuss about hun and willing and capable of doing solid work for inly the approbation of his own conscience, Dr. Rashbehary Ghose the fittest candidate. The Burdwan Division will serve its own hterests best by returning him as its representative.

secured for one or the other candidate.

THE accomplished Dewan of the Bhawal Raj, Babu Kuliprasanno Ghose, would have been a destrable candidate in the Dacca Division. His experience, in different lines, is great. He knows the Division very well and represents a class from which our representatives are not usually drafted. Though given to Thoughts in Solitude, he is au caurant with the politics of the day. Every movement for the good of the country has his sympathy and support. He also hid a good chance. We are sure Dacca and Barisal would have pronounced for him. We regret that domestic afflictions keep him away.

ONE Maharaja, two Rai Bahadurs and a European contest the honour for the Bhagalpur Division. Since the introduction of local selfgovernment, Europeans have kept aloof from it. It is a triumph of that government that a European has offered himself a candidate.

NEXT Friday is Queen's Buthday. It will be observed the day after. We have ceased to have any loyal demonstrations to mark the day in Calcutta. For some time, except the firing of the loyal and royal salute, there is nothing to remind the residents that the Empress was born on the 24th May. Sir Henry Harrison, since the Municipal Commissioners were pleased to grant him a personal allowance of Rs. 500 a month, had instituted a Garden Party for that day. Mr. Lee could only keep it up for a year. This year there is to be a welcome departure. No official, high or low, will celebrate the buth. In honour of the day, Baboo Kally Prosono Dey, of the National Magazine, has issued invitations for an Evening Party to Europeans and Natives to be held on Friday, at the Star Theatre Pavillion All honour to him.

DURING 1894, the Chemical Examiner to Government analysed 192 samples of potable water. Altogether 197 samples were sent to him Of these 15 were from Municipalities, 105 from Juls, and 77 from other Departments. Chemical analysis of water is also conducted by Mr Norman Rudolf in his Laboratory at Siwan in the district of Saran. Chairmen of Municipalities and district Officers have orders to send water for analysis to him. How many samples he examined we are not told. Of the samples sent to the Government Laboratory, Dr. Evans found 28 of them good, 83 fair, 34 indifferent and 47 bad. He remarks that hardly any of the waters are up to the European standard of purity, ammonia, both free and albummoid, and nitrogen are present in large quantities, larger than would be passed for good drinking water. On this a contemporary remarks;

"In other words, the water supply is too frequently contaminated with sewage, fact which accounts for much of the sickness with Sewage, a fact which accounts for many or the sewage, which is usually attributed to climatic causes. The fact is eloquent of how much remains to be done in this direction, and should stimulate the movement that has at last origin to be awakened amongst the more enlightened sections of the Hindoo community, to do something themselves to improve the insanitary surroundings of tanks."

It will not do to only "improve the insanitary surroundings of village tanks." The fact is, there is scarcely a populous village in Bengal where a large tank has been excavated within the last 25 years. Formerly, every rich Hindu spent a goodly portion of his wealth in excavating a large tank for the supply of water to his fellowvillagers. English education has so changed the people of this land that everything has come to be soil admated to the material interests of number one. A good mansion to live in, handsome conveyances, costly ornaments of gold and gems, a long train of servants, are now objects of primary concern with such Hindu gentlemen as succeed in amassing money. It was not so before To dig large tanks, to build serais, to dedicate temples, to establish Atthsalas for the feed of all comers, were then regarded legitimate and foremost objects of expenditure. In seasons of scarcity almost every zamindar caused large tanks to be excavated within his zamindary. One cowrie for one basket of earth raised, was the remuneration offered and accepted during the great famine of 1769-70. Most of the Dighis or Direhikds,-large artificial lakes-that we now see almost silted up in many portions of Bengal, were excavated that year and owe their origin to such an exceptionally cheap rate of labour, besides the religious motives already adverted to. In some HE Calcutta Corporation meets specially next Thursday to elect its places, labourers consented to work for only their daily food. There Presentative. There is no chance of the name of the Vice-Chairman were no roads on which they could work, no palatial mansions on which they could be employed. The only form of public works in which thousands of men could be engaged was the excavation of those artificial lakes. Many of these, it is much to be regretted, have been allowed to silt up entirely of become very shallow. The present generation has done nothing to repair them or dig now ones. It is reaping the fruits of its own negligence. Fifty years ago, water was obtainable in every village in Bengal.

So useful were these tanks regarded in those days, that Maharaja Kirti Chandra of Burdwan is said to have pardoned a naib who had embezzled a large amount, for the man had devoted the whole of the sum in excavating a tank. The story is well worth recounting. The naib, an inhabitant of the Serampore Sub-division of the Hooghly District, seeing how great the want was of good water in his village, ran away from his charge with, as we have already said, a large sum of money. The Dewan brought the matter to the Maharaja's notice. The latter was surprised. The naib had all along borne a good character. The Maharaja could not believe that the man had actually become so wicked. He refused to take steps for the apprehension of the naib. Instructions, however, were issued for secretly "migning as to the whereabouts of the naib and how he was occupied. The messengers returned and reported that the naib had employed a large number of labourers in excavating a very large tank. Maharaja Kirti Chandra did not interrupt the work. Some months after, the naib, through the urgent representations of the Dewan, was apprehended and brought to Burdwan. In the durbar he was asked by the Maharaja as to why he had embezzled so large a sum of Rupees. The man meekly answered,-" Had, cherisher of the distressed, I am guiltless! The money I took away, it is very true, but it was to excavate a tank in my native village. If your Highness enquires, you will learn that the tank, after excavation, has been dedicated in your Highness' name. A dozen temples for Siva have been commenced, but only six have been completed. Thousands of men are blessing your Highness day and night. The new tank holds a very large quantity of good water. Our maidens only, seeing that the temples will not be completed, are disconsolate, for the merit of presenting lighted lamps to Siva will not be theirs, 7the merit which they had hoped to win." The Maharaja immediately ordered the necessary funds to be supplied to the naib for completion of the temples.

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, May 18, 1895.

A VIRGIN FIELD FOR HISTORICAL RESEARCH.

THE Nineteenth Century of February last contains an article headed "The Making of a Shrine," by Mrs. Wolffsohn. It is an interesting account of the origin and the remarkably rapid success of a Roman Catholic shrine lately set up near the site of the ancient Pompei which, after having remained buried under the lava of the Vesuvius for several centuries, has been lately exhumed and identified. If the world possessed similar histories of its other religious shrines, ancient and modern, such literature would be almost as interesting and instructive as the secular annals of the past that we possess. The tracing of the origin, progress and decay of political powers and institutions is no doubt of great importance. But hardly less so are similar enquiries with regard to religious institutions. The educational value of the history of great shrines, is very similar to that of secular histories. Unfortunately, the mistaken notions prevalent in the world about what is due to religion have made it almost a forbidden ground to the historian. We may criticise the movements of the mightiest monarchs and their highest officials. But the least comment on the actions of the priestly classes, involves the daring "heretic" in very serious risks.

The European nations have in recent times got some historical works regarding their church.

Since, however, the introduction of Christianity, they have not had among them any prophet having independence enough to proclaim and preach a new faith. The result is that the ecclesiastical histories of Europe are confined to the events relating to the continuance of the Christian church under one form of headship or other. From the nature of his surroundings, it is exceedingly difficult for a European scholar to have any idea of the manipulations by which new religions are brought into existence, and successfully spread, or of the processes by which an ancient cult may be superseded by a more recent one. In fact, a European cannot ordinarily have any experience of the two most important periods in the life of a religion, namely, its infancy and its decline. The histories of the Christian church that Europe possesses have, therefore, only that value which a history of the Mogal Empire as it was in the 17th century, can possibly have. Gibbon has tried no doubt to throw some light on the causes of the rapid spread of Christianity. But the analysis that he has given of the circumstances under which the despised religion of the lower orders of the urban population of the Roman empire became the faith of princes and nobles, of philosophers and scientists, and at last succeeded in establishing the head-quarters of its priesthood in Rome itself, where for centuries its humble preachers were subjected to every species of persecution, seems to be very far from complete. At any rate, there is nothing in his great work to show what his ideas were regarding the true places of Christianity and Mahomedanism in the history of the theocratic art.

Whatever the value may be of the historical literature that the European nations possess about their religious institutions, there can be no doubt that, with respect to the origin and growth of our own cults and shrines, we have no record whatever that can, without a gross abuse of the name, be called history. According to the legends of the Puranas, some of our leading shrines have been in existence from the beginning of time, while the majority of the other great idols were miraculously discovered or conjured up by some great prophet. In some cases, the temples are said to have been erected in the course of a single night, through the agency of the celestial architect Visvakarman. Generally, the legends admit that, notwithstanding the idol's and idol-finder's claims to extraordinary powers, he had to depend entirely upon his followers for being provided with the funds for building its temple.

Whatever the desirability of a history of our ancient shrines, the materials for such a work are sadly wanting. There is inherent impossibility in collecting the facts, which tradition still records, about some of our modern shrines. Such a work might expose the author to a criminal prosecution, or, at any rate, would bring neither money nor popularity to him. But its value, for educational purposes, can hardly be over-estimated.

The small-pox plague which has been raging in Calcutta since last December, has given so great an impetus to the worship of Sitalá, that we should not be surprised if some new shrines to the deity have been set up, or some old and decaying ones invested with rejuvinescence, within the last few months. There has certainly been a marked tendency in that direction. Almost all the old Sitalá shrines are just now so flourishing, that new competitors are sure to be attracted to the field. The old Sitalás, which were never well-housed or well-clad, may now be seen in purple and brocade, and a great many of them are certainly about to have substantial brick-built temples. Such facts are, beyond doubt, worth record ing, for, if neglected, some of these very Sitalás may, at some future time, claim to be in existence from the beginning of the world, or as having dropped down direct from heaven with a determination not to move to any other place.

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing case of all kinds. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonial and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on applicative. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victori Street, Westininster, London, S. W.

Some of the Calcutta shrines, the very foundation of which is still well remembered by the old residents, are already on the way of putting forward such claims whose extravagance is no bar to their general recognition. There was a time when the floor of the inner sanctuary of one of these shrines was on a level with that of its outer portico, and at a height of about three feet from the level of the surrounding streets. One morning, in the year 1864, the neighbours and votaries were puzzled to find that it had sunk to the level of the ground outside. What explanation the high priest gave to enquirers at the time, we cannot say. But it requires no prophet to predict the legendary purposes that the hollow floor would serve hereafter. When the testimony about the true cause of the depression will cease to become obtainable by the death of the old men of the locality, the engineering of the temple is sure to be explained by the invention of a legend that the deity was miraculously discovered in her present position, and, as she was determined not to move, the discoverer had to build the temple for her, accommodating his plan to her inclinations.

When the actual facts regarding the original condition of the most revered objects of our worship are known, they are not always such as to inspire any man of common sense with much reverence. In fact, like most human beings, many of the idols, paintings and relics, which we are led to worship, have had their ups and downs in life. Before promotion to their present condition, some of them had to go through the most pitiable vicissitudes of fortune. In a town not far from Calcutta there is a famous image of Siva which, though now believed to have miraculous powers, used to be, not long ago, utilised by the hoys of a neighbouring school as a stone for whetting their knives and pointing their pencils. It is also a well-known fact that the image of Adwaita in one of his most famous shrines was, in the beginning, only the wooden charioteer of a sacred car belonging to a local Raja.

In the very article under notice, regarding the origin of the new shrine at Pompei, it is stated that the picture representing the Madonna was originally the property of a nun at Naples, and that by a miscarriage of the arrangements made for its transport to Pompei it was carried thither in a dung cart. That was a sad fate, indeed, and in striking contrast to the high tide of fortune which it attained after its arrival at Pompei by such a conveyance. The story is a very interesting one, and we cannot resist the temptation of giving a part of it in the words of the fair writer. She says:

Sunday morning along the high road in front of the church of the Holy Rosary at Valle di Pompei.

Twenty years ago, this spot of land, wild and rough held a small hamlet of scattered huts, called simply Valle, or The Valley; possessing a wayside tavern, and a half-ruined parish church. For many years the place had been noted for its briginds and robbers, and, after the year 1860, became famous as the haunt of the dreaded chief Pilone.

Much of the land had become the property of Countess de Fusco the inhabitants began to neglect all religious rights and duties, and sank into a very barbaric state.

It was in Ocrober of that year [1872] that a native of Lecce, Don Bartolo Longo, practising as a barrister in Nyles and married to the Countess de Fusco, wint to Valle di Pompei on some business connected with his wite's estate.

During the course of the day Don Bartolo paid a visit to the parish priest, visited the rotten and small parish church, and learned that the greater part of the parishioners, numbering 1,200, never went to church and lived in a state of pitiable ignorance. Don Bartolo was struck with pity for the poor wretches, who could not even send their children to school. He frequently visited the place, and telates how one day, while walking in melancholy mood in a desolate spot, he was inspired by the conviction that there was no better way to save a sinner than by propagating the worship of Our Lady of the Rosary. He vowed to institute that worship in that desolate spot before he died. No sooner had the vow passed his lips than he felt a heavenly calm discend upon his spirit, and, as he heard the Angelus ringing, he knelt down and prayed, rising with the firm determination to fulfil his vow.

He began by visiting the scattered houses in the district, giving presents of rosaries and medals to the inhabitants. Most of the people had no idea of prayer, were incapable of repeating the Ave Maria, and seemed inaccessible.

But Don Bartolo soon discovered that they cherished a fond reverence for their dead.

Taking advantage of this pious sentiment in the people, Dou Bartolo by 1874 had succeeded in forming a Confraternity of th Rosary, the members of which undertook the duty of following funerals and reciting the prayers.

Learning further from the parish priest that the people were very fond of fairs and festivals, games, wrestling matches and such like, Don Bartolo resolved to institute a festival on the feast of the Madonna of the Rosary in October, and to form a great lottery, the prizes of which, rings and ear-rings, should tempt the women of the neighbourhood to attend. He went to Naples and begged from his friends and acquaintance all kinds of medals, pictures of saints, rosa ries, and statuettes, and, at the proper time, took them to Valle di Pompei, together with a hundred crucifixes such as hang at the heads of the beds in cottages.

neass or the needs in cottages.

He arranged a lottery at tickets of two soldi (less than a penny) each, the first five prizes to consist of objects in pure but thin Neapolitan gold. The other 800 prizes were formed of the medals, crosses, &c., which he had collected. Hordered a band of music from the town of Pagano, arranged that High Mass should be performed in the old church, and begged his own tather-confessor to preach on the Rosary; there being no picture of the Virgin at Valle, he took there a small lithograph surrounded by the fifteen mysteries, which usually hung at the head of his own bed.

But on the day appointed a violent thunderstorm frustrated all his plans. The neighbouring populations and the aristocratic friends he had invited were equally prevented from attending.

Undismayed by this hindrance, Don Bartolo set to work to ar range another fair and lottery for the following year, to announce which he sent a peasant woman, notorious for her stentorian voice, to all the country-side, while he himself traversed the neighbourhood, collecting subscriptions either in money, corn, or cotton. The people responded to his efforts, interested themselves in his plans, and many women, unable to give anything else, parted with gold necklaces or pearl ear-rings.

This time the festival took place with great success.

Don Bartolo now interested the higher clergy in his work, and a mission to Valle di Poinpei was arranged.

In October 1875 great progress had been made. Already some pious person had presented the old church with a new altar, upon which was placed a statuette of the Virgin. That year's least was more brilliant than before. So many persons crowded to the church that Mass had to be performed at a temporary altar erected out of doors, and the Bishop of Nolo administered the sacrament with great pomp. He urged Don Bartolo not to remain content with erecting an altar to the Madonna of the Rosary, but to build a church worthy to be her shrine, and advised his listener to commence a col-lection for the purpose of one sou a month, which no good Catholic, be he poor as he might, would refuse. He himself promised a donation of five hundred francs.

The subscriptions were now set on foot, and succeeded beyond emptation of giving a part of it in the words of the arrest writer. She says:—
"There is quite a little market held this beautiful November mission also did its work; the people were taught to pray. But, according to the rules of ecclesiastical liturgy, the picture before which they prayed must be an oil-painting. Don Bartolo went to Naples with the intention of purchasing one at an antiquarian's shop, and was eagerly wishing to meet a certain Neapolitan friend who would help him to bargain, when the very man appeared before him. Together they ransacked the shops, but the price demanded was always too high. Time pressed, for the picture was wanted at Valle di Pompei for special prayers the very next day. At last Don Bartolo's friend remembered that he knew a nun who possessed an Bartolo friend remembered that he knew a nun who possessed an old painting of the Madonna of the Rosary, and the friends sought her out at Porta Medina. She still had the picture, but the paint was pealing off, and the figures were so coarse and vulgar that Don Bartolo cried out in disappointment. 'Don't hesitate,' said the nan, 'take the picture; it is good enough for the people to worship.' The picture was large, and now the trouble was how to convey it to Valle di Pompei in time. Don Bartolo remembered that a carrier from the place was in Naples and about to return. To him he confided the picture, himself starting later for Valle by train. When the picture at last reached that place, what was his dismay in finding that it had been brought on the top of a dung-cart? And when he presented it to the three missionaries and other clericals assembled, there was a general smile at the poor old thing, and it was east into a corner behind the altar. Next day it was given to a painter who was sketching in Pompei, and restored to something like decency.

And now, the old picture having been placed on the altar, the rumour spread of a miracle having been performed by its means on a young girl in Naples, who, afflicted with epilepsy, had repaired to the Shrine of the Madonna of Lourdes in a church at Naples in vain, but had miraculously recovered her health on the very day of the picture of the Madonna of Popular is whom of the placing of the picture of the Madonna of Pompei, to whom the sick girl's mother had made a vow.

The nows spread like wild-fire; the shrine began to attract universal attention; pilgrims crowded to it, especially on the solemn lestivals in May and October; princes, cardinals, priests, and even royal personages joined the Confraternity. Offerings arrived from all parts of the world; artisans and artists vied with each other in proposing to work gratis in decorating the future church, and shrines were erected to the Madonna of Pompei in other churches.

The day of the laying of the first stone of the new church at The day of the laying of the first stone of the new church at Valle di Pompei was superla. A tent was erectedfon the ground, containing an altar with the picture of the Virgm. The Bishop of Nola, attended by the long train of priests, performed Mass. The crowd of peasants was immense, and more than three hundred distinguished personages attended the ceremony.

On the anniversary of this day ten years later, a delegate from the Pone Cardinal La Valletta, was able solemnly to consecrate the Pope, Cardinal La Valletta, was able solemnly to consecrate the high alter of the Madonna of the Rosary in the new church. Leo the Thirteenth himself blessed the marvellous diadem of diamonds, sapphires and other precious stones that, in the Italian fashion, was placed on the surface of the picture in the spot it would have occupied had it adorned a statue. The Virgin has, besides, a necklace of brilliants forming the word Rosario. A shining star is on her brow; two rich solitaries form her ear-rings, and the rosary which she gives to St. Catherine, and that which the infant Jesus presents to St. Dominic, are also formed of diamonds. The Virgin's shoes are of gold and diamonds, her mantle is starred with them, and beneath the picture precious stones form the words Ave Maria.

The account given in the above extracts shows that Don Bartolo is a genius in his line, and that even our Bhakti Binods, ambitious of filching the credit of Navadwip by identifying the Mussalman village of Meahpore with the Mayapore of Chaitanyaite literature, might derive some valuable ideas from his modus operandi. Nevertheless, India is the original home of the art of floating shrines, and if the Neapolitan barrister were to come out here, he might also get some important hints for improving his programme. The modern method of advertising by printed circulars is very often useful enough for the purposes of the charlatan. But the old Indian methods of proclaiming the glory of a shrine are generally far more effective than placards, handbills and newspaper advertisements. The most important thing in establishing the reputation of a shrine, is to have within it a few living saints of a type wellknown in this country. These must neither talk nor move, but remain in their position fixed and immovable as statues. In the ancient and well established shrines such men may be got simply for the privilege of sitting within the sanctuary. In the strug-gling stage, the "promoter" has to feed and to lodge proposed and half adopted, though admirably scientific, and pre-them in the temple free of charge. Among the restless nations of Europe, it might be difficult to procure such men, and, if obtainable, it might not be possible to secure their service by giving them merely a dish of consecrated food. The result of their exhibitions, if continued for a few years, is tremendous, and the game is certainly well worth the candle. Another improvement that Don Bartolo's programme appears to be capable of, is the adoption of the Chaitanyaite method of influencing the mob by Nagar sankirtan or the patrolling of streets by strong parties of musicians. A few thoughtful men might look upon such processions as regular nuisances deserving to be put down by the strong arm of the law for the dissonance they create with their lusty lungs aided by brass gongs and shrill trumpets and earthen drums. But upon the mob their effect is simply maddening. They act like ocean waves dissolving in their progress the most refractory elements. The very budmashes of society and men about town may be seen to join such movements, each intent on the accomplishment of his own ebject.

The writer of the article under notice does not tell us what Don Bartolo's standing is as a barrister. From the account given of his zeal for the Madonna, it seems that, even if he has the learning and forensic skill of a great advocate, he can have very little time left for devoting to the service of human clients or to their mundane affairs. However that may be, the example that he has set might well be followed by a good many members of the same profession in this country. An Indian barrister might, with much more decency, adopt the rôle of a prophet or temple-promoter than that of a Moonsiff. The acceptance of a post in the subordinate Judicial service unmistakably implies failure in the bar. But the yellow garments of a religious mendicant cannot possibly lower his position in the eyes of his own countrymen. On the contrary, with a little tact, and by the publication of a few legends in the usual style, a barrister-Sannyasi might attain a position of far greater power and affluence than that of even the most successful members of his original profession. In any case, the change would bring him immediate relief by the curtailment of his expenses. A barrister, though unable to earn a penny, must live like a prince. As a prophet his expenses would be very nearly nil. That it-self would be a great gain. Let him then attach himself to a newly set up shrine under the management of an appreciating promoter, and he would soon be surprised to find himself elevated to the rank of a Trailanga Swami, or, in time, to that of even a Chaitanya or Buddha. Verbum sap sapienti.

CONGRESS OF ORIENTALISTS.

I represented the Bengal Government, the Bengal Asiatic Society, and the Calcutta University, at the Tenth International Congress of Orientalists held at Geneva, in September, 1894, and the following notes and extracts from the diary kept during the meeting may, therefore, prove of interest and value. It will be seen from the extracts from the diary that the thorny question of transliteration was attacked by a strong committee of the savants present, and at last a scheme (admittedly a compromise) has been adopted for general use over the civilised world. It may be hoped that uniformity will, in future, exist in the transcription of Oriental languages by scholars of all nations. Although not a member myself of the committee, I was in constant friendly communication with its members, and was examined as a triendly communication with its memoers, and was canulintual witness, or, perhaps more accurately, was allowed to plead the cause of India before it. I am glad to be able to state, as the direct result of my efforts, that a scheme has been adopted which can be ferable from a scholar's point of view, had no chance of being accepted for general use in India. Now, however, the needs of Hindustani, Hindi, and other modern Indian languages have been considered, and very few and unimportant changes in the Jonesian system at present in use will be required.

Another subject of considerable interest to the Indian public was discussed by the Congress. I allude to the present uncared-for condition of the Asoka inscriptions, and to the efforts which the Trustees of the Indian Museum are making for their preservation. In connexion with this, a resolution was passed by the Congress thanking the Trustees for their action, and urging the importance of the matter upon the attention of the Government of India. As philological Secretary and Delegate of the Asiatic Society of Bengal and as a Trustee of the Indian Museum, I was enabled to give the Congress accurate information concerning the subject. The resolution was the result of important speeches by three of the greatest authorities on Indian epigraphy now living...Dr. G. Buhler of Vienna, M. E. Senart of Paris (both of whom have made a special study of the Asoka inscriptions) and Dr. Burgess. In the matter of social arrangements, nothing more cordial can be conceived than the welcome accorded to those assembled, not only by the President of the Congress, but by the Canton and by the town of Geneva, as well as by the private inhabitants of the neighbourhood. Almost every day while the Congress lasted there was an excursion, a garden party, or a dinner, and, although the hospitality was shown on the widest scale, each guest somehow felt that he was receiving the personal attention of his host in a manner as flattering as it was gracious. It must not, however, he imagined that the Congress was a mere round of festivities. A great deal of important and soild work was got through. But this hospitality happily forwarded another of the great objects of these Congresses, the bringing together into personal intercourse of scholars who, but for them, could never meet, and who have hitherto communicated with each other only by correspondence, or, perhaps, by somewhat heated polemics. Putting the public sectional papers to one side, many disputed points were discussed in friendly conversations, and many scholars found that, after all, they did not differ so widely from their conferes as they had imagined.

EXTRACTS FROM THE DIARY.

Larrived in Geneva on Sunday, the 2nd of September. On Monday evening, the 3rd, there was an informal reunion at the Hotel National, where all the members, who had by that time arrived, renewed old acquaintances and made new ones.

The formal opening of the Congress took place in the Aula of the fine University buildings at 10 A. M. on Tuesday, the 4th September. The proceedings commenced with a short speech from Colonel Frey, President of the Swiss Confederation, and ex-Honorary President of the Congress, in which he welcomed the foreign members in the name of Switzerland. He was followed by Mr. Richard, President of the Council of the Republic and Canton of Geneva, and Honorary President of the Congress who welcomed us in the name of the former body. M. Naville, the learned Egyptologist, the President of the Congress, then gave his presidential address. He gave 1 rapid summary of the history of Oriental studies in Geneva, and maintained that one of the great features of modern discoveries was the close connexion which existed between the ancient civilisations of the world. He made special reference to the intimate relations which have lately been found to have existed between the civilisations of Greece, Egypt and Nineveli. He thanked the Federal and Cantonal authorities for the support which they had lent to the Congress, the sovereigns and members of sovereign families who had accepted the titles of Patrons and Honoray Vice-Presidents, and finally the tocants, who had responded in such large numb rs to the invitation of the Committee of Organisation. M. Maspero in the name of the Government of Organisation. France, Lord Reay in the name of his fellow-count ymen, Professor Windisch in that of the Grimin scholars, Count de Gubernatis in the name of Italy, and Ahmed Zekv in the name of the Khedive, wished success to the Congress, and thanked Geneva for its hospitality. A number of presentations of Oriental works were then made to the Congress by authors, by learned societies, and by Governments. the Congress by authors, by learned societies, and by Governments. A committee to settle a uniform system of transliteration to be adopted by all Oriental Societies and by Oriental scholars of all countries was then appointed. The members were Messrs. Sociot, Barber de Meynaid, de Giuje, Plunkett, Lyon, Buhler, Senart, Windisch, and de Saussuic. The proceedings terminated at mislay with the appointment of the Consultative Committee.

The members of the Congress divided themselves in the afternion must be following sections: L. I. Indian Pacillant Land Pacilland.

nto the following sections:--I. India--President, Lord Reay; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. Weber of Berlin, and Buhler of Vienna. Aryan Presidents, Messrs, weder of Deriin, and Dunier of Vienna. Aryan Linguistics.—President, Signor Ascoli; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. Breal and Schmidt. II. Semiiic Languages (non-Musalman).—President, M. Kautzsch; Vice-President, Messrs. J. Oppert, Tiele, and Almkvist. III. Musalman Languages:—President, Mr. Schefer; and Almkvist. 111. Musalman Languages---rresident, Mr. Schefer; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. de Gæje, Goldriher, and Sachau. IV. Egypt "Que l'administration du Musée Indien de Calcutta sera remer and African Languages---President, M. Maspero; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. Lepage, Renouf, and Lieblein. V. The Far East---President, M. Schlegel; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. Codier and Valenziani. VI. Indeet les Gouvernments qui en dépendent serout pités, au nom

Greece and the East---President, M. Meeriam; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. Perrot and Bikelas. This was a new section, opened for the reasons given in M. Naville's presidential address. VII. Oriental Geography and Ethnography-- President, Protessor A. Vamberv, Vice-Presidents, Prince Roland Bonaparte, and M. de Claparede. This also was a new section.

Section I. (India), ... This section held seven sittings, and among the subjects of interest may be mentioned the following :---

(a) Professor Weber spoke in moving terms on the late regretted death of Prot. Whitney, the great American Sanskritist. On the motion of Lord Reay, the President of the section, a message of condolence was sent to the widow of the deceased scholar.

(b) M. Senart laid before the members present some photographs of inscriptions lately discovered by Major Deane in Alghan territory. They were in an unknown, character and had not ver been deciphered. Rubbings of these inscriptions were exhibited at a meet ing of the Asiatic Society of Bengal some months ago.

(c) Mr. Cecil Bendall showed rubbings of a short inscription in

(e) Mr. Ceell Bendair snowed rubolings of a short inscription in the Indian Museum. The inscription is interesting, as being written in the somewhat rare "wydge-headed" characters intherto only found in Nepal, and was a unique example of an epigraph conched in literary Pali. It formed a portion of the collection made by Mr.

Broadley in Bihar.
(d) Professor H. Oldenberg read a paper on the Vedic religion, in which he endeavoured to distinguish the mythical, the popular, the Indo-European, the Indo-Iranian, and the Indo-a elements of the Vedas. He maintained that Varuna (the god of the of the Vedas. He maintained that Vatuna (the got of the ocean), was primitively alunar deity. This paper provoked some lively criticism on the part of Dr. Pischel, the leader of the Euhmeristic School of Vedic scholars.

(e) Professor von Schreder tead an important paper on the Kathaka recension of the Yajur Vela, its manuscripts, its system of accentuation, and its relationship with the works of the Indian Grammarians and Lexicographers. A manuscript of the work recently found by Dr. Stein in Kashmir has revealed many peculiarities, and has enabled Dr. von Schræder to recognise several allusions to the work in the sutrus of Panini.

(f) Professor Leamann gave an interesting account of the Jaina Avasyaka, more especially of the two first parts of that work,—the Samáyska, a kind of prose creed, and the Chataromountation. He presented a facsimile of a minuscript of this work, which he intends to publish by subscription. Professor Webei drew atten ion to the great antiquity and importance of the Samayika. hers present congratulated Prof. Leumann and wished him every ners present constituated Prof. Leumann and wished him every success in his enterprise.

(g) A short paper was read by Dr. Pfungst on "Esoteric Buddhism," which he described as based on ideas held by a number of incompetent persons. Messrs. Kuhn, Weber, Leumann and Bühler, etc., cordially agreed with Dr. Pfungst and the so called system was denounced on all sides as en volltandiger urbundel. Dr. Pfungst reproduced by the section, hould are a found treader. system was actionined on an sides as an obliganager invained. Dr. Pfungst proposed that the section should pass a formil resolution to that effect, but this did not meet with the approval of the savants present, as the general opinion was that the subject was beneath the cognisance of scholars. The remarks of Prof. Weber on the political importance of the movement were specially noteworthy, as showing the close interest taken in Indian affairs by German scholars.

(b) Mr. Bhownaggree, the Delegate of the Maharaja of Bhavnagar, presented three communications—one by Mi. J. N. Unvala on Zoroastrianism, one by Mr. J. J. Kania on The Philosophical Schools of India, and one by Sh.kh Mahammed Isfaham on Sufiem. He presented to the Congress a handsom; volum: of Sanskrit and Piakrit inscriptions existing in the Bhavnagar State published at the expense of the Maharaya and concluded by reading a work by Mr. S. D. Bharucha on The Persian Desatir.

(i) Dr. Bühler made an important communication regarding over well known Asoka inscriptions of India. The historical and linguistic manufacture of the overstated. Never-Dr. Bühler made an important communication regarding the ic value of these ancient monuments cannot be overstated. Nevertheless, they are lying exposed to the weather, and within recent theless, they are lying exposed to the weather, and within feeth they ears have suffered considerable into ics both from that source and from ico toclasts or refue-hunting tout as. They are also inconveniently situated, some in the extreme North-West, others in Orissa, others in Maisur, others in Guzerat, others in Central India, and others again in Nepal. Even when approached, some of them are so placed that they cannot be read without using scaffolding. I was enabled to report to the Congress that, to remedy this state of affairs, the Trustees of the Indian Museum had offered, if fund were made available, to take facsimile easts of all these inscriptions, and to form an Asoka gallery in their building, where these could be collected and made accessible to students. Messrs. Buhler, Weber, Burgess, Senart, Bhownaggree, and Lord Reav, all spoke warmly in support of this proposal, and the following resolution, which was subsequently adopted by the Congress as a whole, was passed by acclamation .-"Que l'administration du Musée Indien de Calcutta sera remer du Congrés, d'adopter les mesures de préservation et de reproduction de ces monuments, proposées par la dite administration.'

(i) Count de Gubernatis presented some interesting notes on the influence of the Indian tradition on the representation of Hell in the poetry of Dante and on the frescos in the Campo Santo at Pisa.

(k) Professor Sylvain Levi, one of the most rising of the younger school of Sanskrit scholars in Paris, and who is one of the few who knows at once Sanskrit, Tibetan, and Chinese, gave a most interesting account of a Sanskrit poem by Harsha Charita of Kasmir, discovered by him in a Chinese version of the Buddhist Tripitaka. Although in Sanskrit, the whole was written in Chinese characters, and besides its intrinsic value, it gives us information of the greatest practical importance as to the system adopted by the Chinese in transliterating Indian words into their character. The lecturer illustrated this by applying the results obtained by him to some doubtful names of peoples mentioned by Hiuen Tsiang.

Section 1bis. (Aryan Linguistics).---Few papers in this section were of interest to Indian students.

Most interest was excited by Prof. J. Schmidt's paper on the vocalic r. l. m. n., the existence of which in the original Indo-Germanic language has been asserted by the new school of compara-tive philologists, headed by Prof. Brugman. Professor Schmidt, representing the older and more conservative school, strongly combated the existence of these vowels. His arguments are too technical to reproduce here, but they were listened to with great attention, and the reading of his paper and the ensuing discussion took up the whole of one sitting, the latter being continued on the following day.

Professor Leumann read a short paper on the exchanges of forms such as khid and khad in the same root in the Vedic language, in connexion with the presence or absence of prefix, and with accentuation.

Professor Wackernagel read a paper on the place of Sanskrit in modern philology. He combated the opinions of those who would diminish the linguistic importance of that language. He pointed out the special importance of the knowledge which we possess of the different periods in the history of the language from the Vedic times down to the Sanskrit of the Renaisance. Moreover, some peculiarities of Sanskrit syntax could be used to explain certain obscure phenomena in allied languages. He finally defended the accuracy of the Hindu grammarians against the assaults which have been made against them of late years.

At the first meeting of this section Signor Ascoli lamented the deaths of Professors Whitney and Schweizer-Sidler, and in this he was followed by M. Bréal and Prof. Weber.

Section 11. (Semitic, non-Musalman languages).—As might be expected nothing of interest to Indian scholars took place in this Considerable interest was excited by the presentation by section. Doctor Bullinger of a copy of the new edition of the Hebrew Bible, just completed by Dr. Ginsburg. Mrs. Lewis gave an ac-count of two Palestinian Syriac Lectionaries and of a Syriac manuscript of the gospels discovered by her at Mount Sinai; this also excited much interest. Professor Haupt made a learned communication on the situation of the Paradise of the Bible, and was not able to locate it in any definite place. Dr. Cast contributed an interesting printed essay on the ancient religions of the world before the Christian era, and M. Halévy maintained the importance of Assyriological research in connection with sound Biblical criticism.

Section III. (Musalman languages).—The proceedings commenced with a special mention of the loss of Prof. Robertson Smith, made by Prof. Goldziner, and the same scholar at a subsequent meeting read an important paper entitled "Observations on the primitive history of poetry among the Arabs." It is thus summarised in the Proces Verbal: --- Poetry began with magic incantations. The Arabic poet is first of all an enchanter. His name, ibair, the knower, is identical with the Hebrew yid' oni. The principal duty of the poet was to injure the enemics of the tribe by magic formulas. We find the most ancient example of this function of a poet in the Old Testament, in the history of Balaam. Professor Goldziner endea-voured to reconstitute these formulas, as they were amongst the ancient Arabs, and shewed that their form was that of the saga, in which metre was a later development. In the course of centuries these magic formulas gave rise to satirical poetry, the primitive recitation of which was accompanied by various external gestures. The old terminology of Arabic poetry has preserved many traces of this origin. For instance, the term kafija of which the original meaning is "formula over-whelming the head of the adversary."

meaning is "formula over-whelming the head of the adversary."
Professor D. Margoliouth described the correspondence of Ind-al-athir al-Jazari, preserved at the Bodleian Library. These letters are date i from 621 to 627 A. H.

M. Grûnert gave an account of Dr. Glaser's recent discoveries in Arabia, and a valuable paper was read by Dr. Horn on his discoveries in Persian and Turkish in the Vatican library. Dr. Seybold read a paper on the Arab dialect spoken at Grenada, pointing out how much still remained to be done for the accurate study of the how much still remained to Moorish régime in Spain.

Moorish régime in Spain.

Section IV. (Egypt and African languages),---The chief papers were from Prof. Piehl on Egyptian Lexicography and from Drs. Hess and Keall on a Demotic work discovered in the Rainer collection, Much interest was likewise excited by the report from M. de Morgan.

of his discoveries in Egypt.

Section V. (The Far East).--- A huge rubbing of an inscription in six languages found at Kiu-Yong-Koan, to the north of ,Pekin, was exhibited by M. Chavannes. Dr. J. P. N. Land gave a paper on the music of Java, which seems to snew a curious analogy to the elements from which counterpoint was developed in the West, though the tonal basis is quite different. Dr. Waddell's paper on a Mystery-play of the Tibetan Lamas was read for him, and an important com-munication was made by Prof. Radlov on his discoveries and readings of inscriptions from Central Asia, near Lake Batkal. This paper was the great event of this section of the Congress. Profess-or Schlegel read a paper, to which ladies were specially invited, on the social position of Chinese women.

10. Section VI. (Greece and the East), and Section VII. (Oriental Geography and Ethnology)... These sections were not largely attended, nor were the papers read of interest, except to specialists. in the subjects dealt with. In neither of them had any of the papers reference to India.

The Congress was formally closed at 9 A. M. on Wednesday, the 12th of September. At the final general meeting several resolutions were adopted, after having passed through the ordeal of the Consultative Committee. Amongst them may be mentioned the resolution regarding the Asoka Inscriptions, and one embodying the results of the labours of the Transliteration Committee. It is hoped that a scheme of transliteration has at length been adopted, which can be accepted in all countries, and by scholars of all nationalities. --- Mr. G. A. Grierson in the Indian Antiquary.

GRANNY GORTON'S BIRTHDAY.

SATURDAY, January 21st, was a great day in Central Village, in the State of Connecticut, in America. On that day Mrs. Jonathan Gorton was 100 years old and formally received her friends, of whom hundreds were present. She wore her best black silk gown, with a rose in the bodice. The venerable lady was seated in a comfortable at inchain on a platform in the best room of her house. Then the train of callers filed through, each and all shaking hands with her. "Gramy Gorton, as she is called, is a trun little body and very nimble on her feet. There she is called, is a trin little body and very numble on her feet. There was never anything ailed her, she say, and, except that her eyesight isn't quite so good as it used to be, she is as active as any woman of 50.

Why has Granny Gorton lived so long? Why is she so active now? She lets out the secret herself when she says, "There was never anything ailed me." I har's it, and all of it.

People who live 100 years are not so very rare. The deaths of 45 such were reported last year in England—22 men and 23 women. Yet, compared to the multitudes who die, these are nothing—nothing. Can we not keep things from ailing us, and so live long as Mrs. Gorton? Yes, if we will take the trouble to do it! Men and women 100 years old, still vigorous and clear-headed, should be a sight so common as not to be remarked, and will be yet in the future. Why not so now? "Ask yourself the question," as the boatmen say down on Deal beach. Here's how it is: A woman's tale. She says she fell ill when a girl of anout 15. She lost the rappetite, had pains in the sides and chest, frequent headaches, and was often obliged to lie down on the couch and rest. All this didn't promise long life, did it? No; it was a bad start.

start.

Well, she got worse instead of better. She was often sick, vomited her food, and spitting of a soin fluid. For five years, she went on this way. This brings us to October, 1881. She was then in service as partion-in ad at Learnington Hastings, Waiwickshite. Here she suffered from constant sickness, retching, and heartburn. The chest pans way. This brings us to October, 1881. She was then in service as parlour-in did at Learnington Hasting, Wainwickshire. Here she suffered from constant sickness, retching, and heartburn. The chest pains were so bad as to bend her two double. No position that she could take relived her. He stomach was so tender and sore that everything she ate pained and distressed her. For months and months she only took liquid food—misk and beaten eggs, and so on.

She got weaker and weaker every day, so she says. Of course; how else could it he? A do to at Rugby told her she had "ulceration of the chest," which she don't at all. What is "ulceration of the chest?" He gave her medicines and advice, but she grew no better on that account. This young lady was now about 20 years old, with a poor outlook for ever being much older. She didn't expect it, nor did her friends. Then another doctor, being consulted, said "ulceration of the chest," like his medical brother at Rugby. Both wrong.

"After Six months' medical treament," she says, "I gave up my situation and returned to my home at Buxton Lamas, Norfolk. This was to June, 1882. Then I was taken so bad I had to take to my bed. My mother thought I was in a decline."

Now, the word "decline" means consumption, as we all know; a disease common in England and incurable everywhere. Thousands obright girls and young men "decline" into their graves every years in this populous island. Sad enough it is to see.

Well, at this point her good and wise mother interfered in her daughter's case. She gives the doctors the go-by and sent to Norwich for some bottles of Mither Seigel's Curative Syrup. In two weeks the young patient began to feel better, and in three months she got a new situation and went to work.

"Since then, fifteen years ago," she says, "I have kept in better situation and went to work.

situation and went to work.

"Since then, fifteen years ago," she says, "I have kept in better health than ever before in my life, thanks to Seige!'s Syrup. Yours truly, (Signed). (Mrs.) SARAH ELEANOR BAKER, 8, King's Street, Church Road Tottenham, near London, September 30th, 1892." A dozen words more and we're done. Mrs. Baker's ailment was indigestion and dyspepsia, nothing else, and quite enough. The "ulceration" was inflammation of the inner coating of the stomach, a symptom of the disease. We wish her a long and happy life, and merely add that if all her sex could avoid or cure this one trouble most of them wight live to be as old as Granny Gotton. might live to be as old as Granny Gorton.

Ready for the Press AN INDIAN JOURNALIST: Life, Letters and Correspondence OF

Dr. SAMBHU C. MOOKERJEE,

late Editor of " Reis and Rayyet," BY

F H. SKRINE, Cs.

The volume, uniform with Mookerjee's Travels and Voyages in Bengal, will consist of about 600 pages and contain, inter alia

- I. A photograph of the Doctor from a painting by Mr. James Aicher, RSA.
- 2 A Biography, illustrated by copious notes and ana.
- 3 About 225 pages of original essays from Las brilliant pen.
- 4. Selections from his correspondence with statesmen and literary men.

PRICE :

Rs. As.

To registered subscribers paying before publication ... To other subscribers and ordinary purchasers

After plying the expenses of the publication, the surplus will be pliced wholly at the disposal of the family of the deceased man of letters.

Orders will be registered by Messis. Thack-Orders will be registered by Messa, Thake-er, Sonk, & Co., Government Place, and by Babu Kisan Moh in Ganguli, B. L., 12 Ashutosh Dev's Line, Calcutta Subscribers to the "Essays by a Biahman" will be communicated with by Babu Kisan Mohan Ganguli, To ensure accuracy, and avoid all mischance,

To ensure accuracy and assessment such form may be used as.

Please enter my name as a subscriber for copies of "An Indian Journalist." The amount, cheque has been remitted per_______noney order

To be legibly (Name..... Address.....

The 1895

GENUINE HOMEEOPATHY. A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M. S. Homwopathu Practitioner,

May be consulted by letter or personally daily at his residence, 30-1, Coloutolah Street, Calcutta.

Novelty in Ayurvedic Medicine. AYURVEDIO PHARMACY.

36, Lower Chitpore Road, Fouzdari Balaknana, Calcutta.

KAVIRAJ NAGENDRA NATH SEN, Physician, Surgeon, Accoucheur, practises the Ayurvedic system of medicine, after having obtained a diploma at the final examination of one of the Government medical Institutions of the

SPECIFICS

SPECIFICS
for all ordinary diseases, like Fever, Cough, Asthma, Phthisis, Diabetes, &c., including diseases brought on by irregularities and indiscretions of diverse kinds. Catalogues, containing full accounts of diseases and remedies, are transmitted on application. Prescriptions, with or without medicines, sent to every part of India and Ceylon, Cape Colony, at 4 the British Isles, on receipt (by post) of full accounts of diseases.

Thousands of unsolicited Testimonials from

Thousands of unsolicited Testimonials from

every quarter.

Lady Elliott Portrait Memorial Committee.

W. O. Bell-Irving

Allan Arthur Hon, Justice Beverley Hon, C. E. Buckland W. D. Cruicksnank Buon Gaerter Col. Hailes, 6th B. L. A Macdonald

S. E. J. Clarke H. H. The Maharaja Darbhanga, K.C I E. J. Jouslain, E. F. Longley. C. Moore. David McLaien Morri- Hon, P. Playfair,

A.F.M. Abdui Rahman A. Simson,
A.F.M. Saunders A. H. Wallis,

Maharaja Su J. M. Tagore, K. C. S. I.

PRESIDENT—Allan Authur.

HON. THEASURER—J. O'B. Saunders.

HON SECRETARY—David McLaten Morrison,

At the meeting of Committee held at the Chamber of Commerce on the 19th January,

it was decided to have a picture of Lady
Elliott painted, any surplus to go towards a personal present.

All subscriptions to be sent to the

All subscriptions to be sent to the HON. TREASURER.

9, Hare Street,

Calcutta.

THE WORKS OF DR. JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE

- Rs. As. I. Commentaires on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, Marriage, Adoption, Wils &c.* Price ... No student or practitioner should be without a copy of this GREAT Work.
- Work.
 (Sd.) Nana Bhai Haridas,"
 Bengah translation of the Dyabhaga and the Mitakshara,† Pince ...
 Bengah Translation of the Duttakachanduka,† Pince ...
 The Evidence Act with notes in
- 4. The Evidence Act with notes in Bengali,† Price 1 0
 5 The Civil Procedure Code with notes in Bengali,† Price ... 4 0
 6 Principles of Zenimdari Management and Book-keeping in Bengali 0 10
 7. First Lessons in English for Bengali how, Price ... 0 4
 8. Bharat Sasan Pranali* ... 0 8

IN THE PRESS

The Philosophy of Religion from the point of view of Common Sense. Price Rs. 5

CONTENTS.

- Historical Analysis of the evolution of religious systems
 Definition of the term "religion."
- The problems of the philosophy of re-ligion and their solutions, old and new. (a) Why do Hindus believe in ten Ava-tars or incarnations including in the series three that are believed to have appeared in the shape of a fish, a tor-
- and a boar (b) Why is it that all ancient systems recommend the sacrifice of animals,
- and the burning of gliee or incense. &c. &c. &c. &c.

 The weapons offensive and defensive of
- religious teachers
 The power of fine words.
 The art of hecoming a prophet.
- The cumulative effect of hardswearing for ages.
- 8. Specimens of Puranised history.
- Brahmmical and Christian priestonaft compared. The attificial miseries of men caused by
- 10. religion.
- religion.
 The good man's adversity is the sharp man's opportunity.
 Swindling as a fine art.
 New Superstitions that may be suggested for the benefit of the priests.
- The great prophets of the world and 15. their doings.
- Probable origin of the Saiva religion. Tautric mysticism and abominations. 17.
- * To be had of Messis. Thacker Spink &
- † To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink & Co., and also at the Suradham Agency, No. 11, Raja Nabakrishna's Street, Calcutat.

CAUTION!

IT having been notified to the Proprietor of Beecham's Pills that certain unscrupnlous dealers have recently been perpetrating a fraud in connection with the 4 anna box lately introduced, the public are requested to see that the retail prices, (vis., 4 annas, 8 annas or 91/2d, 12 annas or 1s. 11/2d. and Rs. 2 or 21 9d.) are clearly printed on the lid of each hox. The fraud to which attention is drawn is that in the case of the two smaller sizes the prices have been obliterated and the boxes represent ed to be of higher value than they reatly

Sole Wholesale Agents for India, Burma and Ceylon

G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3, NEW CHINA BAZAAR STREET CALCUTIA.

Norice.-Should any difficulty be expenenced in obtaining supplies the Agents will be happy to forward sample boxes at above Rupee rates plus V. P. P. Charges and Postages

TEXT BOOKS IN ENGLISH.

BY SARADA PRASAD BANERJEE SPECIMEN PAPERS AND ANSWERS

THE ENGLISH ENTRANCE COURSE For 1895.

Having the largest sale of all similar works.

ENGLISH PREPARATORY COURSE

FOR 2nd & 3rd CLASSFS

This book has been approved by the Central Text Book Committee.

INDIA READERS NO. 2
FOR 4th & 5th CLASSES.

INDIA READERS NO. 1 FOR 6th & 7th CLASSES.

These books are of remarkably simple style and quite suited to Indian students and quite suited to Indian students. The attention of School authorities in the N.-W P and Go b, the Punjab, Madras, Bombay, the Central Provinces, Assam, and Burma, invited to the above publications of un que ents.

To be had of
S. K. LAHIRI & Co,
College Square, Calcutta.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF

NA	WAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTE	EF
	MEMORIAL FUND.	_
1.	His Highness The Maharaja of Dur-	Rs.
		,000
2.	'anagram, G.C.L.E	.000
3.	Anagram, G.C.I.E., His Highness the Nawah Bahadur of
4.	Moorshedabad, Amirul Omra, G.C.I.E. His Highness the Nawab of Junagadh,	800
	G C.S.I	500
5.	of Cooch Behar, G.C.I.E	500
6.	Nawah Bahador Su K Abdul Ghant.	,
	K.CSI, and Nawr) Bahadur K. Ashan Ulla, C.I E	500
7. 8.	Nawah Imad Jung Bahadur Nawah Azim Yar Jung Bihadur Shams-ul Ulama Syed Ali Belgraun	500
8, 9.	Nawab Azam Yar Jung Bahadur Shamsanl Ulama Sved Ali Belgrami	500
, 1ó.	Khan Bahadar BharBahanddin, C.I.K.,
11.	Vizier to the Nawab of Junagadh Mahutaja Bahadur Sir Jotindra Mo-	300
	han Tagore, K.CSI	250
12.	Messis Maskinnon Markenzie & Co.	200
14.	Babu Joffu Lai Mullick Messix, Maskinnon Mackenzie & Co. Prince Wala Kadr Syed Hosem Alt Muza Babadur	-00
15	Muzi Bahadur	150
٠,	ayed Zamui Abum Kiian Banadai
16.	Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee, C.S.L.	140
17.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chandra	100
18.	Madhab Ghose Prince Mirza Sir Jahan Kadar Baha-	100
	dur, K.C.LF, The Hou'ble P. Playfair	100
19. 20.	The Hon'ble P. Playfair Hap Kastin Auff	001
21	Lieutenant-General the Hon'ble Su	100
22.	H. Brackenbury, K C B., Babu Jai Gobind Law	100
2 3.	the Houble Mr. Justice Guid Das
24.	Baneriee	50
25.	The Honble Dr. Rash Behary Ghose Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, 12	51 50
26,	Shahibzada Mahomed Obidulta Khan Bahadur, C.S.I	50
27.	Mah wajkum ir Benoya Krishn i	50
28.	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice E. J. Trevelyan	50
29.	The Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jabbar	,
30.	Khan Bahadur The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of	50
_	Calcutta	50
31. 32.	Maharaja Durga Charan Law, CTF., Nawab Jahandar Meerza	50 50
33.	Number Unana Mara	50
34. 35.	Nawah Hugor Mita The Houble W. C. Bonneijee Nawah Syed A over Husein Syed Nurul Huga, Esq., C.S., Hukeem Gholam Raza Khan	50 50
35. 36.	Syed Nurul Huaa, Esq., c.s.,	50
37· 38.	1. G Kitchie Eso CS	50 50
39.	Sir Alexander Miller	50
40. 41.	Manler Mahmadaan Nahi Ehan Da	32
42.	hadur,	25
43.	Kumar Dinendra Narain Roy	25 25
44. 45.	Babu rPashupatty Nath Bose	25
46.	Babu Guru Prosonno Ghose Raja Sir Soutindra Mohan Tagore,	25 25
47.	CIF	2-
48.	Raya Jotindra Nath Chowdhury Babu Rama Nath Ghose	25 25
49. 50.		25 25
51.	Rai Saw Bux Bogla Bahadar	25
52. 53.	R. Be chambers, Esq. Raja Surja Kanta Acharjee Chowdhury	25 7 25
54.	Kai Budieedas Mukim Bahadur	25 25
55. 56.	Babu Gopal Lai Seal	,25 25
57.		25
58. 59.	H. Luttman Johnson, Esq. C S. Lord William Beresford, K.C.I E.,	25 25
60.	Monshi Gholam Rasool	23
61. 62.	F. H. Skrine, E.q. C.S., The Honble H. J. S. Cotton C.S., C.S.I.	25 20 .
63.	Prince Mahomed Robbiose Shah	20
64. 65.	Baboo Smendra Nath Pal Chowdry ,, Aukhoy Kumar Ghose	20
66,	Moulvi Imadd Ah	20
67. 68.	R.u Shib Chunder Nundy Bahadai D. Panioty, Esq	20 20
69.	Chowdry Mahomed Arjamand Khan	20
70. 71.	D. Pamoty, Esq. Chowdry Mahomed Arjamand Khan H. E. A. Cotton, Esq., Barrister-at-law Moulvi Sved Ashruffuddin Ahmed,	20

Khan Bahadu

72. T. Inghs, Esq., C.S.

	A H Colon From		16
73	A. H. Giles, Esq
74.	F F. Handley, Esq, C.S.		16
75.	The Hon'ble Mourer Strajul	Islam
r	Khan	•••	16
76	Moulvi Serajuddeen	•••	15
77.	Abul Hasan, Esq.,	• • • •	15
~ X	H. A. D. Phillips, Esq. C s.		10
79.	Baboo Kiran Chunder Roy		10
. ao.	E. N Baker, Esq	•••	10
81.	Baboo Doyal Chand Bose	•••	10
82	" Madan Mohun Bose	• • • •	10
83	"Kanai Lal-Khan	•••	10
84.	Moulvi Syud Akram Hossain		10
85.	Moulvi Aziz Ahmud	•••	10
86	Rai Kanyelal Dey Bahadoor	•••	10
87	H Holmwood, Esq	•••	10
88	Baba Harry Mohan Chunder	•••	10
89.	Baboo Chakkanlal Roy	• • • •	5
90.	" Sarodaprasad Ghose	•••	5
Su	becriptions will be thankfully r	eceived	by the I	Ionorary Joint Secretaries,
RAI	RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI	BAHADI	JR,
	4, British Indian Street, C	Calcutta	,
	and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMA
	Barrister	aLaw,

"IMPROVED UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Rs.

16, Taltolia, Calcutta.

Quaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, smill, open faced, ickel silvern, keyless, short winding, pitent, NEW STYLE IMPROVED UNDAUNT "NEW STYLE IMPROVED UNDAUNT-ED" watch, with hand setting mechanism, secondhand, for Doctors, oroamental bold dial, for Rs. 7 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty bux and full three years' guarantee. Warranted to stand the rough-est use. Ruis more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily re-pairable. Others sell at double our rates. One works for service in processes of 84 at a time. panable. Others sell at double our rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Juo. Dickson of Haputal Railway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps solendid time and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jerks. x Dr. H. Moore of Royal Artillery from Pounamallee says:—It sold it for Rs. 16. x Pte. W Hopkins of Sussex Regt. from Dumidum says:—I have sold it for Rs. 20. x Mr. T. B. Scott of Patina Opum Department says:—The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time. Jawallad Ring Rs. 1.8-0. Real partment says:—The water you seen become some some seven years ago is still keeping very good time.

Jewelled Ring Re. 1-8-0. Real
Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real
Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty electro cased gold chain Re. 1-8-6.
Fashionable electro cased Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, at Re. 18-0 Mt. G. Smith, Sit Inspector from Samkutia, says: "A German valued the diamond ring at Rs. 50 and ruby at Rs. 30." Key winding, Government stamped, solid silver hunting case, Royal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee, for Rs. 13. Pte G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light Infantry from Purandhar says.—For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Sergeant for Rs. 38. Pte. H. C. Bishop of I, F. L. Regt. from Kamptee says:—A Corporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch, Gentlemen's open faced, keyless real solid gold watch Rs. 30; ladies' Rs. 24; both with extras and men's open faced, keyless real solid gold watch
Rs. 30; ladies! Rs. 24; both with extras and guaranteed for 3 years. Mind they are guranteed to be of teal sond gold. No agents kept,
all goods sent only by us from Bombay
per V. P. P.
WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO.,
BOMBAY.

CATARRH.

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness.
A NEW HOME TREATMENT. Sufferers are not generally aware that these Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagrows, or that they are due to the presence of hiving parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to the a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these distressing diseases are rapidly and pormanently cured by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUTTON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORONTO, Canada. Scientific American

"IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who suffer find sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and suffering: while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most chronic form

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief ın

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the Are you surpers to truers of TOOTHACHE? A single application will relieve you.

In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the speak for itself.

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Physicians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of homes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar pre-paration has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at I Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throughout the world

Agents in Calcutta : Smith Stanistreet & Co R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Bathgate & Co. Limited.

REIS & RAYYET (PRINCE AND PEASANT)

WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

ND

rnew of Politics Literature, and Society RATES OF SUBSORIPTION. If paid in advance.

Yearly	•••		Rs	12
Half-vearry			11	7
Quarterly	•••			4
Montney	•••		Κe.	1.8
Single or sample	Copy	•••	Ans.	0-8
It no	t paid in a	ivance.
Yearly	·	•••	Rs.	18
Half-yearly	•••		,,	10-8
Quarterly	•••			6-0
Monthly			"	2-4
Single or sample	Сору	•••	Ans.
No additional	cnarge for	postage	or p	eor

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each insertion. The lowest charge for any advertisement

tion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5.

Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphlets communications and books and pamphlets (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayyet."

OFFICE: 1, Uckoor Dut's Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutta.

16

DROIT ET AVANT.

(PRINCE ئئ PEASANT

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

REVIEW POLITICS O F LITERATURE SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 676.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

THE PASSING OF MUHAMMAD, PROPHET OF ARABIA. A DRAMATIC SKRTCH BY SIR EDWIN ARNOLD. (Concluded from page 230.)

MUHAMMAD-

Ayesha! Ayesha!

Hath yet Osama marched?

AYESHA-

My Lord ! sweet Lord !

He stands without, waiting to speak farewell. MUHAMMAD-Cover your faces, then, and bid him come.

(OSAMA enters, and, kneeling by the couch, kisses the sick man's face.)

OSAMA-Prophet! how fierce a fever burneth thee!

MUHAMMAD-I sweaffby Him in whose hand lies my life, There suffereth no believer but his woes Cause sing to shed away, as the hot wind Strips dend leavs off, that bew green leaves may grow. I, here consuming, cheat my fever's flame Praising the Lord : but thou, why tarriest thou? Smite me the unbelievers ! Fall at dawn Upon those dogs of Obna! Let attack Sound the first tidings of thee ! Send forth scouts, And Allah give thee victory! Guide my palm

(OSAMA departs.)

My girl !

Where is that gold I gave into thy hands? Part it among the "people of the Bench," Heaven's poor ones.

That I may lay it on thy head, and leave A blessing there. Go in God's peace !

AVESHA-

Master ! 't is the last we have :

We owe for wood and sesamum.

MUHAMMAD-

Give ! Give !

That were ill done if I should meet my Lord With dinars in my hands. Maimuna ! reach My izar down. I hear the muezzin Calling to prayer ! Ka / ya / Ash 'had do an La illah 'l-lul-la-ho. Ye fajthful ! know There is no God save God: hya ul-as-salaat / Come unto prayer! Nay, nay! I have not force; I cannot stand; this fever burns my brain ! Lay me once more upon the camel-skin.

AYESHA-Sweet Lord | Thou doest ill to vex thy heart. Enough is wrought. Ah, rest ! Saith not the Book : " We have forgiven to thee all thy sins, The former and the latter "?

MUHAMMAD-

Except God's mescy cover with me grace, I that am called the Prophet of the Lord-I shall not enter into Paradise ! Hath vet Osâma marched ? I cannot ease Of this fierce aching till I hear his drums. Oh, set the door wide back. I faint ! I faint MAIMUNA-Make wet his holy lips with date-water, Zeinab! Fan quickly, Fatma! Ah, he swoons! Our Master's eyes are shut. He hath desired Too ardently to lead this evening prayer.

AYESHA-'T was Monday's Azan brought him to such poin Of mortal feebleness.

ZEINAB-I did not know.

How fell that, Abu Bekr's daughter?

Weak ---

Avesify—Though not, as now, to seeming death—he lay And I, who oft before in time of strait Heard him ask Allah for deliverance, Knelt heartsick by the bed, because he prayed Siying, "Oh, soul! my soul! why seekest@hou Another refuge than in God alone?" For then first did he no more crave to live.

ZEINAB-Inshallah !

But the morning broke, rose and gold, And the cool air was like a spring to drink, While on the ways the footfalls of the folk Made clatter, and the pigeons on the roof Cooed, and the well-ropes creaked, awakening him So, stronger for his sleep, -and hearing then, As now, the muezzin,-he would arise And gird himself to go. My father served Imam that day, and told us what befell.

ZEINAB-Impart it, sister !

All the mosque was filled To the corner flag-stones, and the first rakaat * Was finished, and the people stood to make The second form, when our Lord entered in. His arm about the neck of Abbas' son. Then, in the house of God, the weakness went : Glad grew his face; his wan lips smiled; he said Softly to Fadhl : " Allah granteth me Cooling of eyes by this good breath of prayer." And the folk parted on the right and left To make way for him to the mimbar-rail, Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, if possible, as the safest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

Where Abu Bekr would have yielded place But our Lord motioned " No," and on the mats Sate till my father ended morning prayer. Then he arose, and while the eyes of men Fed on his looks, and eager fingers caught His robe's hem to fond lips, he cried aloud, The fever crimson in his cheek, his mouth Dry with the blast of death, and this dear brow Shadowed with Azrael's overhanging wing ! Yes-Abu Bekr said-he gazed around, And spake: " Men of Medina, where I lived Coming and going, testifying God, I shall die soon! I pray ye, answer me: Is there among ye here one I have wronged? I have borne rule, judging in Allah's name That am a man, and sinful. Have I judged Unrighteously, or wrathfully, or pressed Too hard in the amend? Let who saith 'Yea' Make his 'Yea' good before the people here, And I will bare my back that he may smite. I have borne testimony for the Truth, Not sparing sinners. Speak, if there be one Wronged by mine own misdoing. Let him shame His Prophet now telling the ill I wrought Before the assembly. I have gathered dues : Declare if I definaded any here Buying or selling."

And no answer came, Except the noise of sobs and weeping men Because our Lord spake thus.

But one arose,-A hamal,-with his cord across his back, And porter's knot (Zeinab! thou knowest him: "I is Hassan, from the last shop in the lane Behind the mosque), who cried: Abdullah's son! Three silver pieces owest thou to me For wood I bore thee after Ramadhan " And softly said our Lord : " Good friend ! much thanks Because thou didst demand thy money now, And not before the judgment-seat of God. Ill is it if men thither carry debts," Therewith he paid that debt, kissing the hand Wherein the dirhams dropped; and so came home To lay his head upon my lap-my lap ! But, Zeinab, look! Maimuna, look! Our Lord Stirreth anew! What saith he? Let me come! Avesha's ear shall know.

(Kneeling at the bedside)

Harkens, dear Master!

MUHAMMAD-

Give me drink, my girl!

Hath yet Osâma marched? Be those his drums?

I die—at last I die! Breathe on my eyes

And chafe my hands. Well wot I that I die.

Listen! this for thine ear—for thee alone:

(He speaks low to AYESHA.) Three days agone, Allah's high messenger Came to me,-Gabriel,-and he asked of me : " Servant of God! how is it with thee here?" " Trouble is with me, and sore agony," Replied I. Then he spake, "A little while Have patience "; and departed. Once again With selfsame speech he came, inquired, and I With the same words made answer. And again, Even now, whilst ye did watch, th' archangel stood Here, in thy room, -another shining one Behind him,-and he said: " Servant of God! This is the lord of death, great Azrael. He hath not sought before from any man Leave to come in, and never afterward Shall seek from any : but to-day he stands Waiting thy pleasure. Suffer that he come." Then spake I, " Enter, Allah's messenger !"

And Azrael said: "Muhammad, I am sent To take thy soul, if so thou wilt; or else, If so thou wilt, to leave thee whole again. I that command, am at command of thee." Whereon, a little pondering, I was 'ware Of Gabriel whispering, "Verily, our Lord Desireth thee." And thereupon I spake: "Do thou the will of Allah, Azrael!"

ZEINAB-What saith he, Ayesha?

AYESHA— Be still, be still !—
O Prophet of the Lord! Ah, Master, stay!

MUHAMMAD—Nay! take thy lips away—they cannot help.

Read, if thou canst, my Sura writ for death.

Kiss me no more, I sav,—Azrael's mouth
Is on my lips. O Allah, pardon me!

Join me with the companionship on high!

Hist! I see Paradise! O Gabriel, give

Thy hand a little more. I testify

There is no God but God!

(He dies.)

AYESHA-

Now, women cry!

Gone! our resource, our glory! Wel-wel-eh!
Our Lord is dead and gone! Ab, Wel-wel-eh!
-The Century Illustrated Monthly Magazine.

en moning magazine.

WEEKLYANA.

It is some time that a chemist had extracted a certain—quantity of gold in each ton of water in the ocean. Fresh water contains no such auriferous matter, but it is the salt waves commonly called "the briny" that are full of it. The latest announcement is that there are about 10,000,000 tons of gold in the various oceans, not taking into account the icebergs around the North and South Poles. The annual output of gold from the mines on dry land is estimated at 200 tons per annum. How enormous must the yield be from the briny waves! You may calculate that treasure to any figure, but to what purpose The sea holds richer gems in its treasure-caves and cells.

AT Sotheby's the autograph manuscript of the Rev. Gilbert White's "Natural History and Autiquities of Selborne, in the County of Southampton," was purchased by Mr. Pearson for 2941. The MS. contains many passages not printed in several editions, and has never been out of the possession of the lineal descendants of the author.

RIO DE JANEIRO being subject to yellow fever and open to maritime attacks, the Brazilian Government had appointed a Commission to choose a desirable site for the capital. The Commission recommends a plateau between the parallels of 15 deg. 40 sec. and 16 deg. 8 set South, and the meridians of 49 deg. 30 sec. and 51 deg. West. It is over 4,000 feet above the level of the sea, the temperature resembling that of middle France, with plenty of water for agriculture, and no yellow fever, the distance from the coast being only 9 hours' journey by rail. Supposing the selection is perfect, has the Commission calculated the cost of removal, let alone other matters to be considered in this connection?

In aid of the education of poor but respectable Bihar Mahomedan students, Mussamat Kaziman, widow of the late Kazi Syed Reva Hossein, Khan Bahadur, of Patna, has offered to create an endowment of Rs. 10,000. One-half of the proceeds of the sum is to go to the Patna Collegiate School, the other half being intended for the Mahammadan Anglo-Arabic School, Sadikpur. The trustees will settle the amounts to be awarded to any student. The widow will manage the endowed property till her death when the Bengal Government will assume the trusteeship.

THE Hon'ble Mr. C. C. Stevens has obtained one month's leave from the 27th May. During his absence, the other Member, the Honorable Mr. D. R. Lyall will alone represent the Board of Revenue, that 15 doing the duties of the other in addition to his own.

THE customs duty of 5 per cent. ad valorem, on spikes (commonly known as dog spikes) of iron and steel, other than the spikes mentioned in No. 93 of Schedule IV., has been reduced to one per cent. ad nalorem.

IN November, there will be an examination of locally selected candidates for the Bengal Pilot Service. At the same time, it is announced there will be only one vacancy.

FURTHER results of the Medical Examinations of the Calcutta University shew that five students have passed in the second Division of the Preliminary Scientific M. B. Examination. Seven who failed at the Preliminary Scientific M. B. and combined Preliminary Scientific and first M. B Examinations having attained the standard of the Preliminary Scientific L. M. S. Examination are declared to have passed that Examination. In the First M. B. one has passed in the First Division and five in the Second. In the Second M. B. only one name in the first Division and two names in the second are gazetted.

THE results of the Final or Diploma Examination of the Medical Schools in 1805, are :

Campbell Medical School	•••		53
Dacca Medical School	•••		50
Cuttack Medical School		•••	•
Temple Medical School (Patna)	•••		•

IT is notified that no transfer certificate issued by a high school, before its recognition by the Calcutta University, will be accepted for the purposes of the transfer rules for those schools, unless counter-signed by an Inspector of Schools. The list, the Notification continues, of recognized schools is given on pages 319-326 of the Calcutta University Calendar for 1895. Excepting that the notice appears in the icial gazette, there is no other mark of authenticity.

4E Times' correspondent at Tokio wrote that "The fight at Wei-Hai-Wei illustrates the importance of ships ainst well-constructed forts.

On this the Portsmouth Times remarked, it is an opinion which will find little support in the modern school naval tactics in England."

Whereupon the Army and Navy Gazette :

"We are not directly informed as to this 'school' of which our comporary speaks, nor is the connection between tactics and forts this matter quite clear, but we are strongly of opinion that all naval items will agree with the Times correspondent that ships are important to the control of th tagainst well-constructed, properly-equipped and efficiently-manned its. This is not a lesson taught solely by the businesss at Well-called, where the attacking ships were mere cruisers, but by ores of instances in the history of past wars. Wherever ships we beaten forts, the latter have been either improperly constructed, sufficiently equipped or badly manned."

The Times goes on to say :-

"According to experts like Admiral Colomb the erection of forts is "According to experts like Admiral Colomb the erection of forts is thing more than a sheer waste of money, and so long as England is a fleet at sea the coast is impregnible, whereas, should the emy's ships break through our fleets, they would have no difficulty batever in destroying the land defences. This view has been supportibly much ingenious reasoning, and had not the Chinese demonstratius fallacy the theory would probably have been generally accepted, it coast defences might speedily have sunk to a dangerous level."

The Gazette remarks :--

"We are not concerned to defend Admiral Colomb, though we do not We are not concerned to defend Admiral Colomb, though we do not sieve he has ever said or written anything that carries the meaning yen above. But the quotation we give shows that the writer in the ortimouth Times entirely misunderstands the contention of those ho hold that land defences cannot in the case of this contention, for, is the content of the content of the may both be cited as instances in support of this contention, for, is pile of the excellent forts at those places, they fell as the command the sea had passed into the Japanese hands. Fortifications are epilal things in their way, but it is impossible to fortify the whole bast line, whereas ships in sufficient numbers, forming a mobile force, and in spine of the seeming anomaly they can lead on this in the best possible manuer when at some distance from the place to be protected."

HE British Admiralty have issued a return giving a description of the warst-class cruisers, for which provision is made in the Navy Estides for 1895-96. It is as follows :-

When the statement of the First Lord explanatory of the Navy

Sumates for 1895-96 was presented, the designs for the four first-class

Sumates for 1895-96 was presented, the designs for the four first-class

Summers proposed to be laid down had not been completed, consequent details could not be furnished. Since that date these designs have been completed and approved by the Board. The principal dimenbeen completed and approved by the Board. The principal dimensions are as follows: Length between perpendiculars, 435ft.; length on the water-line, 455ft.; breadth, 69ft.; mean draught with keel, 25ft. 3m.; displacement, about $1,000$ tons. The armament will include fifteen 6m. quick-firing gins, fourteen twelve-punders, quick-firers, and twelve three-pounders, besides smaller machine gins. The torpeun armament will include two submerged unders and one stern tube. The protective arrangements to engines, builers, magazines, and other vital portions will be practically identical with those of the Powerful and Terrible. The new cruisers will also resemble the Powerful in the protection of the armament and the arrangements for the transport of the ammunition from the magazines to the fighting positions. They will resemble the Royal Arthur and Crescati in having for the transport of the ammunition from the magazines to the fighting positions. They will resemble the Royal Arthur and Crescent in having considerable height of freeboard, with a long forecastic. The steel hulls will be wood-sheathed and coppered, so that the vessels may keep the sea for long periods without serious loss of speed. The measured mile speed, with natural draught, will be about twenty and a-half knots, which should give, with the type of holder to be used, a continuous sea speed for smooth water and clean bottom of about nineteen knots an hour. Coal bunker capacity for about 2,000 tons will be provided, half of this being carried at the above-stated draught and displacement." and displacement.

The estimates provide also for new second-class cruisers. These vessels, of which there are four to be laid down, are to be 320ft. in length, with a breadth of 57ft., draught of water 22ft. and displacement 5,750 tons. These vessels will be built of steel, and will have a thick steel deck to protect the engines, boilers, magazines, &c. They will not be sheathed and are therefore for use in European waters. The armament will consist of 6in., 47in., and twelve-pounder quick-firing guns, arranged as in other recent secondclass cruisers. The 6in. guns will have a force and aft fire, while the 4.7in, and twelve-pounder guns will be on the broad-side.

NOTES & LEADERETTES, OUR OWN NEWS,

THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS ---

THE second and fourth divisions of the Japanese army remain in the Liaotung Peninsula. A brigade of the second division will garrison Wei-hai-wei. The remainder of the troops will return to Japan. The Imperial Guard proceeds to Formosa The Japanese resent the retrocession of the Peninsula. It is reported from Yokohama that newspapers are being suppressed for condemning it. In Russia, they are for further advantages, especially for the passage of the Siberian Railway to a port on the Yellow Sea, which idea implies the inclusion of Corea in the Russian sphere. Germany, Russia, and France have requested Japan to specify the precise amount of special indemnity for the Liaotung Peninsula. It is supposed that the question has been brought forward by the three Powers in order to hasten the withdrawal of the Japanese troops from the Liaotung mainland China objects to European control over her customs as security for a loan. A report is current at Shanghai that China has asked for an extension of time for the cession of Formosa, pending the submission of further proposals, and that the Japanese Government has refused the request. The Times publishes a telegram stating that Liching, son of the Vicerory Li-Hung-Chang, has been appointed Chinese Imperial Commissioner for handing over the Island.

In the House of Lords, on May 17, Lord Stanley of Alderley demanded protection for the silks of Great Britain similar to that given to cottons in India. Lord Kunberley replied that there was no protection for cottons in India, and that it was not the intention of her Majesy's Government to depart from the principle of free trade. We do not quite understand the report. Lord Stanley, who always looks to the interests of India, probably meant to draw particular attention to the injustice done to India by the recent financial measures.

THE Russian town of Brestlitovsk has been destroyed by fire. The population had retired to sleep when the fire broke out. As far as is known, thirty persons perished.

An earthquake has occurred in the neighbourhood of Florence, by which a number of people have been killed and injured, especially in the adjacent villages. Many of the latter have been partly reduced to tums. The panic-stricken inhabitants have taken to the fields and are suffering greatly from privation.

A TURKISH pilgrim vessel has been wrecked near Jeddah. She had on board over 700 pilgrims, all of whom were saved.

LORD Rosebery has returned from his yachting crusie with renewed health. Rumours of his early retirement have been renewed, and some excitement was caused in the lobby of the House of Commons on May 20, by the report that the Premier had resigned. It was a the same time rumoured that the dissolution of Parliament was immunent. The rumours of resigntion are discredited. Mr. Labouchere, in his Truth, urges the necessity of an early dissolution of Parliament, but before taking such a step, he says, Lord Rosebery must first be peplaced as Premier by Sir William Harcourt. Mr. Labouchere considers that the present headless condition of the Liberal party paralyses all action.

MR. Gladstone has accepted the invitation of Sir Donald Currie to attend the opening of the Kiel Canal on board the Tantallon Castle.

THE Scotch members are greatly annoyed at the delay with the Scotch Bills. Dr. McGregor, Liberal Member for Invernesshire, put several questions to Sir William Harcourt on Manday evening as to the intentions of Government regarding the progress of Scotch business, and became so displeased with the answers that he left the House in a huff and has resigned his seat.

REPLYING to Mr. Yerburgh, who asked for the inclusion of the districts of Usoga and Unyoro in the British protectorate over Uganda, Sir Edward Grey declined to entertain the proposal as an extension of the protectorate was not considered necessary.

THE first and second clauses of the Welsh Disestablishment Bill have passed through the Committee stage. The Government majorities in the various divisions ranged from eighteen to nine.

THE Committee of the House of Commons has rejected the contention of Earl Selbrone that he is entitled to retain his seat in the Lower Chamber in spite of his having succeeded to the peerage. He has hitherto sat in the House of Commons as Viscount Wolmer, Liberal Unionist Member for West Edinburgh. The Hon. Geo. N. Curzon strongly supported the claim of Earl Selborne.

THE jury have brought in a verdict of guilty against Alfred Taylor on two counts of the indictment charging him with acts of indecency. Sentence has been deferred. Wilde will be indicted separately.

A SCUFFLE took place in Piccadilly between the Marquis of Queensberyy and his eldest son Viscount Dumlanrig, in which the son got a black eye. Both were airested, charged before a Magistrate with disorderly conduct, and both bound down to keep the peace.

PRINCE Nasrullah has arrived in England. The Indian Marine stemar Clive carrying the Prince arrived at Spithead on the 23rd. He landed the next day at Portsmouth. An elaborate programme has been drawn up for the fitting reception of the son of England's loyal friend and ally, the Amir of Afghanistan. Sir Gerald Fitzgerald, Political Aide-de-Camp at the India Office, has been specially appointed to represent the Government. Dorchester House has been splendidly prepared for the guest's reception.

THE Prussian Diet has passed a resolution advocating the International regulation of currency with a view to the establishment of bimetallism, with an amendment providing that Germany shall only act in concert with Great Britain.

SIR Joseph Pease was yesterday to have moved a resolution asking the House of Commons to declare the opium revenue as morally indefensible and urging the suppression of the culture and sale of the drug except for medical purposes. The Times publishes an article strongly enjoining the Unionists to attend the division and defeat the attempt to derange the finances of India and meddle with the domestic habits of millions of people. A separate memorandum on the Opium Commission drawn up by the Maharaja of Durbhanga, has now been published.

LORD Salisbury, addressing a meeting at Bradford, reviewed the present position of Government, and said that the deadlock was due to endeavours to force through the House of Commons a series of Bills producing violent organic changes, when the party possessed a mere paltry majority.

SIR William Harcourt, speaking at a banquet at the Mansion House, admitted that great depression existed in all branches of trade and more notably in agriculture, but said that symptoms were visible of a revival of business and a general betterment of all classes. The Chancellor of the Exchequer also stated that Government was resolved to adhere unswervingly to the monetary principles which had made the United Kingdom the commercial centre of the world.

LORD Roberts has been created a Field Marshal and succeeds the Right Hon, Viscount Wolseley as Commander-in-Chief of the forces in Ireland

THE Tichborne Claimant has sworn an affidavit confessing that he is Arthur Orton. He was declared so by the courts in 1874. For all these years he had maintained againt all odds that he was the rightful owner of the Tichborne estates. What may mean the present affidavit? Is it intended to clear the way for another claim for which preparations are making? Or is it a case of stinging conscience:

YESTERDAY was the Queen's Birthday. It was no holiday, however, except the half holiday in the Bengal Secretariat, for the official observance has been fixed for this day. It was a gracious day all the same, we had a heavy shower of rain which was so much wanted It had other attractions. The Chairman of the Corporation gave a Garden Party at his residence which was well attended. If the rains interfered with the Evening Party of Babu Kali Prosono Dey of the National Magazine, it was the more enjoyable on that account.

THE shower of honours was reserved for this day. There is no knowing how it has fallen. There is no publication of the Honours in Calcutta though some of the morning papers give only an abridged mutilated list in their extraordinary numbers. We must wait till Tuesday next for the official gazette. Could not the Gazette Extraordinary be published simultaneously at Simla and the capital towns? The deserted metropolis must bear with this neglect.

SIR Charles Elliott had an attack of fever. He could not attend the dinner party at the Shrubbery Thursday last week.

THERE was an unusual stir in the Customs House on Wednesda A "Raja" had come on a visit to the Collector. He was well receive But his departure was a disappointment, for he had ordered no but to the orderlies who had only hisses when he left. If the official Collector can put his foot on the delinquencies, small and great, the huge establishment, he will have left a name.

MR. Patrick Mc Guire has ceased to have any connection with a District Charitable Society. He was a good Secretary so far collections went. But he was not regular in his attendance at a office. For that sin he pays heavily. All the paying posts he he has had to give up. There are several applicants for the vacaplace, including a native. It will be the first experiment, if a Bi be accepted.

As was expected, the Calcutta Corporation has re-elected Babu Surt dranath Banerjee for the Bengal Council. He won by 41 vot against his rival's 23. Although Mr. Banerjee outdistanced 3 Mitter by 18 votes, the votes in his favour on the last occasion as about half a dozen more.

THE Indian Daily News, in referring to the rule of Damdupat that still applied in the Original side-of both the Calcutta and Bombo High Courts in suits between Hindus and that prevents the meet from exceeding the principal, coins the word "Dandupat." What's the etymology of Damdupat, there is little likehood of its life confounded with Dandupat or, better still, Dandubat, Indian man are very generally puzzing to ordinary Europeans who have next the memory to remember nor the ability to pronounce them.

HERE is a pretty muddle about exchange compensation :

"An interesting complication in connection with exchange compen-sation has cropped up in Perak. Truth distinguishes it as a more successful muddle than that of the Government of India. Compensasuccessful muddle than that of the Government of India. Compensa-tion allowance, it appears, was sanctioned to its railway employés by the Government of Perak. Furthermore, the first instalment was paid to them. The Governor, however, refused to sanction the processing, and ordered a refund of the amount received. An attempt was unade to carry out the order in the usual practical way, by cutting it in instal-ments from the following pay bills; but this was met by a refusal on the part of the employees to accept the amounts so mulcted. Here for the present the matter rests, and whether it will result in a strike, or a lowestic or a compromise of substructural distribute, does not ver appear. lawsuit, or a compromise of gubernatorial digity, does not yet appear. The circumstance that the first or any instalment of compensation allowance should have been paid without the Governor's sanction is very remarkable, however, and in this connection it may be as well to remember the hospitality of Truth to Eastern tales generally."

To take the materials of the paragraph from Truth and then to impeach the accuracy of that journal, is very much like picking a pocket in the crowd and then impeaching the owner as a man capable of carrying alse coin that may throw the picker into trouble. The fact is, superior officials of Government frequently act in anticipation of sanction. Their hopes are seldom frustrated. It is only in exceptional instances that a measure, thus carried out, is disallowed. We may be sure that if the inconvenience is properly represented, sanction will be accorded to what has been already done. None of the men will, at the end, have to actually refund the allowance drawn.

IT is said that the fortune of Iay Gould's daughter. Countess de Castellane, is to be fiteen million dollars, that of the Duchess of Mariborough seven millions, Mrs. Ralph Vinian, once Mrs. Marshall O. Roberts, is credited with six millions, and the Duchess de Campofelice, widow of Isaac Singer, of sewing machine fame, the Princess Colonna, once Miss Mackay, the Princess Hatzfeldt, Cyrus Huntington's daughter, and the Marchioness de Mores, are each said to have brought five million dollars to their husbands. Will somebody with abundant leisure count what the fortunes are of herresses bestowed in marriage within the last twelve years in Calcutta and its suburbs? We believe, not one will be found worth even a million of dollars en her own right. Even when wealthy fathers marry their daughters here, they waste in useless expenditure sums of money much larger than what they are able to give as dower. They indulge in this folly partly because it is an ancestral custom from which there can be no deviation without incurring great obloquy, but partly also from their weakness and vanity.

HERE is bad news for the unco' good :-

"The prosecution of Mr. Aronson, manager of the Casino Theatre New York, in connection with an exhibition of living pictures to in New York, in connection with an exhibition of living pictures to which objection had been taken, continues. The performance at the theatre has, for some time past, concluded with a series of living statues, single or in groups, the persons representing the statues or groups weating close-fitting suits of a bronze colour. Some of the Reform Societies of the city found the living statues objectionable, and legal stops were taken to suppress them. Miss Bessie Stanton, the young lady who appears as the living statue to which most exception had been taken, was conducted to a private apartment additionary the young lady who appears as the fiving statue to which most co-had been taken, was conducted to a private apartment adjoinin court room, where she exchanged the costume she was wearing f close-fitting bronze dress she appears in highly at the Casino. was placed on the witness-stand, and her presence in this attree created a sensation in the crowded court. The charge was at once dismissed. The crowd in the street outside cheered Mr. Atonson as he got into a carriage and was driven away."

Really, such efforts to protect the "morals" of society must excite the laughter of sensible men if they do not provoke indignation. Society is honey-combed by vice of every description. It is only when opposition to vice leads to the acquisition of cheap notoriety that it enlists the sympathies of the unco' good.

THE interest taken in the nauseous details of divorce cases is generally so keen that even ladies of culture repair to such trials in order to learn everything at firsthand. No doubt, the practice prevails of shutting the doors of the court room and hearing the witnesses after excluding the public, but in most cases this cannot be done. Newspapers are sometimes prosecuted for giving verbatim reports of proceedings that are disgusting for their obscenity. But there are reporters and reporters. With slight literary dexterity, the requirements of the law may be observed, and yet the accounts may be made more "juicy" as the Indian expression goes. Sometimes careful omissions appeal more strongly to the imagination than round unvarnished accounts setting forth all the facts. The Oscar Wilde case doubled the circulation of some evening papers. The second trial did the same. So far as our Judges are concerned, unable to check the morbid curiosity these proceedings provoke, they act with a wisdom that nobody can find fault with. Read the following :-

wisdom that nobody can find fault with. Read the following:—
"Mr. Justice Hond, who presides in the Divorce Court at Melbourne, recently remarked in answer to an appeal made to him "if ladies come to a Divorce Court they know what to expect. I will not order anybody out of court." This puts an old Australian journalist in mind of an incident which happened in Melbourne twenty years ago. There was a case coming on in which some unwholesome details were expected to be disclosed, and Mr. Justice Barry was the Judge. The courthouse was crowded, and among the visitors was a large percentage of women. On the case being called upon, the Judge remarked, 'I think it would be better if ladies would leave the court.' There was a rustle of dresses, and it was thought there would under such circumstances, be it would be better if ladies would leave the court. There was a rustle of dresses, and it was thought there would under such circumstances, be a general exodus of the fair sex, but the 'rustling' only meant that the fair ones had more firmly settled themselves in their seats. The Judge paused for a few moments, and then remarked in a dignified manner: 'Perhaps I was not heard or did not make myself sufficiently understood. I suggested that, perhaps, it would be better if in this case all ladies left the court.' Still there was not a move, and after another pause, His Honour observed sternly: 'I suppose I must have been mistaken, but I was under the impression that there were some ladies in the court—proceed with the case Mr. Crown Prosecutor.' That proved too much for the ladies and very soon there was not a petitionat in the court." was not a petticoat in the court."

Yes, it was a dignified rebuke, and the Judge had every right to administer it under the circumstances.

OUR readers have seen the apology by which the Editor of the Bengal Times has made peace with Babu S. P. Sucar of the Subordinate Executive Service. Hauled up before a Criminal Court, the Editor, instead of defending himself, thought it proper to affix his signature to the document, presented to him by the complainant's lawyers. They who were responsible for drafting of the document must be regarded to have overshot the mark. The apology is, not the sincere expression of regret which a gentleman feels when convinced of his error in respect of a man he has injured. It is, on the contrary, an unnatural document that shows the spirit of the men who found Mr. Kemp under their power and who were, on that account, disposed to maket he most of the novel situation. Utterly helpless as Mr. Kemp was, he could not but submit to the demand of the prosecution. We suppose that if instead of such an acknow ledgment of the unfoundedness of the aspersions, in the Bengal Times, on the character of Bibu Sircar, they had added some expressions indicative of Mi. Kemp's belief in the Blavatsky miracles or in the existence of a submarine kingdom in the Pacific whose princess daily transformed heiseif into an Engle for soaring aloft in the welkin and then changed herself into a being weighing just a hundred maunds, Mr. Kemp would all the same have signed it, relying on the sense of those who read the document for understanding what it truly meant. Attemus Ward, while crossing the great desert, fell into the hands of the Ute Indians. They were splendidly mounted, they were dressed in beaver skins, and they were aimed with rifles, knives, and pistols. Led by his captors to their chief, Artemus cried,-"Great Chief, I surrender." His name was Wocky-bocky. He dismounted and approached Artemus-who saw the tomahawk glistening in his hand and a fire blazing in his eye. Seizing the golden locks of the captive, the Chief said,-" Torsha arrah darrah mishky bookshean!" Artemus was not disposed to contradict but at once said that he was right. Wocky-bocky rubbed his tomahawk on the face of the captive and exclaimed,-"Wink-ho-loo-boo !" Artemus said,-" Mr. Wocky-bocky, I have thought so for years and so's all our family." Such prudence saved the humourist's life. We suppose, Mr. Kemp has acted in the same way. To sign such a document is quite different from expressing real guef upon conviction of wrong-doing.

Wx read that-

"The Empress of Austria dislikes to sit in a room where there are flowers. When she last visited England, some few years back, the manageress of her hotel thoughfully decorated her apartments with the choicest blooms and plants obtainable. When, however, the royal steward came upon the scene, he was hornfied. 'Pray take these things away at once, madam, 'said he, 'and do not let the Empress see a single petal. She cannot endure flowers!' So the entire staff of the establishment had to set to work to remove the adornments before the royal lady arrived."

It is a strange taste that avoids flowers which are, perhaps, the best offerings of vegetable nature to min. From the earliest times flowers have been so prized by man that he has thought them deserving of being presented to his divine Miker. One of the names of the flower in Sanskrit is Sumanar, implying something that makes the mind cheerful. It surely argues a diseased temperament to be unable to bear the sight of flowers. One may be unable to bear the sight or that flower in particular, but the inability to bear the sight or the smell of flowers in general surely proves that all is not right with either the body of the mind.

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, May 25, 1895.

SIR SEYMOUR KEAY VINDICATED.

The Competition Wallah is the name of a weekly publication emanating from not an enviable quarter. The professed object of our infant contemporary is "To interest: to instruct: to inform." It is no organ of the Civil Service. But the self constituted advocate of that Service has assumed the functions of a political Attorney-General for the Government of India and, by virtue of his new office, has been of late making exhibitions which are highly amusing.

The main burden of the Competition Wallah's invectives fell of late on Sir Seymour Keay who, at the last sessions of the Indian Congress, had probed some of the sores of British rule in India. It is curious to note that in the whole course of his criticism, our contemporary never deviated into sense, and, whether consciously or unconsciously, missed altogether the drift of Sir Seymour's speech. The Resolution which he moved was in the following terms:—

"That this Congress, concurring in the views set forth in previous Congresses, affirms: That fully fifty millions of the population, a number yearly increasing, are dragging out a miserable existence on the verge of starvation, and that in every decade, several millions actually perish by starvation; and humbly urges, once more, that immediate steps be taken to remedy this calamitous state of affairs."

Sir Seymour established this charge against the Government of India not by relying entirely upon official admissions, but by showing deductively that the inevitable result of the present system of administration is the impoverishment of the country. He said:—

"Gentlemen, allow me to give you a general summary of a Parliamentary return which I was able to obtain on my motion three yaars ago. It is a return showing respectively the number and emoluments of the European and the Native officers employed in the Indian Government, receiving pay at Rs. 1,000 a year and upwards. That return shows that while, if you exclude the rank and file of the European soldiers, there are only 70,000 Europeans in the whole of this wast country, yet, of these 70,000 Europeans in less than 28,000 hold Government posts worth over 83, 1,000 a year. What is the total of their pay? These 28,000 Europeans araw as pay the enormous sum of no less than 15½ crores of Rupees a year! Worse still, Gentlemen, the return shows that of these 28,000 Europeans no less than 33 per cent., that is to say, 1/3rd part of the whole, although they are quartered upon your revenues, reside not in India but in England (Hear hear)! In other words, they are absolutely non-effective for your Government. And the amount of pay or rather pension which these absentees receive comes actually to 6 castes of Rupees at this moment every year from the Government of India but to the Natives who receive pay from the Government of India exceeding Rs. 1,000 yeat. Well I have already mentioned that there are only 70,000 Europeans, but there are not only 70,000 of you. There are 287 millions of you the natives of India. Yet of the whole 287 millions of Natives, there are only 17,000 persons employed in the whole Empire at a pay of over Rs. 1,000 a year (Shame). What do these 17,000 draw? These 17,000 draw actually only 3 crores of Rupees amongst the whole of them. In other words, what you have got is this:—the absentee Europeans actually draw from the revenues of your country more than double the whole amount of the whole salary of the whole of the Natives who are allowed to enter into the administration of their on y country!"

Our clevel contemporary quietly passes over the main bearings of the figures quoted and, with the energy of despair, clutches at some very trivial omissions on the part of Sir Seymour. It says:

trivial omissions on the part of Sir Seymour. It says:

"The figures (given by Sir Seymour Keay) are downright dishonest in their accuracy; for 287 millions include men, women and children, whereas 70,000 do not. If the 70,000 Europeans in India—in civil life of course—similarly included all ages and both sexes, less than one quarter only would be available to hold high office. Then again the suggestio falit that the 287 millions of India are on an educational par with the resident Europeans, and that the Indian population could furnish high officials in the same proportion with the latter is so threadbare that it speaks volumes on the danger of dangling figures and statistics before minds so densely inept as those turned loose on Indian society by the State-education Fiend."

Such criticism cannot possibly require any rejoinder, and we might safely leave it to our readers to form their own opinions as to the direction in which dishonesty lies. It is news to us, and must be so to our readers, that the European residents in India are all well educated adults, living either in a state of single blessedness, or in lonely separation from their wives and children housed in Europe. Even granting, out of deference to the infallible authority of our "instructor" and "informer" that such is the case, the addition of 70,000 wives (we cannot add more, since polygamy is impossible under English law) and 280,000 children (r. e., 4 a piece on the average) would not appreciably affect the comparison, or the force of the argument based on it.

What the Competition Wallah professes to say as to the educational superiority of his clients as compared with Indian peoples; may be admitted to have an element of truth. But the question is not whether the English as a nation are not better educated than the peoples of India taken collectively? The only question which can have any relevancy is whether it is not possible to find as good men among the natives of India as those that now enjoy the loaves and fishes of the Indian Services. If our Competition Wallah's clients are all conscious of being educationally superior to us, why do they not, like ourselves, insist upon fair field and no favour? The fierce opposition of the Anglo-Indians to every proposal for simultaneous examination clearly shows that, even with the advantage of English being their mother tongue, they cannot hope to beat us in open competition.

The Competition Wallah speaks of State-education as a Fiend. Supposing it to be really so from the point of view of our rulers, may we ask whether it has been conjured up with British money, and for philanthropic purposes only? It seems to us that the machinery of the British Government in India cannot work for a single day without the armies of clerks, post-masters, railway station-masters, and telegraph signallers turned out by our English schools and colleges. The fact is that State education is not a fiendish enemy but the guardian angel of the rulers. The schools and colleges set up in the country have done more to safeguard and consolidate British rule than even its powerful standing armies and Police. The hankering after University distinctions which has been generated by English education has destroyed every other kind of ambition in Indian youths. This result is deplorable indeed from the point of view of national prosperity, but is certainly a great and unexpected gain to the rulers. If similar aspirations be ever generated in the minds of the youths in the frontier districts, India would he perfectly safe from the possibility of internal commotions. At any rate, as the small amount of money that is now spent in fostering English education is derived from the Indian taxpayers, no Britisher can have any right to charge us with ingratitude, or to pose as a person wronged by the recipients of his charity. The position of Government is, that of a guardian who has spent, for his own benefit or that of his kith and kin, the greater portion of the income of his ward, and who, when called upon by his ward for an account, charges him with undutiful conduct, for making use of the education given to him, in pressing his claim for past damages, or in order to restrain future devastation.

ROBERT HEATLY HOLLINGBERY.

THE East Indian community is poorer by the death of one more of its Worthies. Mr. Robert Heatly Hollingbery died at the Howrah General Hospital at the age of 70, full of years but not of honours. Though no Patriot or Bard, or Colonel or Major, he was nonetheless a hero and deserves a niche in the gallery of Ricketts, Derozio, Skinner and Hearsey. Born of poor parents, he had not the advantage of school education. But he had natural parts and had improved them in the hard struggle for existence. At the early age of 18, he was compelled to earn his own livelihood. Entering the office of the Military Auditor General on a small pay, he ended as Assistant Secretary to the Government of India in the Financial Department, on a salary of Rs. 2,000 a month. He was very hard-working, shrinking from no labour which, indeed, was a pleasure to him. Night brought him no test. In his bed he would be occupied with his papers till the small hours. The late Babu Shama Charan Dey, Assistant Comptroller General, used to say of Mr. Hollingbery that he had not in his whole experience known another more laborious. During the incumbency of Mr. Lushington as Financial Secretary, Mr. Hollingbery was the de facto Secretary to the Government of India in the Financial Department. So useful had he made himself that no financial scheme was passed that had not his approval. His quickness of perception and rapidity of execution had made him invaluable to his employers. The more versatile Sir Richard Temple could not too move a step without him. In every difficulty he would take his advice and be guided by him. He would make him sie before him, take notes of what he said, read to him what he had taken down and adopt the suggestions as his own. The Government of India has always been in want of funds. On one occasion Sir Richard Temple ran up to him and wanted him to devise a scheme for raising money without fresh taxation. It may seem strange that the Whipping Act was the outcome of a financial measure. Yet so it was. Mr. Hollingbery had fixed upon it as a means to reduce the expenditure in jails. He would openly say to his friends that he had succeeded in getting half the population flogged to save the Government of India from a financial crisis. At one time Lord Northbrook having need of his services and intending to instruct him personally, wished that he might be present at the dinner. But Mr. Hollingbery's name not being in Government House list, Mr. Chapman, the then Financial Secretary, asked Mr. Hollingbery to call at Government House to qualify himself for the honour. Needless to say that he gave every satisfaction to the Viceroy. He not only finished the special work before the allotted time but did it in addition to his current duties, though orders had been issued for relieving him. He was an authority in matters relating to land and | bread, and died a pauper.

currency, on both of which, he wrote largely. The Zemindary Settlement of Bengal will remain a standing monument of his industry and research, Though superseded by Dr. Hunter's Bengal MSS., it will continue a charter of the Bengal Zemindars. When he set to work on these volumes it was to curb the pretensions of the Zemindars, but such was the strength of their cause and such his own adherence to truth, that he finished by siding with the Permanent Settlement. Argumentative and strong in facts, he was fearless as a writer. On one occasion, when no longer in service, he submitted a memorial on behalf of a Native Chief to the Government of India, in the Foreign Department, in which he is reported to have written "that if this occurrence had taken place fifty years back, the Raja would not have appealed to the sense of justice of His Excellency the Viceroy, but would have appealed to arms and fifty thousand swords would have jumped out of their scabbards." He was taken to task for this outrageous outspokenness, and had, we believe, to leave Rajputana, where he had set up as a political petition writer

He was not strong only in his own department of special knowledge. He successfully combatted the Public Works Department on an useless expensive project as a famine relief work in the days of Lord Lytton. A Divisional Bench of the Bengal High Court had held that Mourbhanj, in the Gurjat Mahals, Orissa, was part of British India. Mr. Hollingbery who was entrusted with the case for the Raja, drafted a letter proving that it was not so. The High Court in Full Bench upheld the contention and, overruling the previous order, advised the Bengal Government to pass a short Act declaring the Mahals British India.

Mr. Hollingbery was born, lived, and died, poor. Very little of his respectable income was spent on himself. His food was simple and he indulged in no luxury. Nursed in the lap of adversity, his purse was always open for the relief of distress and for accommodation of poor relations and friends. On their account he ran into debt, and came to grief. But his dealings were honourable. When arrested for debt and brought before the High Court in its Original Jurisdiction, and asked by the presiding Judge why he did not take the benefit of the Act, he made no answer and quietly went to Jail. Having failed to repay his creditors, he felt that he must suffer. In the Jail he had the satisfaction of being able to befriend two of the fellow lodgers out of the forced home. He obtained their liberty by appealing to certain Christian Institutions which paid off their debts. A portion of his income went regularly in aid of the Doveton College Fund when it was low. While his heart bled for the poor and the struggling, his hand knew not to strike. He was exceptionally kind to his assistants and would never punish them if he could help it. He used to say that office clerks are taught to tell lies by the harshness of their superiors.

On his retirement, forced on by his imprisonment, he was granted a special pension of Rs. 500 a month. Following a precedent, he had applied for a bonus. But the Government of Lord Lytton would not sanction it for the benefit of his creditors. A special pension was therefore recommended. It was as useful to himself as the bonus, if granted, would have been, for he had set it apart for repayment of debts. Out of service, he had, therefore, to work for his

WHERE WAS ZOROASTER'S NATIVE PLACE?

BY PROFESSOR A. V. WILLIAMS JACKSON.

of Colombia College, New York City.

(From the Journal of the American Oriental Society.)

WITH regard to the native place of the founders of three of the great Oriental religions---Buddhism, Confucianism, Mohammedan-ism---the authorities are mostly in agreement; with reference to Zoroastrianism, however, the case is far different. Among the ancient Greeks and Romans we are told that seven cities claimed to he the birth-place of the poet Homer; if we take into account the various opinions on the question of the native country of the prophet Zoroaster, the same may also be said of him. The ques-tion in regard to Zoroaster's home is one of interest, for with it is connected the question where we are to place the cradle of the Mazdean religion. The subject has given rise to the liveliest dispute.

Arguments have been brought forward by some to show that we must place the home of Zoroaster in the east of Iran, in Bactria; he is accordingly often styled "the Bactrian sage." By others it is he is accordingly often styled "the Bactrian sage." By others it is claimed that he came from the west of Iran, or rather from Media, some say from Persia. In spite of these contradictory views, the difficulty may be overcome, it is believed, and the problem may be solved, if the subject be looked at in its right light. Both sides are in part wrong, both sides in part right. The fallacy, it may at the outset be stated, lies in assuming that the scene of the propher's real activity and of his mission must likewise have been his native place. It is with this word of caution in mind that all the statements and theories on the subject will here be examined, and the endeavour will be made to clear away the difficulty. will be made to clear away the difficulty.

The authorities of antiquity to whom we may look for information on the subject and whose statements form the source from which our views are deduced, are---a. Classical: b. Oriental.

The principal passages have already been collected by Windischmann, Zoroattrische Studien, p. 270 ff.; but some points in the later tradition have been overlooked. As important deductions may be drawn from these latter, it is useful to add them, and to arrange anew all the material that bears as evidence on the subject. The allusions to the country of Zoroaster we may therefore take up in detail, presenting, first, statements referring to Bactria, or the east of Iran; second, allusions to Zoroaster as belonging in the west, in Media or Persia.

A. CLASSICAL AND NON-IRANIAN.

1. Bactria -- Eastern Iran.

The following allusions in the classic writers of Greece and Rome show that Zoroaster was thought of as a Bactrian, or at least as exercising his activity in the east of Iran.

The authority of the historian Ktesias (B. C. 400) is quoted by Diodorus Siculus (1st century A.D.), ii. 6, for the statement that Ninus, with a large army, invaded Bactria, and with the aid of Semiramis gained a victory over King Oxyartes. See Fragm. of the Peruka of Ktenas, ed. Gilmore, p. 29.

Fragments of Kephalion (A.D. 120), preserved in Eusebius, Chron. i. 43, ed. Aucher, describe the rebellion of Zoroaster the Magian, the king of the Bactrians, against Semiramis: de Zoroastri Magi Bactrianorum regis debellatione a Semiramide. See Spiegel, Eranuthe Alterbumkunde, i. 676. In agreement with this is also cited Eusebius (A. D. 300), Chron. iv. 35, ed. Aucher, Zoroattes Magus rex Bactrianorum. Add to this, Eusebius, Proparatio Evang. x. 9, according to which statement also Zoroaster the Magian ruled over the Bactrians.

Similarly Theon (A.D. 130 t), Progymnamata 9 (Peri Syngrites, ed. Spengel, Rhat. Grac., p. 115), in connection with Semiramis, speaks of "Zoroaster the Bactrian." See also Windischmann, Loroastrische Studien, p. 290.

Justin (A.D. 120), moreover, in his Hist Phillippic. i. 1, distinctly makes Zoroaster the opponent of Ninus, and says that he was king of Bactria : Postremum illi bello cum Zoroastre rege Bactrianorum fuit, qui primus dicitur artes magicas invenisse et mundi principia siderumque motus diligentissime spectasse. See Gilmore, Ktesias' Persika, p. 29.

In like manner Arnobius (A.D. 297), Adversus Gentes i. 5, men tions a battle between the Assyrians and the Bactrians, under the leadership respectively of Ninus and Zoroaster, inter Assyrios et Bac-

DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of all kinds. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. The system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the public. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Street, Westminster, London, S. W.

trianos, Nino quondam Zoroastreque ductoribus. See Gilmore, Kicsias, p. 36. A parallel statement, Zoroastres... Bactrianus, in Adv. Gent. i. 52, confirms the view that Arnobius regarded Zoroaster as a Bactrian.

Two later but independent classical authors rightly place Zoro-aster under a King Hystaspes (i. e. Vishtaspa, Gushtasp), and one of these distinctly calls him a Bactrian. These are Ammianus Marcellinus (5th century A. D.), and Agathias (6th century A. D.). Ammianus, xxiii. 6. 32, p. 294, ed. Ernest, says: cui scientiam seculo prices multa ex Chaldeorum arcans Bactrianus addidit Zoroastres; deinde Hystaspes rex prudentissimus Darii pater. Both these writers therefore recognize, not as a king, but as the founder of a religion under a king Hystaspes. Ammianus does indeed identify Hystaspes (Vishtaspa, Gushtasp) with the father of Darius; but Agathias properly observes that the Persians do not make it clear whether by the name Hystaspes we are to understand the father of Darius, or another Hystaspes.

This concludes the list of classical authors that refer to Zorozster as a Bactrian, or to that region as the scene of his prophetic activity. Let it be observed that the majority of the seasons with King of him as a king; this doubtless is due to confusion with King Vishtaspa (Hystaspes), under whom he flourished. Doubts may be allustions really refer to the founder Let it be observed that the majority of the statements of the Mazdean faith; there can be little question, however, that the allusions are intended for him, whatever may be the time at which they may suppose him to have lived.

Having thus considered the views pointing to Bactria, we may turn to those suggesting the west of Iran, Media or Persia, as the home of the prophet.

2. Media or Persia --- Western Iran.

The following allusions in the classics unanimously mention Zoroaster in connection with the west of Iran.

Clemens Alexandrinus (A. D. 200) sometimes speaks of Zoroas-Clemens Alexandrinus (A. D. 200) sometimes speaks of Zorosater as a Mede, but sometimes as a Persian. The latter allusion we find in his Stromata, i. 357, where he makes Pythagoras one of his followers. The accuracy of the statement in regard to Pythagoras is of course extremely questionable. See Windischmann, Zorosatriche Studien, p. 263. On another occasion Clemens identifies Zorosater with Er, the son of Armenius, a Pamphylian. This would place Zorosater in Asia Minor. See Windischmann, Zor.

Stud., p. 27 note, referring to Stromata, v. 711.

Pliny the Elder (A.D. 23-79), in his Hist. Nat. xxx. 1, 2, makes Zoroaster's native land even further west, in Proconessus, the island in the Propontus. See Windischmann, Zor. Stud., p. 299.

Hermodorus, the disciple of Plato, quoted by Diogenes Laertes.

Proem. 2 ad init., speaks of Zoroaster as a Persian.
Suidas in his Lexicon terms Zoroaster a "Perso-Median." This point also is worth noticing.

The Armenian Moses of Chorene (A.D. 431), i. 16, makes Zoroaster a contemporary of Semiramis, and calls him "a Magian, the sovereign of the Medes." See Gilmore, Kteuas' Peruka, p. 30 note, and Spiegel, Eranische Alterthumskunde i. 682.

and opiegel, Bramisco Autrionmistanar 1, 1022.

Arguments have furthermore been brought forward to show that in the fragments that have been preserved of Berosus of Babylon (B.C. 250) mention is made of the name Zoroaster as a Median; but whether the founder of the religion is to be understood by this remains uncertain.

The classical references above, if viewed alone, appear surface extremely contradictory; and from them it would seem as if little could with certainty be deduced. Laying aside these as it little could with certainty be deduced. Laying aside these authorities, however, recourse may now be had to the more direct Iranian tradition. To this may be added one or two quite explicit statements from other Oriental, though non-Iranian sources. If these he carefully examined, we shall be surprised to find that there really is an agreement in references on the one hand to the field of Zoroaster's preaching, and on the other to his probable home. This will give us a new light in which to criticise the classical statements.

B. IRANIAN --- THE TRADITION.

1. Bactria --- Scene of Prophetic Career.

A study of the Avesta shows that most of the scenes described in that book are to be located in eastern Iran ; in the later Persian in that book are to be located in eastern frain; in the faster resistance epic, the Shah-Nama, also, it is in the east that Zoroaster's mission is carried on. Tradition also has it that the prophet ended his life in Balkh. These points all become significant when viewed in their right light. Before proceeding to draw conclusions, however, we must examine in detail what is said in the Avesta and other Zoroastrian works with regard to the first appearance of the prophet. This point is of importance.

2. Media, Atropatene --- Scene of the Prophet's Appearance.

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free,-Artificial Ear-drums and similar appliances entirely superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19. SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

Turning to the Zoroastrian books themselves, we find statements which plainly lead us to infer that the prophet really first appeared in the west of Iran, either in Atropatene or in Media prop

In the west of tran, either in Arropatene or in weeds proper.

The Bundahish places the home of Zoroaster in Iran Vej (Airyana Vaejub), by the river Darja, and adds the fact that his father's house stood on a mountain by that river. For instance:

Bd. xx. 32: Daraja rud pavan Airan Vej, munas man-i Porniap acidar-i Zaratuu pavan bar yebevund

'The Darja river is in Airan Vej, on a hill (bar) by which was the house of Porusbasp, the father of Zaratusht.' See also West,

Pablavi Texts transl., S. B. E. v. 82. Again, Bd. xxiv. 15: Daraja rud rudbaran rad, mamanas man-i abidar-i Zaratust pavan bala; Zaratust tamman zad The Daraja river is the chief of exalted rivers, for the dwelling of Zaratusht was upon its banks ; and Zoroaster was born there.

There can be little doubt that these unequivocal statements of the Bundahish rest upon good old tradition. The statements carry out in detail the lines found in the Avesta itself. In Vd. 4, 11, we also learn that the temptation of Zoroaster by Ahriman on the one hand, and the prophet's communings with Ormazd on the other, took place on a mountain by the river Darja, where was the house of his father Pourushaspa.

Vd. xix. 4: darejya patti zbarabi nmanabe Pourusa-pabe by the Darja, upon a mountain, at the home (loc. gen.) of Pourushaspa. Pourushaspa.

Vd. xix. 11: peresat Zaratbustro Aburem Mazdam...

[darejya patti zbarabi Aburai vanbave vohumaidke aonbano
Asu Vahistai, Khsathras Varyai, Spentayai Armatee]

Zoroaster questioned Alura Mazda... upon the hill by the Darja, praying to Ahura Mazda, the good, who is endowed with good, to Asha Vahishta, Khshathra Vairya, and Spenta Armaiti.

The reference to the 'hill,' Av. zbarab (Skt. bearas, Phl. bar Bd. xx. 32), is quite in accord with the tradition that Zoroaster retired to a mountain for meditation: cf. Vd. xxii. 19: garina are spento-frasmao, varieum avi spento-frasmao, toward the mountain of the help communion. the holy communion, toward the forest of the holy communion. Similarly elsewhere (see below) reference is made to Zoroaster's communings upon a mountain. Such prophetic meditations are Oriental. thoroughly

This river Darja we may perhaps localize; it may be identical with the river Darya, which flows from Mount Savellan (Sebilan) in Adarbijan (Atropatene) into the Aras or Araxes. So also Darmesteter, Zend-Avesta transl., S.B.E. iv., Introd. p. xlix. For the mesteter, Zend-Avesta transl., S.B.E. iv., Introd. p. xlix. For the Aras (Ataxes) see de Harlez, Avesta traduit, p. viii, map, and Phillip and Son's (London) map of Persia. If this identification be correct, the ancient Darja was in Media Atropatene.

Another explicit, although late and non-Iranian, tradition connecting Zoroaster with the region of Atropatene is found in Karwini. In this Arabic writer, Zoroaster is associated with Shiz., the capital of Atropetane. Consult Darmesteter, Zend-Avesta transl.. S.B.E. iv. Introd. p. xlix. where Pawlinson's identification transl., S. B. E. iv., Introd. p. xlix, where Rawlinson's identification of Shiz with Takhe-i Sulciman is noted. The passage from Kazwini (quoted from Rawlinson) reads: "In Shiz is the fire-temple of Azerekhsh, the most celebrated of the Pyrava of the Magi; in the days of the fire-worship, the kings always came on foot, upon pilgrimage. The temple of Azerckhsh is ascribed to Zeratusht, the tounder of the Magian, religion, who went, it is said, from Shiz to the mountain of Sebilan, and, after remaining there some time in the mountain of Sepilan, and, after remaining there some time in getirement, returned with the Zend-Avesta, which, although written in the old Persian language, could not be understood without a commentary. After this he declared himself to be a prophet." Thus far Kazwini.

The account here given, we observe, tallies accurately with the statements and suggestions made immediately above. In the Avesta, as above quoted, it was on a hill by the river Darja that Zoroaster communed with God. The hill (zbarab) or mountain (garri) thus referred to by the Avesta would answer to Kazwini's Mount Sebilen; the proposed identification of the Avestan Darja with the modern river Darya would be confirmed, as this latter giver flows from Mt. Sebilan into the Aras.

For the region of Atropatene speaks also the authority of Yaqut (see Spiege), Eramiche Alterthunkunde, i. 684), who, like Abulleda, points to the town of Urumia as the native place of Zoroaster. See also foot-note below, p. 231.

At this point we must furthermore take up the tradition which directly connects the opening of Zoroaster's prophetic career with Airyana Vacjah or Iran Vej. This land is often regarded as mythi-Airyana Vacjah or Iran Vej. This land is often regarded as mythical; it may originally have been so, but there is good reason for believing that the fact of the later localization of this region in the west of Iran points to the common belief that Zoroaster originally came from that direction. The Bundahish xxix. 12 connects Iran Vej directly with Atropatene : Airan Vej pavan kost-i Ataro patakan. The river Darja, near which stood the house of Zoroasier's Avesta, moreover, Zoroaster is familiarly called "the renowned in Airyana Vaejah": Ys. ix 14, iritio airyene vaevabe. The prophet is there also represented Vaejah by the river Daitya: Yt. v. 104; ix. 25; xvii, 45, airyene vaejabi vanbuyao dairyayao. In the later Persian Zartusht-Namah--see Wilson, Paru Religion, p. 491--it is the waters of the Daiti that Zoroaster crosses in a miraculous manner after he has head the witten of the condition with the condition of the condi of the Daitt that Corosacer closed in a fine demons and of the final conversion of Medvo-mah. After passing Daiti, he receives the mial conversion of wiedvo-man. After passing Dairi, he receives the visions of God (with which compare Ys. xlni. 3-15), and thence he proceeds to King Vishtaspa. The Dairya was perhaps aborder stream; it is to be remembered that it was on the other side of it (ct. paine, Yt. xvii. 49) that Vishtaspa sacrificed. The Bundahish likewise alludes to Zoroaster's first offering worship in Iran Vej, and receiving Medyo-mah as his first disciple:

Bd. xxxii. 3: Zaratusi, amatas din dativand, fratum den Airan
Vej fraj yast parsund; Medyok-mah din minas mekadlund.

Vej fraj yast parsuna; vacayor-man ain minas mekaduna.

'Zoroaster, when he brought the religion, first celebrated worship in Airan Vej, and Medyok-mah received the religion from him. Cf. Justi, Bundabish, p. 79, and West, Pablaci Texts transl., S. B. E. v. 141. This Medyok-mah is the Maidhyo-mah of the Avesta, Yt. v. 141. This Medyok-man is the Mannyo-man of the Avesta, Yt. xiii. 95; Ys. li. 19, the cousin of Zoroaster; and he seems to have been a man of influence. That he was the prophet's first disciple is distinctly recognized also by the Avesta, Yt. xiii. 95: yo paorya Zaralbustrai mathremea gusta samaosta.

All these traditional Oriental allusions are unanimous in placing Zoroaster in Adarbijan or Media Atropatene. There is yet another passage drawn from the Avesta that connects his name with Ragha (Rai) in the same region, or more particularly in Media. properly so called. This allusion is in the Pahlavi version of Vd. i. 16.

The Avesta text reads :

dvadasem asanhamea sonthranamea valustem frathweresem azem ye aburo mazdao, Ragham thrizantum [vaedhanbo noit 2015

'As the twelfth, I created Ragha of the three races.' The Pahlavi commentary adds 'triple-raced Rak, of Ataro-patakan (Atropatene);

some say it is Rai; ... some say Zartust belonged there.'
This connection of the name of Zoroaster with Ragha is also This connection of the name of Zoroaster with Ragha is also given elsewhere in the Avesta. In Ys. xix. 18, mention is made of the five lords, "the lord of the house, the village, the province, and the country, and the Zarathushtra as the fifth." By Zarathustra and the country, and the Zarathushtra as the film. By Zarathushtra publishe, a high priest or Iranian pope is apparently intended. This order of lords holds good for all countries "except the Zarathushtrian Ragha." "The Zarathushtrian Ragha has four masters, the master of the house, the village, the province, and the Zarathushtra as the fourth " aonham dahyunam yao anyao Rajoit Zarathushtroit. ra'us Ragba Zaratbushtris. Kaya ambao ratavo? Nmanyasca, osiyasca, zantumasca, Zaratbustro tuiryo.

This reference, in addition to the Pahlavi just above quoted, at This reference, in addition to the Pahlavi just above quoted, at least shows plainly that Ragha (Raji) must have been the chief seat of the religious government, the papal see. In like manner, Yaqut, cited by Darmesteter, Zend-Aveita transl., S.B.E., iv. p. xlviii, describes a celebrated fortress in the province of Rai, which was the stronghold of the Zoroastrian high-priest. If Ragha was indeed the "Zoroastrian Ragha," and enjoyed such religious prominence, it must have been because of Zoroaster's connection with it in some way or other. What was this connection?

The direct Iranian tradition, we have seen, connects Zoroaster's

The direct Iranian tradition, we have seen, connects Zoroaster's birth and the opening of his career with the west of Iran; but how shall we account for his name being associated first with Atropatene and then with the Median Rai? The solution of the difficulty may be found. An interesting allusion cited from Shahristani by Hude Hule Pale and Page 1982 ristani by Hyde, Hist. Relig. vet. Pers., p. 298, seems to have been overlooked; it apparently contains the key to the problem. Hyde, in referring to the Magi, quotes a passage from Shahristani, rendering it thus : hi (inquit Shahristani) fuerunt Aneche Zerdusht Sapiento ing it times: m (inquit Shanristani) juerum Assective Zerdundt Sapiento filit Purshaip, qui apparuit tempore Hystasp. Ex regione Aderbayagian fust Pater eju, et ex urbe Rey orta est Mater, cujus nomen fust Dogbdu. Here we have a new clue, and apparently the auswer to the question why Zoroaster's name should be connected with both places. Zoroaster's mother, as the tradition has preserved, was from Rai; his father was a native of Atropatene (Adarbijan. In the latter ris tacher was a native of Atropatene (Adarbijan. In the latter ragion Zoroaster probably was born, and he seems to have spent there the first part of his life, probably by the river Darja. It was there his religious meditations began. That accounts for his name began accounted with all the testing accounts to the same being associated with all this territory, Urumiah, Shiz, Mount Sebilan. His connection with Ragha may furthermore be plausibly

There is great reason to believe that if, as seems most likely, Zoroaster was born in Atropatene, he was drawn toward the important city of Ragha, somewhat perhaps as Christ went to Jeru-This would be natural if we committee Shahristani's statement, just above, connecting his mother's family with Ragha. Let us again consult the tradition, and bring its allusions, wherever net us again consult the tradition, and bring its attusions, wherever possible, to honour. In the Zartusht Namih, while much is purely legendary, there is also much that is not done good foundation. The book itself claims to be found 1 or old Pablaci works. In Religion, p. 490 He sets out, as described in the narrative, with Religion, p. 490 fle sets out, as described in the mainstre, with a company of followers, crosses a sea, journeys during the month of Spendarmat (February), and on the last day of the month he finds himself upon the confines of Iran. It is there that he has the vision that Medyo-man will receive his religion, and he dreams of the army of demons from the east. It is with this point we may connect Zoroaster's first attempt at preaching in Ragha

If the view here adopted be correct, the vision of the army of demons may have been a forecast of Zoroaster's ill success at first demons may have been a forecast of Zoroaster's ill success at first in Ragha and elsewhere:—misfortune, however, that was destined ultimately to turn out successfully and in victory. There is good reason for believing that Zoroaster's teaching did not at first meet with success. The statement of Zad-sparam (see West, Pablavi Texts, trausl., S.B.E. v. 187) would carry out this view. It is there noted that during the first ten years Zoroaster obtained one disciple, Medyok-mah. This might apply well to Ragha.

A polemical allusion to Ragha, as shrewdly suggested by Geldner, K.Z. xxviii. 202-203, is perhaps to be found in the Gathas, Ys. iii. 9. Unfortunately the passage is not quite clear, and the reading of the

Unfortunately the passage is not quite clear, and the reading of the text is somewhat uncertain. Manuscript authority, however, gives the following text (Ys. liii. 9) :

duzvarenais vaeso rasti toi narepis rajis aesasa dejit-areta peso-tanvo

ka aisawa abura, yo ii yateni bemithyat vase-itosica ku mazdu tava kbisathrem ya erezejyoi dubi drigaove vabyo? This may provisionally be rendered (cf. Geldner, loc. cit.): 'To the evil-believers hell (lit. poison, i. e. of hell) belongs. Those man-banishing(?) Raghians, . . . the unrighteous (dript-arrta), are accursed (peo-tanvo)! Where is the righteous one, O Ahura, accursed (presented) where is the righteous one, O Ahura, who will deprive them of their life and freedom? Where is that kingdom of thine, O Ahura, by which thou wilt give to the right-living man, though poor, the best reward? The text and the passage, as stated, are obscure; but there certainly seems to be contained in it the reminiscence of an imprecation against the Raghians, the generation of vipers that shall not escape damnation.

This Capernaum, though now exalted, shall be thrust down to hell.
Cf. St. Luke x. 15, St. Mathew xi. 30 ff.
Zoroaster, cast out from Ragha in Media, may have turned to Bactria, where at last he was received by King Vishtaspa. According to the Zartusht-Namah, Zoroaster seems to have journeyed for a month or so, after his first vision of the army of fiends, and then to have crossed the Daiti, which, according to the suggestion above (p. 227), appears to have been a border river. There he receives the visions of God and the archangels, before proceeding to Balkh. The book of Zad-sparam (cf. West, Pablavi proceeding to Balkh. The book of Zad-sparam (cf. West, Pablavi Texts, transl., v. 187) allows two years to have elapsed from the time of Medyo-mah's conversion to the time that Zoroaster won Vishtaspa over to the faith. The latter event, it assumes, took place twelve years after Zoroaster had entered upon his ministry. All this is consistent with the idea of wandering and meditation, when we take into account also the thousand or more miles that separated Balkh from Atropatene and Ragha,

Assuming the supposition to be true that Zoroaster originated in Atropatene and was then drawn toward Ragha, but thence rejected, how are we to reconcile with this curse against the Raghians (Ys. liii. 9) the fact that the same city became the acknowledged head of the Zoroastrian faith? A solution may be offered. It is not at all impossible that, after success was won in the east, in Bactria, a religious crusade was begun toward the west, especially against Ragha. Hystaspes himself may have joined in the movement; his name is sometimes mentioned in connection with Media; and, according to the Shah-Namah, his son Islendiyar promulgated the faith of Loroaster in several countries. Ragha, we can imagine, may have been among these; and we may suppose that this Jerusalem--if we may with all reverence adopt the phrase of our own Scriptures---the city which had stoned the prophet, at last received and blessed him that came in the name of Ormazd. Ragha was at last glad to claim Zoroaster (Ys. xix. 18)

The assumption of the reminiscence of a severe struggle against unbelief, and of a change of heart in the people, would make clear why heresy aghemea uparo-vimanohim as the counter-creation of Ahriman, should be so markedly as ociated with Ragha, Vd. i. 16; and it would explain why the scholiast in the Pahlavi version of the passage should add the saving clause, vaedh-inho noit uzois, Ragha

In the Yatkar-i Zariran, ed. W. Geiger, Sitz. bayer. Akad., 1890, In the Yatkar-i Zariran, ed. W. Geiger, Sitz. bayer. Akad., 1890, p. 50, there also lurks, perhaps, in the words Iluto-i Rajur, an allusion to Ragha; and from them it might possibly be suggested that Vishtaspa's interest in Media was partly through his marriage, as well as on political grounds. If there is such an allusion to Hutaosa's having come from Ragha, we might perhaps conjectur that the new prophet Zoroaster was originally attracted from Ragha to Balkh through the queen's alliance. Let us then recall 'Augustine in connection with Emma and Æthelbert. But the passage requires further study before mere fauciful conjectures are made, requires further study before mere fanciful conjectures are made, especially in the light of some apparently contradictory passages in the Avesta and the Zartusht-Namah.

belongs no longer to heresy, but to the faith. It has become the "Zarathushtrian Ragha.

Resume .--- If the above views be correct, Zoroaster indeed arose in the west, most probably somewhere in Atropatene. He then presumably went to Ragha, but, finding this an unfruitful field, turned at last to Bactria, where the prophet was destined no longer to be without honour. He met with a powerful parron in the king; church and state became one. From Bactria, the now organized state-religion spread back towards Media; thence down to

It can hardly be said that thus to reconcile the conflicting statements is begging the question; authority can be given for every point that has been made. All the difficulties disappear. The references to Bactria in the Avesta and in the classics are The references to Media in the classics and in the Classics are quite correct; there was the scene of the great teacher's activity. The references to Media in the classics and in the tradition are equally correct; Media in its broadest sense was the original home equalty correct; we can be no priests, for there, as Marcellinus xxiii. 6 later tells us, were "the fettile fields of the Magi." The hint, moreover, that Zoroaster after the conversion of Vishtaspa visited his own native land again, but was at last murdered at Balkh in Bactria, is furthermore given according to tradition also by Anquetil du Perron, Zend-Avesta, i. 2, p. 52; ii. p. 807-808, Index. The latter fact about Zoroaster's death may not have been untrue.

The conclusion arrived at is that, though Zoroaster originally Came from the west, he taught and claborated his religion in Bactria; its blossoms later bore fruit in the west. The upholders of each side of the much-mooted question are in part right, and yet in part wrong; the horns of the dilemma are at last united, the tion is at last solved. Honour to the tradition where honour is due."

OFTEN TIRED BUT NEVER WEARY.

UPTEN TIRED BUT NEVER WEARY.

LET'S discuss this point for two minutes. Here's a man who says that at a certain period he began to feel "tred and weary." That's precisely the way he puts it in his letter. Now anybody has a right to feel tred or fatigued (it's the same thing), after labour or much exercise. It's the body's fashion of telling you to hold up, to give it a rest. It is a natural and, in health, with supper and sleep just ahead, a pleasant feeling. But wearniess 1—that's different. That comes of monotons of waiting, of loneliness. Wearniess is of the mind, not of the body. But it can arise in the body, all the same. If this bothers you at first, don't say, "Stuff?" "humbug!" but study up on it. A man may be tired and happy, but not weary and happy. For weatiness means depressed spirits, and nerves all sagged down in the middle. And when you get both at once you will be wise to find out what's gone wrong.

wrong.

It is a short letter, this is, and we can just as well quote the whole of it. The writer says: "It was in November, 1887, when I began to feel tired and weary. It seemed as if I had no strength left in me. Before that I had always been strong and healthy. My appetite was poor, and for days together I could not touch any food that was placed before me. After every meal that I did succeed in forcing down I had such dreadful pains in the chest and back that I was almost afraid to eat. Then there was a sharp pain around the heart, too, as though I was stabbed with a knife.

"I lost a deal of sleep, and for mights together I didn't sleep at all was stabbed with a knife.

"I lost a dean of sleep, and for nights together I didn't sleep at all.

"Then I began to lose flesh rapidly, and was afrant I was going into a consumption. Yet I kept on with my work, however, but it was a hard thing for me, because I was so weak and nervous that I trembled from head to foot. As time went on I gradually got worse and worse, and my eyes were sunken and drawn in. I consulted a doctor in Kentish Town. He gave me medicine, but it did no good. After all this I got the idea into my head that I should not recover.

"One day a lady came into the shop, and noticing the state I was in, kindly asked how long I nad been ill. I told her all about it, and she said 'You my Mother Seigel's Constite Syrup; it has made me well, and I believe it will do you good."

'You try Mother Sengel's Constitue Syrup; it has made me weil, and I believe it will do you good.'
"I sent for a bottle, and after taking only a few doses I felt relieved. Presently my food agreed with me, and I enjoyed my meals. I could sleep better also, and by keeping on taking the Syrup I soon got as strong as I ever was in my life. Since that time (now over four years ago), I have been in the best of health. I consider that mill probability this remedy saved my life; at all events, it restored my health, and life without health don't amount to much. I gladly consent to the publication of the statement, and will answer inquiries. Yours truly (Signed), G. Vince, 142, Shepheid's Bush Road, London, W., November 30th, 1892."

(Signed), G. VINCE, 142, Shepherd's Bush Road, London, W., November 30th, 1892."
Traus M. Vince's unfortunate experience comes to happy end. As he has to work for a hving, like most of us, he is no doubt often ured, but never weary any more. And what can possibly be more wearisome than long-continued illness? With him, as with millions, it was the stomach that was to fault. His food entered the stomach and stopped there. So he suffered from two bad results; he received no strength from it, but he did receive the deadly acids and gases which the fermented stuff gave birth to. Indigestion and dyspepsia. The same old story of pain and misery, and, thank mercy, the same story of restoration and gratitude after an appeal for help had been made to good old Mother Seigel.

. Mr. A. Yohannan writes me that at a place about a mile from his home in Oroomiah there is a pile of ashes from the fire-worshipers, and that the place is generally admitted by the people to have been the abode of Zeradusht. IN THE PRESS

To be published in October 1805

AN INDIAN JOURNALIST:

Life, Letters and Correspondence

Dr. SAMBHU C. MOOKERJEE,

late Editor of "Reis and Rayyet,"

F. H. SKRINE, cs.

The volume, uniform with Mookerjee's Travels and Voyages in Bengal, will consist of about 600 pages and contain, inter alsa,

- I. A portrait of the Doctor,
- 2. A Biography, illustrated by copious notes
- 3. About 225 pages of original essays from his brilliant pen.
 - 4. Selections from his correspondence.

PRICE : To registered subscribers paying in advance Rs. 5 • • • •

To other subscribers and ordinary ... Rs. 6 purchasers

After paying the expenses of the publication the surplus will be placed wholly at the disposal of the family of the deceased man of

Orders will be registered by the Business Manager, "An Indian Journalist," at the Bee Press, I, Uckoor Duit's Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutta.

Subscribers to the "Essays by a Brahman" will be communicated with,

To ensure accuracy and avoid all mischance, some such form may be used as,—

Please enter my name as a subscriber for copies of "An Indian Journalist." The amount, has been remitted per-R٩. money order

To be legibly (Name. Address..... written 1895.

GENUINE HOMEEOPATHY. A CARD.

Hem Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, L. M S. Homoropathic Practitioner,

May be consulted by letter or personally daily at his residence, 30-1, Colootolah Street, Calcutta.

Novelty in Ayurvedic Medicine, AYURVEDIC PHARMACY.

36, Lower Chupore Road, Fouzdan Balaknana, Calcutta.

KAVIRAJ NAGENDRA NATH SFN, Physician, KAYIRAJ NAGERBAR AT STATE STAT country. SPECIFICS

SPECIFICS for all ordinary diseases, like Fever, Cough, Asthma, Phthisis, Diabetes, &c., including diseases brought on by irregularities and indiscretions of diverse kinds. Catalogues, containing full accounts of diseases and remedies, are transmitted on application. Prescriptions, with or without medicines, sent to every part of India and Ceylon, Cape Colony, and the British Isles, on receipt (by post) of full accounts of diseases. counts of diseases.

Thousands of unsolicited Testimonials from

every quarter.

Lady Elliott Portrait Memorial Committee.

Allan Arthur Allan Arthur
Hon, Justice Beverley
Hon C. E. Buckland
W. D. Cruickshank
Baron Gaetter
Col, Hailes, 6th B. I.
A. Macdonald
David McLaien Morris
David McLaien Morris

W. O. Bell-Irving S. E. J. Clarke H. H. The Maharaja Darbhanga, K.C I.E

Son A.F.M. Abdur Rahman A. Sunson, A. H. Wallis, 1. O'B Saunders

Maharaja Sir J. M. Tagore, K. C. S. I.
PRESIDENT—Allan Arthur.
HON. TREASURER—J. O'B, Saunders.
HON. SECRETARY—David McLaien Morrison,
At the meeting of Committee held at the Chamber of Commerce on the 19th January,
it was decided to have a picture of Lady
Elliott painted, any surplus to go towards a personal present. personal present.

All subscriptions to be sent to the HON TREASURER,

9, Hare Street,

Calcutta.

THE WORKS OF DR JOGENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE Rs. As.

- be without a copy of this GREAT
- Work.
 (Sd.) Nana Bhai Haridas." Bengali translation of the Dyabhaga and the Mitakshara † Price ... Bengali Translation of the Dittaka-

IN THE PRESS. The Philosophy of Religion from the point of view of Common Sense. Price Rs. 5.

CONTENTS. Historical Analysis of the evolution of

- religious systems.
 Definition of the term "religion"
 The problems of the philosophy of religion and their solutions, old and new.
 (a) Why do Hindus believe in ten Avalars or incanations including in the series three that are believed to have
- series three that are beneved to make appeared in the shape of a fish, a tortorse, and a borr.

 (b) Why is it that all ancient systems recommend the sacrifice of animals, and the burning of ghee or incense.
- and the burning of give or intense.
 &c. &c. &c. &c.
 The weapons offensive and defensive of religious teachers.
 The power of fine words.
 The art of becoming a prophet.
 The cumulative effect of hardswearing

- Specimens of Puranised history. Brahminical and Christian priestcraft
- compared The artificial miseries of men caused by
- religion. Tyranny and taxation of religion
- Tyranny and taxation of religion.
 The good man's adversity is the sharp man's opportunity.
 Swinding as a fine art.
 New Supersitions that may be suggested for the benefit of the priests.
 The great prophets of the world and their doings.

- their doings.

 Probable origin of the Saiva religion.

 Tautric mysticism and abominations.
- 17.
- * To be nad of Messis. Thacker Spink & Co., only.
- + To be had of Messrs. Thacker Spink & Co., and also at the Suradham Agency No. 11, Raja Nabakrishna's Street, Calcutat. Agency,

A Wonderful Medicine.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

A RE universally admitted to be worth a Guinea a box, for Bithous and Nervous Disorders, such as wind and Pain in the Stomach, Sick, Headache, Giddiness, Fulness, Swelling after Meals, Dizzness and Drowsness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite Shortness on the Skin, Disturbed

Scurvy, and Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Die ims and all Nervons and Trembling Sensation, &c. The first dose will give tellef in twenty minutes. Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one box of these Pills, and they will be acknowledged to be

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

For females of all ages these Pills are in valuable, as a few doses of them carry off all numours, and bring about all that is required No female should be without them. There is no medicine to be found equal to Beecham's Pills for removing any obstruction or irregularity of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box, they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and robust health. This has been proved by thou sands who have tried them, and found the benefits which are ensured by their use.

For a Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, and all Disorders of the Laver, they act like magic, a few doses will be found to work wonders on the most important organs in the human machine.

human machine
The Natives of India will find Beecham's

The Natives of india win into occurants. Pills the finest medicine ever introduced to their notice; the European residents also will find them of great value for cooling the blood. For throwing off fevers and preventing inflammations in hot climates, they stand without areas.

a rival,

These are Facts testified continually by members of all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debilitated is, BEECHAM'S PILLS have the Largest Sale of any Patent Medicine in the

Beecham's Magic Cough Pills.

As a remedy for Coughs in general, Asthma, Bronchial Affections, Houseness, Shortness of Breath, Tightness and Oppression of the Chest, Wheezing, &c, these Pills stand univalled. Let any person give Beecham's Cough Pills a trial, and the most violent Cough will in a short time be removed.

Beecham's Tooth Paste

Will recommend itself being efficacious and economical; it is packed in neat airtight collapsible Tubes.

NOTICE—G Atherton & Co. will forward on receipt of letter, samples at the following rates: size 9½d, at 8 annas per box; 1-1½d size 12 annas per box; 20d size 2 tipees per box; 37 ooth Paste 12 annas per Tube, these rates do not include the cost of postage which will be added to the annount.

Solo Wholoral Appare for T-31.

Sole Wholesale Agents for India, BURMAH & CEYLON. G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3, NEW CHINA BAZAR STREET. CALCUTTA.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF · MEMORIAL FUND. G C.S.k His Highness the Maharaja Bahadur His Highness the Maharaja Bahadur of Cooch Behar, G.C.LE. ... 500 Nawah B thadur Sir K Abdul Ghan, K.C.S.I. and Nawab Bahadur K Ashan Ulla, C.I.E. ... 500 Nawab Imad Jung Bahadur ... 500 Nawab Azaun Yar jung Bahadur ... 500 Shams-ul Ullama Syed Ah Belgrami 500 Khan Bahadar Bhai Bahauddu, C.I.E., Vizier to the Nawab of Largereth Khan Bahadar BhatBahaudun, C.I.K., Vizier to the Nawab of Junagadh ... 300 Maharaja Bahadur Sir Jotindra Mohan Tagore, K.C.S.I. ... 250 Babu Jodu Lat Mullick 200 Messis, Mackinion Mackenzie & Co. 200 Prince Wala Kadr Syed Hosein Ali Muri Bahadur Muza Bahadur Shujani Mulk Asafad Dowlat Nawab Syed Zunul Abdin Khan Bahadur Feraz Jung ... 140 Raja Peny Mohan Mookeijee, C.S.I. 100 The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chandra Madhab Ghose ... 100 Banerjee Bahadur, C.S.I. Mahatajkumar Benoya Krishna The Hon'ble Mr. Justice E. J. Tievelyan The Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Jabbar 29. Khan Bahadur The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Maharaja Durga Charan Law, C.I E., Nawab Jah undar Meerza ... The Hon'ble W. C. Bonnerjee ... Nawab Syed Ameer Husein ... Nawab Syed Ameer Husein Syed Nurul Huda, Esq., C.S., Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan J. G. Ritchie, Esq. C.S., Sir Alexander Miller F. J. Rowe, Esq. Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi Khan Bahadur, Kuma Radha Prosad Roy Kumar Dinendra Narain Roy Babu rPashupatty Nath Bose Kumar Doulat Chandra Roy Babu Guru Prosonno Ghose Babu Guru Prosonno Ghose Raja Sir Sourindra Mohan Tagore, 25 47. C.I.E. Raya Jotindra Nath Chowdhury Babu Rama Nath Ghose... 25 48. Babu Kama Nath Ghose... 25 Raja Sreenath Roy ... 25 Rai Sew Bux Bogla Bahadar ... 25 Rai Sew Bux Bogla Bahadar ... 25 Raja Surja Kanta Achaijee Chowdhury 25 Rai Budiredas Mukim Bahadur ... 25 Raba Gonal Lai Sad Babu Gopal Lai Seal ... Moulvi Syad Abdus Salam Moulvi Syad Abdus Salam A. T. Apcar, Esq. H. Luttman Johnson, Esq. C.S. Lord William Beresford, K.C.I.E., Munshi Gholam Rasool ... F. H. Skrine, Esq. C.S., The Horbile H. J. S. Cotton C.S., C.S.I. Prince Mahomed Bukhtyar Shah Baboo Surendra Nath Pal Chowdry... , Aukhoy Kumar Ghose Moulvi Imadd Ah Rai Shib Chunder Nundy Bahadar ... D. Panioty, Esq D. Panioty, Esq. ... Chowdry Mahomed Arjamand Khan H. E. A. Cotton, Esq., Barrister-at-law Monily Syed Ashruffuddin Ahmed, Khan Bahadur ...

72. T. Inglis, Esq., C.S.

73.	A. H. Giles, Esq	·	164
74.	F. F. Handley, Esq, C.S.		16"
75.	The Hon'ble Mouly Siraju	i Islam
, ,.	V L		16
_,		•••
76	Moulvi Serajuddeen	•••	15
77.	Abul Hasan, Esq.,	•••	15
78.	H. A. D. Philips, Esq. CS.	•••	10
79.	Baboo Kiran Chunder Roy	•••	10
80.	E. N. Baker, Esq	•••	10
81.	Baboo Doyal Chand Bose	•••	10
82.	" Madan Mohuo Bose	•••	10
B 3.	"Kanai Lal Khan	•••	10
84.	Moulvi Synd Akram Hossain		10
35	Moulvi Aziz Ahmud		10
86.	Rai Kanyelal Dey Bahadoor	•••	10
37.	H. Holmwood, Esq	•••	10
38	Babu Hurry Mohun Chunder		10
39.	Baboo Chakkanlal Roy	•••	5
90	" Sarodapiasad Ghose		š
St	thscriptions will be thankfully	received	bý
	Honorary Joint Secretaries,		1
	RAT KIIMAD SADVADUICADI	RAHADI	TD

RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI BAHADUR, 4, Bittish Indian Street, Calcutta, and A. F. M. Abdur Rahman, Esq. Barrister--alaw, 16, Taltolla, Calcutta.

"IMPROVED UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Rs. .

Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, smill, open faced, mickel silvern, keyless, short winding, patent, "NEW STYLE IMPROVED UNDAUNT-ED" watch, with band setting mechanism, secondhand, for Doctors, ornamental bold dial, for Rs. 7 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years quarantee. Warranted to stand the roughest use. Runs more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. Easily repairable. Others sell at double our rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr. Juo. Dickson of Haputal Railway, from Ceylon says:—It keeps splendid time and never stopped although it sustained hard knocks and jerks. x Dr. H. Moore of Royal Artillery from Poonamallee says:—I sold it for Rs. 16. x Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Regt. from Dumdum says:—I have sold it for Rs. 20. x Mr. T. B. Scott of Patina Opium Department says:—The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time. Jewelled Ring Ro. 1-8-0. Real Silver Watch Rs. 13. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty electro cased gold chain Re. 1-8-0. Fashionable electro cased Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, at Re. 1-8-0. Mr. G. Smith, Sult Inspector from Samkutia, says: "A German valued the diamond ring at Rs. 50 and ruby at Rs. 30." Key winding, Government stamped, solid silver hunting case, Royal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee, for Rs. 13. Pte. G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light Unfanty from Purandhar says:—For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Sergeant for Rs. 28. * Pte. H. C. Bishop of L. F. L. Regt. from Kamptee says:—For the first one I got Rs. 25; the second one I sold to a Sergeant for Rs. 28. * Pte. H. C. Bishop of L. F. L. Regt. from Kamptee says:—A Corporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same watch, Gentlemen's open faced, keyless real solid gold. No agents kept, all goods sent only by us from Bombay per V. P. WES FERN INDIA TRADING CO.,

CATARRH, Strong, accurate, pretty, small, open faced, nickel silvern, keyless, short winding, patent, "NEW STYLE IMPROVED UNDAUNT-

CATARRH, Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness. A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these distressing diseases are rapidly and per-manently cured by a few simple applications manently cured by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUTTON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORON FO, Canada.

Scientific American. "IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All who sufter find sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant.

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and sufferg; while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS UMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, ing: while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITTS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest remedy or these complaints in their severest and most renne form.

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs Is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE Are you subject to HEADACHES and the tortures of TOOTHACHE? A single application will relieve you.

In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid

and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the result speak for itself.

The Oriental Ralm is used by the best Physicians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands of homes. By its intrinsic virtue, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar pre-paration has ever before attained.

Sold in Bottles at 1 Re. each.

Obtainable of all respectable chemist

Agents in Calcutta: Smith Stanistreet & Co R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Bathgate & Co. Limited.

REIS & RAYYET (PRINCE AND PEASANT)

WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

AND

eview of Politics, Literature, and Society
RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

If paid in advance,

i i air y carry		•••	•••		7
Quarterly		•••	•••	,,	4
Monthly		•••		Ŕе.
Single or sa	mple	Copy	•••	Ans.
	If no	t paid in a	dvance,
Yearly		•		Rs.	18
Half-yearly.		•••	•••		8-01
Quarterly .		•••	•••		6-0
Monthly .		•••	•••	11	2-4
Single or sa				Ans.
No addıt	ional	cnarge for	postage	or po	eor.

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an inch each inser-tion. The lowest charge for any advertisement

tion. The lowest charge for any advertisement is Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5.

Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphlets (carriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis & Rayyet."

OFFICE: I, Uchoor Dut's Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutta.

●RINCE & PEASANT)
WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

REVIEW OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

OL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1895

WHOLE NO. 677.

THE BIRTHDAY HONOURS.

Knights Grand Cross of the Bath.

Lord Playfair; the Right Honourable Jas. Stansfeld, M. P. for Halifax; Generals Sir Michael Biddulph, Charles Gough, Sir Geo. Willis, Sir Drury Lowe; Admirals Sir William Montagu, Dowell, Earl Clanwilliam, and Sir Richard Vesey Hamilton.

Knight Commanders of the Bath.

Admirals Chas. Hotham, Robt. Fitzroy, Henry Tuson, Lieutenant-Colonel Aithur Bigge, Her Majesty's Private Secretary, N. R. O'Conor, the British Minister at Pekin.

Companion of the Bath.

Major Wate, attached to the Egyptian Army

Knights Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George

The Earl of Aberdeen and Su Charles Muchell

Knight Commanders of St. Michael and St. George Mr. Fowell, Buxton, and Mr. Satow, late British Minister at Minocco

Companions of St. Michael and St. George.

Mr. Mitchell, Ceylon; Mr. Riphael Brog, British Consul at Cairo. Knights.

Mr. Irving, actor; Mr. Besant, novelist; Mr. Conway, mountaineer, Lewis Morris, poet; Dr. William Howard Russell, journalist; and Mr. Hannen, Chief Justice of Shanghai.

STAR OF INDIA

Knights Grand Commanders

His Highness Mukntar-ul-Mulk Azim-ul Iktidar Rafi-ush Shan Wala Shikoh Mohtasham-I-Dauran Umdat-ul-Uurra Maharajadhiraj Aijah Hisam-us-Saltanat Maharaja Madho Rao Sindhia Bahadur Srinath Mansur I-Zunan Fidvi-I-Haziat-I-Mahka-I-Muazzuna-I-Rafi-ud-Daiji-I-Inglistan of Gwalior.

The Right Honourable George Robert Cauning, Baron Hurrs, 6 C. 1 F., late Governor of the Presidency of Bombay.

$Knight\ Commander.$

Lieutenant-General Sir William Stephen Alexander Lockhart, K.C.B., ϵ s.1., Bengal Infantry, Lieutenant-General Commanding the Forces of the Punjab.

Companions.

The Henourable Mr. Alan Cadell, Indian Civil Service, Senior Member of the Board of Revenue, North-Western Provinces and Ondh, and at present holding temporarily the appointment of Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Ondh.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Edward Miller, Kt., QC, Member of the Council of the Governor-General.

Charles Montgomery Rivaz, Esquire, Indian Civil Service, Second Financial Commissioner of the Punjab.

Arthur Forbes, Esquire, Indian Civil Service, Commissioner of the Patna Division, Bengal.

Kerala Varma Valiya Koil Tamburan, Consort of Her Highness Raja Rajeshwari Ram Lakshim Bai Sahiba, C.I., Senior Ram of Travancore. INDIAN EMPIRE.

Knights Commanders.

William Robert Brooke, Esquire, C.I.E., late Director-General of Telegraphs in India.

The Honourable Maharaja Partab Narayan Singh of Ajadhya, Oudh, an Adultonal Member of the Council of the Governor-General for making Laws and Regulations.

Maharaja Ravaneshwar Prashad Singh Bahadur of Gidhaur, late a Member of the Council of the Lieutenaut-Governor of Bengal for making Laws and Regulations.

Sardai Krishna Rao Bapu Sahib Jadon, late President of the Council of Regency in the Gwalior State

Companions.

The Honourable Gangadhar Rao Madhay Chitnayis, an Additional Member of the Council of the Governor General for making Liws and Regulations.

The Honourable Rai Bahadur Veobakam Bashvam Aiyangur, Vakil, High Court, Mich is, and an Additional Memoer of the Council of the Governor of Madias for making Liws and Regulations.

The Honourable Mr. Charles E Iward Backland, Indian Civil Service, Secretary to the Government of Bengal, General, Revenue, and Statestocal Departments, and a Member of the Council of the Licuteman Governor of Bengal for making Laws and Regulations.

Alexander Bieakley Patterson, Esquire, Indian Civil Service, Commissioner, Northern India Salt Revenue.

Harry Arbuthnot Acworth, Esquire, Indian Civil Service, Municipal Commissioner for the City of Bombay.

Colonel Charles Arkcoll Porteous, Indian Staff Corps, Lite Inspector General of Police, Madras.

Colonel Coayton Furner Lane, Indian Staff Corps, Inspector-General of Police, Juls, Registration, and Stamps, Hyderabad Assigned Districts

Hkun Sung, the Sawbwa of Hsi Paw in Burma.

Steyning William Edgerley, Esquire, Indian Civil Service, Private Secretary to the Governor of Bombay.

Trichinopoly Rayalu Arakiaswami Thumboo Chetty, Chief Judge of the Chief Court of Mysore, and Member of the Mysore State Council

Khan Bahadur Maulayi Abdul Jabbar, Deputy Magsatate and Deputy Collector of the 24-Parganas, and late a Member of the Council of the Lieutenaut Governor of Bengal for making Laws and Regulations.

Captain William Richard Yedding, p. 8.0., Indian Staff Corp., Assistant Commissary-General, on Special Daty in Kishmir.

Hemy John Stanyon, Esquire, Burister-at-Luw, Advocate of the High Court, North-Western Provinces and Oruh, and President of the Jubbulpore Municipal Committee, Central Provinces

Munshi Hafix Andul Karin, Indian Secretary to Her Majesty the Queen, Empress of India.

INDIAN TITLES Hereditary Names

Ahmad Baksh Khin Nigar, Suido Bihadin, Pensioned Risaldar-Major of the 3rd Cavalry of the Hyder thad Contingent.

Maharaja.

His Highness Riya Vishwanath Song (Bahadur of Chattarpur, Bun lelkhand, Central India.

Nawab.

Muhammad Ali Khan, Khan Bahadur, landowner, Balandshabe in the North-western Provinces

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, it possible, as the satest and must convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to cause confusion.

Sahibzada Ghulam Ahmad Khan, late Member of the Gwalior Council of Regency.

Raja.

Mian Rugmath Singh, brother-in-law of His Highness the present Maharaja of Kishinir, and son-in-law of the late Maharaja.

Maharajkumar Binaya Krishna Deb of Sovabazar, Calcutta.

Kumar Notendro Lall Khan, of Narajole in Midnapore in the Bengal Presidency.

Dewan Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur Bashyam Iyengar, Additional Member of the Legislative Council of the Governor of Madras.

Kanchi Krishnaswami Rao, Chief Justice of the Travancore State.

Khan Bahadur.

Jehangu Pestonji Vakil, of Ahmedabad in the Bombay Presidency. Shah Nawaz Kh in, retied Jemadar, 11th Bengal Lancers, Montgomery District, Punjab.

Munshi Ghulam Ahmad Khan, Extra Assistant Commissioner in the Punjab.

Hafiz Hahi Baksh, Honorary Magistrate of Kasur in the District of Labore in the Punjab.

Karamatullah Khan, Senior Hospital Assistant, Subordinate Medical Department, Bengal.

Kizi Ibrar Ahmad, Honorary Secretary, Moradabad Municipality in the North-Western Provinces.

Sheikh Mohmiddin, Surveyor, Survey of India Department.

Sardar Ghazi Khan, Lehri, of Baluchistan. Azhar Hosem, 1st Grade Hospital Assistant in Assam.

Futteh Ali Khan, Subadar-Major, Burma Military Police.

Rao Bahadur.

Chittoor Wyravanather Thamodaram Pillai, late of the Accountant-General's Office in the Madras Presidency.

Bashkar Vishnu Phadke, President of the Munic pality of Ratnagiri in the Bombay Presidency.

Rao Sahib Motiram Rejaram Vakil, late Deputy Educational Inspector in Surat in the Bombey Presidency.

Munshi Balorokand Das, Member of Council of the Alway State in Rajputana.

Pundit Sukhdeo Pershad, Judicial Secretary in the Jodhpur State in Rajoutana.

Rushna Rao Muilye, Superintendent of the Dewas State (Junior Branch).

Raghunath R to Yadon Bhagwat, late Secretary to the Gwalior Council of Regency.

Rai Bahadur.

Lala Dilbagh Ru, Extra Assistant Commissioner in the Punjab. Seth Sobbag Mull Duddha, of Aimere.

Babu Hem Chunder Kerr, retired Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector in the Bengal Presidency.

Babu Madhab Chunder Roy, retired Executive Engineer, 1st grade, Public Works Department, Bengal.

Babu Omrita Nath Mitter, Presidency Magistrate in Calcutta.

Subadar-Major Jitman Gurung, Bengal Military Police, Lushai Battalion.

Bibu Jogendio Kishore Rai Chowdhry, of Ramgopalpur in Mymensingh in the Bengal Presidency.

Babu Brahma Mohun Mullick, retired Inspector of Schools, Bengal.

Lala Nehal Chand, Member and Secretary, Municipal Board,

Muzaffarnagar in the North-Western Provinces.

Thakur Naram Singh, landowner in Pardur in the Shahjahanpur District in the North-Western Provinces.

Lala Mangi Lal, Banker of Mustra in the North-Western Provinces, Lal Singh, late Tahsildar in the North-Western Provinces.

Taradas Baneijee, President of the District Council and Municipal Committee of Raipur in the Central Provinces.

Narsingh Dass, Settlement Officer of the Jammu District, Babu Grish Chundra Rai, Zamindar of Sylhet, in Assam.

Sardar Bahadur.

Mian Parduman Singh, of Ramgarh, Honorary Magistrate of Naraingaih in the District of Umballa in the Punjab.

Bhai Nihal Singh, Assistant District Superintendent of Police in the Punjab.

Rao Sahib

Krishnarao Jayram, Pleader, in Malegaon in the Bombay Presidency.

Ambadas Santu, late Extra Assistant Commissioner in Berar.

Seth Nathu Ram, of Harda in the Hoshangabad District in the Central Provinces.

Pandit Daji Ram Chandra, Hospital Assistant, Nagpur in the Central Provinces.

Bhai Bisant Singh, Supervisor, Military Works Department, in Baluchistan.

Kyet thaye saung shwe Salwe ya Min.

Hkun Se, Sawba of Keng Tung.

Maung Po Maung, Deputy Inspector of Schools in Burma. Maung Kyi, Myoôk.

Ahmudan gaung Tazeik ya Min.

Maung Po, Ngwegunhmu of Hsa Mong Hkam. Maung Shwe U, Inspector of Police.

WEEKLYANA.

In the present Parliament, there are ten newspaper editors, six printers, and three stationers.

•

THE annual aggregate circulation of the newspapers of the world is calculated to be 12,000,000,000 copies, printed on 781,250 tons of paper, which would cover no fewer than 10,450 square miles of surface. Piled vertically upwards, they would top the highest of the Alps and reach the altitude of 500 miles. Such is the advance of printing!

In the State of Kansas, in the United States, there is a journal called the IVilliston Journal which is edited by a lady, Mis. Elizabeth Wilson, who writes all her editorials in rhyme. At Athens, a weekly journal under the charge of Georg Souis is written entirely in verse from beginning to end, including the advertisements. It consists of four pages of double columns, a page being ten by eight inches.

THE latest development of the phonograph is—that Sir B. W. Richardson dictated the whole of his twelve-page article for the Asclepial into Messrs. Hazell, Watson, and Viney's instrument, from which it was set up in type. There was no other copy for the compositors.

AT Semlin, a frontier town on the Danube, about three nules from Belgrade, the Hungarian Customs authorities seized a large consignment of human bones on their way to a bone-boiling establishment near Vienna. Enquiry showed that they were the remains of Russian and Turkish soldiers killed in battle near Talar Bazardjik, in Eastern Roumelia, that they were disinteried by the owners of the soil without permission of the Government, and, mixed with the bones of animals, they were sold to the Vienna firm. The human bones were confiscated and re-buried, the importers fined two thousand florus and others concerned published in other ways.

٠.

THE contract for the massive memorial to mark the resting place of the British officers murdered at Manipur on March 24, 1891, has been given to Messrs. W. Garstin and Sons, granite merchants, Aberdeen and London. It will be an obelisk monument, 30 feet high, of fine-axed, grey granite, built in courses. The lower base will be to feet square, the upper 8 feet, the pedestal 7 feet, and the cornice 8½ feet square, with chamfer and check mouldings. At the foot the spire will measure 8½ feet square, tapering to 3 feet at the top, finishing with an onamental point. On each side of the pedestal there will be a sunk panel of red, polished granite. The panel in front will bear the following inscription, in capital letters, filled in with lead and gilded on the top:—

"The Government of India have caused this monument to be elected to mark the spot where rest the remains of the British officers who were murdered at Manipur, March 24, 1891—Junes Wallace Quinton, C.S.I., I C.S.: Colonet Charles M'Dowal Skeine, D.S.O., I.S.C.: Frank St. Clair Grimwood, I.C.S.: William Henry Cossus I.C.S.: Luettenant Walter Henry Simpson, I.S.C.. In the same grave deposited the remains of Lieutenant Lionel Wilhelm Brackenbury, I.S.C., and of several soldiers of the 44th Goorkha Rifles, who let in action at Manipus on the same day."

PETITIONS to Parliament are carried free by the Post Office. But there is a limitation. It has recently been found necessary to remind the public that no letter or postal packet of any kind except pertions for presentation can be delivered to a member of Parliament free unless the postage is prepaid; out mat permons for presentation to either House can only be delivered free if they are sent without covers or in covers open at the ends and without any accomplishing letter or other enclosure. No such petition, however, is exempt from postage if it exceeds 2th in weight.

THE Prince of Wales presided, on May 8, at the Imperial Institute, South Kensington, at the annual festival of the Printers' Pension, Almshouse, and Orphan Asylum Corporation. In proposing the toast of the evening, "Continued Prosperity to the Printers' Almshouse and Orphan Asylum Corporation," he said:

"I may wish to say a few words to you respecting the benefits which are conferred on mankind by the act of printing, and likewise respecting the physical condition of those engaged in the trade. We all must admit that the printing perso plays a great and humane part in the civilisation of the world, and that the blessings derived by the community from the art of printing are of incalculable value. (Cheers.) These benefits follow us, indeed, from our very birth to our death. Through the printer's announcement in the messpapers our friends are made aware of our arrival in the world (laughter); by the aid of printing we receive our education and puisue our studies; through its assistance in knowledge and amisement are provided for us; and when the end of life comes the printers record the fact, and in some cases print our biography. (Cheers). There is no walk of life that is not rendered easiet and more useful by the invention of printing. (After alluding to the increase which had taken place in the circulation of printing to the increase which had taken place in the circulation of printing to the increase which had taken place in the circulation of printing to the increase which had taken place in the circulation of printing to the increase which had taken place in the circulation of printing to the increase which had taken place in the circulation of printing to an increase went on to say.)—I understand that the improvements which had been made in printing machinery have not, unfortunately, rendered the work of the printing machinery have not, unfortunately, rendered the work of the printing storage of the samitary conditions of the places in which printing is carried on. I regite, however, to hear that the men still suffer considerably from the impure atmosphere in which they have to work, and this, I am told, is proved by the fact that fifty-six per cent, of the deaths in the trade are due to diseases of the chest and throat. I am informed also, that the nature of a printer's work is exceptionally trying to hi

MR Belchambers, at the call of Mr. Justice Hill, made the following report on the expenses needed for the Sapindikaran Shrad of the late Kumar Inder Chunder Sing:—

"The Sapindikarana, without which the spirit of a Hindoo cannot find entrance into the ancestral region, is an indispensable rite, and should be performed strictly on the first anniversary of the day of death. It is a ceremony designed to introduce the deceased to the manes of his ancestors, as also to do them bound. It may be performed with munificene, or on the lowest scale. At this ceremony food and alms may be given to many persons and learned Brahmins may be DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Suging in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free.—Artificial Ear-drums and similar appliances entirely superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, invited from all parts of the country and honoured with liberal donations, or, where economy is necessary, much may be dispensed with. In the present case the sum originally asked for, R. 5,000, has been increased to R. 6,6429. It appears from the evidence of Jogendia Chandi. Singh that the directions of the family Pundit were not fully carried out; that one to oth, with 300 brass ghurvas, was distered into sorosho (ii.), with 200 brass ghurvas, Only one sorosh should, I think, be allowed. I have therefore reduced the first item in the estimate by half. It also seems to me that some other tems are capable of being moderated, and I purpose to reduce the item of 1,000 to 800, the item of 125 to 125, the item of 300 to 200, the item of 1,000 to 800, the item of 1,240 to 1,000, and the item of 1,25 to 50. The result will be to reduce the total sum of Rs. 6,429 to Rs. 5,145-14. The witnesses produced on behalf of the applicant have been cross-exumined with the object of showing that the sum asked for is excessive. It we reduced the sum asked for to Rs. 5,145-14. The question whether this sum of Rs. 5,145-14 is excessive will depend upon the position of the deceased in Hindoo society and the value of the estate left by him. For the purposes of the present enquiry it was agreed that I should proceed upon the basis of a letter from the A luministrator-General, in which it is stated that the net annual income of the estate is over two and-a-half lakhs; that there is a debt often lakhs secured by a mortigage; that on the 31st Jinnary last the interest due upon this debt amounted to Rs. 1,71,324-49; that other claims have been mide against the estate amounting to Rs. 1,57,844-7. Taking the figures as given by the Administrator-General, the total amount would be Rs. 1,329,168. An estate, the net income of which is over two and-a-half lakhs, would at sixteen years' purchase, be of the value of 40 lakhs, If Rs. 13,29,168 be deducted from this sum, the balance would be Rs. 26,80,812. The deceased occupied a leading position i

19, SUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

Mr. Beichambers is an invaluable officer. There was, we believe, a recommendation from some quarter to raise him to the Bench. When his time was about to be up, a representation from the attorneys went up to retain him or to appoint a joint Registrar that the ripe experience of the present Registrar might not be entirely lost, specially as there was no man to replace him, who combines in himself all the functions of the High Court except those of the Judges. He is retained in his posts for which he is physically as fit now as he was ten years back. It is not enough that he is charged with so many offices in and out of Court. He must be a Pundit too and give vyraithas on shrads and other Hindu ceremontes.

NOTES & LEADERETTES, OUR OWN NEWS,

&

THE WEEK'S TELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS

-4194844-

SARDAR Nastulla Khan is being received in England as a sovereign prince. Full royal nonours attend him in all his movements. A detachment of the Blues has been selected for his escort. He inspected the Dockyard at Portsmouth where he landed and revowed six thousand troops, after which he proceeded by special train to London. There he was met by Lul Carrington, who welcomed him on behalf of the Queen. Great en husbasut was displayed in the station and by the spectators along the route. The prince attended the trooping of the colours on horseback on Queen's Bothday, riding between the Prince of Wales and the Dake of Committee The Sirdar met with an immense reception from the crowt, and on every hand evidence was shown of the great population of his visit. During the afternoon, the Prince of Wales and the Oke of York paid a visit to Dorchester House, and remained in c tion with the Amir's son for half an hour. Prince N isrulla din India Office on May 25, a brilliant company being present, i Prince Henry of Bittenburg, Lord Reay, Lord Harris, and Lord " On May 27, the Prince had half in hour's indience with the at Windsor. The Dake of Connaught received the Amat the sovereign's entrance and presented him to her The audience was observed with full court honours. Prince No. was conducted ceremoniously to the room where the Que of other members of the Royal family was seved. The Queen and ed the Prince with the greatest cordiality, and motioned him seat on the right hand of the throne $T \rightarrow Prince$ then to read a letter from the Amir awelling to a the excellent rel trans existing with Her Majesty's Government. After concluding, or speaking for himself, expressed very great gratification at the $\langle \sigma v \rangle$. of his reception, both by the general public, and in private, st arrival in England, and hoped that the relations between the Queen and the Amir would always be of a friendly nature. Her Majesty replied reciprocating these cordial wishes, when the audience terminated. After the ceremony, the Prince returned immediately to London to be present at a levée held by the Prince of Wales. Next day, Lord Roberts and Sir Donald Stewart visited Sirdar Nassulla Khan and met with a most cordial reception.

In the account two things arrest our attention. There was a distinction in the Queen's reception of Sirdar Nasarulla and that of the Shah Nasiruddin. At the same Castle, on June 20, 1873, Her Majesty herself received the Prince of Persia at the sovereign's entrance. The difference may be due to the difference of status of the two royal visitors. The one was a ruler himself, the other, though of the blood royal, only represented one. The other remark that suggests itself is that while the Amir avoided Lord Roberts, the son had a most cordial reception for him. Here, again, the difference of places perhaps accounts for the anomaly

THE situation in the Far East between Russia and Japan appears to be again assuming an alarming gravity. It is stated that Russia is forming close political relations with Corea, and is about to demand the withdraw it of the Japanese troops from that country.

SIR William Harcourt, replying to several questions in the House of Commons, said that the Government was everywhere acting in cordial co-operation with France and Russia, although it was not the policy of the Government to form an alliance with any group of Powers in Europe or elsewhere. At the annual banquet of the London Chamber of Commerce, held on May 29, Sir Edward Grey, replying to the toast of the Government, said that the reports that had been, and were still being, circulated regarding an early dissolution of Parliament, were simply myths. Referring to foreign affairs, he stated that the Great Powers were acting conjointly to prevent any friction in the East that might lead to a rupture of the peace. The Japanese Minister, who was one of the guests at the banquet, declared that Japan only desired fair play and a share of the world's commerce. He thanked Great Britain for the striking proofs of the good-will which she had exhibited towards the Japanese.

A REPUBLIC has been proclaimed at Formosa with Tang, the Chinese ex-Governor as President. The independence of the island has been formally notified to the foreign Powers. A Japanese fleet has arrived at Tamsu, the chief port, and Japanese troops have landed at Taipelifu. The Japanese warships are bombarding Kneeling.

WHEN, in the House of Commons, on May 24, Sir Joseph Pease brought forward his resolution for abolishing the cultivation and the sale of opium, Mr. Fowler, Secretary of State for India, warmly opposed it as being flagrantly unjust to India. A division resulted in the resolution being rejected by a hundred and seventy-six votes against fifty-nine.

LORD Salisbury, in the course of a speech at Bradford, referred to the Armenian atrocities, and deprecated the use of mere words dealing with the question, unless the country was prepared to employ force to secure the amelioration of the condition of the Armenians. Otherwise silence was best.

JABEZ SPENCER BALFOUR has been committed for trial.

MR. Oscar Wilde has been sent to jail. The jury returned a verdict of guilty and the Judge sentenced him to two years' imprisonment with DEAFNESS COMPLETELY CURED! Any person suffering from Deafuess, Noises on the Head, &c., may learn of a new, simple treatment, which is proving very successful in completely curing cases of ad kin ls. Full particulars, including many unsolicited testimonials and newspaper press notices, will be sent post free on application. To system is, without doubt, the most successful ever brought before the points. Address, Aural Specialist, Albany Buildings, 39, Victoria Success, Westminster, London, S. W.

hard labour. Alfred Taylor, whose sentence was deferred, has now received a similar penalty.

THE Conference of German Bankers has passed a resolution protesting against any change being made in the currency laws for the purpose of favouring silver. A resolution was also recorded deploring the probability of Germany joining in any Monetary Conference. England also sticks to gold. Sir William Harcourt, replying to a memorial presented by prominent merchants and bankers of London, said that the Government was resolved firmly to adhere to the single gold standard in any discussion whereto it might be invited.

TWENTY-ONE British men-of-war under the command of Admiral Seymour, have arrived at Alex indria. The fleet will be visited by the Khedive, and many great fetes have been arranged for during the stay of the squadron.

THE Duke of Cambridge opened, on May 27, at Earl's Court, the Empire of India Exhibition.

MR. Fowler, replying to a deputation of Lancashire cotton operatives, asked for a written statement embodying their views on the specific question whether the cotton duties were of a protective character, which document he undettook to transmit to India for the consideration of that Government, and would afterwards communicate its reply. Mr. Fowler would have treated the deputation better if he had not received it at all. But it deserved no better.

THE new British battleship Terrible, which will be the largest ironclad affort and one hundred feet longer than any other British man-ofwar, has been successfully launched on the Clyde.

OWING to the hostility of King Menelek towards the Italians, Great Britain, at the request of the Italian Government, has forbidden the importation of arms into Abyssinia through the ports on the Somali coast.

Two disasters by sea are reported. The Pacific mail steamer Columa has been wrecked on the coast of Mexico. Nineteen persons have been saved, and a hundred and seventy drowned. The French emigrant steamer Dorpedro, while on a voyage to Argentina foundered off Carril. There were eighty passengers on board at the true, all of whom were drowned, together with twenty-two of the crew. The Captain and twenty-six of the crew were saved.

LORD Resebery has not yet thoroughly recovered. He has been recommended further rest, and goes on another yachting cruise for ten days.

Stirring intelligence has been received from Jeddah. The Bedouins outside that town, on May 30, attacked the British Consul and Vice-Consul, the Russian Consul, and the French Consular Secretary. The British Vice-Consul was shot dead and the British Consul wounded. The Russian and French representatives were also seriously injured. We hope the report is not true.

SUBSCRIPTIONS are being collected from the old students and members of the staff of the Coopers Hill College, for a memorial to Sir George Chesney, who was a staunch friend of the institution. The amount is limited to one gold mohur. It has been ascertained from Lady Chesney that nothing would gratify her more than a monument over her husband's grave in S. Jude's Cemetery at Englefield Green, not far from the College. The family of the late distinguished publicist Mr Robert Knight resented the suggestion of a monument over his grave in Calcutta to be paid for out of the Knight Memorial Fund They said it was their duty to erect a suitable stone to mark his resting place and they would do it; let the public show their regard for the dead by raising some other monument. The preferences of Lady Chesney are those of an Indian Vicerene who had desired that the surplus of the fund raised for a memorial to her husband might be utilized in repairing her English zesidence.

THE result of the Mooktearship examination held by the High Court in the first week of Murch last, is published in the last week of May. There were 1,163 candidates and of this number only 149 have succeeded. The large per centage of failure must be due, in some measure, to the indefiniteness of the non-statutory part of the corriculum laid down. For instance, with regard to Miliomedan Law, the list of text books prescribed includes no book actually existing in Bengali on the subject. The candidates, though they are as a rule utterly ignorant of English, are required to master Baillie's Digest of Mohamedan Law, a rare and costly book, that is quite beyond the capacity and requirements of the Mooktearship candidates. While Ameer Ali's manual containing only about 130 pages of letter-press (crown octavo,) is deemed sufficient for the Pleadership and B. L. tests, it is inconceivable how the authorities could prescribe Bailie's learned digest, containing nearly 2,000 closely printed demy octavo pages, for the lower Mooktearship. A great deal of the intricacies of Mithomedan law, as contained in Baillie's work, his become quite ous lete under British rule, and the wisdom of requiring the Minkteurship candidates to master such a book cannot be obvious to any ordinary mind. Perhaps, it was an oversight. The sooner it is set right, the better.

WITH regard to Hindu law, the books laid down for the mookiears are the Dayibliga, the Mitakshara and Dattaka Chandrika. These are no doubt original authorities. But they are all in Sanskrit, and the candidates are not all expected to have that mastery over Sinskiit which is necessary in studying the treatises on law in our ancient classical language. It is evidently intended hat Bengali translations should be read by those unacquainted with Sinskiit. No particular translations, however, are recommended and the publishers who supply the text books generally give them mere empty phials with gilded labels. A genuine and honest translation of a Sinskiit treatise on law must appear to be a little too stiff to the class of students who appear in the Mooktearship examination, and they are easily led to prefer the itterly worthless compilations brought out anonymously by the shrewd publishers of this town.

THE hardest troubles of the candidates are due to the clumsy and utterly meaningless style of the Bengali translations of the attutory law which they are required to master. A good many of the codes still in force became law and were translated at the time when the late Mr. Robinson was the head of the translation department of the Bengal Secretariat. It is long since that prodigy of Bengali scholarship has retired from his post. Some of the underlings trained in his school are still in the service. And wheher on that account, or for some occult reason not known to the public, the translations subsequently turned out have, in some instances it least, been very nearly in the Robinsonian style. With such a staff as the Bengal Secretariat now possesses, the public might surely expect better work. A thorough revision of authorised translations of the statute law is urgently required, not for the Mooktearship andidates only, out in the interest of the general public also-Ignorance of law being no excuse for its infraction, due facilities ought certainly to be given for its study by all classes.

THE order, to be found elsewhere, of Mr Justice Sale exposes certain practices which, we are afraid, are not rare. The appointment of Receivers and other appointments in connection with private estates, aced careful supervision. This is not the time nor are we disposed to take up the subject. We may do so on a future occasion. We will only remark in the present instance that, if Judges were always as a exquiring as Justice Sale or Justice White or Justice Phear, therewould perhaps not have been any occasion for the present order. We saw a will with the provision that the attorney of the testator should continue to be the attorney of the executors. Probate of the will was recently granted. It does not appear that the clause had attracted the notice of the Judge.

THE heat has been excessive in Calcutta. Men and animals have died of it. A heavy downpour last night considerably cooled the atmosphere but flooded the houses and streets. It was no flood, mind you. It only proved the incapacity of the sewers to drain the water Quickly. The gratings were in no time choked and the water found no escape into the drains. It is growing hot again.

THE indignation expressed by Mr. P. le Page Renouf at "The Book of the Dead," quoted elsewhere, is just. It is not to be said of him that, because he has been replaced by the author in the Bittish Misesum, he is no severe. As an Egyptian scholar of world-wide reputation, he could not pass over the perfunctory performance of his successor. Nor does he speak of his own accord. He was invited to speak out, and he would not be just to himself if he kept silent.

Mr Renoul is another victim of the superannuation rules, which could not have been intended to apply against specialists not physically unfit, like Renoul, Rieu, or Rost. Although in full mental vigour, he had to make room for Mr. Budge, a pushing man and in high favour with the Principal Librarian. It was be who had recommended to the Trustees the costly publication of which Mr. Renoul complains. The present Government seem bent on pensioning off their most deserving and most distinguished officers to provide for their own favourites however incompetent and incapable. They strictly enforce the rule to give to party what was meant for mankind.

MR. Harry Lee is dead. Mr. J. G. Ritchie has been confirmed as Chairman of the Calcutta Corporation. The Corporation befittingly mourned the loss of its Chairman on Thursday. The office was closed and the Commissioners recorded a resolution lamenting the death, arranging for a memorial, and postponing the regular business of the meeting to next day. Mr. Ritchie paid a graceful tribute to the memory of Mr. Lee. Several members representing various sections of the community spoke, bearing testimony to the goodness of the deceased. Coming after Sir Henry Harrison, Mic Lee suffered much by comparison but he was rapidly making up. He was liked by all-Commissioners and officers and clerks, and was attentive to his duties. He was in the best of health when he joined the Municipality, and when he went on leave, no body knew that his end was near. He died of cancer from which there is no escape. When the disease was known, he was patiently expecting death It was indeed once rumoured that he was dead. He took an extension of leave and ceased to live immediately after.

ANOTHER regiettable loss is the death of the scholarly Baboo Krishna Behary Sen, M.A., Rector, Albert College, A good soul he will be mourned by all who knew him. Although he east in his lot with his brother, the late Keshub Chunder Sen, he was careful not to be led away by the pretentions of a new religion and avoided the temptations to the last. Having embraced Brahmoism, he lived and died a time Brahmo,—an example to others. He did not mix himself in the schism that followed Keshub's death. Quet and unobtrusive, he did his dittes without any fuss. A gentleman of the press, his views were moderate. The Liberal under him was truly liberal. He avoided bitterness and always tried to be just. It is rarely that such a man attracts the attention of Government. He was, however, fortunite. He was not only made a Fellow of the University but was also given a seat on the Abkari Commission.

MR. G. A. Guerson is a philosopher and no mistake. He dabbles in Sanskiit and Uidu and is credited with knowing more about the Hindus and Mussalmans that any other Bengal Civilian His zeal, however, in the cause of sanitation and architectural beauty is very great. He has signalised his administration at Howigh by starying a large number of men who have business to transact in the Civil and Commal Courts of the station. One must eat if one is to live; and as regards eating, we think, it is generally allowed that people are free to eat what they like, when they like, and how they like, provided they do not break those rules of decency and politeness which, above others, distinguish man from the brute creation, "Animals feed, but man eats" was one of the solemn aphorisms enunciated by the distinguished gourmand Bridat Savarin. Eating is or intellectual act; at least, there is as much of intellectuality in it as of the mere animal. Mr Grierson's philosophy, however, is not for admitting this freedom or intellectuality in eating. The people of his jurisdiction must feed or gorge their stomachs according to rules and in places provided by his wisdom. A few small wooden stalls are all that one would find in the neighbourhood of the Cutchery buildings at Howrah. These must cater to the creature comforts of suitors and their friends. None of these stalls is roomy. There are no arrangements in any of them for preparing the kind of food one may order. The vendors are all upcountry Hindustanees who are generally noted for their love of fith. They take their supplies from the market

An orthodox Huidu, if desirous of eating, must enter one of these stalls and make his choice of only such articles as are exhibited there for sale and as have been prepared, for aught he knows, many days before He must further make up his mind to eat, exposed the while to the gaze of a miscellaneous crowd gathered in front of the stalls, and running the risk of being touched by others entering those pigeon-holes for the same purpose. Hinduism is still a living force. No wonder that hundreds of men who have business to transact at the Howish Cutchery and who care for religion or health or decency, entirely abstain from eating anything for the whole day than eat what is offered under such conditions. There are Cutcheries at the headquarters of all the Districts and all the Sub-Divisions of Bengal, Nowhere, however, have men to fast as at Howrah in consequence of the hobby horse that Mr. Grierson is disposed to ride to death, and that is connected, as he believes, with sanitation and architectural beauty. The explanation of Mr. Grierson's singular attitude towards hungry suitors and their friends is his mability to hear the sight of native sweetment shops which he considers to be too ugly to be tolerated in the vicinity of the Civil and Criminal Courts of the realin. Mr. Guerson deserves a pat on the back from the Finance Minister for his efforts to augment the public revenue. It is true that the source is not very elastic and does not yield much. For all that, there can be no question that the revenue derived from these wonden stalls or pigeonholes is at least four times as great as the legitimate interest on the expenditure incurred by the State on their construction. The Hon'ble Babu Mohiny Mohan Roy is desirous of applying the rule of Damdupat generally in all suits for recovery of loans, and almost all his colleagues in the Council were agreeable to his views. We think the Hon'ble Member will serve a more useful purpose by applying such a rule to State investments. The State in India, if not exactly a money-lender, is at least an investor for profit. The best part of the matter is that Mr Guerson, after having invested State funds on the construction of his pigeon-holes, lets them out upon a system of public bids like an Abkan Collector knocking down an Opium or a Doasta shop. Serious ly speaking, such petty tyrining deserves to be promptly put down. This consade against native shops, which, whatever their faults, are roomy enough to admit dozens of persons at the sametime, of different castes, and which enable them to gratify one of the most powerful of nature's cravings under the conditions sanctioned by usage and religion, is perfectly foolish and meaningless. A Magistrate who devotes his energies and time to such little, matters as the best plan for constructing and letting the sweet-meat shops about his Cutchery, is -carcely the person who can be expected to attendito his graver duties, The Cutchery grounds at Howrah are sufficiently spacious, more spacious than at Hooghly Plots of land may easily be marked out where in the ten in a them elves in ty be allowed to erect their shops without the State playing the role of a letter of houses.

IN England, they are reforming the marriage law and the law regarding the marriage of divorced persons. A Bill to amend the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, has been read a first time in the House of Lords.

IN India, fresh attempts are being made to reduce the marriage expenses. The Punjab Government made the first move. The Bengal Government follows in its wake. We quote the Punjab letter. It explains itself :

"The Lieutenant-Governor has had for some time under considera-"The Lieutenant-Governor has had for some time under considera-tion the question of the exitavity and expenditure on martiage and funer-al ceremonies, which is one of the chief factors in producing hopeless indebtedness in the Poop by, especially among the agricultural classes, and has come to the conclusion that fresh efforts should be made by the Government and its officers to bring about a reduction of that expenditure, if possible.

(2) Sir Dennis Frizpatrick observes, from the replies received to (a) Sir Dennis Frizpatrick observes, from the replies received to certain enquiries made unofficially by Sir J mess. Livall, that the opinion entertained by some of the officers of the Commission is that, the matter being one of those which can be effectually dealt with only by the people themselves, it is not deviable that the Government or its officers should take any prominent part in it, but should leave it to the people themselves to move, and his Henor quite identist hat in the case of most questions of social reform it is not for the Government and its officers to stout aloof; but the question now referred to seems to stand on an entity by exceptional forming.

(3) Sin far as the Lemen in Government, here appears to be, seeking the Ty simulation, the complete manning among the properties of the strong received in the very one is affailed to be the first to him. Six is a receive to the leave your is affailed to be the first to him. Six is a receive to the max must and himself left alone, marked.

to the jeers and taunts of the wretched class of hangers-on who profit to the jeers and taunts of the wietched class of hangers on who profit by lavish expenditure on ceremonial occasions.

(4) The remedy for this, constantly suggested by the leading men among the people, is that the Government should pass a legislative enactment laying down rules to limit expenditure on such occasions, and providing a penalty for the infringement of those rules. It is said that if such an enactment were passed it would be easier for people to limit their expenditure, as it would then be plain to all that they were doing so, not through any paisimonious feeling, but in obedience to the law; and, moreover, as all would have to obey the law, there would be no danger of any individual being placed in the awkward and trying law; and, moreover, as all would have to obey the law, there would be no danger of any individual being placed in the awkward and trying position above referred to. His Honor believes that if a measure of this sort were proposed by the Government it would meet with a considerable amount of support from the people themselves, and though he is not at present prepared to go so far as to propose such a measure, he is decidedly of opinion that Government and its officers ought to do more than they do at present to support and encourage those persons he is decidedly of opinion that Government and its officers ought to do more than they do at present to support and encourage those persons who desire to bring about this important reform.

(5) Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick thinks that it would, at least to some extent, and the cause of that reform if it were made clear to the people that the Government was strongly impressed with the necessity for it, and would view with approbation and favour those who might exert themselves to bring it about. If District Officers, when they saw an opening, were to suggest to leading men the desirability af establishing committees and laying down rules regarding expenses, as has been done in some districts, and were, moreover, to arrange (for this would be essential) that the committees should report periodically on the working of these rules and the extent to which they were observed; and if it came to be understood that on the many or casions on which a District Officer has to estimate the relative worth or compare the claims of several candidates, for homolay offices or distinctions, some consideration would be given to assistance rendered in promoting this important reform and to adherence to the rules laid down for carrying it out.

(6) His Honor would therefore be glad if Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners would see what they can do towards giving effect to Commissioners would see what they can do towards giving effect to these views during the next camping season, and would submit a report of their action at the beginning of the next financial year.

of their action at the beginning of the next financial year.

(7) There is one point which is repeatedly brought out in the correspondence, and which formed the subject of a representation made to the Lieutenant-Governor some time ago at Umballa, where Mr. Gladistone interested himself very much in this subject, and that is that it is impossible for the inhabitants of any tract of country to reduce their marriage expenses in cases where they intermatry with the inhabitants of another tract of country, unless the inhabitants of the latter tract are prepared to fill in with their rules. The result of this must be that all measures of reform in this direction undertaken in British territory must remain to a their rules. The result of this must be that all measures of reform in this direction undertaken in British territory must remain to a certain extent meffectual, unless the Rolers of adjoining Native States are prepared to co-operate. Sir Dennis Furpatrick observes that in some of the Rappitana States the question of such reforms has been taken up, and that in a more systematic manner than it has been in British India, and he is therefore not without a hope that the Rulers of the Punjab States may be willing to interest themselves in the matter. A copy of this circular will accordingly be forwarded to them for information and for any action they may think expedient towards introducing the reform, which is admitted on all hands to be so much needed."

The Bengal Government has addressed a similar letter for opinion of recognized associations :-

"I am directed to invite attention to the accompaying copy of

"I am directed to invite attention to the accompaying copy of a circular No. 24, dated the 20th September 1894, which has been issued by the Punjao Government, regarding the reduction of marriage expenses, and to request that your association will be good enough to favour Government with an early expression of its views on the subject (2). The Lieutenant-Governor would be glad to know how far any body of opinion exists in favour of reducing such expenditure, and whether any of the leaders of Native society are prepared to put themselves at the head of any such movement. His Honor is much impressed with the desirability of such reform, and would be glad it could be carried out in Bengal; but it must be understood that Government and its officers cannot do more than co-operate with the unfluential members of the community, who must necessarily take the lead in a matter of this kind. If any of the lenders will start the movement Government will gladly help in any way it properly can."

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, June 1, 1895

THE FOREIGN POLICY OF THE BRITISH INDIAN GOVERNMENT.

From a time anterior to the annextion of the Punjab the foreign policy of the Government of India have chiefly been concerned with Afghanistan. Thibet i beyond the inac ressible wall formed by the Himalayas Attempts have infully been made, it is true, to oper the country to British commerce, but the jealousy o the Thibetans having baffled every one of thos attempts, the Brush Indian Government have pair very little attention to the political affarral th country. China is too far removed from 1. 36, and besides her mability to cope with the British powel through the unknown regions on the north-east of Assam has always been too remote to occupy British Indian statesmen for many seconds of time with the thought of providing against danger to the empire from that quarter. Bhootan, as suspected at first and afterwards proved by the mission of 1864, is a weak kingdom where authority is divided between a spiritual and a temporal power. Full of insolence, because ignorant of the resources of the British power, the Bhooteas used to make incursions into British territory, but the military expedition despatched after failure of the Eden mission taught them a lesson which went home into their hearts. Since then, Bhootan has not been a bad neighbour. A little Sikim war impressed that small mountain kingdom, whose position was exceedingly anomalous, with the irresistible might of the British and prevented from that time the possibility of any trouble to British subjects from the raid of the Sikimpati's people. Of all the cis-Hima-layan kingdoms, Nepal has all along occupied the first position. The collision that occurred between the British and the Nepalese early in the century ultimately led to the establishment of satisfactory relations between the two powers. The assistance that the Nepalese Prime Minister gave to Britain during the Sepoy revolt served to cement the friendship between the two Governments and, although a British Resident has always watched the state of affairs in Nepal, yet the measure of interference as regards the internal administration of that country has never been large. The continuance of that friendship has always enabled the British Government to draw the best part of its native soldiery from that country. Burma used now and then to cause some anxiety in consequence of other European nations seeking to plant a footing in that country. But the military power of the descendants of Allompra became exceedingly feeble compared to that of the chief who had conquered Pegu and Tenasssarim and who created an empire, with Ava as its capital, capable of disturbing the peace of neighbours. Then, again, Ava was soundly beaten with all Asia witnessing the vigour of the arm that dealt the blow. For some years, the Court that dealt the blow. For some years, the control of Ava continued to behave properly, resolved to effect by diplomacy what it could no longer hope to accomplish by force. It intrigued with France and Italy, hoping to derive some advantage from those dealings, although it never gave up counting the British power for bringing about a surrender of Pegu and Tenassarim. Lord Dalhousie's celebrated reply, however, which Earl Mayo had to repeat in a modified from, viz., that as long as the sun shines in the heavens, so long shall the British flag float over Pegu and Tenassarim, crushed the hope of Burmese statesmen to obtain back by any means what they had to code as the price of their folly. British statesmen felt little anxiety about Burma, so that when it was resolved that Burma should cease to exist as an independent power, there was nothing to inpede the execution of that resoluattention of Boy 6 desmen. All the great mfierce. Many or he transcomposing them, that the lemma has force was annihilated. Lord Anck-geographically as a San India, are perfectly laws soften as one paralysed. He successor, Lord the possibility of China's making a way to India Their native mountains can scarcely yield them the means of life. Poverty and want compel them to look to plunder as a legitimate source of supplying their wants. They live in some sort of tribal organisation, nominally owning allegiance to the sovereign of the country. Crossing their frontiers they frequently raid into British territory and, when pursued by a stronger force, fly into their own mountains which are generally inaccessible. The British Government may send punitive expeditions against them without being at war with their nominal sovereign. Treaties are frequently made with their chiefs which are supposed to bind them as well, but, as a matter of fact, they behave decently only as long as they retain the memory of the vengeance exacted last from them by the British expeditionary columns.

> Leaving out this factor of border tribes, Afghanistan as a political kingdom, having a definite Government representing the people in general, has, within the last quarter of a century, come to be invested with an importance that is entirely new. The fear of a Russian invasion of India, though it has existed in a modified form for more than a century, has, without referring to the fever-heat to which it rose during the administration of Lord Auckland, taken definite shape only within the last five and twenty years. The extension by Russia of her Asiatic dominions and their consolidation have brought the occurrence of a British Indian imbroglio with Russia within the domain of practical politics. Every advance that Russia has made has lessened the distance between her Empire and British India. The rectification of the Indian frontier, or as the expression came to be subsequently modelled, by the most imaginative of British Ministers, a scientific frontier for India, was not heard of till Russophobia became a general and confirmed malady of British statesmen. A history of the policy pursued towards Afghanistan and towards the other peoples inhabiting the regions through which the advance has been regarded as possible of a Russian army of invasion, is fraught with interest. That interest, it may be said, deepens in view of the Chitral imbroglio from which the Government has not yet emerged.

We will not refer to the silly acts of Lord Auckland's administration for counteracting the spread of Russian influence in Asia. History has pronounced its verdict. The whole of the Afghan policy, from first to last, of Lord Auckland, was a tissue of folly. With the mission to civilize and too strong to be resisted by any of the tribes in her Asiatic frontier, nothing could be more natural for Russia than the extension of her Asiatic empire. Any attempt, therefore, to resist the progress of Russia in that direction must be looked upon as folly. In the thirties, Russia had not entered into her career of Asiatic conquest. What she sought was the maintenance and extension of her legitimate influence. The British statesmen of the time endeavoured to oppose even this policy. Some of the projects were utterly chimerical. The principal one was to bring Afghanistan completely within British influence tion. Practicelis, therefore, Afghanistan is the one by sending out a military expedition. It was resolved country in Asia and has occupied the serious to take an atage of one those interminable fends which ear the political history of Afghanistan. vaders and couque to India penetrated into the Prepartion of the made on a fairly extensive scale, country through any last in Some were supply a After that the concesses, which were splended, country by Afghani tan it off. The people are sturdy and pre-element decision everywhere spirating an in-Ellenborough, exacted signal vengeance and re-established the reputation of British arms in Asia. With the murder of Shah Shoojah, the policy was played out of placing a ruler at Cabool friendly to British interests. It was abundantly demonstrated that the British cause was regarded by the people as hostile to the national cause, and that any ruler whom the British power would support by subsidies of money and arms, and by British contingents either stationed in the country or ready to march into it for punishing his enemies, would become thoroughly hateful to the people. After its evacuation by the army of vengeance, Afghanistan was left to itself. The policy, as it came to be called, of "masterly inactivity" was adopted. Considering the peculiar nature of the Afghan people, that policy was unquestionably the soundest. The prospects of political parties in Afghanistan change with a rapidity that is remarkable. Situations prove exceedingly slippery. No permanence can be hoped for in the maintenance of treaty obligations. These facts were well understood by those who recommended the policy of non-interference in Afghan affairs. Unfortunately, the fear of Russia again operated to unsettle the minds of the British. The field abandoned by British might be occupied by Russian diplomacy. To have a friendly Afghanistan, to make its ruler strong, to subsidise him with both money and arms, so that it might make a good buffer against an invading foe, was once more resolved upon, Among the later Viceroys no one was more afflicted with Russophobia than Lord Lytton. The ruler of Afghanistan was accused of receiving a Russian mission with honour after he had refused to receive a British mission. Other acts were imputed to him which showed that, while disposed to favour the Russian cause, he was hostile to British interests. Afghanistan was once more invaded by a British force marching by three routes. British arms succeeded. The ruler of the country fled and soon after died. One of his sons was placed on the throne and, notwithstanding past experience, a British Resident forced upon him. That brave officer fell a victim to Afghan wrath. A new war of vengeance and the deportation of the ruler to British India followed. Abdur Raman was then placed on the throne and he is still ruling the country. He is supposed to be friendly to the British and is subsidised with money and arms. Treaties have been made with him and the late Foreign Secretary of the Government of India is regarded to have achieved a brilliant diplomatic triumph whose effect has been the establishment of relations more cordial than ever. Russia, it is believed, has been effectually checkmated in that direction.

So Abdur Rahman rules, recognised by the British Government and supported by British influence and money. If a rising takes place and Abdur Rahman loses both his throne and life, it is not known whether the British Government will send an army to his country for punishing his slayer and successor. The terms of the last treaty have been kept secret. The probability is that the successful competitor will be cordially shaken by the hand by a British envoy especially despatched for bearing to him some valuable presents with the assurance of British recognition and support. Even this is regarded as a policy of wisdom. It has, we have seen, been adopted in the case of Nepal. At Chitral also the same programme was played out after the murder of the Mehtar who had been ruling with British recognition. It will, we may be sure, be adopted towards Afghanistan. Asiatic peoples are incapable of loses both his throne and life, it is not known whether differentiating such a policy from what they call insincerity. Can Abdur Rahman have the heart to play the sincere friend of the British Government with the conviction always present in his mind that if misfortune overtakes him and if, like so many of his predecessors, he has to fly before a successful rising headed by some ambitious chief or prince, the latter, immediately after his ascending the throne, will fill Abdur Rahman's place in the affections of his English allies and friends? Asia is not the field for the adoption of such a policy.

Metter to the Editor.

A CURE FOR SNAKE-BITE.

Sir, --- Since the publication in your paper, of my letter on this subject, applications for the newly discovered remedy have been pouring in from far and wide. But the plant being very rare and, slow of growth, it is impossible to meet the heavy demand and although I have taken the necessary precaution to distribute it only among medical men and a few others in small quantities, yet the stock in hand has been almost exhausted. I shall therefore thank your readers to wait until its properties (and it seems to possess more than one) are verified authoritatively.

As soon as it passess successfully through the ordeal of medical test, (of which a due notice will be given to the public) its cultiva tion on an extensive scale will be taken in hand, and your readers may rest assured that their applications for its supply will be scrupulously attended to.

Thanking you for your kind support in the interest of humanity, --- Yours, &c.,

> N. M. KHORY, Sailana, C. I.

THE ROOK OF THE DEAD.

[The Papyrus of Ant in the British Museum. The Egyptian text, with interlinear transliteration and translation, a running translation, introduction, &c. By E. A. Wallis Budge, Litt. D., Keeper of Egyptian and Assyrian Antiquities. (Printed by order of the Trustees.)] of the Trustees.) J

Two evening papers containing highly enthusiastic notices of Mr. Budge's translation of the Ani papprus have been sent to me by persons who lelt sure of the deep interest I must take in the startling revelations promised in this publication.

One of the notices, which is anonymous, sums up its estimate of the book by prophesying that "it will remain a masterpiece of hieroglyphical scholarship" Writers as well as readers ought fully of the merits of "hieroglyphic scholarship" is extremely limited, and that not one of them is likely to write anonymously Reputations founded either on self-assertion or on anonymous putting are till now unknown to Egyptology.

The other notice, which speaks of Mr. Budge's work as "one of the most important that has been issued in this country," bears the name of a gentleman known as an Assyriologist. But acquaintance with cunciform texts is hardly good security for competence in criticising "heroglyphic scholarship." The pious feelings of in criticising "nietoglyphic scholarship." The pious feelings of Mr. Boscawen are in deep sympathy with certain Egyptian texts, of which he assumes that Mr. Budge has given the exact meaning.

mythological personages, who have no more pretentions to be the God of monotheists or philosophers than Mars, Bacchus, or Apollo. Who would think of quoting "Nec deus intersit" as evidence of monotheistic thought?

The whole of this Introduction is a mere mass of undigested cram out of the books (it matters not whether good, bad, or indifferent) which stand upon the shelves of the Egyptian Department. I do not know out of which book Mr. Budge has taken the extraordinary statement that "in the XVIIIth Dynasty Queen Hatshapset declared herself to be the creator of things which came into being like Khepera." The great queen never said anything of the kind; the translation of her words is simply monstrous. The Egyptian verb cheper is neuter, and never means "create." To think so is like confounding fieri with facto. It is on a par with the schoolboy's Qui fit Maecenai, Who made Maecenas?"

Of the value of the translation given as that of the Papyrus of Ani, the following specimens will give a fair notion to any intelligent reader: The whole of this Introduction is a mere mass of undigested gent reader :

1. The vignette of what is called chapter 110 consists of a sort of plan of the Egyptian clusium, with its islands, streams, cornfields, inhabitants, and presiding deities. The names of these objects are written over them, and one of the inscriptions runs as follows:

"Mouth of the canal a thousand leagues in width, but of untold

"Mouth of the canal a thousand leagues in width, but of unfold length," &c.

There is not the least difficulty here. The sense of the Egyptian word for "canal" is given in Dr. Birch's Dictionary, and was well known before. The Coptic bos "canalis, aquae ductus" has preserved the meaning. The word atru (which I call league) is the well-known greatest Egyptian measure of length. For proof that the words which I translate as "width" and "length" are rightly so translated, as distinguished from each other, I refer to the texts which eige the dimensions of the temples and their chambers, such which give the dimensions of the temples and their chambers, such as that quoted by Duemichen in the Zenubrift of 1873, p. 110.
"Mouth" is certainly an ambiguous expression in Egyptian when applied o a stream. It is used in the sense of "surface" in the inscriptions of the XIIth Dynasty, indicating the maximum height

Now let us see Mr. Budge's translation of this very passage

"Chapter of the River-horse. The river is one thousand [cubits] in its length. Not can be told its width."

"Chapter of the River-horse"." written, no doubt, for the edi-

"Chapter of the River-horse". I written, no doubt, for the edification or delectation of the horse-marines! The word for "stream" or "canal" Mr. Budge understands as being a "river-horse"; the word expressive of long measure he takes for a "river"; and he is in consequence obliged to invent and interpolate into his translation some word of measure, "cubits," as a noun corresponding to 1000. But a river only 1000 cubits long, but of a width which cannot be described, must be a very extra-ordinary river, and not in the least like that represented in the vienette. vignette.

2. In the very same chapter (110) there is a passage wherein it 15 said of the god Thoth:
"He reconcileth the two warrior gods with each other. He severeth the mourners from those who quarrel with them; he putteth a stop to them whose hand is violent against those weaker than themselves; he keepeth within bounds the contentions of the Powers."

Mr. Budge's version is :

"I have pacified the two holy Fighters; I have cut off the hairy scalp of their adversaries," &c.

The Turin text has (wrongly) the verb in the first person, but in what text can any person who understands the language discover any allusion to "hairy" or "scalp"? And who are the adversaries of the two holy fighters, who have deserved the fate which Mr. Budge's words indicate? Here is a valuable contribu-ion to Egyptian anthropology.

3. It would, I think, be unnecessary to quote anything more for the purpose of satisfying an Egyptologist as to the value of Mr. for the purpose of satisfying an Egyptologist as to the value of Mr. Budge's translation, but one need not be an Egyptologist to see the force of the point to which I now refer. The forty-two gods of the Hall of Judgment are emphatically described as "possessors of righteousness and void of wrong." Can any one, whether Egyptologist or not, believe that a translator is likely to be right when he makes a suppliant address one of these gods as "doublw wicked, coming forth from Adi"? I suppose "doubly wicked" is intended by the translator to be taken in a non-natural and Pickwickian sense, by a figure of speech the reverse of euphemism, perhaps as an instance of what is called Gegentum, better understood perhaps as an instance of what is called Gegenunn, better understood by our French friends as contresens.

Now it is not to be wondered at that, after so artlessly giving such a specimen of his attainments as the transcription and such a specimen of his attainments as the transcription and translation of the first line of the "Tale of the Two Brothers" in the hook called The Nule, presented by Messrs. Cook to passengers on their tourist steamers, Mr. Budge should boldly undertake a task from which some of the most eminent scholars have shrunk. They shrunk from this task, not from any pusillanimous reason, nor because they thought themselves inferior in ability or knowledge to their neighbours, but because One of the clauses provided that all receipts for collection should they knew of difficulties of which Mr. Budge is unconscious, or which he has his reasons for ignoring. Other people may waste their time in making out the various senses of words in the vocabulary or the niceties of the grammar; but he uses their labours as a school-boy uses his Liddell and Scott, and if he happens to find a difference in their results, he sits in judgment and dogmatically takes the result which he likes best at the moment, without being able to assign a reason for his choice. Now, if Mr. Budge had chosen to publish this work at his own risk and cost, no one could have had reason, except on scientific grounds, for complaint. But the matter is far more serious as it stands. Who has taken upon himself the respon-sibility of advising the Trustees of the British Museum to print at the public expense a work of such pretension and cost. Has any one competent scholar been consulted on the subject? Is the Principal Librarian under the illusion that this costly work is comparable in value with the little "Guide to the Nimroud Central Saloon," of 1886, which is (or was) sold for fourpence?

Can anything, to the scholur, be more idle and wasteful than the transcription of the entire text? It can only serve to excite the wonder of cockneys and point out to others the defects of Mr Budge's scholarship. Who, but for this unnecessary display of ignorance, could have guessed that anyone who had the pretension of being able to translate "The Book of the Dad" should transcribe as ienar one of the commonest and best known words of the language, signifying "repulse"? I at first took it for a misprint, but it occurs too often, and the nature of the mistake is quite evident. It is the same kind of mistake as if VI in Henry VI.

were considered as the final syllable.

The interlinear translation shows at once the artless devices by which difficulties are got over when they are felt; when they are not felt, a corrupt or impossible text is as easy as another. is a passage (chap. 147) which in the original says, "I come to thee, Osiris, whose sap is undefiled." The word which I render "sap" is generally translated "emanation," but it is rather like the Greek word which flows in the bodies of the gods. The vital sap of Osiris is said to be the source of life to men and gods. Mr sap of Osiris is said to be the source of life to men and gods. Mr Budge translates this passage (p. 62), "I have come to thee, Osiris, pure [from th] emanations." And in another place (which is corrupt in Ani, but most easily corrected from any other copy), he reads "purified from thy foul emanations." Who is purified, theman or the god? the latter probably. The translator here does not understand a very obvious thing. There is no need of interpolating a preposition "from," which utterly falsifies the sense. The Egyptian expression, consisting of an adjective followed by a noun, must be translated like our "cold-blooded," "long-legged," "short-sighted." Mr. Budge has more than once rightly translated such phrases, but that was when others had already done so beforhim.

P. LE PAGE RENOUE.

--- The Academy.

HIGH COURT: ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION CONDUCT OF A RECEIVER.

In the case of Manick Lall Seal er. Surrath Kumari Dassi and others, the following judgment was given on May 29 by Mr Justice Sale :---

This is an application by a Receiver appointed under the order of the 11th September, 1894. The object of the application is to bring to the notice of the Court certain circumstances connected with his appointment and to ask for the direction of the Court under the circumstances.

The estate in the suit is the estate which was of Punna Lall Seal.

The plaintiff is the adopted son of Punna Lall Seal, who was adopted by Surrath Kumari Dassi subsequent to the death of her husband. The suit was instituted ie purpose of administering the estate, etc. Surrath Kumari for the purpose of administering the estate, etc. Surrath Kumari Dassi in 1879 obtained administration to her husband's estate and entered into possession and managed it from 1879 to 1894 Subsequently under a deed of transfer, made under the Administrator-General's Act, she transferred the estate to the Administrator-General. Since the date of the transfer the estate has been in the possession of the Administrator-General who wa-also appointed Receiver of the estate. A decree was made in the asso appointed in the state adopted son and declaring the rights of Surrath Kumari to maintenance out of the estate, and by the decree certain enquiries were directed. Subsequently a schemwas prepared by which it was intended to raise a considerable sum of money to pay off the liabilities of the estate and a part of the arrangement was that the estate should be managed for the future. by a Receiver to be appointed for the purpose. In connection with that scheme Mr. W. H. Ryland was proposed as a fit person to be appointed Receiver, and it would appear that Surrath Kumari was prepared to assent to the appointment on certain conditions which were embodied in an agreement which was signed by her and Mr. Ryland. It is not necessary to refer to all the terms of the agreement to say that the object was to place very extensive control over the Receiver in the hands of Surrath Kumari Dassi.

be jointly signed and issued under the hand of Surrath Kumari and of the Receiver. And the clause provided that Surrath Kumari should have the right of dismissing the Receiver at any time without objection by him subject only to the condition that if she exercised that right within three years of the appointment of the Receiver she should pay him a substantial compensation—Rs. 6,000. In making the application for the appointment of Mr. Ryland as making the application for the appointment of wir. Kyland as Receiver, Surrath Kumari, the petitioner, filed a petition, in the 22nd paragraph of which she makes the following statement: "That your petitioner has arranged with Mr. W. H. Ryland of No. 15, Kyd Street, in Calcutta, who was at the time of his retirefrom Government Service acting as Superintendent of Stamps and Stationery, and who was formerly for sometime Manager of the Estate of Babu Gopal Laul Seal, a co-sharer of the said Punna Lall Scal, and who has for sometime past been the Manager of the said Estate of the said Punna Lall Scal, under the said Administrator-General as such private Receiver as aforesaid, subject to the sanction and approval of this honourable Court, at a monthly salary of Rs. 500, a suitable carriage and horse being provided for the use of the said Mr. W. H. Ryland, and he being provided with suitable establishment for both the sudder and the motossil cutcheries."

Now I regret to have to observe that this statement was of wholly misleading character. The suggestion is that that was a full and fair statement of what the arrangement was, whereas it is obvious that the most objectionable features of the arrangement are whily omitted. However an order was made on this position, and no objection being made to the appointment, Mr. position, and no objection being made to the appointment, Mr. Ryland was appointed. Subsequently and before he took over possession his attention was called to the grave impropriety of the Receiver and the parties interested in the estate coming to a arrangement which had not been brought to the notice of the Court, the object of which was to allow the parties or a party opportunities for very serious interference with the management of the property. I ought to have said shortly after the order was made a fresh arrangement was made which also was not brought to the notice of the Court, the effect of which was to modify the fresh arrrangement in certain minor particulars. A correspondence ensued between Mr. Ryland and Messrs. Remfry and Rose, the attorneys for Surrath Kumari, in which Mr. Ryland insisted that notice of these arrangements should be given to the court, and the Court's directions asked in respect of Mr. Ryland's appointment as Receiver. Messrs. Remfry and Rose, on the other hand, insisted either that Mr. Ryland should loyally, as they put it, carry out the agreements come to or resign the appointment. There is one circumstance which I have omitted to refer to, but which I am bound to give expression to, and that is the fact of which I was informed by the counsel of Surrath Kumari, that one of the clauses of the original agreement provided that the Receiver should employ Messrs. Remfry and Rose as his attorneys. It is right to add that the clause was struck out before the execution of the agreement, but it is obvious that there was at one time an object not merely to obtain henefit to Surrath Kumari in respect of the management of the estate, but a desire also to secure to her attorneys a benefit under the arrangement. Now the first question is as to what the fact of the existence of these agreements ought to have on the appointment made. I have no hesitation whatever in expressing my opinion that the parties concerned in making these agreements were themselves guilty of gross contempt of Court, for which each and all them are liable to commitment. It is further also clear to me that it was a gross fraud on the Court for any party to put forward a person as Receiver who had disqualified himself by coming to a secret arrangement of this character with the parties to the suit. There can be no doubt that if, before the appointment, the Court had become aware that the parties intended by a secret arrangement to control the conduct of the Receiver, that the appointment would never have been made. It cannot be too clearly understood that a Receiver appointed by the Court has only just such power and authority to manage the property as the Court sees fit to give him. He is the servant of the Court and not of the parties to the suit, and any interference with his management by secret arrangements before or after appointment is nothing short of an interference with the Court's possession and management of the estate, and parties The question, however, whether under the circumstances I ought to allow the fact that the Receiver has, without the knowledge of the Court, entered into these arrangements to operate as a permanent disqualification. In the first place when I indicated my view of these arrangements the parties expressed themselves willing to withdraw the agreements and abandon them. That is a circumstance to which I ought to give due weight. Further, in the affidavits which Surrath Kumari and the Receiver put in, they in effect state that they had no sort of knowledge that by entering into these arrangements, they were doing anything improper, nor did they intend to interfere in any way with the Receiver's due wheneving of his duties, nor did they believe that these arrangements and gave outh to, indigestion and dyspepsia. The same story of resembled have the effect of interfering with the Receiver's proper to tunu and gratuinle after an appeal for help had been made to discharge of his duties. In one of the letters written by Messrs.

Remfry and Rose on behalf of Surrath Kumari to Messrs. Carruthers and Co., who were acting for Mr. Ryland, there is this stated

It is to be regretted that it did not occur either to ourselves or to

Mr. Ryland to bring the agreement to the notice of the Court.

Now if it be that the impropriety of the parties in making these agreements was not present to the mind of attorneys of experience like Messrs. Remfry and Rose, it perhaps is not singular that neither Mr. Ryland nor Surrath Kumari were conscious that they were doing anything which was improper in making the agreement. They might well have supposed that if there was any impropriety the attorneys would have been aware of it, and would have warned them of the fact. However willing I may be to accept the assurance of Mr. Ryland and Surrath Kumari that they were acting bona fide in becoming parties to the agreement, I am bound to sat I find it very difficult, indeed, to accept any such excuse on behalf of the attorneys themselves. That they should have been unaward that there was anything improper is to me both incomprehensible and inexcusable. I think, having regard to the fact that I am wining so accept Mr. Ryland's explanation that he himself was entirely unables contrary or inconsistent with the aware that he was doing anything contrary or inconsistent with the proper discharge of his duties, and having regard to the fact which is admitted on all hands, of his peculiar fitness for the office, I should be doing the best thing for the estate if I abstain from removing him from the post of Receiver and give him liberty forthwith to enter into possession. This is the order I propose to make on this application.

Mr. Garth appeared on behalf of a certain Loan Corporation, who are stated to have advanced moneys to the estate relying on the appointment of Mr. Ryland as Receiver, but it appeared to me then, appointment of Mr. Ryland as Receiver, but it appeared to me then, and I think so still, he had no locus stands. As regards costs, it obviously is an application the costs of which ought not to be borne by the estate. I make no order as regards the Receiver's own costs. As regards the costs of Manick Lall Scal and the Administrator General, they must be paid by Surrath Kumari Dassi. If the attorneys had done their duty, this application would have been unnecessary, and the parties would not have been put to the costs

OFTEN TIRED BUT NEVER WEARY.

UTLIN LIMID DUI MIYER WEART.

LET'S discuss this point for two minutes Heie's a man who says that at a certain period he began to feel "tried and weary." That's precisely the way he puts it in his letter. Now anybody has a right to feel tried of fatigued (it's the same thoug), after labour or much exercise. It's the body's fashion of telling you to hold up, to give it a rest. It's a natural and, in health, with supper and sleep just ahead, a pleasant feeling. But weatness: !—that's different. That comes of monotony, of waiting, of loneliness. Weatness is of the mind, not of the body. But it can arise in the body, all the same. It this bothers you at first. of waiting, of foneliness. Weatiness is of the mind, not of the body, all the same. It this bothers you at first, don't say, "Stuff!" "humbug!" but study up on it. A man may be treed and happy, but not weary and happy. For weatiness means depressed spurits, and nerves all sagged down in the middle. And when you get both at once you will be wise to find out what's gone when you get both a took to the your work.

It is a short letter, this is, and we can just as well quote the whole of it. The writer says: "It was in November, 1887, when I began to feel tired and weary. It seemed as if I had no strength left in me. Before that I had always been strong and healthy. My appetite was poor, and for days together I could not touch any food that was placed before me. After every meal that I did succeed in forcing down I had such die diful pans in the chest and back that I was almost afraid to et. Then there was a sharp pain around the heart, too, as though I was stabbed with a knife.

"I lost a deal of sleep, and for nights together I didn't sleep at all. Then I beg in to lose firsh rapidly, and was afraid I was going into a consumption. Yet I kept on with my work, however, but it was a hard thing for us, because I was so weak and nervous that I trembled from consumption. Yet I kept on with my work, however, but it was a hard thing for me, because I was so weak and nervous that I trembled from he at to foot. As time went on I gradually got worse and worse, and my eyes were sunken and drawn in I consulted a doctor in Kentish Town. He gave me medicine, but it did no good. After all this I got the idea of a my he of that I should not recover.

6. One dry a I ray come into the shop, and noticing the state I was in, king to elect the my log I had been all I told her all about it, and she said 'You by Mother Se gets Curative Syrup; it has made the well, and I believe I will do you now.'

behave it will do you good."
"I sent for a bottle, and after taking only a few doses I felt relieved.
Presently my food agreed with me, and I enjoyed my meals. I could sleep better also, an by keeping on taking the Sying I soon got a strong as I ever way mow bife. Since that time (now over four years ago), I have been in the best of health. I consider that in all probability this remedy saved my big; at all events, it restored my health, and life without health don't amount to much. I glidly consent to the publication of the statement, and will answer inquiries. Yours truly (Signed), G. VINCK, 142, Shepheid's Bush Road, London, W., November 30th, 1892."
Thus Mr. Vince's unfortunate experience comes to happy end. As he has to work for a living, like most of us, he is no doubt often tired, but ber 30th, 1892."

Thus Mr. Vince's unfortunate experience comes to happy end. As he has to work for a living, like most of us, he is no doubt often tired, but never weary any more. And what can possibly be more wearisome than long-continue alliness? With him, as with millions, it was the stom ich that where fault. His food entered the stomach and stopped there. So he suffer all from two had results; he received no strength from it, but in the receive the deadly acids and gases which the fermented stuff gave but his, Indigestion and dyspepsia. The same all stows of non-mal mayors and thank merch, the same story of res-

CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA. LOAN NOTIFICATION.

The Commissioners of Calcutta are prepared, with the sanction of the Governor-General in Council given under Section 404 of Act. II (B. C.) of 1888, to open the section 404 of R. II (B. C.) of 1888, to open the security of the tate, tixes and dues imposed and levied made to the section of the s the Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act, 1888

The Debentures will have a currency The Debentures will have a currency of fifteen years from the 1st December, 1895, and will bear interest at the rate of 4 per ceor. per annum, payable on the 1st June and 1st December of each year.

3. The form of the Debenture Bonds will December of each year.

3. The form of the Debenture Bonds will be that given in the twelfth schedule of Act.

II. (B, C) of 1888

4. No Debenture Bonds will be issued for any sum less than Rs 500, and above that amount Debentures will be issued only for complete sums of Rs 100.

5. Tenders for the whole or any part of the above Loui of Rs. 18,00,000 will be received by the Secretary to the Corporation up to 2 o'clock P M. of Friday, the 28 h June, 1895.

6. Each tender must be made out in the form annexed to this Notification, and enclused in a selded cover addressed to the Secretary to the Corporation, and superscribed o'Tender for Municipal Loan of 1895 96."

7. Each tender must be accompanied by Government promissory notes, Calcutta Municipal Debentures, currency notes or cheques for not less than 3 per cent, of the amount tendered.

8. When a tender is accented, the deposite tendered.

8. When a tender is accepted, the deposit 8. When a tender is accepted, the deposit, when made in currency notes, or cheques, will be held as a payment in part of the amount tendered, and will bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent, per annum from the date of acceptance of the tender, provided that the whole amount tendered is paid up in the manner hereinafter prescribed; but no debenture will seen for the sum so deposited so long as the entire amount of the tender is not paid.

9. The deposits on tenders which may not be accepted will be returned on application, and no interest will be payable on such deposits If an albutnent after being made is not taken up, and the full amount allotted is not taken up, and the full amount allotted is not taken up, and the full amount allotted is not paid as hereinafter prescribed, the deposit will paid as hereinatter prescribed, the deposit will be forfeited 10. The rate at which a tender is made must be specified in upees, or rupees and annas; a tender in which the rate is not so specified will be rejected as null and void.

11. The rates stated in a tender must not contain any fraction of an anna. If a rate containing fraction of an anna, is inserted in any tender, such fraction will be struck out, and the tender treated as if the rate did not contain such fraction of an anna.

12. The amount of the accepted tenders must be paid into the Bank of Bengal in the following instalments:

One-third by the 15th July.

Do. by the 14th August.

Do. by the 14th August.

Parties whose tenders are accepted will have the option of paying all or any of the instal-

Parties whose tenders are accepted will have the option of paying all or any of the instalments before the dates specified above, and will receive interest from the date of such payment.

13 Anticipation interest will be paid on all instalments from the respective dates on which such instalments are paid into the Bank of Bengal to the 30th November, 1895.

14 In the case of two or more tenders at the same rate a pro rata alloument will be made (if the tenders are accepted), but no alloument will be issued if the amount distributable on any tender is less than Rs 500.

15 A minimum having been previously

1700 table on any tender is less than Rs 500.

15 A minimum having been previously fixed, tenders will be opened by the Loan Committee of the Commissioners at 2-30 P. M., on Friday, the 28th June, 1895, at the Municipal Office.

same subject to the conditions notified at the rate of Rupees annas for every Hundred Rupees allotted to me. I enclose Government promissory notes, Calcutta Municipal Debentures, currency notes or a cheque for Rs.

Signed

IN THE PRESS

To be published in October 1895

AN INDIAN JOURNALIST:

Life, Letters and Correspondence

Dr. SAMBHU C. MOOKERJEE.

late Editor of "Reis and Rayyet,"

BY

F. H. SKRINE, cs

The volume, uniform with Mookerjee's Travels and Voyages in Bengal, will consist of about 600 pages and contain, inter alia,

- 1. A portrait of the Doctor
- 2 A Biography, illustrated by copious notes and ana.
- 3. About 225 pages of original essays from his brilliant pen.
 - 4 Selections from his correspondence.

PRICE: To registered subscribers paying in . Rs. 5 advance ...

To other subscribers and ordinary .. Rs 6 purchasers ...

After paying the expenses of the publication the surplus will be placed wholly at the disposal of the family of the deceased man of

Orders will be registered by the Business Manager, "An Indian Journalist," at the Bee Press, I, Uckoor Dutt's Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutta.

Subscribers to the "Essays by a Brahman' will be communicated with.

To ensure accuracy and avoid all mischance, some such form may be used as,

Please enter my name as a subscriber for copies of "An Indian Journalist." The amount, has been remitted per-money order To be legibly (Name......

Address.....

1895.

written

Novelty in Ayurvedic Medicine. AYURVEDIC PHARMACY.

36, Lower Chitpore Road, Fouzdari Balaknana, Calcutta

KAVIRAJ NAGENDRA NATH SEN, Physician, Surgeon, Accuachent, practises the Ayurvedic system of medicine, after having obtained a diploma at the final examination of one of the Government medical Institutions of the country.

SPECIFICS

SPECIFICS

Secretary to the Corporation.

MUNICIPAL OFFICE
Calcutta, 28th May 1895.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR DEBENTURES.

I hereby tender for Rs. of the Municipal four (4) per cent. Debeature Loan for 1895 96, and agree to pay for the

CAUTION!

It having been notified to the Proprietor of Beecham's Pills that certain unscriptions dealers have recently been perpetrating a fraud in connection with the 4 anna box lately introduced, the public are requested to see that the retail prices, (718., 4 annas, 8 annas or 9 12d, 12 annas of 15 1 12d. and Rs, 2 or 21. 9d) are clearly printed on the hid of each box. The fraud to which attention is drawn is that in the case of the two smaller sizes, the prices have been obliterated and the boxes represent ed to be of higher value than they really

Sole Wholesale Agents, for India, Burma and

G. ATHERTON & CO.,

3 NEW CHINA BAZAAR STREET CALCUTIA.

NOTICE.-Should any difficulty be expenenced in obtaining supplies, the Agents will be happy to forward sample boxes at above Rupee rates plus V. P. P. Charges and Postages.

TFXT BOOKS IN ENGLISH.

BY SARADA PRASAD BANERIEE. SPECIMEN PAPERS AND ANSWERS

THE ENGLISH ENTRANCE COURSE For 1895.

Having the largest sale of all similar works,

PREPARATORY ENGLISH COURSE

FOR 2nd & 3rd CLASSES

This book has been approved by the Central Text Book Committee

INDIA READERS NO. 2 FOR 4th & 5th CLASSES INDIA READERS NO. 1

FOR 6th & 7th CLASSES

These books are of o markably simple style

These books are or a mark inv simple style and quite suited to be on students.

The attention 1.5 to d authorities in the N.-W. P and Onon, (a Pinjan, Matter, Bountry, the Central Product, Assun, and Borma, invited to the once p m rits

To be had of

SILVALE & CO.

NAWAB BAHADUR ABDOOL LUTEEF

NA	WAN DAMADUA ADDUCT LUIE	ĿΓ
	MEMORIAL FUND.
1.	His Highness The Maharaja of Dur-	₹5.
	bhanga K.C I E ,	000
2.	anagion, GCLE,	000
3.	His Highness the Nawab Bahadur of
4	Moorshedabad, Amrul Omra, GC1E. His Highness the Nawab of Junagadh,	800
*		500
5.	His Highness the Mahar qu. Bahadur
6.	of Cooch Behar, GCIF. Nawab Bahadui So K Abdul Gham,	500
	RCSI and Nawab Bahadon K
7.	Ashan Ulla, C.I.V Nawah Imat Imat Bahadur	500 500
7 · 8.	Ashan Ulla, C.LF	500
9. 10.	Shams-ul Ulama Syed Ali Belgrami Khan Bahadar Bhai Bahanddin C Lie	500
	Khan Bahadar Bhai Bahauddin, C.I.E., Vizier to the Nawah of Junagadh	30.
11.	Maharqa Bahadur Sit Joundra Mo-
12.	Rabit India Lat Mullight	250 200
13. 14.	Messis, Mackinnon, Mackenzie & Co. ;	200
. 4.		150
15.	Shojaul Mulk Asafad Dowlat Nawab
	Syed Zunul Abdur Khan Bahadur Feraz Jung	140
16.	Raja Pe uy Mohan Mookeriee, CSI :	100
17.	The Houble Mr. Justice Chandra	100
18	Prince Muza Su Jahan Kadar Baha-
19.		100
טי.	Haji Kasim Atiff	100
21	H. Brackenbury, KCB,	100
,,	Babu Jai Gobind Law	100
23	The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Guru Das Banerjee	50
24.	Banerjee The Honble Dr. Rash Behary Ghose Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt	50 51
35. 20.	Sir Romesh Chandra Mitter, Kt Shahibzada Manomed Obidulla Khan	50
- /.	Banadur, CS,I	50
27 28.	Mahar ijkum ir Benoya Krishna The Hon'ble Mr Justice E J. Freve-	50
	iyan	50
29	The Hon'ble Mouly: Abdul Jabbar Khan Bahadur	50
30.	The Right Rev the Lord Bishop of	50
31.	Calcutta Character C. L.	50
32.	Carcutta Maharaja Dunga Char in Law, CTF, Nawab Jahandar Meerza Nawab Huzoor Mirza The Horbile W. C. Bonnerjee Nawab Syed Ameer Husein Swed Naria Hard Errore	50
33. 34.	The Harble W. C. Bonneyee	50
35.	Nawab Syed Ameer Husem	50
36. 37.	Syed Nurul Huda, Esq., CS, Hakeem Gholam Raza Khan	50
37.	J. G. Ritchie, Esq. C5,	50 50
39.	Su Alexander Miller	50
40. 41.	F. J. Rowe, Esq. Moulvi Mahmudeen Nabi Khan Ba-	32
	hadur,	25
42. 43.	Kuma Radha Prosad Roy Kumar Dinendra Naram Roy	25 25
44-	Babu rPashupatty Nath Bose	25
45. 46.	Kumar Doulat Chandra Roy Babu Guru Prosonno Ghose	25 25
47	Raja Sir Somindra Mohan Tagore,
48.	C.I.F Raya Joundra Nath Chowdhury Babu Rama Nath Ghose	25 25
49.	Babu Rama Nath Ghose	25
50. 51.	Raja Steenath Roy	25 25
52.	R Belchambers, Esq	25
53. 54.	Raja Surja Kanta Acharjee Chowdhury Rai Budreed is Mukim Bahadur	25
55.	Babu Gopal Lal Seal	25
56. 57.	Moulvi Syad Abdus Salam A. T. Apea, Esq	25
58.	H. Luttman Johnson, Esq. C S	25 25
59. 60.	Lord William Beresford, K.C.I.F., Munshi Gholam Rasool	25
61.	F. H. Skime, Esq. C.S., The Honble H. J. S. Cotton C.S., C.S.L.	25 25
62. 63.		20 20
64.	Bauco Surendi i Nath Pil Chowdry	20
65. 66.	" Ankhoy Kumar Ghose	20
67.	Rai Shib Chunder Nundy Bahadar	20 20
68. 69.	D. Panioty, Esq Chowdry Mahomed Arjumand Khan	20
70.	H. E. A. Cotton, Esq., Barrister-at-law	20 20
71.	Monlyi Syed Ashroffuddin Ahmed, Khan Bahadur	17-8
72.	T. Inglis, Esq., C S	16

73	A. H. Giles, Esq		16
74.	F. F. Handley, Esq., C.S.		16
75.	The Hon'ble Moulvi Strajul	Islam
	Khan		16
76	Moulvi Serajuddeen	•••	15
77.	Abul Hasan, Esq.,	• • • •	15
78	H. A. D. Philips, Esq. c s.		10
79.	Baboo Kiran Chunder Roy		10
80.	E. N Baker, Esq	•••	10
81.	Baboo Doyal Chand Bose		10
82.	" Madan Mohun Bose		10
83.	"Kanar Lal Kuan		10
84.	Moulvi Syud Akram Hossam		10
85.	Moulvi Aziz Ahmud		10
86	R u Kanyelal Dey Bahadoor		10
87.	H Holmwood, Esq		10
88	Babu Hurry Mohun Chunder		10
80	Baboo Chakkanlal Roy		5
90.	" Sarodaprasad Ghose		5
Sı	obscriptions will be thankfully r	eceived
the .	Honorary Joint Secretaries,		•
	RAJ KUMAR SARVADHICARI	Bahadi	JR,
	4, British Indian Street, C
	and A. F. M. ABDUR RAHMA
	Barnster		•

"IMPROVED UNDAUNTED" WATCH. Rs. .

16, Taltolla, Calcutta.

Guaranteed three Years.

Strong, accurate, pretty, smill, open faced, Strong, accurate, pretty, smill, open faced, "NEW STYLE IMPROVED UNDAUNT-ED" watch, with hand setting mechanism, secondhand, for Doctors, ornamental bold dial, for Rs. 7 V. P. P. with an extra glass, spring, pretty box and full three years' guarantee. Wairanted to stand the roughest use. Runs more than 28 hours with one winding. Will last a life time. E-suly reparable. Others seil at double our rates. One watch free for the purchase of 8 at a time. Mr Jno. Dickson of Hapital Railway, from Ceylon says - 1t keeps splendid time and knocks and jerks, x Dr H. Moore of Royal Artiflery from Poonmaillee says: -1 sold it for Rs. 16, x Pte. W. Hopkins of Sussex Regi, from Dumidion says: -1 hive sold it for Rs. 20, x Mr. T. B. Scott of Patha Opiom Department says: -The watch you sent me some seven years ago is still keeping very good time. Jewelled Ring Ro. 1-8-0. Real Solid Gold Watch Rs. 24.

Pretty electro cased gold chain Re. 1-8 o. Fashionable electro cased Gold Ring set with scientific diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, at Re. 1-8-0 Mr. G. Smith, Silt Inspectio from Samkuta, says: "A German valued the diamond ring at Rs. 50 and ruby at Rs. 30" K-y winding, Government stamped, solid silver hunting case, Royal watch with extras and full three years' guarantee, for Rs. 13, Pte G. Hawkes of 2nd York Light Infantry from Purandbur says: -For the first one I goltsRs. 25; the second one I sold to a Sergeant for Rs. 28 x Pte H. C. Bishop of L. F. L. Regt, from Kamptee says. -A Coiporal offered Rs. 30 for the very same witch, Gentlemen's open faced, keyles real solid gold. No agents kept, all goods sent only by us from Bombay pet V. P. P.

WESTERN INDIA TRADING CO. nickel silvero, keyless, snort winding, patent, "NEW STYLE IMPROVED UNDAUNT-

BOMBAY.

CATARRH,

Hay Fever, Catarrhal Deafness.

A NEW HOME TREATMENT
Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining memori ne of the nose and enstaching times. Micro-copic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remeity has been formulated whereby a simple remeity has been formulated whereby these distressing diseases are rapidly and permanently cured by a few simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaning this new treatment is sent on receipt of 2½d stamp by A. HUTTON DIXON, 43 & 45 East Bloor St. TORONTO, Canada. Scientific Americas. "IT RECOMMENDS ITSELF." All wno suffer find sure relief from

The Greatest Pain Cure Extant,

It has driven out from the system

Acute Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout

after years of semi-helplessness and sufferanter vears of semi-netitiessness and sundi-ing: while in ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, FACEACHE, SPRAINS, it is the surest and safest temetry of these complaints in their severest and most caronic torm

Its magic effect in affording instantaneous relief in

Neuralgia in the Head, Face and Limbs

Is almost too remarkable for CREDENCE. Are you subject to HEADACHES and the of TOOTHACHE? A single applica tion will relieve you

In Sore-throat its power has been so rapid and complete that it is universally recommend-

The Marvellous Sore Throat Cure.

Try this wonderful Medicine and let the result speak for itself.

The Oriental Balm is used by the best Phystrians in the world in their practice. It has been pronounced a blessing in thousands or homes. By its intrinsic virine, it has achieved a wide-spread popularity which no similar pre-paration has ever before attained.

Sold in Bettles at I Re each

Obtainable of all respectable chemist throughout the world

Agents in Calcutta Smith Stanistreet & Co R. Scott Thompson & Co. and Ballgate & Co. Limited.

REIS & RAYYET

(PRINCE AND PEASANT) WEEKLY (ENGLISH) NEWSPAPER

AND

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION. If paid in advance,

Yearly				R.	12
Half-yearly			•••	٠,	7
Quaterly				,	4
Monton				Ke	18
Single or sample	Copy	7	•••	Ans.	0-8
If no	t paid in a	ivan	ce.
Yearly	٠			Rs.	31
Hair-yearly			•••		10.8
Quarterly	•••				0-0
Monthly				17	2-4
Single or sample	Copy		•••	Aus.	0-12
No additionai	charge for	Des	RAE	e or p	toi.

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT. -

RATES OF ADVERTISEMENT. Advertisements (three columns to the page and 102 lines or 12 inches to the column) are charged by the space taken up, at the rate of 4 annas a line or Rs. 2-2 an, inch each insertion. The lowest charge for any advertisement 15 Rs. 2, except Domestic Occurrences, the lowest charge for which is Rs. 5.
Business Communications (post paid) to be directed to "The Manager," and Literary Communications and books and pamphlets
(catriage paid) to The "Editor" of "Reis
& Rayyet."

OFFICE: I, Uckoor Dutts Lane, Wellington Street, Calcutta

DROIT ET AVANT.

P.RINCE & PEASANT)
WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

...

REVIEW OF POLITICS LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

VOL. XIV.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1895.

WHOLE NO. 679.

CONTEMPORARY POETRY.

THE RAJPUT LEGEND OF JAGDEV PARMAR. (FROM THE RAS MALA.)

BY A. ROGERS, BO.C.S. (Continued from page 266.)

Thus sportively she spoke and threw her arms Caressingly around her lord, who strove In vain to move her from her firm resolve. He told her even, in a foreign land A wife would but incumber him. She said It was not fitting that a Rajput prince Should go alone, and she would wait on him Jagdev agreed at last. Donning a veil, The Chavair prepared to go, and brought A store of jewels and of .. eady gold. And so they went. Tow'rds Pattan lay then course, Where Sidh Raj Jesaugh reigned, the Solankhi, The lord of Malwa and of Gujarat. The royal pair set forth at break of day, Escorted by a kingly cavalcade We need no more accompany their march, Which was without adventure as they passed Slowly from stage to stage, until they came Or z eve to Pattan's royal town, of vore As Anhilvara famed through India's land. There reigned then Sidh Raj Jesangh, who of all The Native Rulers of fair Gujarat. The pearl of Hindustan, has widest fame. By the Sahasra Ling, a roomy tank, Close on the outskirts of the town, they stayed Their jaded steeds, for they had travelled far. Fair Virinati beneath a spreading tree Reposed at length to rest her wearred limbs, Whilst Jagdev went away into the town To hire a lodging where they might abide. There was a wealthy courtesan who lived In Pattan, one who had amassed much gain In pandering to the vices of young men About the Court-Jamoti was her name, Of Pattan's citadel the Governor, One Dungarsi by name, had but one son, On whom he doted in a foolish way, And never ventured to control his mood. He to Jamoti a commission gave To find a handsome woman of good caste To be his paramour, and diligent She searched among the fair ones of the land, Expectant of munificent reward. One of her maids that evening to the tank Came to draw water, and with eager gaze Looked on the Chavari, who, no man near To view her peerless charms, had thrown aside

The veil with which her features she concealed From all but husband, brother or her sire. She feigned herself to be a waiting maid Oh Sidh Raj Jesangh's palace, and enquired The why and wherefore of Virmati's state, And went and told it in Jamoti's ear. Hailling the opportunity, she went With a fair retinue out to the tank. Handsome her equipage, and all her state Seemed suited to a woman of high rank. One of her maids she dressed in regal robes, And taught her how to tell a specious tale, That she of Sidh Raj was the sister born, And hearing of her coming hastened there Tuktoda's child to welcome and embrace. Her maid had told her who Virmati was. The Chavan, trusting to her honeyed words, Mounted her charior, and went with her home And as the gate she entered, women came, And strewing flowers of beauty on her path, Sang song of welcome to a lively air. Then were the carpets spread. Pretended word To Sidh Raj Jesangh's palace was dispatched That Jagdev, son of Udyadit, had come, And would soon wait upon him. He must see That he was welcomed with becoming state. An equally pretended answer came : the prince Should wait upon the king and thence proceed To where the Chavari had found a house. With various excuse they thus delayed Until the night arrived. To stately room Fit for a royal bride, the Chavari Was led by handmaids with the honour due, And she was told that Jagdev with the king Had stayed to dine and that he soon would come. The door soon opened and in Jagdev's stead, Horror of horrors ! came an unknown man. Then on her mind the awful truth flashed clear. And Virmati first knew she was betrayed. The son of Dungarsi, the Governor, It was who thus appeared. In bloodshot eye And lustful countenance at once she said The horrid end for which he sought her there. She was alone, and dared not raise a cry. She had no friend to hasten at her call, To lend her aid in that vile leprous house. What could she do to ward off her disgrace? She knew in strength that she could not compete With a well-armed and muscular young man. Then came her woman's wit to succour her. She saw the fumes of opium and of wine Already half his sense benumbed, and knew A little more would soon benumb the rest. And she from present danger would be free.

Subscribers in the country are requested to remit by postal money orders, if possible, as the satest and most convenient medium, particularly as it ensures acknowledgment through the Department. No other receipt will be given, any other being unnecessary and likely to eause confusion.

With a feigned smile she beckoned him to sit, And proffered him kasumba. He drew back, As half aware that he had drunk enough. Again she pressed and with a winning grace Said to the drunkard : " Would my lord refuse The first cup offered by his slave? Why thus Is she of favour quite unworthy deemed? He drank the cup, and with a second draft She wheedled him to drink : he fell asleep. With frenzied ecstasy she seized his sword, And put an end to his disgraceful life. She rolled the body up inside a quilt, And threw the bundle down into the road, And making fast the door sat down and watched, Grasping the sword in her unshimking hand, Prepared to guard her honour with her life. (To be continued.)

-The Imperial and Asiatic Quarterly Review.

WEEKLYANA.

VESUVIUS is active again. For the last three months, a new cone is forming to the north-west of the old crater and is already fifty or sixty feet high and 200 feet higher than the crater of 1891. The earthquake at Florence, on the evening of the 18th May, which extended to Bologna, Siena, Pisa and Placentia, is attributed to this activity.

On the occasion of the marriage of her grandson, Baion Henri de Rothschild, son of the late Baron James de Rothschild, to Mile Mathilde de Weisweiller, Baronesse Nathaniel de Rothschild presented 20,000 fis. to the poor of Paris.

٠.

MRS. Murton, a Bolton lady, lately residing at Silverdale, has bequeathed 32,000/ each to the Bolton Infirmary, the British and Foreign Bible Society, Church Missionary Society, and the Church Pastoral Aid

THE German Imperial Diet has accepted a measure for the punishment of slave-raiding and slave-trading. It is not for doing away with every existing kind of slavery at once.

IN Egypt, Sir John Scott is engaged on a scheme for the complete abolition of slavery in that country.

THE United States Supreme Court has declared against the income tax. It has held that taxes on rents or the income of real estate, and taxes on personal property or the income of personal property are direct taxes, and that the tax imposed by sections 27 to 37 of the Act of 1894, falling on income of real estate and personal property, is a direct tax within the meaning of the Constitution, and therefore unconstitutional and void, as not apportioned according to representation. All those sections, the court says, constituting one entire scheme of taxation, are necessarily invalid. The Judges were not agreed on the point. Chief Justice Fuller, who delivered the opinion of the Court, and four other Justices, namely, Field, Gray, Brewer and Shuas, were of one mind, while Justices Hailan, Brown, White and Jackson dissented. About 73,000 dollars have been realized under the Act, which sum will be refunded by the Treasury. In India, courts are excluded from discussing the legality of an impost, its incidence or realization. In revenue matters, Government is the sole Ir is reported from Chili that the Parhament House at Santiago was totally destroyed by fire on May 18. The loss is estimated at more than 2,000,000 pesos.

THE Lyne Stephens pictures -- seventy-eight examples -- sold at Christie's, realized in all 46,8761. Among them, a "Portrait of an Infanta," by Velasquez, fetched 4,300 guineas; Murillo's "Faith Presenting the Eucharist" was knocked down at 2,350 guineas; Cuyp's "Portrait of the Pince of Orange and his Sons" went for 2,000 guineas; an interior with figures, by Terburg, went up to 1,950 guineas; a scene in front of an inn door, by Isaac Ostade, was sold for 1,660 gumeas; the successful bid for Nattier's "Portrait of a Lady of the Court of Louis XV" was 2 900 guineas. The other principal sales were Watteau's "La Game d'Amour" for 3,350gs; Mme. Vigée le Brun's "Poitrait of a Lady" for 2,250gs; and Troyon's "Sporting Dogs and Game-keeper," 2,850gs.

At a sale of modern pictures by the same auctioneers, a drawing, "A Welsh Funeral, Bettwys-y-Coed," by David Cox, realized 2,400 guineas; his "Windsor Great Park," 1,350 guineas; "The Hespendes," by Sir E. Burne-Jones, 2,560 gs.; and a set of four pictures by the same artist, illustrating the story of Pygmalion, 3,500 guineas. One water-colour drawing by Tuiner fetched 1,100 guineas and two others 700 each. The "Bezestein Bazaar, Cano," by J F. Lewis, R. A., was sold at 1,400 gumeas.

AT a recent sale at Glangwan, the residence of Mr. W. H. Graves, Lord-Lieutenant of Carnaivonshire, an old and duty picture was knocked down at 5 l. It is now believed to be a missing Rubens and roughly valued at 7,000/.

Woman at Home describes a touching incident in the life of Mme. Malibran, the famous operatic singer, in these words :-

Mahbran, the famous operatic singer, in these words:—

"A little sad-faced lad once called on her, and begged the maid to be allowed to see her mistress. Maile Malbran was testing from the fatigues of receiving, but told her gervant to let the boy come up, as she could never refuse anything to children. The little boy come up, as she could never refuse anything to children. The little boy came timidly to her, and said. "I have come to tell you that my mother is very ill, and we are too poor to get food or medicine. I have thought that perhaps you would sing my song,' showing her a roll of papper in his hand, 'sat one of your grand concerts, and that maybe a publisher would buy it for a small sum." Mahbran took the music from his hand and lightly hummed the air. 'Did you compose it?' she asked, 'you, a child' And the words? Would you care to come to my concert?' 'Oh, indeed, 'i will send some one to take care of your mother,' said Malbran, softly, 'and meanwhile here is money to buy food and medicine." That evening the little boy was admitted to the concert-hall. With a beating heart he listened for the well-known strains, and only after many songs were over, the band struck up the plannive little melody he knew right well. Many a bright eye was dummed, many a heart was strired by its pathos. The next morning Pierre received a visit from the great singer. She kissed the child affectionately and turned to the sick woman. 'Your little son,' she said, considerably moved, 'has bornely our afortune. I was offered a large sum of money by the first stirred by its pathos. The next morning reference of visit from the great surget. She kissed the child affectionately and turned to the sick woman. 'Your little son,' she said, considerably moved, 'has brought you a fortune. I was offered a large sum of money by the first publisher in London this noning for his little song,' Malibian never lost sight of her hitle protege, and on her untimely death, he who clasped her hands and lightened her last moments by his devotion and gratuide was the little Pierre of former days, now rich, accomplished, and one of the most talented composers of the day."

AT New Ross, Ireland, on May 19, they held a demonstration to celebrate the insurrection of 1798. Speeches were made in favour of an independent Irish nation and of the revolutionary movement. Free

THE Newspaper Press Fund held its thirty-second annual dinner, on May 18, at the Hôtel Métropole. Su F. Lockwood, QC, Solicitor General, presided. In proposing "Prosperity to the Newspaper Press Fund."

General, presided. In proposing "Prosperity to the New-paper Press Fand,"

"He spoke somewhat feelingly of the newspaper proprietor, for he was once one himself. He had been largely interested in a newspaper, regarding which, when he told them that the main object of its existence was to support his political career they would not be surprised to hear that it came to giref. The gods must have loved it, for it died young. Unfortunately, the gods did not take in newspapers, and he did not think that as a rule they advertised (Laughter.) They were about the only people who did not. The mottals did not take this newspaper in any more than the gods, and so, as he had said, it died young. Had it lived longer, he would have been in a better position, he finally believed, to give information with regard to the financial position of the Newspaper Press fond. He must not, however, undertate the importance of the reporter, who reported one's speech so well that when one read it the next morning a man doubted whether he could have made it. (Laughter) He (Sir F. Lockwood) had himself read with amazement and admiration speeches of which he had been desperately ashamed immediately after he had made them. He would not stop to discuss whether the improvement in the Press was due to the taste of the public or to the mellect of the newspaper producer. He was attracted the other day to a theater, where he saw an admirable, interesting, and amusing play. What diew him there was an intimation that the Solicitor General appeared on the stage. He found in that interesting diama a Cabinet Minister who had discovered that his domestic happiness was being seriously interfered with. Under those circumstances the Home Secretary, for he was the Minister in question, did what every sensible Home. Secretary would do—he consisted the Solicitor General, without a moment's hesitation, sind, the difference between yourself and your wife is caused by her teading the Opposition papers.' That diagnosis, so hastily and correct young to the propositio

If they did not agree with papers do not let them read them. If If they did not agree with papers of not let them read them. If they do not like reading papers of the Opposition they need not read them. They had admirable journals of their own. But he was one of those who had no objection to being chastened, and chastening on the whole was good for one, and they got it from the papers of the Opposition. They were, however, present on that occasion not to he divided one from the other by any disagreements so trivial as those that were called pointful. He supposed that in his life he had ple ided some very bad causes, and some very shaky causes, possibly some very good causes; but he felt he was pleading a good cause that night, and he felt also that he was calling the best writers he could when he called upon the president of the Newspaper Press Find to return thanks for the toast. (Cheers.)^a

THE third Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire will be held in June 1896. The subjects proposed for discussion are .

Commercial relations between the mother country and her colonies and dependencies; boards of labour conciliation and arbitration; codiand dependencies; months or labour continuation and anothermon; con-fication of the commercial law of the empire; bills of lading reform; commercial education; the decimal system of weights, measures, and currency; Imperial penny postage; light dues; railways, light rail-ways, railway communication with India and the East; inter-colonal trade relations; arbitration for international disputes; Imperial trademarks registration and patent law; cable communication, contrademarks registration and patent law; cable communication, constitution, races, codes; steamship, communication, rates, subsidies, war risks, insurance; closer connection between Governments and chambers of commerce, by establishment of commercial, advisory, or consultative councils, home and colonial; bills of exchange, uniform procedure; supply of Government publications to chambers of commerce and mutual interchange of own documents; parliamentary commercial pittes, home and colonial; representation of United Kingdom in colonies and of consular officers who are only appointed to foreign countries; appointment of an imperial council to consider questions of imperial interest; copyrights

A CORRESPONDENT from Partabganj writes to the Behar Herald and the Indian Choronicle:-

The transfer of our popular Magistrate and Collector F. H. B. Skrine, E-quire, is a great loss to Binagaipuris. During the time he had been in our midst a period of about a year of so, he won the respect and admiration of all with whom he came in contact both in public and private life, on account of exceptional ability, clear-headedness, coolness of judgment and strict integrity with which he faced all questions that of judgment and strict integrity with which he faced all questions that came before him. He never sought for popularity, while on the other name popular voice sought him out. The manner with which he cherished his subordinates and ruled people during his short stay at Binagalpus, if described, would require a volume."

Mr. Skine is exceptionable former.

Mt. Skime is exceptionally fortunate. Wherever he has been, he has left a name which is cherished with regard and gratitude.

Ir is proposed to declare that clause (b) of section 76 of Act II (B.C.) of 1882 shall take effect over a tract of country extending from the 1st to the 20th mile, on both sides of the river Gunti, t. e., from Beebee Hat to Jaffargauj Hat, in the district of Pippera. While so proposing, the Lieugemant-Governor, in the same notification, prohibits the erection of any new embankment, or causing, or wilfully permiting such erection, or any addition to the existing embankment, or the obstruction, or diversion, or causing or withinly permitting such obstruction or diversion of any water-course within the tract, without the permission of the Codector of Tippera.

THE Director of Papire Instruction, Bengal, has received intimation from the Secretary to the Society for the Assistance of Foreign Students, Sorboune, Paris, that the Society has been established, under the presidency of M. Pasteur, with the object of affording necessary information and moral support to young students visiting France for the purpose of study. It has recently obtained from the Compagnie des Messagenes Maritimes, the promise of a reduction of 30 per cent. in the passage money by any of the Company's steamers, in favour of Foreign students recommended for the concession by the Society.

ONLY one candidate in the first and ten in the second division have passed the F. E examination of the Calcutta University. ...

A PIECE of land measuring, more or less, 2 cottahs and 5 dhurs of standard measurement, in the village of Nawanagar, pargana Bhojpui zilla Shahabad, is declared under the Land Acquisition Act, I of 1894, for a pound building. What is to be the space allotted to each animal?

DEAFNESS. An essay describing a really genuine Cure for Deafness, Singing in Ears, &c., no matter how severe or long-standing, will be sent post free.—Artificial Ear-drums and similar appliances entirely-superseded. Address THOMAS KEMPE, VICTORIA CHAMBERS, 19, SUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS, HOLBORN, LONDON.

----NOTES & LEADERETTES,

OUR OWN NEWS,

THE WEEK'S FELEGRAMS IN BRIEF, WITH OCCASIONAL COMMENTS.

THE Porte has not wholly rejected the proposals of the Powers with regard to Armenia. The Sultan, however, declares that he will resist any scheme for European control over the administration in any part of Turkey. The Russian papers are in favour of an International Conference.

THE German forces in the Cameroons have severely defeated the rebellious Bakoko tribes, storming four of their strongholds, and killing two hundred men. The German loss was twelve killed and forty-

THE Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company entertained Prince Nasrulla at luncheon on June 7, on board the Company's steamer Caledonia at the Docks, Mr. Fowler, Secretary of State for India, was among the guests present. Mr. Fowler said that the country was proud of the Chitral campaign. England would hold India come weal or woe, and do her duty by all races and creeds. A telegram has been received from the Amir of Afganistan cancelling letters that had been written urging the speedy return of the Shahzada, and agreeing to Mr. Martin's suggestion to prolong the visit of Prince Nasrulla till the beginning of September. The Prince is now on his Provincial tour. The first to receive him was Birmingham where he minutely inspected the Small Arms Factory. He next arrived at Manchester and displayed equal interest in the various cotton manufactures. Seven miles of the Manchester Ship Canal were traversed on the journey to Liverpool, where the Shahzada was welcomed by the Mayor and leading citizens. Replying to addresses, he said he hoped his visit to England would stengthen the alliance between the two countries. He is now at Glasgow. In reply to a question, Mr. Fowler said that the entire cost of the Prince's visit to England would be borne by India.

THE Daily Telegraph has opened a subscription for a national testimonial to the champion cricketer, Dr. W. G. Grace. The subscription is limited to one shilling. There is a similar move in Calcutta.

THE Italian electrons have been most turbulent. Several murders are reported from different places. Count Luigi Ferrari, moderate Socialist Deputy and ex-Secretary of State, died, on June 10, from the effects of a revolver shot. His assailant is an anarchist named Rimini. The same day, the Italian Parliament was opened by King Humbert. In his speech he referred in cordial terms to his friend the Emperor of Germany. He also spoke of the most intimate friendship existing between Italy and Great Britain, a proof of which was especially displayed by the latter acceding to the request made by Italy for stopping the importation of arms into Abyssinia through the Somali ports, Another letter from Colonel Neville Chamberlain has appeared in the Times against the recention of Chitral. The writer arges the expediency of adopting the frontier policy of Lord Lawrence.

In the Chamber of Deputies, on June 10, M. Hanotaux delivered an important speech on foreign affairs, in the course of which he declared that the French Government had joined Russia in opposing the conditions of peace arranged between J man and China at Simonasaki, firstly, owing to her alliance with Russic. By refusing her support, France would have left Russia to confront difficulties which would have maimed the general policy of Russia. Secondly, because the provisions of the Simonasaki Treaty imperilled the existence of China, whose provinces opened a vast field for trade with the French Colonies in Indo China. M. Ribot challenged the Minister for Foreign Affairs to produce the treaty of alliance with Russia to which he referred, but this M. Hanotaux declined to do. After some debate the foreign policy of the Government was approved by a majority of 260 votes.

INTELLIGENCE has been brought at Shanghai that the Foreign Mission stations at Kiating and Yochou have been burned. The property has been completely destroyed. The Chinese officials are refusing to afford any protection.

A COMMERCIAL treaty has been signed between Russia and Japan. It is said to be identical with that arranged with Great Britain regarding the most Favoured Nation Clause.

THE Times publishes a telegram from its correspondent at Odessa stating that one thousand Russian troops have been despatched to reinforce the frontier guard on the borders of Armenia.

FIVE French Banks have signed an agreement to lend China fifteen millions sterling under the Russian guarantee. News of the arrangement has been received with marked disfavour at Berlin and London. In the latter city especially much displeasure is expressed, because China will be placed thereby in complete subservience to Russia. It is stated at St. Petersburg that negotiations for the evacuation of Corea will take place between Russia and Japan after the retirement of the Japanese troops from the Liaotung Peninsula has been finally settled. The interest payable on the Chinese loan is fixed at four percent, secured on the Customs receipts at the treaty ports and the absolute guarantee of Russia. The issue price will be about ninety eight. The Japanese troops occupied Taipehfu in Formosa on the 7th instant.

COUNT Goluchowski, the new Austro-Hungarian Minister for Foreign Affairs, addressing the Hungarian delegation at Vienna, declared that he would adhere to the policy of Count Kalnoky, especially with regard to a peaceful Triple Alliance as the best calculated to foster friendly relations between all the Power.

RAJA Ram Singh, Commanding the Kashmir State troops, has been created Commander of the Bath.

THE British, French and Russian Ambassadors have presented a note to the Porte demanding the disarmament of the Bedouins and the payment of an indemnity for the outrage at Jeddah. The Porte has replied urging the extreme difficulty of disarming the Bedouins. The British war vessel Dolphin has arrived at Jeddah.

THE Committee of the French Chamber has resolved to demand a full discussion in the Chamber regarding the petition of Native Egyptians organized by M Deloncle against the reformed judicial procedure.

THE Spanish Government has decided to quell the Cuban rebellion at any cost. Preparations are being made for the despatch of 40,000 troops to the island in August.

PRESIDENT Cleveland has ordered the vigorous enforcement of the neutrality laws in connection with the rebellion in Cuba, and the severe punishment of all offenders.

THE free silver convention organized at Memphis is being attended by about two thousand delegates who advocate the fixing of the ratio at sixteen to one.

THE Royal Humane Society has just rewarded a little fellow of eleven years of age, named Fred. B. Cooper, who has only the use of one hand. Finding another boy fallen through the ice in the recreation ground running by the Trent, he went to his rescue by lying flat on the ice; seized the drawning boy by his collar; raised him from the water, and, placing him on his back, brought him to the bank.

THE Chitral Expedition has changed the custom of the Bajaurs, in one notable instance, at least. These people after reaping their crops, that is, cutting the ears of wheat or barley, not only neglected what still remained, but burnt them, probably to manure the soil for a future season. Finding that the Expeditionary Force required straw for the troops and transport, they have given up their old practice and is prepared to reap another harvest from the same crop

A CORRESPONDENT from Janbatai Pass wrote to a contemporary that "We simply sit still all day, as there is nothing to do. Now that all the fighting is over, it is as dall as can be. One is not allowed to leave camp or the high toad for more than a mile, except with an escort of six ained men, so shooting is out of the question, even if one had a gun, which one has not, or if there were game in these hills, which there does not appear to be."

That statement is traversed by another, a non-commissioned officer, who says that "the troops are hard at work on fatigues of every description, and although fighting is over, the men have to sleep with their fingers almost on the trigger or sword belt, to be ready to pot

RAI Ishri Pershad, of Patna, charged with bad livelihood, has, after a lengthened investigation, been ordered to enter into a persona recognizance for Rs. 25,000 and to furnish two sureties for Rs. 12,500

THE Cantonment Rules and Regulations require that "Every person shall keep in proper repair the boundary walls, fences, or other enclosures of his estate or premises." Under it, but without quoting it, the Cantonment Magistrate of Barrackpore served a notice on the Agent-a native-of the owner, Miss Forbes of Purneah, of House No. 27, calling upon him to paint the gate and the boundary walls. The notice was unheeded, in that the gate and fencing were in good condition and the law did not prescribe painting. This neglect was visited with a summons, and ultimately a fine of Rs. 10 by Captain Wake, the Cantonment Magistrate. On appeal, the Magistrate of the 24-Parganas upheld the conviction and confirmed the sentence. The matter has now come up to the High Court. Sir Griffith Evans on behalf of the Agent has obtained a rule calling for the records and for revision of the judgment of the District Magistrate.

THE Governor General in Council has laid down for the guidance of Courts and Magistrates in the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of Assam the following rules :--

Rule I.—No boy shall be sent to a reformatory school on a first conviction (except as provided in Rule III), if under ten years of age, for a less period than five years; if over ten, for a less period than three years, unless he shall sooner attain the age of 18.

Rule II.—On a subsequent conviction for a similar offence a boy under ten years of age shall not be sent to a reformatory school for a less period than seven years; if over ten, for a less period than five years; unless he shall sooner attain the age of 18.

Rule 111.—A first conviction may bring a boy under Rule 11—

- rs; unless he shall sooner attain the age of 18.

 (1) If he belongs to a criminal tribe within the meaning of Act
 XXVII of 1871, section 2;

 (2) if either of his parents is a habitual criminal;

 (3) if he is destitute; and

 (4) if the offence of which he is convicted is one arguing
- great depravity—that is, general corruption of mora apart from the specific criminality of the particular act.

In the N.-W. Provinces and Oudh, the principle seems to be that boys who have reached the age of 13 or who have only been convicted once should not be sent to the Reformatory; and no boy over to years of age can be confined for a less period than five years, unless he shall sooner attain the age of 18 years. It does not appear though that the rule is observed. In commenting on the Annual Report on the Reformatory School at Bateilly for 1894, the Local Government remarks-"Either the ages as entered in the warrants are incorrect, or the sentences of no less than 13 boys are illegal with reference to the rule."

In sentencing, magistrates are not to be guided by only the ages of the boys. They must also take into consideration the accommodation in the Reformatory. We remember the Calcutta magistrates being once asked not to order Reformatory, on that account. At the Bareilly school, opened on the 1st April 1889, there is accommodation for 232 boys with separate cubicles for each, besides hospital accommodation for 24. Last year, the average attendance was 207 87. For the first year (nine months only) it was 36'86, and the second 85'30. In 1894, 65 were admitted and 44 discharged on completion of sentence. Details as to 43 of the 55 boys trained and discharged are available. The result is satisfactory. Only four are known to have lapsed into crime.

The Bareilly is the only Reformatory in India where boys are taught agriculture and at least one trade. The farm has an area of 3714, and the garden of 81/2 acres. The Superintendent reports that a very considerable number of boys show no aptitude whatever for any trade, being fitted only to be 'hewers of wood and drawers of water." He therefore suggests that "where boys have made no progress in learning a trade within a reasonable time (say one year), the attempt should be given up, and that these boys should be kept at agricultural work." He would make them "do all the hard work of the Reformatory, such as drawing water, sweeping and removing rubbish, &c."

The teaching of trade is to be abandoned because there are not sufficient orders to keep the boys employed, cient orders to keep the boys employed.

"In selecting trades to be taught we have not only to consider what is likely to be useful to the boys in after-life, but also whether sufficient work can be got to keep the factory going. Blacksmith's work, carpentry, darre-weaving and cloth-weaving have, at different times, been tried, but have had to be given up for want of sufficient orders. The trades now taught in addition to farming and gardening are, canework, shoemaking, tailoring and carpet-weaving. Of these the most satisfactory is the cane-work; financially it is a success. Sufficient orders are received to keep all hands employed; and although it is not likely that any large number of the boys employed in it will earn a livelihood in after-life by wickerwork, they are all trained to be neat-handed, and to most of them it will be an advantage to be able to make biskers, &c. In the tailor's shop all the boys' cothing is made; but few outside orders are received, and there is consequently little cash profit.

orders are received. orders are received, and there is consequently little cash profit. A sewing-machine was purchased last year, and several boys are very expect in using it.

Shoe-making has been carried on since the Reformatory was opened, but it has not proved as successful as I had hoped. A number of trade instructors have been tried, but we have failed to secure one who was at the same time trustworthy and a competent workman. It is especially in this factory that materials are wasted and made away with. A fair number of orders are received, but large numbers of shoes are returned as missits, and have to be sold for less than the cost of the materials. A number of boys have been trained to be really good shoe-makers: but I find that of ten boys discharged from the school who had been taught this trade, only two now earn their hving by it. I should have no hesitation in advising this industry to be put a stop to if I could suggest anything suitable to take its place.

Carpet-weaving was started in July last at the request of Sir John Tyler. Only a small number of boys have been taught this industry. All the qualities made have been sold."

Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel E. Man is a law unto himself. Carpetweaving is not sanctioned by the rules of the Reformatory. Another departure was the punishment of imposing gunny-clothing. Two of the boys were for the first time so punished for destroying school property. The sanctioned punishments are-flogging; hand-caning; solitary cells with penal diet; solitary cells; morning meal stopped; reduction from monitorship; suspension from monitorship; gratuity stopped; change of labour; locked up at play hour; warned. The Superintendent completed the dozen. Why not take out a patent of a Marcat o' twelve?

We are glad to find that nothing escapes the eye of the Officiating Lieutenant-Governor. Not only the departures are prohibited, but order is made to take order for restriction of the teaching of trades.

One of the punishments speaks of gratuity. Gratuities are earned by good conduct, diligence in school and work in the factories. The best boy earns an anna a week. He is allowed to spend half, the other half being placed to his credit in the Savings Bank which he can draw on release. During the year 1894, Rs. 238-3-9 was paid as gratuity and Rs. 107 13 6 deposited in the Bank.

As was to be expected, the Jamuagar succession is not to go uncontested. But there is no legally constituted Court to decide the question. The Foreign Office is the arbiter of our Princes and has already put one on the gadi, and it is not likely that it will undo its own work. As king-maker, it is to be supposed that, like a king, it can do no wrong. The Proneer tries to justify the elevation of Jaswantsingly, the younger morganatic son as it describes him, to the exclusion of Ranjitsingly who was adopted as heir and who would succeed the Jam Vibhaji in ordinary course, as the next heir of pure blood, and to the supersession of the elder morganatic son and his son, all of whom were proclaimed heir by the last Jam. Repeatedly requested by Jam Vibhaji, the British Government had refused to acknowledge any of the sons so put forward, reserving its right to choose the successor when the time came. When that time arrived, without examining the claims of others, it at once installed the youngest of them all, a minor. This virtually places the Raj under the administration of the Foreign Office and a British Political. In the same way, the youngest of the three brothers searched out to supply a Gaekwar, was selected, that the Baroda State might long be under British management. Maharant Jumna Bai stoutly stuck to the eldest. At last, a compromise was made when the second succeeded the deposed Mulhariao. The Proneer makes no secert of the preference in the present succession. It says: "It should be recollected that the Jamanagar State is in debt, and that there is need of the introduction of several reforms. At any rate this is the opinion of the Political Agent, publicly expressed at the installation of the new Jam, Under these circumstances a minor, who is well in hand, is perhaps more acceptable to the Bombay Political Department than one who has been honized in Englandnot as a semi-barbaric Oriental curiosity, but as an educated Indian noblem in, who has excelled in the national game of England." Minority of the Chief may be a blessing to a State, but is the rightful heir, on that account, to be kept out of his due? An incapable Chief is easily shunted out of the gadi. The present ruler of Bhurtpore was accepted, against the wishes of his father, that he might be sent out of his dominions. The writer whom we have quoted seems to think that royal houses in India, proud Udeypore not excepted, cannot claim purity of blood, "Even among the Jareja Rajputs, to whom the late Jam belonged, there was a notorious case of a Moslem marriage." A son of his, therefore, by a Mussalmani need not therefore be unacceptable to the people of Jamnagar. But are they prepared to accept him? If there were no opposition he might pass. The British Government ought not lightly to reject an objection based on bastardy. It is no crime of the base-born. But the stain sticks to him. It is as much galling to himself as to the people over whom he is set to rule. Gopal Sing of Chamba, as we only last week pointed out, had to abdicate. Maharajkumar Bulwant Rao Scindia was not allowed the uppermost hand in the Gwalior Council of Regency, though he was fitted by education, because of his blot. We do not know Ranjit. singuand, are not aware that he has made a claim. His inclination confines him to the cricket field where he is earning glory in another part of the world. He seems content with the allowances paid him by the Durbar. Kulubhat is differently minded. He thinks he is the rightful heir to the late Jam, the son of his father who was proclaimed heir-apparent. The father might have been discarded, but the right through him remains.

THE Mussulmans in London have held a demonstration in opposition to the movement against the Sultan in connection with what are called Armenian Atrocities. Those who cannot endure a Mahomedan sovereign in Christian Europe have, before the Commission now sitting, has spoken, spoken out their mund, fixing the guilt on the Sultan, his officers and men. The oppositionists in the no such hold assertion, They cry-Wait till you have heard the last. The proceedings of the meeting will be found elsewhere.

ONE Bhutnath Day had come down to Calcutta from Baidyabat for treatment of his left eye which was diseased. He was admitted to the Mayo Hospital. There he was put under chloroform and his eye operated upon. After it, he did not recover consciousness, and died. The morning papers report that he was a confirmed opium-eater. An opium-eater has many sins to answer for. Was the present death due to opium? At the coroner's inquest, Dr. Gibbons who made the post mortein examination said that he found no marks of violence on the person and his opinion was that the deceased had died from a sudden shock immediately after the operation. The verdict was that the deceased had met his death by a sudden shock, which terminated simultaneously with the failure of the heart's action. We are tempted to ask-To what was the failure of the heart's action due? How was the shock produced? Was onium the direct cluse of both? Hid chloroform or its admisnistration nothing to do with them? The published report of the case is very unsatisfactory. Will no full report appear?

MR Silk has been accepted by the Municipal Commissioners as their Chief Engineer during the absence on leave of Mr. Kimber. An attempt was made to introduce an Indian to the post. There was more than one such candidate, but the only name proposed was that of the retired Engineer Rit Bahadur Midhub Chunder Roy. He obtained 25 votes, while his successful rival in service hid two more.

Mr. Skrine had, before the voting commenced, protested against balloting. The Commissioners have long adopted that form of expressing their preferences, intending to vote according to their conscience uninfluenced by any extraneous considerations.

THE mortality from small-pox has gone down to ten. That was the number last week; the week before it was 24. There was a sort of debate, a one-sided one, on the subject on Thursday. Two of the medical Commissioners, one a European and the other a native, condemned the vaccination as performed during the epidemic. To say the least, it was most perfunctorily done. " The lancets were all dirty, the rags on which they were wiped were dirtier still, the calves were far from clean and healthy, and, in fact, much of the vaccination had been more or less only blood-poisoning operations," It is a terrible charge, but comes too late for any immediate practical action. The mischief, if any, has been done and cannot be mended. The Health Officer may have his own explanation. The subject ought not to be easily and lightly disposed off. The present epidemic may have ceased to cause alarm. It is expected to break out again. Who knows the next visitation will not prove more virulent?

REIS & RAYYET.

Saturday, June 15, 1895.

THE CUSTOMS REPORT.

Owing to the reimposition of duties, last year, on most of the articles of Indian imports and exports, the work of the Customs House of Calcutta has of late become an extremely onerous one. We are agreeably surprised to find that the officer in charge, Mr. F. H. Skrine, has been able to bring out the report for that year within a couple of months. It does not deal with the whole of India, but is confined to Calcutta and the ports subordinate to it, namely, Puri, Cuttack, Balasore, Chittagong and Na-The figures given and the remarks made rayanganj. are all highly interesting, and deserve careful perusal.

